5 Atous, Sebani, Malouch,

6 Iram, Meramoth, Abdia,

7 Daniel, Ganathon, Barouch,

8 Mesoulam, Abia, Miamin,

9 Maazia, Belgai, Samaia; these were priests;

10 and the Levites, Jesus son of Azania, Banaiou from the sons of Enadad, Kadmiel

11 and his brothers, Sabania, Odouia, Kalita, Pheleia, Anan,

12 Micha, Roob, Esebias,

13 Zachor, Sarabia, Sebania,

14 Odouia, sons of Banounai;

15 rulers of the people, Phoros, Phaathmoab, Elam, Zathouia, sons of

16 Bani, Asgad, Bebai,

17 Edania, Bagoi, Edin,

18 Ater, Ezekia, Azour,

19 Odouia, Esam, Besi,

20 Ariph, Anathoth, Nobai,

21 Magaphes, Mesoulam, Ezir,

22 Mesozebel, Saddouk, Jeddoua,

23 Phaltia, Anan, Anaia,

24 Osee, Anania, Asoub,

25 Aloes, Phalai, Sobek,

26 Raoum, Esabana, Maasaia

27 and Aia, Ainan, Enan,

28 Malouch, Eram, Baana.

29 And the remaining people, the priests, the Levites, the gatekeepers, those singing, the nathinim and everyone coming from peoples of the land toward the law of God, their wives, their sons, their daughters, everyone knowing and understanding,

30 were strengthening themselves against their brothers, cursed them and entered into a curse and into an oath to walk in the law of God which was given by the hand of Moses the slave of God, and to keep and do all the commandments of our Lord and his judgments,

31 and not to give our daughters to the peoples of the land, and we will not take their daughters for our sons.

32 And the peoples of the land who bring merchandise and every article for sale on the sabbath day to sell, we do not buy from them on the sabbath and on a holy day. And we will release the seventh year and the exaction of every hand.

33 And we will establish commandments upon ourselves, to impose upon ourselves the giving of a third of the didrachm each year for the service of the house of our God,

34 for bread of the presence and the continual sacrifice and for the continual whole burnt offering of the sabbaths, of the new moons, for the feasts and for the holy things, and the offerings for sin to make atonement for Israel, and for works of the house of our God.

35 And we cast lots concerning the lot of wood-bearing, the priests and the Levites and the people, to bring it into the house of our God, by house of our ancestral families, at appointed times, year by year, to burn upon the altar of the Lord our God, as it is written in the law,

36 and to bring the first produce of our land and the first produce of the fruit of every tree, year by year, into the house of the Lord,

37 and the firstborn of our sons and of our beasts, as it is written in the law, and the firstborn of our cattle and our flocks, to bring into the house of our God to the priests ministering in the house of our God.

38 And the first portion of our grain and the fruit of every tree, of wine and of oil, we will bring to the priests into the treasury of the house of God; and a tenth of our land to the Levites. And the Levites themselves collect tithes in all the cities of our service,

39 and the priest, a son of Aaron, shall be with the Levite at the Levite's tithe, and the Levites will bring up the tenth of the tenth into the house of our God, into the treasuries, into the house of God.

40 For into the treasuries the sons of Israel and the sons of Levi will bring the first portions of grain and of wine and of oil, and there are the holy vessels and the priests who minister and the gatekeepers and those singing. And we will not abandon the house of our God.

Chapter 21

1 And the rulers of the people settled in Jerusalem, and the remaining people cast lots to bring one out of ten to settle in Jerusalem, the holy city, and nine portions in the cities.

2 And the people blessed all the men volunteering to settle in Jerusalem.

3 And these are the rulers of the country who settled in Jerusalem; and in the cities of Judah they settled, each man in his possession in their cities, Israel, the priests and the Levites and the nathinaians and the sons of Solomon's slaves;

4 and in Jerusalem some of the sons of Judah and some of the sons of Benjamin settled. – From the sons of Judah: Athaia son of Azaia son of Zacharia son of Amaria son of Saphatia son of Malelel, and from the sons of Phares.

5 And Maasia son of Barouch son of Chalaza son of Ozia son of Adaia son of Jorib son of Thezia son of the Seloni.

6 All the sons of Phares dwelling in Jerusalem, four hundred and sixty-eight men of strength. –

7 And these are sons of Benjamin: Selo son of Mesoulam son of Joad son of Phadaia son of Kolia son of Masaia son of Aithiel son of Jesia;

8 and behind him Gebi, Seli, nine hundred and twenty-eight.

9 And Joel son of Zechri was overseer over them, and Judas son of Asana was second over the city. –

10 From the priests: also Jadia son of Jorib, Jachin,

11 Saraia son of Elkia son of Mesoulam son of Saddouk son of Marioth son of Aitob, opposite the house of God.

12 And their brothers doing the work of the house: Amasi son of Zacharia son of Phassour son of Melchia,

13 rulers of ancestral families, two hundred and forty-two. And Amessai son of Esdriel,

14 and his brothers, mighty in battle array, one hundred and twenty-eight, and overseer over them, Badiel. –

15 And from the Levites, Samaia son of Asoub son of Ezri

17 and Mathania son of Micha and Obed son of Samoui,

18 two hundred and eighty-four.

19 And the gatekeepers Akoub, Telamin, and their brothers, one hundred and seventy-two.

22 And an overseer of Levites was a son of Bani, Ozi son of Asabia son of Micha. From the sons of Asaph, those singing opposite the work of the house of God;

23 for the king's commandment was upon them.

24 And Pathaia son of Baseza was at the king's hand for every matter concerning the people. –

25 And toward the settlements in their field. And some of the sons of Judah settled in Kariatharbok

26 and in Jesou

27 and in Beersabee,

30 and their settlements, Lachis and her fields; and they encamped in Beersabee.

31 And the sons of Benjamin were from Gaba, Machamas.

36 And from the Levites, portions of Judah for Benjamin.

Chapter 22

1 And these are the priests and the Levites going up with Zorobabel son of Salathiel and Jesus: Saraia, Jermia, Esdras,

2 Amaria, Malouch,

3 Sechenia;

7 these were rulers of the priests and their brothers in the days of Jesus. –

8 And the Levites: Jesou, Banoui, Kadmiel, Sarabia, Judah, Machania; over the hands, he and his brothers,

9 for the daily divisions.

10 And Jesus begot Joakim, and Joakim begot Eliasib, and Eliasib, Jodae,

11 and Jodae begot Jonathan, and Jonathan begot Jadou.

12 And in the days of Joakim, his brothers the priests and the rulers of the ancestral families: for Saraia, Maraia; for Jermia, Anania;

13 for Esdras, Mesoulam; for Amaria, Joanan;

14 for Malouch, Jonathan; for Sechenia, Joseph;

15 for Arem, Adnas; for Marioth, Elkai;

16 for Addai, Zacharias; for Ganathon, Mosollam;

17 for Abia, Zechri; for Benjamin, at times, for Pheleti;

18 for Balga, Samoue; for Semeia, Jonathan;

19 for Joiarib, Maththanai; for Idia, Ozi;

20 for Sallai, Kallai; for Amouk, Abed;

21 for Elkia, Asabias; for Jedeiou, Nathanael. –

22 The Levites in the days of Eliasib, Joada and Joanan and Idoua were recorded as rulers of ancestral families, and the priests in the reign of Darius the Persian;

23 sons of Levi, rulers of the ancestral families, recorded in the book of words of the days, even until the days of Joanan son of Elisoub.

24 And rulers of the Levites: Asabia and Sarabia and Jesou and sons of Kadmiel and their brothers opposite them, to sing hymns and praise by the commandment of David the man of God, daily division against daily division,

25 when I gathered the gatekeepers,

26 in the days of Joakim son of Jesus son of Josedek and in the days of Neemias, and Esdras the priest, the scribe.

27 And at the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem they sought the Levites in their places to bring them into Jerusalem to make a dedication and rejoicing with thodatha and with songs, sounding cymbals, and psalteries and lyres.

28 And the sons of those singing gathered, also from the surrounding district round about into Jerusalem, and from settlements

29 and from fields; for those singing built settlements for themselves in Jerusalem.

30 And the priests and the Levites were cleansed, and they cleansed the people and the gatekeepers and the wall.

31 And I brought up the rulers of Judah upon the wall and stationed two great ones for praise, and they passed on the right upon the wall of the dung,

32 and Osaia and half the rulers of Judah went behind them,

33 and Azarias, Esdras and Mesoulam,

34 Judah and Benjamin and Samaia and Jermia,

35 and from the sons of the priests, with trumpets, Zacharias son of Jonathan son of Samaia son of Mathania son of Michaia son of Zakchour son of Asaph,

36 and his brothers Samaia and Oziel, to praise with songs of David the man of God, and Esdras the scribe in front of them;

37 at the gate of ain opposite them they went up upon the stairs of the city of David, at the ascent of the wall above the house of David and as far as the water gate eastward. –

38 And the second one for praise was going to meet them, and I behind it, and half the people upon the wall above the tower of the thennourim and as far as the broad wall,

39 and above the gate of Ephraim and to the gate of isana and to the fish gate and at the tower of Ananeel and as far as the sheep gate, and they stood at the gate of the guard.

40 And the two of praise stood in the house of God, and I and half the generals with me,

41 and the priests Eliakim, Maasias, Benjamin, Michaias, Elioenai, Zacharias, Ananias, with trumpets,

42 and Maasias and Semeias and Eleazar and Ozi and Joanan and Melchias and Ailam and Ezour, and those singing were heard and were appointed.

43 And on that day they sacrificed great sacrifices and rejoiced, for God made them rejoice greatly; and their wives and their children rejoiced, and the rejoicing in Jerusalem was heard from far away.

44 And on that day they appointed men over the treasuries for the stores, the first portions and the tithes, and for the rulers of the cities gathered in them, portions for the priests and for the Levites, for there was rejoicing in Judah over the priests and over the Levites standing there.

45 And they kept the watches of their God and the watches of purification, and those singing and the gatekeepers, according to the commandments of David and Solomon his son;

46 for in the days of David, Asaph from the beginning was first of those singing, and a hymn and praise to God,

47 and all Israel in the days of Zorobabel were giving portions of those singing and of the gatekeepers, a day's matter on its day, and consecrating for the Levites, and the Levites consecrating for the sons of Aaron.

Chapter 23

1 On that day it was read in the book of Moses in the ears of the people, and it was found written in it that Ammanites and Moabites should not enter into the assembly of God forever,

2 for they did not meet the sons of Israel with bread and with water, and they hired Balaam against him to curse, and our God turned the curse into a blessing.

3 And it happened, when they heard the law, every mixed person in Israel was separated.

4 And before this Eliasib the priest, dwelling in a treasury of the house of our God, being near Tobia,

5 made him a great treasury, and there they had formerly been putting the manaan and the frankincense and the vessels and the tenth of grain and of wine and of oil, the commandment of the Levites and of those singing and of the gatekeepers, and first portions of the priests.

6 And during all this I was not in Jerusalem, for in the thirty-second year of Arthasastha king of Babylon I came to the king. And after the end of days I made a request of the king

7 and came into Jerusalem. And I understood the evil which Elisoub did for Tobia, to make him a treasury in the court of the house of God.

8 And it appeared very evil to me, and I threw all the vessels of Tobia's house outside, out of the treasury;

9 and I spoke, and they cleansed the treasuries, and I returned there the vessels of the house of God, the manaa and the frankincense.

10 And I knew that the portions of the Levites had not been given, and the Levites and those singing who were doing the work fled, each man to his field.

11 And I contended with the generals and said, Why was the house of God abandoned? And I gathered them and stationed them at their station.

12 And all Judah brought a tenth of the wheat and of the wine and of the oil into the stores,

13 at the hand of Selemia the priest and Saddouk the scribe and Phadaia from the Levites, and at their hand Anan son of Zakchour son of Mathania, for they were reckoned faithful, to distribute to their brothers.

14 Remember me, God, in this, and let not my mercy be wiped out, which I did in the house of the Lord God.

15 In those days I saw in Judah people treading winepresses on the sabbath and bringing sheaves and loading them upon the donkeys, and wine and grapes and figs and every burden, and bringing them into Jerusalem on the sabbath day; and I testified on the day of their selling.

16 And they settled in it, bringing fish and every article for sale, selling on the sabbath to the sons of Judah and in Jerusalem.

17 And I contended with the free sons of Judah and said to them, What is this evil matter which you do and profane the sabbath day?

18 Did not your fathers act so? And our God brought all these evils upon them and upon us and upon this city; and you add wrath upon Israel by profaning the sabbath.

19 And it happened, when the gates of Jerusalem were set in place before the sabbath, I spoke and they closed the gates, and I said that they should not be opened until after the sabbath; and some of my young servants I stationed at the gates so that burdens should not be lifted on the sabbath day.

20 And they all lodged and carried on selling outside Jerusalem once and twice.

21 And I testified among them and said to them, Why do you lodge opposite the wall? If you do it a second time, I will stretch out my hand against you. From that time they did not come on the sabbath.

22 And I told the Levites, who were cleansing themselves and coming to guard the gates, to sanctify the sabbath day. For these things remember me, God, and spare me according to the abundance of your mercy.

23 And in those days I saw the Jews who settled Azotian, Ammanite, Moabite wives,

24 and their sons, half speaking Azotian, and they do not know how to speak Judean,

25 and I contended with them and cursed them and struck men among them and pulled out their hair and made them swear by God, If you give your daughters to their sons, and if you take from their daughters for your sons.

26 Did not Solomon king of Israel sin so? And among many nations there was no king like him; and he was loved by God, and God made him king over all Israel. And the foreign wives turned even this man aside.

27 And shall we not hear of you doing all this evil, acting faithlessly toward our God, settling foreign wives? –

28 And from the sons of Joada, of Elisoub the great priest, son-in-law of Sanaballat the Oronite, and I drove him out from me.

29 Remember for them, God, concerning the kinship of the priesthood and the covenant of the priesthood, and the Levites. –

30 And I cleansed them from every foreign association and stationed daily divisions for the priests and for the Levites, each man according to his work,

31 and the gift of the wood-bearers at appointed times and among the bakchouria. Remember me, our God, for goodness.

Ezra

Chapter 1

1 And in the first year of Cyrus king of the Persians, so that the word of the Lord from the mouth of Jeremias would be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of the Persians, and he ordered a proclamation throughout his kingdom, indeed also in writing, saying,

2 Thus said Cyrus king of the Persians: The Lord, the God of heaven, gave me all the kingdoms of the earth, and he charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem in Judea.

3 Who among you is of all his people? And his God shall be with him, and he shall go up to Jerusalem in Judea, and let him build the house of the God of Israel [he is the God in Jerusalem].

4 And everyone remaining from all the places where he himself sojourns, the men of his place shall take him up with silver and gold and equipment and livestock, together with the voluntary offering for the house of God in Jerusalem.—

5 And the rulers of the families of Judah and Benjamin and the priests and the Levites arose, of all whose spirit God stirred to go up to build the house of the Lord in Jerusalem.

6 And all those round about strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with equipment and livestock and gifts, apart from the voluntary offerings.

7 And King Cyrus brought out the vessels of the house of the Lord which Nabouchodonosor took from Jerusalem and placed in the house of his god,

8 and Cyrus king of the Persians brought them out into the hand of Mithradates the gasbarenos, and he counted them for Sasabasar ruler of Judah.

9 And this is their number: thirty gold cooling vessels and a thousand silver cooling vessels, twenty-nine assorted items,

10 thirty gold kephphoure and two hundred silver ones, and a thousand other vessels.

11 All the vessels of gold and silver, five thousand four hundred, all going up with Sasabasar from the deportation, from Babylon to Jerusalem.

Chapter 2

1 And these are the sons of the country going up from the captivity of the deportation which Nabouchodonosor king of Babylon deported to Babylon, and they returned to Jerusalem and Judah, each man to his city,

2 who came with Zorobabel: Jesus, Neemias, Saraias, Reelias, Mardochaios, Balasan, Masphar, Bagoui, Reoum, Baana. The number of men of the people of Israel:

3 sons of Phoros, two thousand one hundred seventy-two.

4 Sons of Saphatia, three hundred seventy-two.

5 Sons of Era, seven hundred seventy-five.

6 Sons of Phaathmoab belonging to the sons of Jesoue Joab, two thousand eight hundred twelve.

7 Sons of Ailam, one thousand two hundred fifty-four.

8 Sons of Zathoua, nine hundred forty-five.

9 Sons of Zakchou, seven hundred sixty.

10 Sons of Banoui, six hundred forty-two.

11 Sons of Babi, six hundred twenty-three.

12 Sons of Asgad, three thousand two hundred twenty-two.

13 Sons of Adonikam, six hundred sixty-six.

14 Sons of Bagoi, two thousand fifty-six.

15 Sons of Adin, four hundred fifty-four.

16 Sons of Ater belonging to Ezekias, ninety-eight.

17 Sons of Basou, three hundred twenty-three.

18 Sons of Jora, one hundred twelve.

19 Sons of Asem, two hundred twenty-three.

20 Sons of Gaber, ninety-five.

21 Sons of Bethlehem, one hundred twenty-three.

22 Sons of Netopha, fifty-six.

23 Sons of Anathoth, one hundred twenty-eight.

24 Sons of Asmoth, forty-two.

25 Sons of Kariathiarim, Kaphira and Beroth, seven hundred forty-three.

26 Sons of Arama and Gabaa, six hundred twenty-one.

27 Men of Machmas, one hundred twenty-two.

28 Men of Baithel and Aia, four hundred twenty-three.

29 Sons of Nabou, fifty-two.

30 Sons of Magebos, one hundred fifty-six.

31 Sons of Elam—ar, one thousand two hundred fifty-four.

32 Sons of Eram, three hundred twenty.

33 Sons of Lod, Aroth and Ono, seven hundred twenty-five.

34 Sons of Jericho, three hundred forty-five.

35 Sons of Sanaa, three thousand six hundred thirty.—

36 And the priests: sons of Jedoua belonging to the house of Jesus, nine hundred seventy-three.

37 Sons of Emmer, one thousand fifty-two.

38 Sons of Phassour, one thousand two hundred forty-seven.

39 Sons of Erem, one thousand seven.—

40 And the Levites: sons of Jesus and Kadmiel belonging to the sons of Odouia, seventy-four.

41 The singers: sons of Asaph, one hundred twenty-eight.

42 Sons of the gatekeepers: sons of Saloum, sons of Ater, sons of Telmon, sons of Akoub, sons of Atita, sons of Sabaou, all one hundred thirty-nine.—

43 The Nathinaioi: sons of Souia, sons of Asouphe, sons of Tabaoth,

44 sons of Keraos, sons of Soea, sons of Phadon,

45 sons of Labano, sons of Agaba, sons of Akaboth,

46 sons of Agab, sons of Samalai, sons of Anan,

47 sons of Kedel, sons of Gaer, sons of Reea,

48 sons of Rason, sons of Nekoda, sons of Gazem,

49 sons of Ousa, sons of Phase, sons of Basi,

50 sons of Asena, sons of Maonim, sons of Naphison,

51 sons of Bakbouk, sons of Akipha, sons of Arour,

52 sons of Basaloth, sons of Maouda, sons of Aresa,

53 sons of Barkous, sons of Sisara, sons of Thema,

54 sons of Nasoue, sons of Atoupha.

55 Sons of Abdeselma: sons of Sati, sons of Asepherath, sons of Phadoura,

56 sons of Jeela, sons of Darkon, sons of Gedel,

57 sons of Saphatia, sons of Atil, sons of Phacherath—aseboin, sons of Emi.

58 All the Nathinin and sons of Abdeselma, three hundred ninety-two.—

59 And these are those who came up from Thelmeleth, Thelaresa, Charoub, Edan, Emmer, and they were unable to declare their family house and their seed, whether they are from Israel:

60 sons of Dalaia, sons of Boua, sons of Tobia, sons of Nekoda, six hundred fifty-two.

61 And from the sons of the priests: sons of Chabia, sons of Akous, sons of Berzellai, who took a wife from the daughters of Berzellai the Galaadite and was called by their name;

62 these, the methoesim sought their record, and they were not found; and they were ἠγχιστεύθησαν [sense uncertain] from the priesthood,

63 and Athersatha told them not to eat from the holy of holies until a priest should arise with the enlightening things and the perfect things.—

64 And the whole assembly as one, forty-two thousand three hundred sixty,

65 apart from their slaves and their female servants, these seven thousand three hundred thirty-seven; and these male singers and female singers, two hundred;

66 their horses, seven hundred thirty-six, their mules, two hundred forty-five,

67 their camels, four hundred thirty-five, their asses, six thousand seven hundred twenty.—

68 And some of the rulers of families, when they came to the house of the Lord in Jerusalem, made voluntary offerings for the house of God, to establish it upon its prepared site;

69 according to their ability they gave to the treasury of the work pure gold, sixty-one thousand minas, and silver, five thousand minas, and a hundred kothonoi of the priests.—

70 And the priests and the Levites and those from the people and the singers and the gatekeepers and the Nathinim settled in their cities, and all Israel in their cities.

Chapter 3

1 And the seventh month arrived—and the sons of Israel were in their cities—and the people gathered as one man in Jerusalem.

2 And Jesus son of Josedek and his brothers the priests and Zorobabel son of Salathiel and his brothers arose and built the altar of the God of Israel, to offer whole burnt offerings upon it according to the things written in the law of Moses, the man of God.

3 And they prepared the altar upon its prepared site, because terror was upon them from the peoples of the lands, and a whole burnt offering to the Lord went up upon it in the morning and toward evening.

4 And they kept the feast of tents according to what was written, and whole burnt offerings day by day, in number according to the ordinance, the requirement of a day on its day,

5 and after this continual whole burnt offerings, and for the new moons and for all the sanctified feasts, and for everyone voluntarily offering a voluntary offering to the Lord.

6 On day one of the seventh month they began to offer whole burnt offerings to the Lord; and the house of the Lord had not been founded.

7 And they gave silver to the stonecutters and carpenters, and food and drink and oil to the Sedanin and the Sorin, to bring cedar timber from Lebanon to the sea of Joppe, according to the concession of Cyrus king of the Persians to them.—

8 And in the second year of their coming to the house of God in Jerusalem, in the second month, Zorobabel son of Salathiel and Jesus son of Josedek and the remaining ones of their brothers, the priests and the Levites, and all those coming from the captivity to Jerusalem began, and they stationed the Levites from twenty years old and upward over those doing the works in the house of the Lord.

9 And Jesus and his sons and his brothers, Kadmiel and his sons, sons of Judah, stood over those doing the works in the house of God, sons of Enadad, their sons and their brothers, the Levites.

10 And they laid foundations to build the house of the Lord, and the priests stood robed with trumpets, and the Levites, sons of Asaph, with cymbals, to praise the Lord according to the hands of David king of Israel,

11 and they answered in praise and thanksgiving to the Lord, because it is good, because his mercy upon Israel is for the age. And all the people sounded a great voice to praise the Lord at the foundation of the house of the Lord.

12 And many from the priests and the Levites and rulers of the families, the elders who saw the first house at its foundation and this house with their eyes, were weeping with a great voice, and a crowd with shouting and gladness raised a song;

13 and the people were not distinguishing the sound of the shout of gladness from the sound of the people's weeping, because the people cried out with a great voice, and the sound was heard even from afar.

Chapter 4

1 And those afflicting Judah and Benjamin heard that the sons of the deportation were building a house for the Lord, the God of Israel,

2 and approached Zorobabel and the rulers of the families and said to them, We shall build with you, because like you we seek your God, and we sacrifice to him since the days of Asaraddon king of Assour, who brought us here.

3 And Zorobabel and Jesus and the remaining rulers of the families of Israel said to them, It is not for us and you to build a house for our God, because we ourselves together shall build for the Lord our God, as Cyrus king of the Persians commanded us.

4 And the people of the land were weakening the hands of the people of Judah, and they were hindering them from building,

5 and hiring those deliberating against them to scatter their counsel all the days of Cyrus king of the Persians and until the reign of Darius king of the Persians.

6 And in the reign of Asoueros, at the beginning of his reign, they wrote a letter against those dwelling in Judah and Jerusalem.

7 And in the days of Arthasastha, Tabeel wrote in peace to Mithradates, together also with his other fellow servants, to Arthasastha king of the Persians; the tax collector wrote a writing in Syrian and translated.

8 Raoum baaltam and Samsai the scribe wrote one letter against Jerusalem to King Arthasastha.

9 These things Raoum baaltam and Samsai the scribe and our remaining fellow servants determined, Dinaioi, Apharsathachaioi, Tarphallaioi, Apharsaioi, Archyaioi, Babylonians, Sousanachaioi [who are Elamites],

10 and the remaining ones of the nations whom the great and honored Asennaphar deported and settled in the cities of Somoron, and the remnant beyond the river;

11 this is the arrangement of the letter which they sent to him: To King Arthasastha, your servants, men beyond the river.

12 Let it be known to the king that the Judeans who came up from you to us came to Jerusalem; they are building the rebellious and evil city, and they have repaired its walls and raised its foundations.

13 Now therefore let it be known to the king that if that city is rebuilt and its walls repaired, there will be no tribute for you, nor will they give it; and this harms kings.

14 And it is not permitted for us to see the king's disgrace; because of this we sent and made known to the king,

15 that he may examine the book of the record of your fathers, and you will find and know that that city is a rebellious city and harms kings and countries, and there have been flights of slaves in its midst from times of old; because of these things this city was desolated.

16 We therefore make known to the king that if that city is built and its walls repaired, there is no peace for you.

17 And the king sent peace to Raoum baaltam and Samsai the scribe and their remaining fellow servants dwelling in Samaria and the remaining ones beyond the river, and says,

18 The tax collector whom you sent to us was called before me.

19 And a decision was issued by me, and we examined and found that that city rises against kings from days of old, and rebellions and flights occur in it,

20 and strong kings arise over Jerusalem and rule all the west of the river, and full tribute and a portion are given to them.

21 And now issue a decision to stop those men, and that city shall no longer be built, so that according to the decision

22 you may be on guard against allowing relaxation in this matter, lest destruction multiply to the harm of kings.

23 Then the tax collector of King Arthasastha read before Raoum and Samsai the scribe and their fellow servants; and they went in haste to Jerusalem and into Judah and stopped them with horses and force.

24 Then the work of the house of God in Jerusalem ceased, and was idle until the second year of the reign of Darius king of the Persians.

Chapter 5

1 And Angaios the prophet and Zacharias son of Addo prophesied a prophecy to the Judeans in Judah and Jerusalem in the name of the God of Israel over them.

2 Then Zorobabel son of Salathiel and Jesus son of Josedek arose and began to build the house of God in Jerusalem, and with them were the prophets of God, helping them.

3 At that very time Thanthanai governor beyond the river and Satharbouzana and their fellow servants came against them and said such things to them: Who issued you a decision to build this house and complete this provision?

4 Then they said these things to them: What are the names of the men building this city?

5 And the eyes of God were upon the captivity of Judah, and they did not stop them until a decision was carried to Darius; and then a message was sent to the tax collector concerning this.

6 A transcript of the letter which Thanthanai governor beyond the river and Satharbouzana and their fellow servants, the Apharsachaioi beyond the river, sent to King Darius;

7 they sent a statement to him, and these things are written in it: To King Darius, all peace.

8 Let it be known to the king that we went into the country of Judea, to the house of the great God, and it is being built with choice stones, and timber is being placed in the walls, and that work is being done skillfully and prospers in their hands.

9 Then we questioned those elders and said thus to them, Who issued you a decision to build this house and complete this provision?

10 And we asked them their names to make known to you, so as to write to you the names of the men who are their rulers.

11 And they answered us with such a statement, saying, We are slaves of the God of heaven and earth, and we are building the house which had been built many years before this, and a great king of Israel built it and completed it

12 for them. But from the time when our fathers provoked the God of heaven to anger, he gave them into the hands of Nabouchodonosor king of Babylon, the Chaldean, and he demolished this house and deported the people to Babylon.

13 But in the first year of King Cyrus, King Cyrus issued a decision that this house of God should be built.

14 And the vessels of the house of God, the gold and silver ones, which Nabouchodonosor brought out of the house in Jerusalem and carried away to the king's temple, King Cyrus brought out of the king's temple and gave to Sasabasar the treasurer over the treasury,

15 and said to him, Take all the vessels and go, place them in the house in Jerusalem in their own place.

16 Then that Sasabasar came and laid foundations of the house of God in Jerusalem; and from then until now it has been built and has not been completed.

17 And now, if it is good to the king, let an examination be made in the treasury house of the king of Babylon, so that you may know that a decision was issued by King Cyrus to build that house of God in Jerusalem; and when the king knows concerning this, let him send to us.

Chapter 6

1 Then King Darius issued a decision and examined in the libraries where the treasure is laid in Babylon.

2 And in a city, in the fortress of the city of the Medes, one scroll was found, and this was written in it: Memorandum:

3 In the first year of King Cyrus, King Cyrus issued a decision concerning the house of God in Jerusalem: Let a house be built, and a place where they sacrifice the sacrifices; and he set an elevation, a height of sixty cubits, its width sixty cubits;

4 and three strong stone courses and one wooden course; and the expense shall be given from the king's house;

5 and the vessels of the house of God, the silver and gold ones, which Nabouchodonosor brought out of the house in Jerusalem and conveyed to Babylon, let them be given and go to the temple in Jerusalem, to the place where they were placed in the house of God.

6 Now you shall give, governors beyond the river, Satharbouzana and their fellow servants, the Apharsachaioi beyond the river, being far from there,

7 leave the work of the house of God alone; let the leaders of the Judeans and the elders of the Judeans build that house of God upon its site.

8 And a decision was issued by me that you should never do anything with the elders of the Judeans toward building that house of God; and from the king's possessions, the tributes beyond the river, let expenses be diligently given to those men, so that it may not be stopped;

9 and whatever deficiency there may be, both offspring of oxen and rams and lambs for whole burnt offerings to the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, oil, according to the word of the priests in Jerusalem, let it be given them day by day, whatever they ask,

10 so that they may offer sweet smells to the God of heaven and pray for the life of the king and his sons.

11 And a decision was issued by me that every man who changes this word, a timber shall be taken down from his house, and he shall be raised upright and fixed upon it, and his house shall be dealt with according to me.

12 And God, whose name dwells there, will overthrow every king and people who stretches out his hand to change or destroy that house of God in Jerusalem. I, Darius, issued a decision; it shall be done diligently.

13 Then Thanthanai governor beyond the river, Satharbouzana and his fellow servants did thus diligently according to what King Darius sent.

14 And the elders of the Judeans were building, and the Levites, through the prophecy of Angaios the prophet and Zacharias son of Addo, and they rebuilt and completed it by the decision of the God of Israel and by the decision of Cyrus and Darius and Arthasastha, kings of the Persians.

15 And they completed this house by the third day of the month Adar, which is the sixth year of the reign of King Darius.

16 And the sons of Israel, the priests and the Levites and the remaining sons of the deportation, held the dedication of the house of God with gladness.

17 And they offered for the dedication of the house of God a hundred calves, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs, twelve male goats for sin for all Israel, according to the number of the tribes of Israel.

18 And they stationed the priests in their divisions and the Levites in their portions for the service of God in Jerusalem, according to the writing of the book of Moses.

19 And the sons of the deportation kept the Passover on the fourteenth of the first month.

20 For the priests and the Levites were cleansed to a man, all clean, and slaughtered the Passover for all the sons of the deportation and for their brothers the priests and for themselves.

21 And the sons of Israel ate the Passover, those from the deportation and everyone separating from the uncleanness of the nations of the land to join them, to seek the Lord, the God of Israel.

22 And they kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with gladness, because the Lord gladdened them and turned the heart of the king of Assour toward them, to strengthen their hands in the works of the house of the God of Israel.

Chapter 7

1 And after these words, in the reign of Arthasastha king of the Persians, Esdras went up, son of Saraios son of Azarios son of Elkia,

2 son of Saloum son of Saddouk son of Achitob,

3 son of Samaria son of Esria son of Mareroth,

4 son of Zaraia son of Saouia son of Bokki,

5 son of Abisoue son of Phinees son of Eleazar son of Aaron the first priest;

6 this Esdras went up from Babylon, and he was a swift scribe in the law of Moses which the Lord, the God of Israel, gave; and the king gave to him, because the hand of the Lord his God was upon him, in all that he himself sought.

7 And some of the sons of Israel and some of the priests and some of the Levites, and the singers and the gatekeepers and the Nathinim, went up to Jerusalem in the seventh year of King Arthasastha.

8 And they came to Jerusalem in the fifth month; this is the king's seventh year;

9 for on the first of the first month he himself laid the foundation of the ascent from Babylon, and on the first of the fifth month they came to Jerusalem, because the hand of his God was good upon him.

10 For Esdras put it in his heart to seek the law and do it and teach ordinances and judgments in Israel.

11 And this is the transcript of the decree which Arthasastha gave to Esdras the priest, the scribe of the book of the words of the Lord's commandments and his ordinances for Israel:

12 Arthasastha king of kings to Esdras, scribe of the law of the God of heaven: The word and the answer are completed.

13 A decision was issued by me that everyone in my kingdom from the people of Israel and priests and Levites who volunteers to go to Jerusalem should go with you;

14 he was sent from before the king and the seven counselors to examine concerning Judea and Jerusalem according to the law of their God in your hand.

15 And for the house of the Lord, silver and gold which the king and the counselors voluntarily offered to the God of Israel dwelling in Jerusalem,

16 and all silver and gold, whatever you may find in all the country of Babylon, together with the voluntary offering of the people and priests voluntarily offering for the house of God in Jerusalem,

17 and everything coming in, readily enter this in this book: calves, rams, lambs and their sacrifices and their libations, and you shall offer them upon the altar of the house of your God in Jerusalem.

18 And if it seems good to you and your brothers to do anything with the remainder of the silver and gold, do as is pleasing to your God.

19 And the vessels given to you for the ministry of the house of God, hand over before God in Jerusalem.

20 And the remainder of the need of the house of your God, whatever it seems to you to give, you shall give from the king's treasury houses.

21 And from me—I, King Arthasastha, issued a decision to all the treasuries beyond the river—that everything which Esdras the priest and scribe of the law of the God of heaven asks of you should be done readily,

22 up to a hundred talents of silver and up to a hundred kors of wheat and up to a hundred baths of wine and up to a hundred baths of oil, and salt for which there is no written limit.

23 Let everything which is in the decision of the God of heaven be done. Take care lest anyone attempt anything against the house of the God of heaven, lest wrath come upon the kingdom of the king and his sons.

24 And it has been made known to you: among all the priests and Levites, singers, gatekeepers, Nathinim and ministers of this house of God, let there be no tribute for you; you shall not have authority to enslave them.

25 And you, Esdras, according to the wisdom of God in your hand, appoint scribes and judges, so that they may judge all the people beyond the river, all those knowing the law of your God, and to the one not knowing you shall make it known.

26 And everyone who does not readily do the law of God and the law of the king, judgment shall be executed upon him, whether to death or discipline or loss of possessions or bonds.

27 Blessed is the Lord, the God of our fathers, who put it thus in the king's heart to glorify the house of the Lord in Jerusalem,

28 and inclined mercy toward me in the eyes of the king and his counselors and all the king's exalted rulers. And I was strengthened, as the good hand of God was upon me, and gathered rulers from Israel to go up with me.

Chapter 8

1 And these are the rulers of their families, the guides going up with me in the reign of Arthasastha king of Babylon:

2 from the sons of Phinees, Gersom; from the sons of Ithamar, Daniel; from the sons of David, Atous;

3 from the sons of Sachania, from the sons of Phoros, Zacharias, and with him the company, a hundred fifty;

4 from the sons of Phaathmoab, Eliana son of Zaraia, and with him two hundred males;

5 from the sons of Zathoe, Sechenias son of Aziel, and with him three hundred males;

6 and from the sons of Adin, Obeth son of Jonathan, and with him fifty males;

7 and from the sons of Elam, Jesia son of Athelia, and with him seventy males;

8 and from the sons of Saphatia, Zabdia son of Michael, and with him eighty males;

9 and from the sons of Joab, Abadia son of Jiel, and with him two hundred eighteen males;

10 and from the sons of Baani, Salimouth son of Josephia, and with him a hundred sixty males;

11 and from the sons of Babi, Zacharia son of Babi, and with him seventy-eight males;

12 and from the sons of Asgad, Joanan son of Akatan, and with him a hundred ten males;

13 and from the sons of Adonikam, the last ones, and these are their names: Aliphalat, Jiel and Samaia, and with them sixty males;

14 and from the sons of Bago, Outhi, and with him seventy males.

15 And I gathered them at the river coming toward Eui, and we camped there three days. And I examined among the people and among the priests, and I found none of the sons of Levi there;

16 and I sent men to Eleazar, Ariel, Samaia and Alonam and Jarib and Elnathan and Nathan and Zacharia and Mesoulam, and discerning men to Joarib and Elnathan,

17 and brought them out before a ruler in the silver of the place and put words in their mouth to speak to their brothers, the Nathinim in the silver of the place, to bring us singers for the house of our God.

18 And there came to us, as the hand of our God was good upon us, a man sachol from the sons of Mooli son of Levi son of Israel; and at first his sons and brothers came, eighteen;

19 and Asebia and Osaia from the sons of Merari, his brothers and their sons, twenty;

20 and from the Nathinim whom David and the rulers gave for the service of the Levites, two hundred twenty Nathinim; all were gathered by names.

21 And I proclaimed a fast there at the river Aoue, to humble ourselves before our God, to seek from him a straight way for us and our children and all our possessions.

22 For I was ashamed to ask the king for a force and horsemen to save us from an enemy on the way, because we said to the king, saying, The hand of our God is upon all those seeking him for good, and his might and his wrath upon all those forsaking him.

23 And we fasted and sought from our God concerning this, and he heeded us.

24 And I set apart twelve from the rulers of the priests, for Saraia, Asabia and with them ten from their brothers,

25 and weighed out to them the silver and gold and the vessels of the first offering of the house of our God, which the king and his counselors and his rulers and all Israel who were found lifted up.

26 And I weighed out into their hands six hundred fifty talents of silver and a hundred silver vessels and a hundred talents of gold,

27 and twenty gold kaphoure for the journey, a thousand chamanim, and various vessels of good shining bronze, desirable among gold.

28 And I said to them, You are holy to the Lord, and the vessels are holy, and the silver and gold are voluntary offerings to the Lord, the God of your fathers;

29 keep awake and guard them until you stand before the rulers of the priests and the Levites and the rulers of the families in Jerusalem, in the tents of the house of the Lord.

30 And the priests and the Levites received the weight of the silver and gold and the vessels, to bring to Jerusalem, to the house of our God.

31 And we set out from the river Aoue on the twelfth of the first month to come to Jerusalem; and the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of an enemy and foe on the way.

32 And we came to Jerusalem and stayed there three days.

33 And it happened on the fourth day that we weighed out the silver and gold and vessels in the house of our God into the hand of Merimoth son of Ouria the priest—and with him Eleazar son of Phinees, and with them Jozabad son of Jesus and Noadia son of Banaia, the Levites—

34 everything by number and weight, and all the weight was written. At that time,

35 those who came from the captivity, sons of the sojourning, offered whole burnt offerings to the God of Israel, twelve calves for all Israel, ninety-six rams, seventy-seven lambs, twelve male goats for sin, all whole burnt offerings to the Lord.

36 And they gave the king's ordinance to the king's administrators and governors beyond the river, and they glorified the people and the house of God.

Chapter 9

1 And when these things were completed, the rulers approached me, saying, The people Israel and the priests and the Levites were not separated from the peoples of the lands in their abominations, the Chanani, the Ethi, the Pherezi, the Jebousi, the Ammoni, the Moabi, the Moseri and the Amori,

2 for they took from their daughters for themselves and for their sons, and the holy seed was brought among peoples of the lands, and the hand of the rulers was foremost in this faithlessness.

3 And when I heard this word, I tore my garments and was leaping, and I was plucking from the hairs of my head and from my beard, and I sat remaining still.

4 And everyone pursuing the word of the God of Israel gathered to me over the faithlessness of the exiled community, and I was sitting, remaining still until the evening sacrifice.

5 And at the evening sacrifice I arose from my humiliation; and as I tore my garments, I was leaping, and I bend upon my knees and spread out my hands toward the Lord God

6 and said, Lord, I was ashamed and abashed to lift my face toward you, for our lawless deeds multiplied above our head, and our offenses grew great as far as heaven.

7 From the days of our fathers we are in great offense until this day; and in our lawless deeds we were handed over, we and our kings and our sons, into the hand of kings of the nations, with sword and with captivity and with plunder and with shame of our face, as this day.

8 And now the Lord our God dealt leniently with us, to leave something for us for salvation and to give us a support in the place of his sanctuary, to enlighten our eyes and give a little quickening in our slavery.

9 For we are slaves, and in our slavery the Lord our God did not abandon us, and he inclined mercy upon us before kings of Persians, to give us quickening, for them to raise the house of our God and restore her desolate places, and to give us a fence in Judah and in Jerusalem.

10 What should we say, our God, after this? For we abandoned your commandments,

11 which you gave us by the hand of your slaves the prophets, saying, The land into which you enter to inherit it is a land being displaced by the displacement of peoples of the nations in their abominations, with which they filled it from mouth to mouth in their uncleannesses;

12 and now do not give your daughters to their sons, and do not take from their daughters for your sons, and you shall not seek out their peace and their good forever, so that you may grow strong and eat the good things of the land and bequeath them to your sons forever.

13 And after everything coming upon us in our evil deeds and in our great offense; for there is none like our God, for you lightened our lawless deeds and gave us salvation;

14 for we turned back to scatter your commandments and to intermarry with the peoples of the lands; do not be provoked against us to the point of consummation, so that there is no remnant and survivor.

15 Lord, God of Israel, you are righteous, for we were left surviving, as this day; behold, we are before you in our offenses, for it is not possible to stand before you on account of this.

Chapter 10

1 And as Esdras prayed and as he confessed, weeping and praying before the house of God, a very great assembly gathered to him from Israel, men and women and young men, for the people wept and raised their voice, weeping.

2 And Sechenias son of Jiiel, from the sons of Elam, answered and said to Esdras, We acted faithlessly toward our God and settled foreign wives from the peoples of the land; and now there is endurance for Israel in this.

3 And now let us make a covenant with our God to cast out all the wives and what was born from them, as you wish; arise and frighten them with the commandments of our God, and let it happen according to the law.

4 Arise, for the matter is upon you, and we are with you; be strong and act.

5 And Esdras arose and made the rulers, the priests and Levites and all Israel swear to act according to this word, and they swore.

6 And Esdras arose from before the house of God and went into the treasury of Joanan son of Elisoub, and he went there; he did not eat bread and did not drink water, for he was mourning over the faithlessness of the exiled community.

7 And they carried a proclamation through Judah and through Jerusalem to all the sons of the exiled community, to be gathered into Jerusalem,

8 and everyone who does not come within three days, according to the counsel of the rulers and the elders, all his property shall be devoted to destruction, and he shall be separated from the assembly of the exiled community.

9 And all the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered into Jerusalem within the three days; this was the ninth month. On the twentieth of the month all the people sat in the square of the house of God, because of their disturbance concerning the matter and because of the storm.

10 And Esdras the priest arose and said to them, You acted faithlessly and settled foreign wives, to add to Israel's offense;

11 and now give praise to the Lord, the God of your fathers, and do what is pleasing before him, and separate yourselves from the peoples of the land and from the foreign wives.

12 And the whole assembly answered and said, Great is this word of yours for us to do;

13 but the people are many, and the season is wintry, and there is no ability to stand outside; and the work is not for one day and not for two, for we multiplied wrongdoing in this matter.

14 Let our rulers, then, stand for the whole assembly, and let all those in our cities, whoever settled foreign wives, come at times by arrangements, and with them elders of each city and judges, to turn away the wrath of the anger of our God from us concerning this matter.

15 Only Jonathan son of Asael and Jazia son of Thekoue were with me concerning this, and Mesoulam and Sabbathai the Levite were helping them.

16 And the sons of the exiled community did so. And Esdras the priest and men who were rulers of ancestral families were set apart by house, and all by names, for they turned on the first day of the tenth month to investigate the matter.

17 And they finished with all the men who settled foreign wives by the first day of the first month.

18 And among the sons of the priests were found those who settled foreign wives: from the sons of Jesus son of Josedek and his brothers, Maasea and Eliezer and Jarib and Gadalia,

19 and they gave their hand to put out their wives, and a ram from the sheep as an offering for offense, concerning their offense;

20 and from the sons of Emmer, Anani and Zabdia;

21 and from the sons of Eram, Masaia and Elia and Samaia and Jiiel and Ozia;

22 and from the sons of Phasour, Elioenai, Maasaia and Ishmael and Nathanael and Jozabad and Elasa. –

23 And from the Levites: Jozabad and Samou and Kolia [he is Kolitas] and Phathaia and Jodom and Eliezer;

24 and from those singing, Elisaph; and from the gatekeepers, Sellem and Telem and Odoue. –

25 And from Israel: from the sons of Phoros, Ramia and Jazia and Melchia and Meamin and Eleazar and Asabia and Banaia;

26 and from the sons of Elam, Mathania and Zacharia and Jaiel and Abdia and Jarimoth and Elia;

27 and from the sons of Zathoua, Elioenai, Elisoub, Mathania and Jarmoth and Zabad and Oziza;

28 and from the sons of Babi, Joanan, Anania and Zabou, Othali;

29 and from the sons of Banoui, Mesoulam, Malouch, Adaias, Jasoub and Salouia and Remoth;

30 and from the sons of Phaathmoab, Edene, Chalel, Banaia, Masea, Mathania, Beselel and Banoui and Manasse;

31 and from the sons of Eram, Eliezer, Jessia, Melchia, Samaia, Semeon,

32 Benjamin, Malouch, Samaria;

33 and from the sons of Esam, Mathani, Mathatha, Zabed, Eliphaleth, Jerami, Manasse, Semei;

34 from the sons of Bani, Moodi, Amram, Ouel,

35 Banaia, Badaia, Chelia,

36 Oujechoa, Jeremoth, Eliasib,

37 Mathania, Mathanai, and they acted,

38 the sons of Banoui and the sons of Semei
39 and Selemia and Nathan and Adaia,
40 Machnadabou, Sesi, Sarou,
41 Ezerel and Selemia and Samaria
42 and Saloum, Amaria, Joseph;
43 from the sons of Nabou, Jiiel, Mathathia, Sedem, Zambina, Jadai and Joel and Banaia. –
44 All these took foreign wives and begot sons from them.

Nehemiah

Chapter 1

1 Words of Neemias son of Achalia. And it happened in the month Chaseelou, in the twentieth year, and I was in Sousan abira,

2 and Anani, one of my brothers, came, he and men of Judah, and I asked them concerning those saved, who were left from the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem.

3 And they said to me, Those remaining, who were left from the captivity there in the country, are in great evil and in reproach, and the walls of Jerusalem are torn down, and her gates were burned with fire.

4 And it happened, when I heard these words, I sat and wept and mourned for days, and I was fasting and praying before the God of heaven

5 and said, Not so, Lord, God of heaven, the strong, the great and the fearsome, keeping the covenant and mercy for those loving him and those keeping his commandments;

6 let your ear, then, be attentive and your eyes opened to hear your slave's prayer, which I pray before you today, day and night, concerning the sons of Israel, your slaves, and I confess concerning the sins of the sons of Israel which we sinned against you. Both I and my father's house sinned;

7 with dissolution we acted dissolutely toward you, and we did not keep the commandments and the ordinances and the judgments which you commanded Moses your servant.

8 Remember, then, the word which you commanded Moses your servant, saying, If you act faithlessly, I will scatter you among the peoples;

9 and if you turn toward me and keep my commandments and do them, if your dispersion is from the end of heaven, from there I will gather them and bring them into the place which I chose for my name to dwell there.

10 And they are your servants and your people, whom you redeemed with your great power and with your mighty hand.

11 Not so, Lord, but let your ear be attentive to the prayer of your slave and to the prayer of your servants who wish to fear your name, and give success, then, to your servant today and give him into compassion before this man. – And I was cupbearer to the king.

Chapter 2

1 And it happened in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year for King Arthasastha, and the wine was before me, and I took the wine and gave it to the king, and there was no other before him;

2 and the king said to me, Why is your face evil, and are you not being moderate? This is nothing except evil of heart. And I feared very greatly.

3 And I said to the king, Let the king live forever; why should my face certainly not become evil, since the city, the house of my fathers' tombs, was made desolate, and her gates were consumed with fire?

4 And the king said to me, Concerning what do you seek this? And I prayed to the God of heaven

5 and said to the king, If it is good to the king, and if your servant will be favored before you, so as to send him to Judah, to the city of my fathers' tombs, then I will rebuild it.

6 And the king and the concubine sitting beside him said to me, Until when will your journey be, and when will you return? And it was pleasing before the king, and he sent me away, and I gave him a limit.

7 And I said to the king, If it is good to the king, let him give me letters to the governors beyond the river, so as to convey me through until I come to Judah,

8 and a letter to Asaph, keeper of the garden which belongs to the king, so as to give me timber to roof the gates, and for the wall of the city, and for a house which I will enter into it. And the king gave to me according to the good hand of God.

9 And I came to the governors beyond the river and gave them the king's letters, and the king sent commanders of the force and horsemen with me. –

10 And Sanaballat the Aroni and Tobia the slave, the Ammoni, heard, and it became evil to them that a man had come to seek good for the sons of Israel.

11 And I came into Jerusalem and was there three days.

12 And I arose at night, I and a few men with me; and I did not report to a man what God puts into my heart to do with Israel, and there is no beast with me except the beast upon which I ride.

13 And I went out by the gate of the golela and toward the mouth of the spring of the figs and to the gate of the dung, and I was breaking in the wall of Jerusalem which they themselves pull down, and her gates were consumed by fire.

14 And I passed to the gate of Ain and into the king's pool, and there was no place for the beast beneath me to pass through.

15 And I was going up on the wall of the torrent at night, and I was breaking in the wall. And I was at the gate of the ravine and returned.

16 And those guarding did not know what I went for and what I do, and to the Jews and to the priests and to those honored and to the generals and to the remaining ones doing the works, until then I did not report it.

17 And I said to them, You see the evil in which we are in it, how Jerusalem is desolate and her gates were given to fire; come, and let us rebuild the wall of Jerusalem, and we will no longer be a reproach.

18 And I reported to them the hand of God, which is good upon me, and the king's words which he said to me, and I said, Let us arise and build. And their hands were strengthened for good. –

19 And Sanaballat the Aroni and Tobia the slave, the Ammoni, and Gesam the Arabi heard and laughed at us and came against us and said, What is this matter which you do? Are you rebelling against the king?

20 And I returned a word to them and said to them, The God of heaven, he himself will give us success, and we are his clean slaves, and we will build; and for you there is no portion and righteousness and memorial in Jerusalem.

Chapter 3

1 And Elisoub the great priest and his brothers the priests arose and built the sheep gate; they themselves sanctified it and set up its doors, and as far as the tower of the hundred they sanctified, as far as the tower of Ananeel,

2 and at the hands of sons of men of Jericho, and at the hands of sons of Zakchour son of Amari.

3 And the sons of Asana built the fish gate; they themselves roofed it and set up its doors and its locks and its bars.

4 And at their hand, from Ramoth, a son of Ouria son of Akos held firm. And at their hand Mosollam son of Barachiou son of Masezebel held firm. And at their hand Sadok son of Baana held firm.

5 And at their hand the Thekoin held firm, and adoriem did not bring their neck into their service.

6 And Joida son of Phasek and Mesoulam son of Basodia made firm the gate of Isana; they themselves roofed it and set up its doors and its locks and its bars.

8 And at their hand Ananias son of Rokeim made firm, and they left Jerusalem as far as the broad wall.

9 And at their hand Raphaia, ruler of half the district of Jerusalem, made firm.

10 And at their hand Jedaia son of Eromaph made firm, also opposite his house. And at his hand Atous son of Asbania made firm.

11 And second, Melchias son of Eram and Asoub son of Phaathmoab made firm, also as far as the tower of the thannourim.

12 And at his hand Saloum son of Alloes, ruler of half the district of Jerusalem, made firm, he and his daughters.

13 Anoun and those dwelling in Zano made firm the gate of the ravine; they themselves built it and set up its doors and its locks and its bars, and a thousand cubits in the wall as far as the gate of the dung.

14 And Melchia son of Rechab, ruler of the district of Bethacharm, made firm the gate of the dung, he and his sons, and they covered it and set up its doors and its locks and its bars.

15 And the wall of the pool of the fleeces, at the king's shearing, and as far as the stairs descending from the city of David.

16 Behind him Neemias son of Azabouch, ruler of half the district of Bethsour, made firm as far as the garden of David's tomb and as far as the pool that had been made and as far as Bethanggabarim.

17 Behind him the Levites made firm, Raoum son of Bani. At his hand Asabia, ruler of half the district of Keila, made firm for his district.

18 After him their brothers made firm, Beni son of Enadad, ruler of half the district of Keila.

19 And at his hand Azour son of Jesus, ruler of Masphe, made firm a second measure of the tower of the ascent adjoining the corner.

20 After him Barouch son of Zabou made firm a second measure, from the corner as far as the door of Bethelisoub the great priest.

21 After him Meramoth son of Ouria son of Akos made firm a second measure, from the door of Bethelisoub as far as the end of Bethelisoub.

22 And after him the priests, men of Achechar, made firm.

23 And after him Benjamin and Asoub made firm opposite their house. After him Azaria son of Maasea son of Anania made firm beside his house.

24 After him Bani son of Enadad made firm a second measure, from Bethazaria as far as the corner and as far as the bend,

25 Phalal son of Euzai opposite the corner, and the tower projecting from the king's house, the upper one belonging to the court of the guard. And after him Phadaia son of Phoros.

26 And the nathinim were dwelling in Ophal as far as the garden of the water gate eastward, and the projecting tower.

27 After him the Thekoin made firm a second measure opposite the great projecting tower and as far as the wall of Ophla.

28 Above the gate of the horses the priests made firm, each man opposite his house.

29 After him Saddouk son of Emmer made firm opposite his house. And after him Samaia son of Sechenia, keeper of the gate of the east, made firm.

30 After him Anania son of Selemia and Anoum son of Seleph, the sixth, made firm a second measure. After him Mesoulam son of Barchia made firm opposite his treasury.

31 After him Melchia son of Saraphi made firm as far as Bethanathinim, and the dealers in small wares opposite the gate of Maphekad and as far as the ascent of the bend.

32 And between the ascent of the sheep gate the smiths and the dealers in small wares made firm.

33 And it happened, when Sanaballat heard that we are building the wall, it was evil to him, and he was greatly angered and laughed at the Jews.

34 And he said before his brothers, Is this the power of Somoron, that these Jews build their own city?

35 And Tobias the Ammanite came beside him, and they said to one another, Surely they will not sacrifice or eat at their place? Will not a fox go up and pull down their wall of stones? –

36 Hear, our God, for we became an object of mockery, and turn their reproach upon their head, and give them over to mockery in a land of captivity, 37 and do not cover over lawlessness.

Chapter 4

1 And it happened, when Sanaballat and Tobia and the Arabs and the Ammanites heard that growth had risen on the walls of Jerusalem, that the breaches began to be blocked up, it appeared very evil to them;

2 and they all gathered together to come to array themselves for battle in Jerusalem.

3 And we prayed to our God and stationed advance guards against them day and night because of them.

4 And Judah said, The strength of the enemies was broken, and the loose earth is much, and we will not be able to build in the wall.

5 And those afflicting us said, They will not know and will not see until we come into their midst and murder them and stop the work.

6 And it happened, when the Jews dwelling beside them came and said to us, They are coming up against us from all the places,

7 then I stationed men in the lowest parts of the place behind the wall in the sheltered places, and I stationed the people by communities with their swords, their spears and their bows.

8 And I saw and arose and said to those honored and to the generals and to the remaining people, Do not fear before them; remember our great and fearsome God, and array yourselves for battle for your brothers, your sons and your daughters, your wives and your houses.

9 And it happened, when our enemies heard that it was known to us, and God scattered their counsel, we all returned to the wall, each man to his work.

10 And it happened, from that day half of those shaken out were doing the work, and half of them were holding out, and spears and shields and the bows and the breastplates and the rulers were behind the whole house of Judah,

11 of those building in the wall. And those lifting with the carrying apparatus were with weapons; with one hand he was doing the work itself, and one was holding the missile.

12 And the builders, each man girded with his sword upon his loin, were building, and the one sounding the horn was beside him.

13 And I said to those honored and to the rulers and to the remaining people, The work is broad and great, and we are scattered upon the wall, each man far from his brother;

14 in whatever place you hear the sound of the horn, there you shall gather to us, and our God will fight for us.

15 And we were doing the work, and half of them were holding the spears, from the rising of dawn until the coming out of the stars.

16 And at that time I said to the people, Lodge in the midst of Jerusalem, and let the night be for you an advance guard and the day work.

17 And I was there, and the men of the advance guard were behind me, and there was not a man among us taking off his garments.

Chapter 5

1 And there was a great cry of the people and their wives against their brothers the Jews.

2 And there were some saying, With our sons and with our daughters we are many; and we will take grain and eat and live.

3 And there are some saying, Our fields and our vineyards and our houses, we pledge; and we will take grain and eat.

4 And there are some saying, We borrowed silver for the king's taxes, our fields and our vineyards and our houses;

5 and now our flesh is like the flesh of our brothers, our sons like their sons; and behold, we subject our sons and our daughters to oppression as slaves, and some of our daughters are being oppressed, and there is no power in our hands, and our fields and our vineyards belong to those honored. –

6 And I was greatly grieved when I heard their cry and these words.

7 And my heart took counsel within me, and I contended with those honored and the rulers and said to them, By exaction you exact, each man from his brother. And I set a great assembly against them

8 and said to them, We have acquired our brothers the Jews who are sold to the nations, of our own free will; and do you sell your brothers? And they were silent and did not find a word.

9 And I said, The matter which you do is not good; not so, in the fear of our God you shall go away from the reproach of the nations, our enemies.

10 And my brothers and my acquaintances and I placed silver and grain among them; let us abandon this exaction, then.

11 Return to them, then, as of today, their fields, their vineyards, their olive trees and their houses; and from the silver bring out to them the grain and the wine and the oil.

12 And they said, We will give back and will not seek anything from them; thus we will do, as you say. And I called the priests and made them swear to act according to this word.

13 And I shook out my mantle and said, Thus may God shake out every man who will not establish this word, from his house and from his labor, and thus he shall be shaken out and empty. And the whole assembly said, Amen, and they praised the Lord; and the people did this thing.

14 From the day on which he commanded me to be their ruler in the land of Judah, from the twentieth year and until the thirty-second year for Arthasastha, twelve years, I and my brothers did not eat their forced levy;

15 and the former forced levies, which before me they imposed heavily upon them, and they took from them in bread and in wine, in addition silver, forty didrachms, and those of theirs shaken out exercise authority over the people, and I did not act so because of fear of God.

16 And in the work of the wall of these I did not take hold; I did not acquire a field; and all those gathered were there for the work.

17 And the Jews, a hundred and fifty men, and those coming to us from the nations around us were at my table.

18 And what was prepared for one day was one calf and six choice sheep, and a young goat was prepared for me, and at intervals of ten days, among all things, wine in abundance; and with these things I did not seek bread of the forced levy, for the service was heavy upon this people. –

19 Remember for me, God, for good, all that I did for this people.

Chapter 6

1 And it happened, when it was heard by Sanaballat and Tobia and Gesam the Arabi and the remaining ones of our enemies that I built the wall, no breath was left in them. Until that time I had not set doors in the gates.

2 And Sanaballat and Gesam sent to me, saying, Come, and let us gather together in the villages in the plain of Ono; and they were considering doing evil to me.

3 And I sent messengers to them, saying, I am doing a great work and will not be able to go down, lest the work stop; when I complete it, I will go down to you.

4 And they sent to me according to this word, and I sent to them according to these things.

5 And Sanaballat sent to me his servant, and an opened letter in his hand.

6 And it was written in it, It was heard among nations that you and the Jews consider rebelling; for this reason you build the wall, and you become their king;

7 and in addition to these things you stationed prophets for yourself, so that you may sit in Jerusalem as king in Judah; and now these words will be reported to the king; and now come, let us take counsel together.

8 And I sent to him, saying, It did not happen according to these words which you say, for from your heart you fabricate them.

9 For they all frighten us, saying, Their hands will grow slack from this work, and it will not be done; and now I strengthened my hands.

10 And I entered into the house of Semei son of Dalaia son of Meetabel – and he was confined – and he said, Let us gather into the house of God, into its midst, and close its doors, for they are coming at night to murder you.

11 And I said, Who is the man who will enter into the house and live?

12 And I recognized, and behold, God did not send him, for the prophecy was a word against me, and Tobias and Sanaballat hired

13 a crowd against me, so that I might fear and do thus and sin and become an evil name for them, so that they might reproach me. –

14 Remember, God, for Tobia and Sanaballat according to these deeds of his, and for Noadia the prophet and the remaining prophets who were frightening me.

15 And the wall was completed on the twenty-fifth of Eloul, in fifty-two days.

16 And it happened, when all our enemies heard, all the nations around us feared, and fear fell greatly in their eyes, and they knew that it came about from our God for this work to be completed. –

17 And in those days letters from many honored men of Judah were going to Tobia, and those of Tobia were coming to them,

18 for many in Judah were bound by oath to him, for he was son-in-law of Sechenia son of Erae, and Joanan his son took the daughter of Mesoulam son of Barachia as wife.

19 And they were saying his words to me and carrying out my words to him, and Tobias sent letters to frighten me.

Chapter 7

1 And it happened, when the wall was built, I set up the doors, and the gatekeepers and those singing and the Levites were appointed.

2 And I gave orders to Anania my brother and to Anania, ruler of the bira in Jerusalem, for he was like a truthful man and one fearing God beyond many,

3 and I said to them, The gates of Jerusalem shall not be opened until the sun is up, and while they are still watching, let the doors be closed and wedged shut; and station advance guards from those dwelling in Jerusalem, each man at his guard post and each man opposite his house.

4 And the city was broad and great, and the people few in it, and there were no houses built.

5 And God put it into my heart, and I gathered those honored and the rulers and the people into companies; and I found a book of the company, those who went up among the first, and I found written in it,

6 And these are sons of the country who went up from the captivity of the exiled community which Nabouchodonosor king of Babylon exiled, and they returned to Jerusalem and to Judah, each man to his city,

7 with Zorobabel and Jesus and Neemias, Azaria, Daemia, Naemani, Mardochaios, Balsan, Maspharath, Esdras, Bagoi, Naoum, Baana, Masphar. Men of the people Israel:

34 Men of Elam – aar, one thousand two hundred and fifty-four.

35 Sons of Eram, three hundred and twenty.

36 Sons of Jericho, three hundred and forty-five.

37 Sons of Lod, Adid and Ono, seven hundred and twenty-one.

38 Sons of Sanaa, three thousand nine hundred and thirty. –

39 The priests: sons of Jodae, for the house of Jesus, nine hundred and seventy-three.

40 Sons of Emmer, one thousand and fifty-two.

41 Sons of Phassour, one thousand two hundred and forty-seven.

42 Sons of Eram, one thousand and seventeen. –

43 The Levites: sons of Jesus, for Kadmiel, for the sons of Oudouia, seventy-four.

44 Those singing: sons of Asaph, one hundred and forty-eight.

45 The gatekeepers: sons of Saloum, sons of Ater, sons of Telmon, sons of Akoub, sons of Atita, sons of Sabi, one hundred and thirty-eight. –

46 The nathinim: sons of Sea, sons of Asipha, sons of Tabaoth,

47 sons of Kiras, sons of Souia, sons of Phadon,

48 sons of Labana, sons of Agaba, sons of Salami,

49 sons of Anan, sons of Gadel, sons of Gaar,

57 Sons of Solomon's slaves: sons of Souti, sons of Sapharath, sons of Pherida,

58 sons of Jeale, sons of Dorkon, sons of Gadel,

59 sons of Saphatia, sons of Etel, sons of Phacharath, sons of Sabaim, sons of Emim.

60 All the nathinim and sons of Solomon's slaves, three hundred and ninety-two. –

61 And these went up from Thelmeleth, Aresa, Charoub, Eron, Jemer, and could not report the houses of their ancestral families and their seed, whether they are from Israel:

62 sons of Dalaia, sons of Tobia, sons of Nekoda, six hundred and forty-two.

63 And from the priests: sons of Ebia, sons of Akos, sons of Berzelli, for he took wives from the daughters of Berzelli the Galaadite and was called by their name;

64 these sought their record of the company, and it was not found, and they were ἠγχιστεύθησαν [sense uncertain] from the priesthood,

65 and Athersatha said that they should not eat from the holy of holies until the priest arises to enlighten. –

66 And the whole assembly became as one, forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty,

67 besides their slaves and their female servants, these being seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven; and male singers and female singers, two hundred and forty-five;

68 horses, seven hundred and thirty-six; mules, two hundred and forty-five;

69 camels, four hundred and thirty-five; donkeys, six thousand seven hundred and twenty. –

70 And some of the chiefs of the ancestral families gave for the work to Neemias, into the treasury, a thousand gold pieces, fifty bowls and thirty chothonoth of the priests.

71 And some of the chiefs of the ancestral families gave into the treasury of the work twenty thousand of gold and two thousand two hundred minas of silver,

72 and the remaining people gave twenty thousand of gold and two thousand two hundred minas of silver and sixty-seven chothonoth of the priests. –

73 And the priests and the Levites and the gatekeepers and those singing and those from the people and the nathinim and all Israel settled in their cities. And the seventh month arrived – and the sons of Israel were in their cities –

Chapter 8

1 and all the people gathered as one man into the broad space in front of the water gate. And they told Esdras the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord commanded Israel.

2 And Esdras the priest brought the law before the assembly, from man to woman, and everyone understanding to hear, on the first day of the seventh month,

3 and he read in it from the hour when the sun shines through until the middle of the day, before the men and the women, and they were understanding, and the ears of all the people were toward the book of the law.

4 And Esdras the scribe stood upon a wooden platform, and beside him stood Mattathias and Samaias and Ananias and Ouria and Elkia and Maasaia on his right, and on the left Phadaias and Misael and Melchias and Osam and Asabdana and Zacharias and Mosollam.

5 And Esdras opened the book before all the people – for he was above the people – and it happened, when he opened it, all the people stood.

6 And Esdras blessed the Lord, the great God, and all the people answered and said, Amen, lifting their hands, and they bent down and worshiped the Lord upon their face on the earth.

7 And Jesus and Banaias and Sarabia were instructing the people in the law, and the people were at their station.

8 And they read in the book of the law of God, and Esdras taught and explained distinctly in knowledge of the Lord, and the people understood in the reading. –

9 And Neemias and Esdras the priest and scribe and the Levites instructing the people spoke and said to all the people, The day is holy to the Lord our God; do not mourn or weep; for all the people were weeping when they heard the words of the law.

10 And he said to them, Go, eat rich foods and drink sweet drinks and send portions to those who do not have, for the day is holy to our Lord; and do not fall apart, for it is your strength.

11 And the Levites were quieting all the people, saying, Be silent, for the day is holy, and do not fall down.

12 And all the people went away to eat and drink and send portions and make great rejoicing, for they understood the words which he made known to them.

13 And on the second day the rulers of the ancestral families for all the people, the priests and the Levites, gathered to Esdras the scribe to attend to all the words of the law.

14 And they found written in the law which the Lord commanded Moses, that the sons of Israel should dwell in tents during a feast in the seventh month,

15 and that they should signal with trumpets in all their cities and in Jerusalem. And Esdras said, Go out to the mountain and bring olive leaves and leaves of cypress trees and myrtle leaves and palm leaves and leaves of a dense tree, to make tents according to what is written.

16 And the people went out and brought them and made tents for themselves, each man upon his roof, and in their courts and in the courts of the house of God and in the squares of the city and as far as the gate of Ephraim.

17 And the whole assembly, those returning from the captivity, made tents and settled in tents; for from the days of Jesus son of Naue the sons of Israel had not done so until that day; and there was great rejoicing.

18 And he read in the book of the law of God day by day, from the first day until the last day; and they held a feast for seven days, and on the eighth day a closing observance according to the judgment.

Chapter 9

1 And on the twenty-fourth day of this month the sons of Israel gathered in fasting and in sackcloth.

2 And the sons of Israel separated themselves from every foreign son and stood and confessed their sins and the lawless deeds of their fathers.

3 And they stood at their station and read in the book of the law of the Lord their God, and they were confessing to the Lord and worshiping the Lord their God.

4 And on the ascent of the Levites stood Jesus and sons of Kadmiel, Sachania son of Sarabia, sons of Chanani, and they cried with a great voice to the Lord their God.

5 And the Levites Jesus and Kadmiel said, Arise, bless the Lord your God from age to age, and they will bless the name of your glory and exalt it above every blessing and praise.

6 And Esdras said, You yourself alone are Lord; you made heaven and the heaven of heaven and all their array, the earth and all that is in it, the seas and all that is in them, and you give life to all things, and the armies of the heavens worship you.

7 You are the Lord God; you made your choice in Abram and brought him out of the country of the Chaldeans and placed upon him the name Abraham;

8 and you found his heart faithful before you and made a covenant with him to give him the land of the Chananites and Chettites and Amorrites and Pherezites and Jebousites and Gergesites, and to his seed; and you established your words, for you are righteous.

9 And you saw the humiliation of our fathers in Egypt and heard their cry at the Red Sea.

10 And you gave signs in Egypt, in Pharaoh and in all his servants and in all the people of his land, for you knew that they acted arrogantly against them, and you made a name for yourself, as this day.

11 And you broke open the sea before them, and they passed through the midst of the sea on dry ground, and those pursuing them you threw into the deep like a stone in mighty water.

12 And in a pillar of cloud you guided them by day, and in a pillar of fire by night, to light for them the way in which they will travel.

13 And you descended upon Mount Sina and spoke to them from heaven and gave them upright judgments and laws of truth, good ordinances and commandments.

14 And you made known to them your holy sabbath; commandments and ordinances and law you commanded them by the hand of Moses your slave.

15 And you gave them bread from heaven for their lack of grain and brought out water from rock for them for their thirst. And you told them to enter to inherit the land concerning which you stretched out your hand to give it to them.

16 And they and our fathers acted arrogantly and hardened their neck and did not hear your commandments;

17 and they refused to listen and did not remember your wonders which you did with them, and they hardened their neck and gave a beginning to return to their slavery in Egypt. And you are a merciful and compassionate God, long-suffering and abundant in mercy, and you did not abandon them.

18 And moreover they also made themselves a cast calf and said, These are the gods who brought us out of Egypt; and they made great provocations to anger.

19 And you in your many compassions did not abandon them in the wilderness; you did not turn away from them the pillar of cloud by day to guide them in the way, and the pillar of fire by night to light for them the way in which they will travel.

20 And you gave your good spirit to instruct them, and you did not withhold your manna from their mouth, and you gave them water for their thirst.

21 And forty years you nourished them in the wilderness; they did not lack; their garments did not grow old, and their feet did not split open.

22 And you gave them kingdoms and peoples and divided them for them, and they inherited the land of Seon king of Esebon and the land of Og king of Basan.

23 And you multiplied their sons like the stars of heaven and brought them into the land which you spoke of to their fathers, and they inherited it.

24 And you wiped out before them those dwelling in the land of the Chananites and gave them into their hands, and their kings and the peoples of the land, to do to them as was pleasing before them.

25 And they seized high cities and inherited houses full of all good things, hewn pits, vineyards and olive groves and every tree for food in abundance; and they ate and were filled and grew fat and lived luxuriously in your great goodness.

26 And they changed and departed from you and threw your law behind their body and killed your prophets, who testified among them to turn them toward you, and they made great provocations to anger.

27 And you gave them into the hand of those afflicting them, and they afflicted them; and they cried out to you at the time of their affliction, and you heard from your heaven and in your great compassions gave them saviors and saved them from the hand of those afflicting them.

28 And when they rested, they turned back to do evil before you; and you abandoned them into the hands of their enemies, and they ruled over them. And again they cried out to you, and you listened from heaven and rescued them in your many compassions.

29 And you testified to them to turn them to your law, and they did not hear, but in your commandments and in your judgments they sinned, which, if a man does them, he will live in them; and they gave a disobedient back and hardened their neck and did not hear.

30 And you prolonged matters over them for many years and testified to them by your spirit through the hand of your prophets; and they did not give ear, and you gave them into the hand of peoples of the land.

31 And you in your many compassions did not make an end of them and did not abandon them, for you are strong and merciful and compassionate.

32 And now, our God, the strong, the great, the mighty and the fearsome, keeping your covenant and your mercy, let not all the hardship be made little before you which found us and our kings and our rulers and our priests and our prophets and our fathers, and among all your people, from the days of kings of Assour and until this day.

33 And you are righteous in all things coming upon us, for you acted in truth, and we sinned.

34 And our kings and our rulers and our priests and our fathers did not do your law and did not attend to your commandments and your testimonies which you testified to them.

35 And they in your kingdom and in your abundant goodness which you gave them, and in the broad and rich land which you gave before them, did not serve you and did not turn away from their evil practices.

36 Behold, today we are slaves, and the land which you gave our fathers to eat its fruit,

37 is for the kings whom you gave over us in our sins, and they exercise authority over our bodies and over our beasts as is pleasing to them, and we are in great affliction.

Chapter 10

1 And in all these things we make a pledge of faithfulness and write, and all our rulers, our Levites, our priests affix seals.

2 And among those sealing were Neemias son of Achalia and Sedekias

3 son of Saraia, and Azaria and Jermia,

4 Phasour, Amaria, Melchia,

5 Atous, Sebani, Malouch,

6 Iram, Meramoth, Abdia,

7 Daniel, Ganathon, Barouch,

8 Mesoulam, Abia, Miamin,

9 Maazia, Belgai, Samaia; these were priests;

10 and the Levites, Jesus son of Azania, Banaiou from the sons of Enadad, Kadmiel

11 and his brothers, Sabania, Odouia, Kalita, Pheleia, Anan,

12 Micha, Roob, Esebias,

13 Zachor, Sarabia, Sebania,

14 Odouia, sons of Banounai;

15 rulers of the people, Phoros, Phaathmoab, Elam, Zathouia, sons of

16 Bani, Asgad, Bebai,

17 Edania, Bagoi, Edin,

18 Ater, Ezekia, Azour,

19 Odouia, Esam, Besi,

20 Ariph, Anathoth, Nobai,

21 Magaphes, Mesoulam, Ezir,

22 Mesozebel, Saddouk, Jeddoua,

23 Phaltia, Anan, Anaia,

24 Osee, Anania, Asoub,

25 Aloes, Phalai, Sobek,

26 Raoum, Esabana, Maasaia

27 and Aia, Ainan, Enan,

28 Malouch, Eram, Baana.

29 And the remaining people, the priests, the Levites, the gatekeepers, those singing, the nathinim and everyone coming from peoples of the land toward the law of God, their wives, their sons, their daughters, everyone knowing and understanding,

30 were strengthening themselves against their brothers, cursed them and entered into a curse and into an oath to walk in the law of God which was given by the hand of Moses the slave of God, and to keep and do all the commandments of our Lord and his judgments,

31 and not to give our daughters to the peoples of the land, and we will not take their daughters for our sons.

32 And the peoples of the land who bring merchandise and every article for sale on the sabbath day to sell, we do not buy from them on the sabbath and on a holy day. And we will release the seventh year and the exaction of every hand.

33 And we will establish commandments upon ourselves, to impose upon ourselves the giving of a third of the didrachm each year for the service of the house of our God,

34 for bread of the presence and the continual sacrifice and for the continual whole burnt offering of the sabbaths, of the new moons, for the feasts and for the holy things, and the offerings for sin to make atonement for Israel, and for works of the house of our God.

35 And we cast lots concerning the lot of wood-bearing, the priests and the Levites and the people, to bring it into the house of our God, by house of our ancestral families, at appointed times, year by year, to burn upon the altar of the Lord our God, as it is written in the law,

36 and to bring the first produce of our land and the first produce of the fruit of every tree, year by year, into the house of the Lord,

37 and the firstborn of our sons and of our beasts, as it is written in the law, and the firstborn of our cattle and our flocks, to bring into the house of our God to the priests ministering in the house of our God.

38 And the first portion of our grain and the fruit of every tree, of wine and of oil, we will bring to the priests into the treasury of the house of God; and a tenth of our land to the Levites. And the Levites themselves collect tithes in all the cities of our service,

39 and the priest, a son of Aaron, shall be with the Levite at the Levite's tithe, and the Levites will bring up the tenth of the tenth into the house of our God, into the treasuries, into the house of God.

40 For into the treasuries the sons of Israel and the sons of Levi will bring the first portions of grain and of wine and of oil, and there are the holy vessels and the priests who minister and the gatekeepers and those singing. And we will not abandon the house of our God.

Chapter 11

1 And the rulers of the people settled in Jerusalem, and the remaining people cast lots to bring one out of ten to settle in Jerusalem, the holy city, and nine portions in the cities.

2 And the people blessed all the men volunteering to settle in Jerusalem.

3 And these are the rulers of the country who settled in Jerusalem; and in the cities of Judah they settled, each man in his possession in their cities, Israel, the priests and the Levites and the nathinaians and the sons of Solomon's slaves;

4 and in Jerusalem some of the sons of Judah and some of the sons of Benjamin settled. – From the sons of Judah: Athaia son of Azaia son of Zacharia son of Amaria son of Saphatia son of Malelel, and from the sons of Phares.

5 And Maasia son of Barouch son of Chalaza son of Ozia son of Adaia son of Jorib son of Thezia son of the Seloni.

6 All the sons of Phares dwelling in Jerusalem, four hundred and sixty-eight men of strength. –

7 And these are sons of Benjamin: Selo son of Mesoulam son of Joad son of Phadaia son of Kolia son of Masaia son of Aithiel son of Jesia;

8 and behind him Gebi, Seli, nine hundred and twenty-eight.

9 And Joel son of Zechri was overseer over them, and Judas son of Asana was second over the city. –

10 From the priests: also Jadia son of Jorib, Jachin,

11 Saraia son of Elkia son of Mesoulam son of Saddouk son of Marioth son of Aitob, opposite the house of God.

12 And their brothers doing the work of the house: Amasi son of Zacharia son of Phassour son of Melchia,

13 rulers of ancestral families, two hundred and forty-two. And Amessai son of Esdriel,

14 and his brothers, mighty in battle array, one hundred and twenty-eight, and overseer over them, Badiel. –

15 And from the Levites, Samaia son of Asoub son of Ezri

17 and Mathania son of Micha and Obed son of Samoui,

18 two hundred and eighty-four.

19 And the gatekeepers Akoub, Telamin, and their brothers, one hundred and seventy-two.

22 And an overseer of Levites was a son of Bani, Ozi son of Asabia son of Micha. From the sons of Asaph, those singing opposite the work of the house of God;

23 for the king's commandment was upon them.

24 And Pathaia son of Baseza was at the king's hand for every matter concerning the people. –

25 And toward the settlements in their field. And some of the sons of Judah settled in Kariatharbok

26 and in Jesou

27 and in Beersabee,

30 and their settlements, Lachis and her fields; and they encamped in Beersabee.

31 And the sons of Benjamin were from Gaba, Machamas.

36 And from the Levites, portions of Judah for Benjamin.

Chapter 12

1 And these are the priests and the Levites going up with Zorobabel son of Salathiel and Jesus: Saraia, Jermia, Esdras,

2 Amaria, Malouch,

3 Sechenia;

7 these were rulers of the priests and their brothers in the days of Jesus. –

8 And the Levites: Jesou, Banoui, Kadmiel, Sarabia, Judah, Machania; over the hands, he and his brothers,

9 for the daily divisions.

10 And Jesus begot Joakim, and Joakim begot Eliasib, and Eliasib, Jodae,

11 and Jodae begot Jonathan, and Jonathan begot Jadou.

12 And in the days of Joakim, his brothers the priests and the rulers of the ancestral families: for Saraia, Maraia; for Jermia, Anania;

13 for Esdras, Mesoulam; for Amaria, Joanan;

14 for Malouch, Jonathan; for Sechenia, Joseph;

15 for Arem, Adnas; for Marioth, Elkai;

16 for Addai, Zacharias; for Ganathon, Mosollam;

17 for Abia, Zechri; for Benjamin, at times, for Pheleti;

18 for Balga, Samoue; for Semeia, Jonathan;

19 for Joiarib, Maththanai; for Idia, Ozi;

20 for Sallai, Kallai; for Amouk, Abed;

21 for Elkia, Asabias; for Jedeiou, Nathanael. –

22 The Levites in the days of Eliasib, Joada and Joanan and Idoua were recorded as rulers of ancestral families, and the priests in the reign of Darius the Persian;

23 sons of Levi, rulers of the ancestral families, recorded in the book of words of the days, even until the days of Joanan son of Elisoub.

24 And rulers of the Levites: Asabia and Sarabia and Jesou and sons of Kadmiel and their brothers opposite them, to sing hymns and praise by the commandment of David the man of God, daily division against daily division,

25 when I gathered the gatekeepers,

26 in the days of Joakim son of Jesus son of Josedek and in the days of Neemias, and Esdras the priest, the scribe.

27 And at the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem they sought the Levites in their places to bring them into Jerusalem to make a dedication and rejoicing with thodatha and with songs, sounding cymbals, and psalteries and lyres.

28 And the sons of those singing gathered, also from the surrounding district round about into Jerusalem, and from settlements

29 and from fields; for those singing built settlements for themselves in Jerusalem.

30 And the priests and the Levites were cleansed, and they cleansed the people and the gatekeepers and the wall.

31 And I brought up the rulers of Judah upon the wall and stationed two great ones for praise, and they passed on the right upon the wall of the dung,

32 and Osaia and half the rulers of Judah went behind them,

33 and Azarias, Esdras and Mesoulam,

34 Judah and Benjamin and Samaia and Jermia,

35 and from the sons of the priests, with trumpets, Zacharias son of Jonathan son of Samaia son of Mathania son of Michaia son of Zakchour son of Asaph,

36 and his brothers Samaia and Oziel, to praise with songs of David the man of God, and Esdras the scribe in front of them;

37 at the gate of ain opposite them they went up upon the stairs of the city of David, at the ascent of the wall above the house of David and as far as the water gate eastward. –

38 And the second one for praise was going to meet them, and I behind it, and half the people upon the wall above the tower of the thennourim and as far as the broad wall,

39 and above the gate of Ephraim and to the gate of isana and to the fish gate and at the tower of Ananeel and as far as the sheep gate, and they stood at the gate of the guard.

40 And the two of praise stood in the house of God, and I and half the generals with me,

41 and the priests Eliakim, Maasias, Benjamin, Michaias, Elioenai, Zacharias, Ananias, with trumpets,

42 and Maasias and Semeias and Eleazar and Ozi and Joanan and Melchias and Ailam and Ezour, and those singing were heard and were appointed.

43 And on that day they sacrificed great sacrifices and rejoiced, for God made them rejoice greatly; and their wives and their children rejoiced, and the rejoicing in Jerusalem was heard from far away.

44 And on that day they appointed men over the treasuries for the stores, the first portions and the tithes, and for the rulers of the cities gathered in them, portions for the priests and for the Levites, for there was rejoicing in Judah over the priests and over the Levites standing there.

45 And they kept the watches of their God and the watches of purification, and those singing and the gatekeepers, according to the commandments of David and Solomon his son;

46 for in the days of David, Asaph from the beginning was first of those singing, and a hymn and praise to God,

47 and all Israel in the days of Zorobabel were giving portions of those singing and of the gatekeepers, a day's matter on its day, and consecrating for the Levites, and the Levites consecrating for the sons of Aaron.

Chapter 13

1 On that day it was read in the book of Moses in the ears of the people, and it was found written in it that Ammanites and Moabites should not enter into the assembly of God forever,

2 for they did not meet the sons of Israel with bread and with water, and they hired Balaam against him to curse, and our God turned the curse into a blessing.

3 And it happened, when they heard the law, every mixed person in Israel was separated.

4 And before this Eliasib the priest, dwelling in a treasury of the house of our God, being near Tobia,

5 made him a great treasury, and there they had formerly been putting the manaan and the frankincense and the vessels and the tenth of grain and of wine and of oil, the commandment of the Levites and of those singing and of the gatekeepers, and first portions of the priests.

6 And during all this I was not in Jerusalem, for in the thirty-second year of Arthasastha king of Babylon I came to the king. And after the end of days I made a request of the king

7 and came into Jerusalem. And I understood the evil which Elisoub did for Tobia, to make him a treasury in the court of the house of God.

8 And it appeared very evil to me, and I threw all the vessels of Tobia's house outside, out of the treasury;

9 and I spoke, and they cleansed the treasuries, and I returned there the vessels of the house of God, the manaa and the frankincense.

10 And I knew that the portions of the Levites had not been given, and the Levites and those singing who were doing the work fled, each man to his field.

11 And I contended with the generals and said, Why was the house of God abandoned? And I gathered them and stationed them at their station.

12 And all Judah brought a tenth of the wheat and of the wine and of the oil into the stores,

13 at the hand of Selemia the priest and Saddouk the scribe and Phadaia from the Levites, and at their hand Anan son of Zakchour son of Mathania, for they were reckoned faithful, to distribute to their brothers.

14 Remember me, God, in this, and let not my mercy be wiped out, which I did in the house of the Lord God.

15 In those days I saw in Judah people treading winepresses on the sabbath and bringing sheaves and loading them upon the donkeys, and wine and grapes and figs and every burden, and bringing them into Jerusalem on the sabbath day; and I testified on the day of their selling.

16 And they settled in it, bringing fish and every article for sale, selling on the sabbath to the sons of Judah and in Jerusalem.

17 And I contended with the free sons of Judah and said to them, What is this evil matter which you do and profane the sabbath day?

18 Did not your fathers act so? And our God brought all these evils upon them and upon us and upon this city; and you add wrath upon Israel by profaning the sabbath.

19 And it happened, when the gates of Jerusalem were set in place before the sabbath, I spoke and they closed the gates, and I said that they should not be opened until after the sabbath; and some of my young servants I stationed at the gates so that burdens should not be lifted on the sabbath day.

20 And they all lodged and carried on selling outside Jerusalem once and twice.

21 And I testified among them and said to them, Why do you lodge opposite the wall? If you do it a second time, I will stretch out my hand against you. From that time they did not come on the sabbath.

22 And I told the Levites, who were cleansing themselves and coming to guard the gates, to sanctify the sabbath day. For these things remember me, God, and spare me according to the abundance of your mercy.

23 And in those days I saw the Jews who settled Azotian, Ammanite, Moabite wives,

24 and their sons, half speaking Azotian, and they do not know how to speak Judean,

25 and I contended with them and cursed them and struck men among them and pulled out their hair and made them swear by God, If you give your daughters to their sons, and if you take from their daughters for your sons.

26 Did not Solomon king of Israel sin so? And among many nations there was no king like him; and he was loved by God, and God made him king over all Israel. And the foreign wives turned even this man aside.

27 And shall we not hear of you doing all this evil, acting faithlessly toward our God, settling foreign wives? –

28 And from the sons of Joada, of Elisoub the great priest, son-in-law of Sanaballat the Oronite, and I drove him out from me.

29 Remember for them, God, concerning the kinship of the priesthood and the covenant of the priesthood, and the Levites. –

30 And I cleansed them from every foreign association and stationed daily divisions for the priests and for the Levites, each man according to his work,

31 and the gift of the wood-bearers at appointed times and among the bakchouria. Remember me, our God, for goodness.

Esther

Chapter 1

1 a In the second year of the reign of Artaxerxes the great, on the first of Nisa, Mardochaios son of Jairos son of Semeios son of Kisaios, from the tribe of Benjamin, saw a dream,

2 a Jewish man dwelling in the city of Sousoi, a great man serving in the king's court;

3 and he was from the captivity which Nabouchodonosor king of Babylon took captive from Jerusalem with Jechonias king of Judea.

4 And this was his dream: and behold, voices and uproar, thunders and an earthquake, tumult upon the earth;

5 and behold, two great dragons came forward, both ready to wrestle, and their voice became great;

6 and at their voice every nation prepared for war, so as to wage war against a nation of righteous people.

7 And behold, a day of darkness and gloom, affliction and distress, maltreatment and great tumult upon the earth;

8 and the whole righteous nation was troubled, fearing their own evils, and they prepared to perish and cried to God.

9 And from their cry there came, as though from a small spring, a great river, much water;

1 k light and the sun rose, and the humble were exalted and devoured the glorious. –

2 And Mardochaios, having awakened, who had seen this dream and what God has resolved to do, held it in his heart and in every matter wished to understand it until night.

3 And Mardochaios rested in the court with Gabatha and Tharra, the king's two eunuchs guarding the court,

4 and he heard their reasonings and investigated their concerns and learned that they are preparing to lay hands upon King Artaxerxes, and he informed the king concerning them;

5 and the king examined the two eunuchs, and after confessing they were led away.

6 And the king wrote these matters as a memorial, and Mardochaios wrote concerning these matters;

7 and the king commanded Mardochaios to serve in the court and gave him gifts for these things.

8 And Aman son of Amadathos, a Bougaian, was glorious before the king; and he sought to do evil to Mardochaios and his people on behalf of the king's two eunuchs.

9 And it happened after these matters in the days of Artaxerxes – this Artaxerxes held sway over a hundred and twenty-seven territories from India –

2 in those very days, when King Artaxerxes was enthroned in the city of Sousoi,

3 in the third year of his reign he made a reception for his friends and the remaining nations and the glorious men of Persians and Medes and the rulers of the satraps.

4 And after these things, after showing them the wealth of his kingdom and the glory of the rejoicing of his wealth for a hundred and eighty days,

5 when the days of the wedding were fulfilled, the king made a drinking feast for the nations found in the city for six days, in the court of the king's house,

6 adorned with fine linen and cotton hangings stretched on fine linen and purple cords on gold and silver cubes upon pillars of Parian stone and stone; gold and silver couches upon a pavement of emerald stone and mother-of-pearl and Parian stone, and translucent coverings variously adorned with flowers, roses sprinkled round about;

7 gold and silver drinking cups and a little carbuncle cup set out, of thirty thousand talents; much sweet wine, which the king himself drank.

8 And this drinking feast did not take place according to an established law, but the king wished so and commanded the stewards to do his will and that of the people.

9 And Astin the queen made a drinking feast for the women in the royal quarters where King Artaxerxes was.

10 And on the seventh day the king, having become merry, told Aman and Bazan and Tharra and Boraze and Zatholtha and Abataza and Tharaba, the seven eunuchs who served King Artaxerxes,

11 to bring the queen in to him, for her to reign, and to place the diadem upon her and to show her to all the rulers and the nations, her beauty, for she was beautiful.

12 And Astin the queen did not heed him, to come with the eunuchs. And the king was grieved and angered

13 and said to his friends, Astin spoke according to these things; make, then, a law and judgment concerning this.

14 And Arkesaios and Sarsathaios and Malesear, the rulers of Persians and Medes, those near the king, those sitting first beside the king, approached him

15 and reported to him according to the laws how one must deal with Astin the queen, for she did not do what was commanded by the king through the eunuchs.

16 And Mouchaios said to the king and the rulers, Astin the queen wronged not the king alone, but also all the rulers and the king's leaders,

17 [for he also related to them the queen's words and how she contradicted the king]. As, then, she contradicted King Artaxerxes,

18 so today the remaining ruling women of the rulers of Persians and Medes, having heard what was said by her to the king, will likewise dare to dishonor their husbands.

19 If, then, it seems good to the king, let him command a royal decree, and let it be written according to the laws of Medes and Persians; and let him not act otherwise, nor let the queen enter to him any longer, and let the king give her queenship to a woman better than she.

20 And let the law from the king, whatever he makes, be heard in his kingdom, and thus all the women will confer honor upon their own husbands, from poor to rich.

21 And the word pleased the king and the rulers, and the king did as Mouchaios spoke;

22 and he sent into the whole kingdom, territory by territory, according to their language, so that there should be fear for them in their houses.

Chapter 2

1 And after these matters the king ceased from his anger and no longer remembered Astin, remembering what she spoke and how he condemned her.

2 And the king's servants said, Let uncorrupted girls, beautiful in appearance, be sought for the king;

3 and the king will appoint village rulers in all the territories of his kingdom, and let them select virgin girls, beautiful in appearance, into the city of Sousan, into the women's quarters, and let them be handed over to the king's eunuch, the keeper of the women, and let cleansing ointment and the remaining care be given;

4 and the woman who pleases the king will reign instead of Astin. And the matter pleased the king, and he did so.

5 And there was a Jewish man in the city of Sousoi, and his name was Mardochaios son of Jairos son of Semeios son of Kisaios, from the tribe of Benjamin,

6 who was a captive from Jerusalem, which Nabouchodonosor king of Babylon took captive.

7 And he had a foster child, a daughter of Aminadab, his father's brother, and her name was Esther; and when her parents died, he brought her up for himself as a wife; and the girl was beautiful in appearance.

8 And when the king's ordinance was heard, many girls gathered into the city of Sousan under the hand of Gai, and Esther was brought to Gai, the keeper of the women.

9 And the girl pleased him and found favor before him, and he hurried to give her the cleansing ointment and the portion and the seven girls assigned to her from the royal household, and he treated her and her maids well in the women's quarters;

10 and Esther did not reveal her race or her homeland, for Mardochaios commanded her not to report them.

11 And each day Mardochaios walked about the women's court, watching what would happen to Esther.

12 And this was the time for a girl to enter to the king, when she completes twelve months; for thus the days of care are completed, six months being anointed with myrrh oil and six months with aromatics and with the women's cleansing ointments,

13 and then she enters to the king; and whatever she asks for, he will hand over to her to go in with her from the women's quarters to the royal quarters.

14 At evening she enters, and toward day she runs back into the second women's quarters, where Gai, the king's eunuch, the keeper of the women, is, and she no longer enters to the king unless called by name.

15 And when the time was fulfilled for Esther, daughter of Aminadab, the brother of Mardochaios's father, to enter to the king, she rejected none of what the eunuch, the keeper of the women, commanded her; for Esther was finding favor with all those seeing her.

16 And Esther entered to King Artaxerxes in the twelfth month, which is Adar, in the seventh year of his reign.

17 And the king fell in love with Esther, and she found favor beyond all the virgins, and he placed the women's diadem upon her.

18 And the king made a drinking feast for all his friends and the forces for seven days and exalted Esther's wedding and made a remission for those under his reign.

19 And Mardochaios was serving in the court.

20 And Esther did not reveal her homeland; for thus Mardochaios commanded her, to fear God and do his ordinances, as when she was with him, and Esther did not change her conduct.

21 And the king's two eunuchs, the chief bodyguards, were grieved because Mardochaios was promoted, and they sought to kill King Artaxerxes.

22 And the matter was made known to Mardochaios, and he informed Esther, and she disclosed the matters of the plot to the king.

23 And the king examined the two eunuchs and hanged them; and the king commanded it to be recorded as a memorial in the royal library, concerning Mardochaios's goodwill, in a commendation.

Chapter 3

1 And after these things King Artaxerxes glorified Aman son of Amadathos, the Bougaian, and exalted him, and he held the first rank among all his friends.

2 And all those in the court bowed down to him, for thus the king commanded them to do; but Mardochaios did not bow down to him.

3 And those in the king's court said to Mardochaios, Mardochaios, why do you disobey what is said by the king?

4 Each day they spoke to him, and he did not heed them; and they informed Aman that Mardochaios opposed the king's words; and Mardochaios informed them that he is Jewish.

5 And Aman, recognizing that Mardochaios does not bow down to him, became very angry

6 and resolved to destroy all the Jews under the reign of Artaxerxes.

7 And he made a decree in the twelfth year of the reign of Artaxerxes and cast lots, day by day and month by month, so as to destroy the race of Mardochaios in one day, and the lot fell on the fourteenth of the month which is Adar.

8 And he spoke to King Artaxerxes, saying, There exists a nation dispersed among the nations in all your kingdom, and their laws are different beyond all the nations, and they disobey the king's laws, and it does not benefit the king to leave them;

9 if it seems good to the king, let him decree to destroy them, and I will pay into the king's treasury ten thousand talents of silver.

10 And the king, taking off his ring, gave it into Aman's hand to seal in accordance with what was written against the Jews.

11 And the king said to Aman, Keep the silver, and deal with the nation as you wish.

12 And the king's scribes were called in the first month on the thirteenth, and they wrote, as Aman commanded, to the generals and the rulers in every territory from India to Ethiopia, to the hundred and twenty-seven territories, and to the rulers of the nations according to their own language, by King Artaxerxes.

13 And it was sent by letter-bearers into the kingdom of Artaxerxes, to destroy the race of the Jews on one day of the twelfth month, which is Adar, and to plunder their possessions. –

13 a And this is the copy of the letter: The great King Artaxerxes writes these things to the rulers of the hundred and twenty-seven territories from India to Ethiopia and the local rulers subject to them:

14 Having ruled many nations and prevailed over the whole inhabited world, I wished, without being lifted up by the audacity of authority, but always conducting affairs more reasonably and with gentleness, to establish the lives of those subject to me as ever untroubled by waves, providing the kingdom as peaceful and traversable to its limits, and to renew the peace desired by all people.

15 And when I inquired of the counselors how this might be brought to completion, Aman, who excelled in prudence among us and was proven in unchanging goodwill and firm faithfulness and had carried off the second honor of the kingdoms,

16 showed us that among all the tribes throughout the inhabited world a certain hostile people has been mixed in, opposed in its laws to every nation, continually disregarding the ordinances of the kings, so as not to accept the joint government directed blamelessly by us.

17 Having therefore determined that this nation alone stands continually in opposition to every person, varying in a strange course of laws and ill-disposed toward our affairs, accomplishing the worst evils, even so that the kingdom should not obtain stability;

18 we have therefore commanded that all those indicated to you in what is written by Aman, appointed over affairs and our second father, together with wives and children, be destroyed root and all by the swords of the enemies, without any pity and sparing, on the fourteenth of the twelfth month Adar of the present year,

19 so that those hostile of old and now, having descended violently into Hades in one day, may provide our affairs as stable and untroubled for all subsequent time. –

14 And the copies of the letters were posted territory by territory, and all the nations were commanded to be ready for this day.

15 And the matter was hastened also into Sousan; and the king and Aman were drinking deeply, but the city was troubled.

Chapter 4

1 But Mardochaios, learning what was being accomplished, tore his garments and put on sackcloth and sprinkled himself with ashes, and rushing out through the city's square, cried with a loud voice, A nation that has done no wrong is being taken away.

2 And he came as far as the king's gate and stood; for he was not permitted to enter the court wearing sackcloth and ashes.

3 And in every region where the letters were posted, there was an outcry and beating of the breast and great mourning for the Jews; they spread sackcloth and ashes for themselves.

4 And the queen's maids and eunuchs came in and reported to her, and she was troubled on hearing what had happened, and sent to clothe Mardochaios and remove his sackcloth, but he was not persuaded.

5 But Esther summoned Achrathaios, her eunuch, who attended her, and sent him to learn for her the exact matter from Mardochaios;

7 and Mardochaios explained to him what had happened and the promise that Aman had promised the king, of ten thousand talents for the treasury, so that he might destroy the Jews;

8 and he gave him the copy posted in Sousa for their destruction, to show Esther, and told him to instruct her to go in and entreat the king and petition him concerning the people: remembering the days of your humiliation, how you were reared in my hand, because Aman, who is second to the king, has spoken against us for death; call upon the Lord and speak to the king concerning us and rescue us from death.

9 And Achrathaios went in and spoke all these words to her.

10 And Esther said to Achrathaios, Go to Mardochaios and say that

11 All the nations of the kingdom know that every man or woman who enters to the king into the inner court uncalled has no deliverance; except that the one to whom the king extends the golden rod will be delivered; and I have not been called to enter to the king these thirty days.

12 And Achrathaios reported all Esther's words to Mardochaios.

13 And Mardochaios said to Achrathaios, Go and say to her, Esther, do not say to yourself that you alone in the kingdom will be delivered above all the Jews;

14 because if you refuse to listen at this time, help and shelter will come to the Jews from elsewhere, but you and your father's house will perish; and who knows whether you became queen for this time?

15 And Esther sent the one who had come to her away to Mardochaios, saying,

16 Go and assemble the Jews in Sousa, and fast for me, and neither eat nor drink for three days, night and day; and I and my maids will go without food, and then I will enter to the king contrary to the law, even if I must perish.

17 And Mardochaios went and did all that Esther had commanded him,

17 a and petitioned the Lord, remembering all the Lord's works, and said,

18 Lord, Lord, king who rules over all, because everything is in your authority, and there is no one opposing you when you wish to save Israel;

19 because you made heaven and earth and everything marveled at in the land under heaven, and you are Lord of all, and there is no one who will oppose you, the Lord.

20 You know everything; you know, Lord, that I did this, not bowing to the arrogant Aman, neither in insolence nor in arrogance nor in love of glory, because I was willing to kiss the soles of his feet for Israel's deliverance;

21 but I did this so that I might not place a man's glory above God's glory, and I will bow to no one except you, my Lord, and I will not do these things in arrogance.

22 And now, Lord God, king, God of Abraam, spare your people, because they look upon us for destruction and have desired to destroy your inheritance from the beginning;

23 do not overlook your portion, which you redeemed for yourself from the land of Egypt;

24 listen to my petition and be gracious to your allotted portion, and turn our mourning into feasting, so that while living we may sing your name, Lord, and do not make the mouth of those praising you disappear. –

25 And all Israel cried out with their strength, because their death was before their eyes.

17 k And Esther the queen took refuge with the Lord, seized in a struggle with death, and taking off the garments of her glory, put on garments of distress and mourning, and instead of proud perfumes filled her head with ashes and dung, and humbled her body greatly, and filled every place of her joyful adornment with her tangled hair, and petitioned the Lord God of Israel and said,

18 My Lord, our king, you alone are; help me who am alone and have no helper except you, because my danger is in my hand.

19 From my birth I heard in the tribe of my family that you, Lord, took Israel from all the nations and our fathers from all their ancestors as an eternal inheritance, and did for them all that you spoke.

20 And now we have sinned before you, and you have handed us over into the hands of our enemies, because we glorified their gods; you are just, Lord.

21 And now they have not been satisfied with the bitterness of our slavery, but have placed their hands upon the hands of their idols to remove the decree of your mouth and make your inheritance disappear and close the mouth of those praising you and extinguish the glory of your house and your altar

22 and open the mouth of nations for the excellences of vain things, and for a fleshly king to be marveled at forever.

23 Do not hand over your scepter, Lord, to those who do not exist, and let them not mock at our fall, but turn their plan upon them, and make an example of the one who began against us.

24 Remember, Lord; make yourself known in the time of our affliction, and give me courage, king of the gods and ruler over every authority;

25 give well-ordered speech into my mouth before the lion, and change his heart to hatred of the one warring against us, for his destruction and that of those of one mind with him;

26 but rescue us by your hand, and help me who am alone and have none except you, Lord.

27 You have knowledge of all things and know that I hated the glory of the lawless and abhor the bed of the uncircumcised and of every foreigner.

17 w You know my necessity, that I abhor the sign of my arrogance, which is upon my head in the days of my appearance; I abhor it as a menstrual rag, and do not wear it in the days of my quiet.

18 And your slave woman has not eaten Aman's table, and I have not glorified a king's drinking party, nor have I drunk wine of libations;

19 and your slave woman has not rejoiced from the day of my change until now except in you, Lord, God of Abraam.

20 God who is powerful over all, hear the voice of those who have lost hope, and rescue us from the hand of those doing evil; and rescue me from my fear.

Chapter 5

1 And it happened on the third day, when she ceased praying, that she took off the garments of service and clothed herself in her glory

1 a and, becoming splendid, called upon God, the overseer of all and savior, took the two maids, and leaned upon the one as though living delicately, while the other followed, lifting her clothing,

2 and she herself was rosy at the height of her beauty, and her face was cheerful as though lovely, but her heart was constricted by fear.

3 And passing through all the doors, she stood before the king, and he was sitting upon the throne of his kingdom and had put on all the attire of his splendor, entirely in gold and costly stones, and was exceedingly fearsome.

4 And lifting his face, inflamed with glory, he looked in the height of anger, and the queen fell and changed her color in faintness and bent down upon the head of the maid who went before her.

5 And God changed the king's spirit to gentleness, and in anguish he sprang from his throne and took her up into his arms until she recovered, and encouraged her with peaceful words and said to her,

6 What is it, Esther? I am your brother; take courage, you shall certainly not die, because our command is common; approach.

2 And lifting the golden rod, he placed it upon her neck and kissed her and said, Speak to me.

2 a And she said to him, I saw you, lord, as an angel of God, and my heart was troubled from fear of your glory; because you are marvelous, lord, and your face is full of graces.

3 But as she was speaking, she fell from her faintness, and the king was troubled, and all his attendants encouraged her. And the king said, What do you want, Esther, and what is your petition? As far as half my kingdom, and it shall be yours.

4 And Esther said, Today is a distinguished day for me; if therefore it seems good to the king, let both he and Aman come to the reception that I will hold today.

5 And the king said, Hurry Aman along, so that we may do Esther's word; and both arrive at the reception that Esther spoke of.

6 And during the drinking the king said to Esther, What is it, Queen Esther? And all that you request shall be yours.

7 And she said, My request and my petition;

8 if I have found favor before the king, let the king and Aman come tomorrow to the reception that I will hold for them, and tomorrow I will do the same things.

9 And Aman went out from the king exceedingly glad, rejoicing; but when Aman saw Mardochaios the Jew in the court, he became exceedingly angry.

10 And entering his own place, he called his friends and Zosara his wife

11 and showed them his wealth and the glory that the king had bestowed upon him, and how he had made him take first place and lead the kingdom.

12 And Aman said, The queen has called no one to the reception with the king except me, and I have been called for tomorrow;

13 and these things do not please me whenever I see Mardochaios the Jew in the court.

14 And Zosara his wife and his friends said to him, Let a timber of fifty cubits be cut for you, and at dawn speak to the king, and let Mardochaios be hung upon the timber; but you enter the reception with the king and rejoice. And the word pleased Aman, and the timber was prepared.

Chapter 6

1 But the Lord removed sleep from the king that night, and he told his teacher to bring in writings, memorials of the days, to read to him.

2 And he found the writings written about Mardochaios, how he had reported to the king concerning the king's two eunuchs while they were keeping guard and seeking to lay hands upon Artaxerxes.

3 And the king said, What glory or favor have we done for Mardochaios? And the king's servants said, You have done nothing for him.

4 And while the king was inquiring about Mardochaios's goodwill, behold, Aman was in the court; and the king said, Who is in the court? But Aman had come in to tell the king to hang Mardochaios upon the timber that he had prepared.

5 And the king's servants said, Behold, Aman stands in the court; and the king said, Call him.

6 And the king said to Aman, What shall I do for the man whom I wish to glorify? And Aman said within himself, Whom does the king wish to glorify except me?

7 And he said to the king, A man whom the king wishes to glorify,

8 let the king's servants bring a fine linen robe that the king wears, and a horse upon which the king mounts,

9 and let him give them to one of the king's illustrious friends, and let him clothe the man whom the king loves, and mount him upon the horse and proclaim through the city's square, saying, Thus shall it be for every man whom the king glorifies.

10 And the king said to Aman, As you have spoken, so do for Mardochaios the Jew who serves in the court, and let no word of what you have spoken fall aside from you.

11 And Aman took the robe and the horse and clothed Mardochaios and mounted him upon the horse and went through the city's square and proclaimed, saying, Thus shall it be for every man whom the king wishes to glorify.

12 And Mardochaios returned to the court, but Aman returned to his own place grieving, with his head covered.

13 And Aman recounted what had happened to him to Zosara his wife and his friends, and his friends and his wife said to him, If Mardochaios is of the race of Jews, you have begun to be humbled before him; falling you shall fall; you shall certainly not be able to ward him off, because a living God is with him. –

14 While they were still speaking, the eunuchs arrive, hurrying Aman to the drinking that Esther had prepared.

Chapter 7

1 And the king and Aman entered to drink with the queen.

2 And on the second day, during the drinking, the king said to Esther, What is it, Queen Esther, and what is your request and what is your petition? And let it be yours, as far as half my kingdom.

3 And answering, she said, If I have found favor before the king, let my life be given at my request, and my people at my petition;

4 for both I and my people were sold for destruction and plundering and slavery, we and our children as male slaves and female slaves, and I kept silent; for the slanderer is not worthy of the king's court.

5 And the king said, Who is this who dared to do this thing?

6 And Esther said, An enemy, this wicked Aman. But Aman was troubled because of the king and the queen.

7 But the king rose from the drinking party into the garden; and Aman entreated the queen, for he saw himself being in troubles.

8 And the king returned from the garden, but Aman had fallen upon the couch, petitioning the queen; and the king said, So you even assault the wife in my house? And on hearing this Aman was confounded in his face.

9 And Bougathan, one of the eunuchs, said to the king, Behold, Aman also prepared a timber for Mardochaios, who spoke concerning the king, and a timber of fifty cubits stands upright at Aman's place. And the king said, Let him be crucified upon it.

10 And Aman was hung upon the timber that he had prepared for Mardochaios. And then the king abated his anger.

Chapter 8

1 And on that very day King Artaxerxes gave Esther all that belonged to Aman the slanderer, and Mardochaios was summoned by the king, for Esther had explained that he was related to her.

2 And the king took the ring that he had removed from Aman and gave it to Mardochaios, and Esther appointed Mardochaios over all Aman's possessions.

3 And she spoke further to the king and fell at his feet and petitioned him to remove Aman's wickedness and all that he had done to the Jews.

4 And the king extended the golden rod to Esther, and Esther arose to stand before the king.

5 And Esther said, If it seems good to you and I have found favor, let an order be sent to reverse the letters sent by Aman, written for the destruction of the Jews who are in your kingdom;

6 for how shall I be able to see the mistreatment of my people, and how shall I be able to be saved at the destruction of my homeland?

7 And the king said to Esther, If I have given and granted you all Aman's possessions, and hung him upon a timber because he brought his hands against the Jews, what do you still seek?

8 You yourselves also write in my name as seems good to you, and seal with my ring; for whatever is written at the king's command and sealed with my ring cannot be contradicted.

9 And the scribes were called in the first month, which is Nisa, on the twenty-third of the same year, and there was written for the Jews all that he commanded the stewards and the rulers of the satraps, from India to Ethiopia, to one hundred twenty-seven satrapies, region by region, according to their own speech.

10 And it was written through the king and sealed with his ring, and they sent out the letters through letter carriers,

11 as he commanded them to use their laws in every city, both to help themselves and to deal with their adversaries and those opposing them as they wished,

12 on one day throughout Artaxerxes's kingdom, on the thirteenth of the twelfth month, which is Adar.

12 a The following is a copy of their letter:

13 Great King Artaxerxes to the rulers of regions in the one hundred twenty-seven satrapies from India to Ethiopia, and to those who are of our mind, greetings.

14 Many, honored more frequently by the abundant kindness of their benefactors, have become more high-minded, and not only seek to do evil to those subjected to us, but, unable to bear their surfeit, attempt to devise schemes against their own benefactors;

15 and not only abolishing gratitude from among people, but also lifted up by the boasts of those inexperienced in goodness, they suppose they will escape the evil-hating justice of God who always surveys everything.

13 And often the persuasion of friends entrusted to handle affairs has also made many appointed in positions of authority complicit in innocent blood and surrounded them with incurable calamities,

14 when those friends deceived the untainted good judgment of those in power by the false reasoning of their maliciousness.

15 And it is possible to examine, not so much from the older accounts that we have handed down, as by your investigating the things close at hand, what has been impiously accomplished by the pestilence of those wielding power unworthily,

16 and to attend to what follows, with a view to our providing the kingdom undisturbed to all people with peace,

17 making use of changes, but always judging the things coming before our eyes with a more equitable response.

12 k For Aman, son of Amadathos, a Macedonian, truly foreign to the blood of the Persians and far removed from our kindness, having been received as a guest by us,

13 obtained the humanity that we have toward every nation to such an extent that he was proclaimed our father and, bowed to by all, continued as the second person of the royal throne;

14 but not bearing his arrogance, he undertook to deprive us of rule and breath,

15 having requested for destruction, by intricately woven deceptive reasonings of schemes, both Mardochaios, our savior and continual benefactor, and Esther, the blameless partner of the kingdom, together with their entire nation;

16 for by these means he thought, after taking us bereft, to transfer the dominion of the Persians to the Macedonians.

17 But we find that the Jews handed over for disappearance by the thrice-accursed man are not evildoers, but conduct their lives under most just laws,

18 and are sons of the highest, greatest, living God, who directs the kingdom for both us and our ancestors in the finest arrangement.

19 You will therefore do well not to make further use of the letters sent by Aman son of Amadathos, because the very man who accomplished these things has been crucified at the gates of Sousa with his entire household, God who rules over everything having swiftly rendered him the judgment he deserved;

20 but after posting a copy of this letter in every place, to allow the Jews openly to use their own ordinances and to strengthen them together, so that they may ward off those who attacked them in a time of affliction on the thirteenth of the twelfth month, Adar, on that same day;

21 for God who has dominion over all has made this day gladness for them instead of destruction of the chosen race.

22 You yourselves therefore also celebrate a distinguished day with every kind of feasting among your named festivals, so that both now and afterward there may be deliverance for us and for the Persians of goodwill, but for those plotting against us a memorial of destruction.

12 x But every city or region as a whole that does not act according to these things will be consumed with spear and fire in wrath; it will be made not only impassable to people, but also most hateful to beasts and birds for all time.

13 And let the copies be posted visibly throughout the kingdom, and let all the Jews be ready for this day to fight their opponents.

14 The horsemen therefore went out, hastening to accomplish the things spoken by the king; and the command was also posted in Sousa.

15 And Mardochaios went out clothed in the royal robe and wearing a golden crown and a purple fine linen diadem; and those in Sousa rejoiced on seeing him.

16 And light and gladness came to the Jews;

17 in every city and region where the command was posted, where the proclamation was posted, there was joy and gladness for the Jews, drinking and gladness, and many of the nations were circumcised and practiced Judaism because of fear of the Jews.

Chapter 9

1 For in the twelfth month, on the thirteenth of the month, which is Adar, the letters written by the king were present.

2 On that very day those opposing the Jews perished; for no one resisted, fearing them.

3 For the rulers of the satraps and the potentates and the royal scribes honored the Jews; for the fear of Mardochaios lay upon them.

4 For the king's command came for him to be named throughout the kingdom.

6 And in the city of Sousa the Jews killed five hundred men,

7 both Pharsannestain and Delphon and Phasga

8 and Phardatha and Barea and Sarbacha

9 and Marmasima and Arouphaios and Arsaios and Zabouthaithan,

10 the ten sons of Aman son of Amadathos, the Bougaian, the enemy of the Jews, and plundered. –

11 On that very day the number of those who had perished in Sousa was delivered to the king.

12 And the king said to Esther, The Jews have destroyed five hundred men in the city of Sousa; but how do you think they dealt in the surrounding region? What then do you still petition, and it shall be yours?

13 And Esther said to the king, Let the Jews be permitted to act likewise tomorrow, so as to hang Aman's ten sons.

14 And he permitted it to happen thus and published an order for the Jews of the city to hang the bodies of Aman's sons.

15 And the Jews in Sousa assembled on the fourteenth of Adar and killed three hundred men and plundered nothing. –

16 But the rest of the Jews in the kingdom assembled and helped themselves and rested from their enemies; for they destroyed fifteen thousand of them on the thirteenth of Adar and plundered nothing.

17 And they rested on the fourteenth of the same month and celebrated it as a day of rest with joy and gladness.

18 But the Jews in the city of Sousa assembled also on the fourteenth and did not rest; and they celebrated the fifteenth also with joy and gladness.

19 Therefore the Jews scattered in every region outside celebrate the fourteenth of Adar as a good day with gladness, each sending portions to his neighbor; but those dwelling in the chief cities celebrate the fifteenth of Adar also as a day of good gladness, sending portions to their neighbors.

20 And Mardochaios wrote these words in a book and sent it to the Jews, as many as were in Artaxerxes's kingdom, those near and those far,

21 to establish these days as good days and to celebrate the fourteenth and the fifteenth of Adar –

22 for on these days the Jews rested from their enemies – and the month in which it was turned for them [which was Adar] from mourning to joy and from pain to a good day, to celebrate it entirely as good days of weddings and gladness, sending portions to friends and to the poor.

23 And the Jews accepted, as Mardochaios wrote to them,

24 how Aman son of Amadathos, the Macedonian, warred against them, how he established a decree and a lot to make them disappear,

25 and how he entered to the king, saying to hang Mardochaios; but all the evils he attempted to bring upon the Jews came upon him, and he and his children were hung.

26 Therefore these days were named Phrourai because of the lots, because in their language they are called Phrourai, because of the words of this letter and all that they have suffered because of these things and all that happened to them;

27 and he established it, and the Jews accepted it upon themselves and upon their seed and upon those added to them, and indeed they will not act otherwise; and these days are a memorial performed generation by generation and city and family and region;

28 and these days of Phrourai will be celebrated for all time, and their memorial shall certainly not fail from the generations.

29 And Esther the queen, daughter of Aminadab, and Mardochaios the Jew wrote all that they had done and the confirmation of the letter of Phrourai.

31 And Mardochaios and Esther the queen established for themselves against themselves, and then having established against their health, and their plan;

32 and Esther established it by a word forever, and it was written as a memorial.

Chapter 10

1 And the king prescribed taxes upon the kingdom of both land and sea.

2 And his strength and valor, and the wealth and glory of his kingdom, behold, it is written in the book of kings of Persians and Medes as a memorial.

3 But Mardochaios succeeded King Artaxerxes and was great in the kingdom and glorified by the Jews; and, being loved, he recounted his conduct to his entire nation.

3 a And Mardochaios said, These things came from God;

4 for I remembered concerning the dream that I saw concerning these matters; for not even a word of them passed away.

5 The little spring that became a river, and there was light and sun and much water; Esther is the river, whom the king married and made queen.

6 And the two dragons are I and Aman.

7 And the nations, those gathered together to destroy the name of the Jews.

8 And my nation, this is Israel, those who cried to God and were saved; and the Lord saved his people, and the Lord rescued us from all these evils, and God did the signs and the great wonders that have not happened among the nations.

9 Therefore he made two lots, one for God's people and one for all the nations;

10 and these two lots came to an hour and a time and to a day of judgment before God and among all the nations,

11 and God remembered his people and vindicated his inheritance.

3 k And these days shall be for them in the month Adar, on the fourteenth and the fifteenth of the same month, with assembly and joy and gladness before God throughout generations forever among his people Israel.

4 In the fourth year of Ptolemy and Cleopatra reigning, Dositheos, who said he was a priest and a Levite, and Ptolemy his son brought in the foregoing letter of Phrourai, which they said was genuine and that Lysimachos son of Ptolemy, of those in Jerusalem, had translated.

Judith

Chapter 1

1 In the twelfth year of the kingdom of Nabouchodonosor, who reigned over the Assyrians in Nineue, the great city, in the days of Arphaxad, who reigned over the Medes in Ekbatana,

2 and built walls around Ekbatana from hewn stones three cubits in width and six cubits in length, and made the height of the wall seventy cubits and its width fifty cubits,

3 and set its towers at its gates at one hundred cubits, and founded its width at sixty cubits,

4 and made its gates gates rising to a height of seventy cubits, and its width forty cubits, for the departures of the force of his mighty men and the formations of his infantry.

5 And in those days King Nabouchodonosor made war against King Arphaxad in the great plain, that is, a plain in the territory of Ragau.

6 And all who inhabited the hill country and all who inhabited the Euphrates and the Tigris and the Hydaspes and the plains of Arioch, king of the Elymaians, met with him, and many nations came together for the battle formation of the sons of Cheleoud.

7 And Nabouchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, sent to all who inhabited Persia and to all who inhabited the west, those inhabiting Cilicia and Damascus and Lebanon and Antilebanon, and all who inhabited the coastal frontage,

8 and those among the nations of Carmel and Galaad, and upper Galilee and the great plain of Esdrelon,

9 and all those in Samaria and its cities and beyond the Jordan as far as Jerusalem and Batane and Chelous and Kades and the river of Egypt and Taphnas and Ramesse and all the land of Gesem,

10 as far as coming above Tanis and Memphis, and all who inhabited Egypt as far as coming to the borders of Ethiopia.

11 And all who inhabited the entire land despised the word of Nabouchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, and did not come together with him for the war, because they did not fear him, but he was before them as a single man, and they sent his messengers back empty, with dishonor upon their faces.

12 And Nabouchodonosor became exceedingly angry against all this land and swore by his throne and his kingdom that he would indeed avenge himself upon all the territory of Cilicia and Damascus and Syria, to kill with his sword also all who inhabited the land of Moab and the sons of Ammon and all Judea and all those in Egypt as far as coming to the borders of the two seas.

13 And he drew up his force against King Arphaxad in the seventeenth year and prevailed in his war and overturned all Arphaxad's force and all his cavalry and all his chariots,

14 and became master of his cities and arrived as far as Ekbatana and seized the towers and plundered its squares and made its adornment its reproach,

15 and took Arphaxad in the mountains of Ragau and struck him down with his spears and destroyed him until that day.

16 And he himself and all his mixed company returned with them, an exceedingly great multitude of warrior men, and he was there relaxing and feasting, he and his force, for one hundred twenty days.

Chapter 2

1 And in the eighteenth year, on the twenty-second of the first month, a word came in the house of Nabouchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, to avenge himself upon all the land, as he had spoken.

2 And he called together all his attendants and all his grandees and laid before them the secret of his plan and concluded with his mouth all the evil for the land,

3 and they judged to destroy all flesh who had not followed the word of his mouth.

4 And it happened, when he concluded his plan, that Nabouchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, called Holophernes, the commander of his force, who was second after him, and said to him,

5 Thus says the great king, the lord of all the land: Behold, you shall go out from my presence and take with yourself men confident in their strength, infantry to one hundred twenty thousand, and a multitude of horses with riders, twelve thousand,

6 and you shall go out to meet all the land toward the west, because they disobeyed the word of my mouth,

7 and you shall tell them to prepare earth and water, because I will go out against them in my anger and cover the entire face of the land with the feet of my force, and I will give them to them for plundering,

8 and their wounded shall fill their ravines, and every torrent and overflowing river shall be filled with their dead;

9 and I will lead their captivity to the extremities of all the land.

10 But you shall go out and occupy all their territory beforehand for me, and they shall surrender themselves to you, and you shall preserve them for me for the day of their reproof;

11 but toward those disobeying, your eye shall not spare in giving them to slaughter and plunder in all your land.

12 Because I live, and the might of my kingdom, I have spoken and will do these things by my hand.

13 And you shall not transgress a single one of your lord's words, but accomplishing you shall accomplish as I have commanded you, and you shall not delay doing them.

14 And Holophernes went out from his lord's presence and called all the potentates and the generals and supervisors of Assour's force,

15 and counted chosen men for battle formation, as his lord commanded him, to one hundred twenty thousand, and mounted archers, twelve thousand,

16 and arranged them in the manner in which a multitude is arrayed for war.

17 And he took camels and asses and mules for their baggage, an exceedingly great multitude, and sheep and cattle and goats for their provision, of which there was no number,

18 and food supplies for every man in abundance, and exceedingly much gold and silver from the king's house.

19 And he himself and all his force went out on a march to go before King Nabouchodonosor and cover the entire face of the land toward the west with chariots and cavalry and their chosen infantry;

20 and a great mixed company went out together with them, like locusts and like the sand of the earth, for there was no number because of their multitude.

21 And they went away from Nineue a journey of three days to the front of the plain of Bektileth, and encamped from Bektileth near the mountain to the left of upper Cilicia.

22 And he took all his force, the infantry and the cavalry and his chariots, and went away from there into the hill country.

23 And he cut through Phoud and Loud and plundered all the sons of Rassis and the sons of Ismael facing the wilderness south of Cheleon.

24 And he crossed the Euphrates and went through Mesopotamia and demolished all the fortified cities upon the torrent Abrona, as far as coming to the sea.

25 And he occupied the territory of Cilicia and cut down all who resisted him and came as far as the territory of Iapheth, toward the south, facing Arabia.

26 And he encircled all the sons of Madiam and burned their dwellings and plundered their enclosures.

27 And he went down into the plain of Damascus in the days of the wheat harvest and burned all their fields and gave the flocks and herds to destruction, and despoiled their cities and winnowed away their plains and struck all their young men with the mouth of the sword. –

28 And fear and trembling of him fell upon those inhabiting the coast, those in Sidon and Tyre and those inhabiting Sour and Okina and all who inhabited Iemnaan, and those inhabiting Azotos and Askalon feared him exceedingly.

Chapter 3

1 And they sent messengers to him with peaceful words, saying,

2 Behold, we, the servants of Nabouchodonosor the great king, lie before you; deal with us as is pleasing to your face;

3 behold, our farmsteads and every place of ours and every plain of wheat and the flocks and herds and all the enclosures of our tents lie before your face; use them as may please you;

4 behold, our cities also and those dwelling in them are your slaves; come and meet them as is good in your eyes.

5 And the men arrived before Holophernes and reported to him according to these words.

6 And he and his force went down to the coast and garrisoned the fortified cities and took chosen men from them for an alliance;

7 and they and all their surrounding region received him with wreaths and dances and drums.

8 And he demolished all their territory and cut down their groves, and it had been granted him to destroy all the gods of the land, so that all the nations might serve him alone, Nabouchodonosor, and all their tongues and tribes might call upon him as god.

9 And he came facing Esdrelon, near Dotaia, which is opposite the great ridge of Judea,

10 and they encamped between Gaibai and the city of the Scythians, and he was there a month of days to gather all the baggage of his force.

Chapter 4

1 And the sons of Israel inhabiting Judea heard everything that Holophernes, the commander of Nabouchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, had done to the nations, and how he had despoiled all their sacred places and given them to destruction,

2 and they feared exceedingly, exceedingly, before him, and were troubled concerning Jerusalem and the temple of the Lord their God.

3 Because they had recently come up from captivity, and all the people of Judea had newly been gathered, and the vessels and the altar and the house had been sanctified from profanation.

4 And they sent into all the territory of Samaria and Kona and Baithoron and Belmain and Iericho, and to Choba and Aisora and the valley of Salem,

5 and occupied beforehand all the summits of the high mountains and walled the villages in them and stored supplies for food in preparation for war, because their plains had recently been harvested.

6 And Ioakim the great priest, who was in Jerusalem in those days, wrote to those dwelling in Baityloua and Baitomesthaim, which is opposite Esdrelon, facing the plain near Dothaim,

7 telling them to hold the ascents of the hill country firmly, because through them was the entrance into Judea, and it was easy to prevent them from approaching, the approach being narrow enough for two men in all.

8 And the sons of Israel did as Ioakim the great priest and the council of elders of the entire populace of Israel, who sat in Jerusalem, had directed them. –

9 And every man of Israel cried to God with great earnestness and humbled their souls with great earnestness.

10 They and their wives and their infants and their cattle and every resident alien and hired worker and purchased slave of theirs put sackcloth upon their loins.

11 And every man of Israel and woman and the children inhabiting Jerusalem fell before the temple and put ashes upon their heads and spread their sackcloth before the Lord;

12 and they clothed the altar with sackcloth and cried earnestly with one accord to the God of Israel, that he should not give their infants to plundering and the women to spoil and the cities of their inheritance to destruction and the holy places to profanation and reproach, an object of malicious joy for the nations.

13 And the Lord heard their voice and looked upon their affliction; and the people were fasting many days throughout Judea and Jerusalem before the holy places of the Lord Almighty.

14 And Ioakim the great priest and all the priests standing before the Lord and those ministering to the Lord, their loins girded with sackcloth, offered the continual whole burnt offering and the vows and the people's voluntary gifts,

15 and ashes were upon their turbans, and they cried to the Lord with all their strength to visit the entire house of Israel for good.

Chapter 5

1 And it was reported to Holophernes, commander of Assour's force, that the sons of Israel had prepared for war and closed the passes of the hill country and walled every summit of a high mountain and placed obstacles in the plains.

2 And he became exceedingly angry in wrath and called all the rulers of Moab and the generals of Ammon and all the satraps of the coast,

3 and said to them, Tell me now, sons of Chanaan, who this people is that sits in the hill country, and what cities they inhabit, and the multitude of their force, and in what their might and their strength consist, and who has arisen over them as king, leading their army,

4 and why they have turned their backs, so as not to come to meet me, beyond all those dwelling in the west. –

5 And Achior, the leader of all the sons of Ammon, said to him, Let my lord now hear a word from the mouth of your slave, and I will report to you the truth concerning this people that inhabits this hill country, dwelling near you, and no falsehood will go out from the mouth of your slave.

6 This people are descendants of Chaldeans.

7 And formerly they resided in Mesopotamia, because they did not wish to follow the gods of their fathers, who were in the land of the Chaldeans;

8 and they stepped out of the way of their parents and bowed to the God of heaven, a God whom they recognized, and they drove them out from before their gods, and they fled into Mesopotamia and resided there many days.

9 And their God told them to go out from their residence and travel to the land of Chanaan, and they dwelt there and increased in gold and silver and exceedingly many cattle.

10 And they went down into Egypt, for famine covered the face of the land of Chanaan, and they resided there as long as they were sustained; and they became a great multitude there, and there was no number of their race.

11 And the king of Egypt rose against them and dealt craftily with them in toil and brick; they humbled them and made them slaves.

12 And they cried to their God, and he struck all the land of Egypt with plagues in which there was no healing; and the Egyptians drove them out from before them.

13 And God dried up the Red Sea before them

14 and led them into the way of Sina and Kades Barne; and they drove out all those inhabiting the wilderness

15 and dwelt in the land of the Amorrites and destroyed all the Esebonites by their strength. And crossing the Jordan, they inherited all the hill country

16 and drove out from before them the Chanaanite and the Pherezite and the Iebousite and Sychem and all the Gergesaians, and dwelt in it many days.

17 And as long as they did not sin before their God, good things were with them, because a God who hates injustice is with them.

18 But when they departed from the way that he appointed for them, they were destroyed in many wars to an exceedingly great extent and taken captive into a land not their own, and the temple of their God was brought to the ground, and their cities were seized by their adversaries.

19 And now, returning to their God, they came up from the dispersion where they had been scattered, and occupied Jerusalem, where their sanctuary is, and settled in the hill country, because it was deserted.

20 And now, master, lord, if there is an ignorant offense among this people and they sin against their God, and we shall examine whether this obstacle is among them, and we shall go up and wage war against them;

21 but if there is no lawlessness in their nation, let my lord now pass by, lest their Lord and their God shield them, and we shall become a reproach before all the land. –

22 And it happened, when Achior ceased speaking these words, that all the people encircling the tent and standing around grumbled, and Holophernes's grandees and all those inhabiting the coast and Moab said to cut him to pieces:

23 For we shall not fear the sons of Israel, for behold, a people in whom there is neither force nor might for a strong battle formation;

24 therefore we shall now go up, and they shall be food for all your army, Master Holophernes. –

Chapter 6

1 And when the uproar of the men around the council ceased, Holophernes, commander of Assour's force, said to Achior before the entire populace of foreigners and to all the sons of Moab,

2 And who are you, Achior and the hired men of Ephraim, that you have prophesied among us as today and said not to war against the race of Israel, because their God will shield them? And who is god except Nabouchodonosor? He will send his might and destroy them from the face of the earth, and their God will not rescue them;

3 but we his slaves will strike them as a single person, and they will not withstand the might of our horses.

4 For we shall burn them up with them, and their mountains will be drunk with their blood, and their plains will be filled with their dead, and the footprint of their feet will not resist before us, but with destruction they will perish, says King Nabouchodonosor, lord of all the land; for he has spoken, the utterances of his words will not be made vain.

5 But you, Achior, hired man of Ammon, who spoke these words on the day of your injustice, shall no longer see my face from this day until I avenge myself upon the race of those from Egypt;

6 and then the iron of my army and the people of my attendants will pass through your sides, and you will fall among their wounded when I return.

7 And my slaves will take you back into the hill country and place you in one of the cities of the ascents,

8 and you will not perish until you are destroyed with them.

9 And if indeed you hope in your heart that they will not be seized, let your face not fall; I have spoken, and nothing of my words will fall away. –

10 And Holophernes commanded his slaves who stood in his tent to seize Achior and take him back to Baityloua and hand him over into the hands of the sons of Israel.

11 And his slaves seized him and led him outside the camp into the plain and set out from the midst of the plain into the hill country and arrived at the springs that were below Baityloua.

12 And when the men of the city on the summit of the mountain saw them, they took up their weapons and went out of the city onto the summit of the mountain, and every slinger held their ascent and threw stones at them.

13 And slipping beneath the mountain, they bound Achior and left him thrown down at the foot of the mountain and went away to their lord.

14 But the sons of Israel came down from their city and came upon him, and unbinding him, led him away into Baityloua and placed him before the rulers of their city,

15 who in those days were Ozias son of Micha, from the tribe of Symeon, and Chabris son of Gothoniel and Charmis son of Melchiel.

16 And they called together all the elders of the city, and all their young men and the women ran together into the assembly, and they stood Achior in the midst of all their people, and Ozias asked him what had happened.

17 And answering, he reported to them the words of Holophernes's council and all the words that he spoke in the midst of the rulers of the sons of Assour, and all that Holophernes spoke boastfully against the house of Israel.

18 And falling, the people bowed to God and cried, saying,

19 Lord, God of heaven, look down upon their arrogances and have mercy upon the humiliation of our race, and look upon the face of those sanctified to you on this day.

20 And they encouraged Achior and praised him exceedingly,

21 and Ozias took him from the assembly into his house and held a drinking for the elders, and they called upon the God of Israel for help throughout that night.

Chapter 7

1 And on the next day Holophernes ordered all his army and all his people who had come for his alliance to break camp toward Baityloua and occupy the ascents of the hill country beforehand and make war against the sons of Israel.

2 And on that day every mighty man of theirs broke camp; and their force of warrior men was one hundred seventy thousand infantry and twelve thousand cavalry, apart from the baggage and the men who were on foot among them, an exceedingly great multitude.

3 And they encamped in the valley near Baityloua, at the spring, and extended in width toward Dothaim as far as Belbaim, and in length from Baityloua as far as Kyamon, which is opposite Esdrelon.

4 But the sons of Israel, when they saw their multitude, were exceedingly troubled, and each said to his neighbor, Now these will lick up the face of all the land, and neither the high mountains nor the ravines nor the hills will withstand their weight.

5 And each took up their war equipment and lit fires upon their towers, and they remained keeping guard throughout that night.

6 And on the second day Holophernes led out all his cavalry before the sons of Israel who were in Baityloua,

7 and inspected the ascents of their city and surveyed the springs of water and occupied them beforehand and stationed camps of warrior men over them, and he himself broke camp toward his people. –

8 And all the rulers of the sons of Esau and all the leaders of the people of Moab and the generals of the coast approached him and said,

9 Let our master now hear a word, so that there may be no crushing in your force.

10 For this people of the sons of Israel trust not in their spears, but in the heights of the mountains in which they dwell; for it is not easy to approach the summits of their mountains.

11 And now, master, do not war against them as a war of battle formation takes place, and not one man of your people will fall.

12 Remain at your camp, preserving every man of your force, and let your servants take possession of the spring of water that goes out from the foot of the mountain,

13 because all who inhabit Baityloua draw water from there, and thirst will kill them, and they will surrender their city; and we and our people will go up onto the nearby summits of the mountains and encamp upon them as an outpost, so that not one man may go out of the city.

14 And they and their wives and their children will waste away in famine, and before the sword comes upon them, they will be laid low in the squares of their dwelling place.

15 And you will repay them an evil repayment because they rebelled and did not meet your face in peace. –

16 And their words pleased Holophernes and all his attendants, and he directed them to do as they had spoken.

17 And a camp of the sons of Ammon set out, and with them five thousand sons of Assour, and they encamped in the valley and occupied beforehand the waters and the springs of the waters of the sons of Israel.

18 And the sons of Esau and the sons of Ammon went up and encamped in the hill country opposite Dothaim. And they sent some of them toward the south and east, opposite Egrebel, which is near Chous, which is upon the torrent Mochmour. And the rest of the army of the Assyrians encamped in the plain and covered the entire face of the land, and their tents and their baggage encamped in a great crowd and were an exceedingly great multitude.

19 And the sons of Israel cried to the Lord their God, because their spirit had become fainthearted, because all their enemies had encircled them and there was no escaping from their midst.

20 And all Assour's camp, the infantry and chariots and their cavalry, remained around them thirty-four days. And all their water vessels failed all who inhabited Baityloua, 21 and the cisterns were being emptied, and they did not have water to drink to satisfaction for a single day, because they gave them drink by measure.

22 And their infants became dispirited, and the women and the young men failed from thirst and fell in the squares of the city and in the passages of the gates, and there was no strength left in them. –

23 And all the people gathered against Ozias and the rulers of the city, the young men and the women and the children, and cried with a loud voice and said before all the elders,

24 May God judge between you and us, because you have done great injustice among us by not speaking peaceful words with the sons of Assour.

25 And now there is no helper for us, but God has sold us into their hands, to be laid low before them in thirst and great destruction.

26 And now call upon them and surrender the entire city as spoil to Holophernes's people and all his force.

27 For it is better for us to become plunder for them; for we shall become slaves, and our life will live, and we shall not see the death of our infants before our eyes and our wives and our children giving up their lives.

28 We call heaven and earth and our God and Lord of our fathers to witness to you, who punishes us according to our sins and according to the sins of our fathers, that he may not act according to these words on this day today.

29 And there was great weeping in the midst of the assembly, all with one accord, and they cried to the Lord God with a loud voice. –

30 And Ozias said to them, Take courage, brothers; let us persevere five more days, in which the Lord our God will turn his mercy upon us, for he will not abandon us completely;

31 but if these pass and help does not come upon us, I will act according to your words.

32 And he dispersed the people to their own encampment, and they went away onto the walls and towers of their city and sent the women and the children into their houses; and they were in great humiliation in the city.

Chapter 8

1 And in those days Ioudith heard, daughter of Merari, son of Ox, son of Ioseph, son of Oziel, son of Elkia, son of Ananias, son of Gedeon, son of Raphain, son of Achitob, son of Elias, son of Chelkias, son of Eliab, son of Nathanael, son of Salamiel, son of Sarasadai, son of Israel.

2 And her husband Manasses was of her tribe and her family; and he died in the days of the barley harvest;

3 for he stood over those binding the sheaves in the plain, and the scorching heat came upon his head, and he fell upon his bed and died in Baityloua, his city, and they buried him with his fathers in the field between Dothaim and Balamon.

4 And Ioudith was in her house as a widow for three years and four months.

5 And she made herself a tent upon the roof of her house and put sackcloth upon her loins, and the garments of her widowhood were upon her.

6 And she fasted all the days of her widowhood except the days before sabbaths and sabbaths and the days before new moons and new moons and festivals and rejoicings of the house of Israel.

7 And she was beautiful in form and exceedingly lovely in appearance; and Manasses her husband had left her gold and silver and male slaves and female slaves and cattle and fields, and she remained over them.

8 And there was no one who brought an evil word against her, because she feared God exceedingly. –

9 And she heard the people's evil words against the ruler, because they had become fainthearted in the shortage of water, and Ioudith heard all the words that Ozias spoke to them, how he swore to them to hand the city over to the Assyrians after five days;

10 and sending her maid who was in charge of all her possessions, she called Chabris and Charmis, the elders of her city,

11 and they came to her, and she said to them, Hear me now, rulers of those inhabiting Baityloua; because your word that you spoke before the people on this day is not upright, and you established this oath that you spoke between God and yourselves, and said you would surrender the city to our enemies unless the Lord turned help to you within them.

12 And now who are you who have tested God on this day today and stand above God in the midst of the sons of men?

13 And now you examine the Lord Almighty, and you will know nothing forever.

14 Because you will not find the depth of a person's heart and will not discern the words of his mind; and how will you search God, who made all these things, and know his mind and understand his reasoning? By no means, brothers; do not provoke the Lord our God to anger.

15 Because if he does not wish to help us within the five days, he himself has the authority to shelter us on whatever days he wishes, or even to destroy us before our enemies.

16 But do not take the plans of the Lord our God as a pledge, because God is not like a person to be threatened, nor like a son of man to be brought to arbitration.

17 Therefore, awaiting the deliverance from him, let us call upon him for our help, and he will hear our voice if it is pleasing to him.

18 Because neither in our generations has there arisen nor on this day today is there any tribe or family or populace or city among us who bow to gods made by hands, as happened in the former days;

19 on account of which our fathers were given to the sword and to plundering and fell in a great fall before our enemies.

20 But we have known no other God except him; therefore we hope that he will not overlook us, nor any of our race.

21 Because when we are taken, thus all Judea also will be taken, and our holy places will be plundered, and he will exact their profanation from our blood,

22 and he will turn the slaughter of our brothers and the captivity of the land and the desolation of our inheritance upon our head among the nations, wherever we serve as slaves there, and we shall become a stumbling block and a reproach before those acquiring us.

23 Because our slavery will not be directed toward favor, but the Lord our God will make it dishonor.

24 And now, brothers, let us show our brothers that their life hangs upon us, and the holy places and the house and the altar rest upon us.

25 Besides all these things, let us give thanks to the Lord our God, who tests us as he also tested our fathers.

26 Remember all that he did with Abraam and all the ways he tested Isaak and all that happened to Iakob in Mesopotamia of Syria while shepherding the sheep of Laban, his mother's brother.

27 Because not as he tried them by fire for the examination of their heart, and he has not punished us, but the Lord scourges those approaching him for admonition. –

28 And Ozias said to her, All that you said, you spoke with a good heart, and there is no one who will resist your words;

29 because your wisdom is not evident only today, but from the beginning of your days all the people have known your understanding, because the formation of your heart is good.

30 But the people have thirsted exceedingly and compelled us to do as we spoke to them and to bring upon ourselves an oath that we will not transgress.

31 And now petition on our behalf, because you are a devout woman, and the Lord will send rain to fill our cisterns, and we shall no longer fail.

32 And Ioudith said to them, Hear me, and I will do a deed that will reach generations of generations for the sons of our race.

33 You shall stand at the gate this night, and I will go out with my maid, and within the days after which you said you would hand the city over to our enemies, the Lord will visit Israel by my hand;

34 but you shall not investigate my action, for I will not tell you until what I am doing is accomplished.

35 And Ozias and the rulers said to her, Go in peace, and the Lord God be before you for vengeance upon our enemies.

36 And returning from the tent, they went to their appointed posts.

Chapter 9

1 But Ioudith fell upon her face and put ashes upon her head and uncovered the sackcloth that she had put on, and the incense of that evening was just being offered in Jerusalem in the house of God, and Ioudith cried with a loud voice to the Lord and said,

2 Lord, God of my father Symeon, to whom you gave a sword in his hand for vengeance upon foreigners who loosened a virgin's womb for defilement and uncovered a thigh for shame and profaned a womb for reproach; for you said, It shall not be thus, and they did it;

3 because of which you gave their rulers to slaughter and their bedding, which had respected their deceit, deceived into blood, and struck slaves along with potentates and potentates upon their thrones,

4 and gave their wives as spoil and their daughters into captivity and all their spoils for division among sons loved by you, who also were zealous with your zeal and abhorred the defilement of their blood and called upon you as helper; God, my God, hear me also, the widow.

5 For you made the things before those and those things and the things afterward, and conceived the things now and the things coming, and what you thought came to be,

6 and what you planned stood forth and said, Behold, we are here; for all your ways are ready, and your judgment is in foreknowledge.

7 For behold, the Assyrians have multiplied in their force, have been exalted in horse and rider, have boasted in the arm of infantry, have hoped in shield and spear and bow and sling, and have not known that you are the Lord who crushes wars.

8 Lord is your name; shatter their strength by your power and break their might in your anger; for they have planned to profane your holy places, to defile the dwelling of the resting place of the name of your glory, to cast down the horn of your altar with iron.

9 Look upon their arrogance; send your wrath upon their heads; give into my hand, the widow's, the might that I have conceived.

10 Strike a slave along with a ruler from the lips of my deceit, and a ruler along with his attendant; break their exaltation by the hand of a female.

11 For your might is not in multitude, nor your dominion among the strong, but you are God of the lowly, helper of the lesser, supporter of the weak, shelterer of those given up, savior of the hopeless.

12 Yes, yes, God of my father and God of Israel's inheritance, master of the heavens and the earth, creator of the waters, king of all your creation, hear my petition,

13 and make my speech and deceit a wound and a bruise for those who have planned harsh things against your covenant and your sanctified house and the summit of Sion and the house possessed by your sons.

14 And bring about recognition among all your nation and every tribe, to know that you are God, God of all power and might, and there is no other who shields the race of Israel except you.

Chapter 10

1 And it happened, when she ceased crying to the God of Israel and concluded all these words,

2 that she rose from her prostration and called her maid and went down into the house in which she stayed on sabbath days and at her festivals,

3 and removed the sackcloth that she had put on and took off the garments of her widowhood and washed her body with water and anointed herself with thick perfume and combed the hair of her head and put a headband upon it and put on the garments of her gladness, in which she clothed herself in the days of the life of her husband Manasses,

4 and took sandals for her feet and put on her anklets and bracelets and rings and earrings and all her adornment, and beautified herself exceedingly to deceive the eyes of men, as many as might see her.

5 And she gave her maid a wineskin of wine and a flask of oil, and filled a bag with barley meal and a cake of pressed fruit and clean loaves, and wrapped all her vessels and placed them upon her.

6 And they went out to the gate of the city of Baityloua and found Ozias and the elders of the city, Chabris and Charmis, standing at it;

7 but when they saw her, and her face was altered and her attire changed, they marveled exceedingly greatly at her beauty and said to her,

8 May the God of our fathers grant you favor and complete your undertakings for the pride of the sons of Israel and the exaltation of Jerusalem.

9 And she bowed to God and said to them, Command that the gate of the city be opened for me, and I will go out to accomplish the words that you spoke with me; and they directed the young men to open it for her as she had spoken.

10 And they did thus. And Ioudith went out, she and her slave girl with her; and the men of the city watched her from afar until she went down the mountain, until she passed through the valley and they no longer saw her. –

11 And they traveled straight ahead in the valley, and an outpost of the Assyrians met her.

12 And they seized her and asked, Of whom are you, and from where do you come, and where do you go? And she said, I am a daughter of the Hebrews, and I am fleeing from before them, because they are about to be given to you as food;

13 and I am coming into the presence of Holophernes, commander of your force, to report words of truth, and I will show before him a way by which he will travel and become master of all the hill country, and not one flesh of his men nor a breath of life will be lost.

14 But when the men heard her words and observed her face – and it was exceedingly marvelous in beauty before them – they said to her,

15 You have saved your life by hastening to come down into the presence of our lord; and now approach his tent, and some of us will escort you until they hand you over into his hands;

16 but when you stand before him, do not fear in your heart, but report according to your words, and he will treat you well.

17 And they chose one hundred men from themselves and joined them to her and her maid, and led them to Holophernes's tent.

18 And there was a running together throughout the camp, for her arrival was proclaimed through the dwellings; and coming, they encircled her as she stood outside Holophernes's tent, until they reported to him concerning her.

19 And they marveled at her beauty and marveled at the sons of Israel because of her, and each said to his neighbor, Who will despise this people, who has such women among itself? For it is not good to leave a single man of them remaining, who, if released, will be able to outwit all the land,

20 and those sleeping beside Holophernes and all his attendants came out and led her into the tent.

21 And Holophernes was resting upon his couch within the mosquito net, which was of purple and gold and emerald and costly stones interwoven.

22 And they reported to him concerning her, and he went out into the front of the tent, and silver lamps went before him.

23 But when Ioudith came before him and his attendants, they all marveled at the beauty of her face; and falling upon her face, she bowed to him, and his slaves raised her.

Chapter 11

1 And Holophernes said to her, Take courage, woman; do not fear in your heart, because I have not mistreated a person who has chosen to serve King Nabouchodonosor of all the land.

2 And now, if your people inhabiting the hill country had not despised me, I would not have raised my spear against them; but they themselves did these things to themselves.

3 And now tell me for what reason you fled from them and came to us; for you have come for deliverance; take courage, you will live this night and afterward;

4 for there is no one who will wrong you, but he will treat you well, as happens to the slaves of my lord King Nabouchodonosor.

5 And Ioudith said to him, Receive the words of your slave woman, and let your slave girl speak before your face, and I will not report a falsehood to my lord this night.

6 And if you follow the words of your slave girl, God will accomplish a deed with you completely, and my lord will not fall short of his undertakings.

7 For King Nabouchodonosor of all the land lives, and his might lives, who sent you for the setting right of every soul, because not only do people serve him through you, but also the beasts of the field and the cattle and the birds of heaven will live through your strength under Nabouchodonosor and all his house.

8 For we heard your wisdom and the cunning deeds of your soul, and it was reported to all the land that you alone are good in all the kingdom and powerful in knowledge and marvelous in armies of war.

9 And now the word that Achior spoke in your council, we have heard his words, because the men of Baityloua preserved him, and he reported to them all that he spoke out beside you.

10 Therefore, master, lord, do not pass over his word, but place it in your heart, because it is true; for our race is not punished, nor does a sword prevail against them, unless they sin against their God.

11 And now, so that my lord may not become driven off and unsuccessful, and death will fall upon their face, and a sin has overtaken them, by which they will provoke their God to anger whenever they commit an improper deed.

12 Since their foods have failed them and all water has become scarce, they planned to lay hands upon their cattle and resolved to consume everything that God instructed them by his laws not to eat.

13 And the firstfruits of grain and the tithes of wine and oil that they kept safe, consecrating them for the priests standing in Jerusalem before the face of our God, they have judged to consume entirely, things that not even with the hands was it proper for anyone of the people to touch.

14 And they have sent to Jerusalem, because those dwelling there also did these things, those who will bring them the permission from the council of elders.

15 And it will be, when he reports to them and they do it, that they will be given to you for destruction on that day.

16 Therefore I, your slave woman, learning all these things, fled from before them, and God sent me to do deeds with you at which all the land will be astonished, as many as hear them.

17 Because your slave woman is God-fearing and serves the God of heaven night and day; and now I will remain beside you, my lord, and your slave woman will go out by night into the ravine, and I will pray to God, and he will tell me when they have committed their sins.

18 And coming, I will report to you, and you will go out with all your force, and there is no one among them who will resist you.

19 And I will lead you through the midst of Judea as far as coming before Jerusalem, and I will place your seat in its midst, and you will lead them as sheep who have no shepherd, and no dog will growl with its tongue before you; because these things were spoken to me according to my foreknowledge and reported to me, and I was sent to report to you. –

20 And her words pleased Holophernes and all his attendants, and they marveled at her wisdom and said,

21 There is no such woman from end to end of the land in beauty of face and understanding of words.

22 And Holophernes said to her, God did well by sending you before the people, so that might might come into our hands, but destruction among those who despised my lord.

23 And now you are lovely in your form and good in your words; because if you do as you have spoken, your God will be my God, and you will sit in King Nabouchodonosor's house and will be renowned throughout all the land.

Chapter 12

1 And he commanded that she be brought in where his silverware was placed, and directed that a table be spread for her from his prepared dishes and that she drink from his wine.

2 And Ioudith said, I will not eat of them, so that there may be no stumbling block, but provision will be made from the things that have followed me.

3 And Holophernes said to her, But if the things with you run out, from where shall we bring out for you to give things like them? For there is no one of your race with us.

4 And Ioudith said to him, Your life lives, my lord, that your slave woman will not consume the things with me until the Lord does by my hand what he has planned.

5 And Holophernes's attendants led her into the tent, and she slept until the middle of the night; and she arose toward the morning watch.

6 And she sent to Holophernes, saying, Let my lord now command that your slave woman be allowed to go out for prayer;

7 and Holophernes commanded the bodyguards not to prevent her. And she remained in the camp three days; and she went out by night into the ravine of Baityloua and immersed herself in the camp at the spring of water;

8 and when she came up, she petitioned the Lord God of Israel to direct her way toward the raising up of the sons of his people;

9 and entering clean, she remained in the tent until she took her food toward evening.

10 And it happened on the fourth day that Holophernes held a drinking for his slaves alone and called none of those attending to duties to the invitation.

11 And he said to Bagoas the eunuch, who was in charge of all his possessions, Go now and persuade the Hebrew woman who is beside you to come to us and eat and drink with us;

12 for behold, it is shameful to our face if we let such a woman pass without having intercourse with her; because if we do not draw her to ourselves, she will mock us.

13 And Bagoas went out from Holophernes's presence and came in to her and said, Let this beautiful slave girl now not hesitate to come to my lord to be glorified before his face, and you shall drink wine with us for gladness and become on this day as one daughter of the sons of Assour who stand in Nabouchodonosor's house.

14 And Ioudith said to him, And who am I to contradict my lord? For everything that is pleasing in his eyes I will hasten to do, and this will be my rejoicing until the day of my death.

15 And rising, she adorned herself with clothing and all her feminine adornment, and her slave woman approached and spread on the ground for her opposite Holophernes the fleeces that she had received from Bagoas for her daily way of life, to eat reclining upon them.

16 And entering, Ioudith reclined, and Holophernes's heart was beside itself over her, and his soul was shaken, and he was exceedingly desirous to have intercourse with her; and he watched for an opportunity to deceive her from the day he saw her.

17 And Holophernes said to her, Drink now and be with us in gladness.

18 And Ioudith said, I will indeed drink, lord, because my living has been magnified in me today beyond all the days of my birth.

19 And taking, she ate and drank before him what her slave woman had prepared.

20 And Holophernes rejoiced because of her and drank exceedingly much wine, as much as he had never yet drunk on a single day since he was born.

Chapter 13

1 But when evening came, his slaves hastened to depart. And Bagoas closed the tent from outside and shut out those attending from before his lord, and they went away to their beds; for they were all wearied because the drinking had gone on longer.

2 But Ioudith was left alone in the tent, and Holophernes fallen forward upon his couch; for the wine had flooded him.

3 And Ioudith told her slave woman to stand outside her bedchamber and watch for her departure as each day, for she said she would go out for her prayer; and she spoke to Bagoas according to these words.

4 And they all went away from before her, and no one was left in the bedchamber, from small to great; and Ioudith, standing beside his couch, said in her heart, Lord, God of all power, look upon the works of my hands at this hour for Jerusalem's exaltation;

5 because now is a time to support your inheritance and to carry out my undertaking for the crushing of enemies who have risen against us.

6 And approaching the bed rail that was at Holophernes's head, she took down his short sword from it,

7 and approaching the couch, grasped the hair of his head and said, Strengthen me, Lord, God of Israel, on this day.

8 And she struck into his neck twice with her strength and removed his head from him.

9 And she rolled his body off the bedding and removed the mosquito net from the posts; and after a little while she went out and handed Holophernes's head to her maid,

10 and she put it into her food bag. And the two went out together for prayer according to their custom; and passing through the camp, they went around that ravine and went up the mountain of Baityloua and came to its gates.

11 And Ioudith said from afar to those guarding at the gates, Open, open the gate now; God, our God, is with us, to do strength again in Israel and might against the enemies, as he has also done today.

12 And it happened, when the men of her city heard her voice, that they hastened to go down to the gate of their city and called together the elders of the city.

13 And they all ran together, from small to great among them, because her coming was unexpected to them, and they opened the gate and received them and, lighting a fire for illumination, encircled them.

14 But she said to them with a loud voice, Praise God, praise; praise God, who has not removed his mercy from the house of Israel, but has crushed our enemies through my hand this night.

15 And taking the head out of the bag, she showed it and said to them, Behold, the head of Holophernes, commander of Assour's force, and behold, the mosquito net in which he lay in his drunkenness; and the Lord struck him by the hand of a female;

16 and the Lord lives, who preserved me in my way on which I traveled, that my face deceived him for his destruction, and he committed no sin with me for defilement and shame.

17 And all the people were exceedingly astonished and bent down and bowed to God and said with one accord, Blessed are you, our God, who has brought the enemies of your people to nothing on this day today.

18 And Ozias said to her, Blessed are you, daughter, by God Most High beyond all the women upon the earth, and blessed is the Lord God who created the heavens and the earth, who directed you to wound the head of the ruler of our enemies;

19 because your hope will not depart from the heart of people remembering God's strength forever;

20 and may God do these things for you for eternal height, to visit you with good things, because you did not spare your life on account of the humiliation of our race, but came forth against our fall, traveling straight before our God. And all the people said, May it be, may it be.

Chapter 14

1 And Ioudith said to them, Hear me now, brothers, and take this head and hang it upon the battlement of your wall.

2 And it shall be, when dawn shines through and the sun comes out upon the earth, each of you will take up your equipment for war, and every strong man will go out of the city, and you will give them a leader as though going down upon the plain to the outpost of the sons of Assour, and you will not go down.

3 And these men, taking up their full armor, will go to their camp and awaken the generals of the force of Assour; and they will run together to the tent of Olophernes and will not find him, and fear will fall upon them, and they will flee from before you.

4 And you and all who inhabit every territory of Israel, following after them, lay them low in their roads.

5 But before doing these things, call for me Achior the Ammanite, so that, seeing, he may recognize the one who despised the house of Israel and sent him to us as though to death.

6 And they called Achior from the house of Ozias; and when he came and saw the head of Olophernes in the hand of one man in the assembly of the people, he fell upon his face, and his spirit failed.

7 And when they lifted him up, he fell at the feet of Ioudith and bowed before her face and said, Blessed are you in every dwelling of Iouda and in every nation, who, hearing your name, will be troubled;

8 and now tell me all that you did in these days. And Ioudith told him in the midst of the people everything that she had done from the day she went out until she was speaking to them.

9 And when she ceased speaking, the people shouted with a great voice and gave a joyful cry in their city.

10 And Achior, seeing everything that the God of Israel had done, believed in God exceedingly and circumcised the flesh of his foreskin and was added to the house of Israel until this day.

11 And when dawn arose, they hung the head of Olophernes from the wall, and every man took up his weapons, and they went out in companies onto the ascents of the mountain.

12 And when the sons of Assour saw them, they sent to their leaders; and these came to the generals and commanders of thousands and to every ruler of theirs.

13 And they came to the tent of Olophernes and said to the one who was over everything of his, Awaken our lord now, because the slaves have dared to come down against us for war, so that they may be utterly destroyed.

14 And Bagoas went in and struck the curtain of the tent; for he supposed that he was sleeping with Ioudith.

15 And when no one answered, he parted it and entered the bedchamber and found him cast dead upon the bedframe, and his head had been removed from him.

16 And he cried out with a great voice, with weeping and groaning and a mighty cry, and tore his garments.

17 And he went into the tent where Ioudith had been lodging and did not find her; and he sprang out to the people and cried out,

18 The slaves have acted treacherously; one woman of the Hebrews has brought shame upon the house of King Nabouchodonosor; for behold, Olophernes is on the ground, and his head is not upon him.

19 And when the rulers of the force of Assour heard these words, they tore their tunics, and their soul was exceedingly troubled, and their shouting and crying became exceedingly great in the midst of the camp.

Chapter 15

1 And when those in the dwellings heard, they were astounded at what had happened,

2 and trembling and fear fell upon them, and there was no man remaining before his neighbor any longer, but pouring out with one accord, they fled along every road of the plain and the hill country;

3 and those encamped in the hill country around Baityloua also turned to flight. And then the sons of Israel, every warrior among them, poured out upon them.

4 And Ozias sent to Baitomasthaim and Bebai and Chobai and Kola and to every territory of Israel those who would report concerning the things accomplished, and so that all might pour out upon the enemies to kill them.

5 And when the sons of Israel heard, they all fell upon them with one accord and cut them down as far as Choba. Likewise those from Jerusalem and from all the hill country also arrived, for they had reported to them what had happened to the camp of their enemies; and those in Galaad and those in Galilee outflanked them with a great blow until they passed Damascus and its territories.

6 And the rest who inhabited Baityloua fell upon the camp of Assour and plundered them and became exceedingly rich.

7 And the sons of Israel, returning from the slaughter, took possession of the remaining things, and the villages and farmsteads in the hill country and the plain gained much spoil, for there was an exceedingly great abundance.

8 And Ioakim the great priest and the council of elders of the sons of Israel who inhabited Jerusalem came to behold the good things which the Lord had done for Israel and to see Ioudith and speak peace with her.

9 And when they came in to her, they all blessed her with one accord and said to her, You are the exaltation of Jerusalem, you are the great pride of Israel, you are the great boast of our race;

10 you did all these things by your hand, you did good things with Israel, and God was pleased with them; be blessed by the almighty Lord for everlasting time. And all the people said, May it be.

11 And all the people plundered the camp for thirty days; and they gave Ioudith the tent of Olophernes and all the silverware and the beds and the basins and all his furnishings, and she took them and placed them upon her mule and yoked her wagons and heaped them upon them.

12 And every woman of Israel ran together to see her, and they blessed her and formed a dance of themselves for her, and she took thyrsi in her hands and gave them to the women with her;

13 and they crowned themselves with olive, she and those with her, and she went before all the people in a dance, leading all the women, and every man of Israel followed, armed and with crowns, and they sang hymns with their mouths.

14 And Ioudith led this thanksgiving in all Israel, and all the people sang out this praise

Chapter 16

1 and Ioudith said, Lead off for my God with tambourines, sing to the Lord with cymbals, fit together for him a psalm and praise, exalt and call upon his name,

2 because the Lord is a God who crushes wars, because into his camps in the midst of the people he rescued me from the hand of those pursuing me.

3 Assour came from mountains from the north; he came with myriads of his force, whose multitude blocked torrents, and their cavalry covered hills;

4 he said he would burn my territories and kill my young men with the sword and put my sucklings upon the ground and give my infants over to plunder and despoil my virgins.

5 The almighty Lord thwarted them by the hand of a female.

6 For their mighty man did not fall by young men, nor did sons of Titans strike him, nor did tall giants attack him, but Ioudith daughter of Merari disabled him by the beauty of her face,

7 for she took off the robe of her widowhood for the exaltation of those toiling in Israel, anointed her face with perfume

8 and bound her hair with a turban and took a linen robe to deceive him;

9 her sandal seized his eye, and her beauty took his soul captive; the short sword passed through his neck.

10 Persians shuddered at her daring, and Medes were troubled at her boldness;

11 then my lowly ones shouted, and my weak ones became afraid and were terrified; they lifted up their voice and were overturned;

12 sons of girls pierced them and wounded them as children of deserters; they perished by the battle array of my Lord.

13 I will sing a new hymn to my God: Lord, you are great and glorious, wonderful in strength, unsurpassable.

14 Let all your creation serve you; because you spoke, and they came to be; you sent forth your spirit, and it built; and there is no one who will resist your voice.

15 For mountains will be shaken from their foundations together with waters, and rocks will melt like wax before you; but still, to those who fear you, you will be gracious to them.

16 Because every sacrifice is a small thing for a fragrant odor, and all fat is a very little thing for a whole burnt offering to you; but the one who fears the Lord is great continually.

17 Woe to nations rising against my race; the almighty Lord will punish them on the day of judgment, to give fire and worms into their flesh, and they will weep in awareness for the age.

18 And when they came to Jerusalem, they worshiped God, and when the people were purified, they offered their whole burnt offerings and their voluntary offerings and gifts.

19 And Ioudith dedicated all the equipment of Olophernes which the people gave her, and the canopy which she took for herself from his bedchamber she gave as a dedication to God.

20 And the people were rejoicing in Jerusalem before the holy things for three months, and Ioudith remained with them.

21 And after these days each departed to his inheritance, and Ioudith went away to Baityloua and remained upon her property; and in her time she became glorious in all the land.

22 And many desired her, and no man knew her all the days of her life from the day Manasses her husband died and was added to his people.

23 And she advanced to a very great age and grew old in the house of her husband, one hundred five years; and she released her maidservant as a free woman. And she died in Baityloua, and they buried her in the cave of her husband Manasses,

24 and the house of Israel mourned her seven days. And she divided her possessions before she died among all the nearest relatives of Manasses her husband and the nearest relatives of her race.

25 And there was no longer anyone who terrified the sons of Israel in the days of Ioudith and for many days after her death.

1 Tobit

Chapter 1

1 Book of the words of Tobit, of Tobiel, of Ananiel, of Adouel, of Gabael, from the seed of Asiel, from the tribe of Nephthalim,

2 who was taken captive in the days of Enemessaros the king of the Assyrians from Thisbe, which is to the right of Kydios of Nephthalim in Galilee, above Aser.

3 I, Tobit, walked in ways of truth and righteousness all the days of my life and performed many acts of mercy for my brothers and the nation, those who traveled together with me to the country of the Assyrians, to Nineue.

4 And when I was in my country in the land of Israel, when I was younger, the whole tribe of Nephthalim my father departed from the house of Jerusalem, which was chosen from all the tribes of Israel for all the tribes to sacrifice; and the temple of the dwelling of the Most High was sanctified and built for all the generations of the age.

5 And all the tribes that departed together sacrificed to Baal the heifer, and the house of Nephthalim my father.

6 And I alone traveled many times to Jerusalem at the feasts, as it is written for all Israel in an eternal ordinance, having the firstfruits and the tithes of the produce and the first shearings;

7 and I gave them to the priests, the sons of Aaron, at the altar; of all the produce I gave the tithe to the sons of Leui who served in Jerusalem. And I sold the second tithe and traveled and spent these things in Jerusalem each year.

8 And I gave the third to those to whom it was due, as Debbora my father's mother commanded, because I was left an orphan by my father.

9 And when I became a man, I took Anna as a wife from the seed of our paternal family and begot Tobias by her.

10 And when I was taken captive to Nineue, all my brothers and those of my race ate of the breads of the nations;

11 but I guarded my soul against eating,

12 because I remembered God with my whole soul.

13 And the Most High gave favor and form before Enemessaros, and I was his buyer;

14 and I traveled to Media and deposited ten talents of silver with Gabael the brother of Gabrias in Ragoi of Media.

15 And when Enemessaros died, Sennacherim his son reigned in his place, and his roads became unsettled, and I was no longer able to travel to Media.

16 And in the days of Enemessaros I performed many acts of mercy for my brothers;

17 I gave my breads to the hungry and my garments to the naked, and if I saw anyone of my race dead and cast behind the wall of Nineue, I buried him.

18 And if Sennacherim the king killed anyone when he came fleeing from Judea, I buried them, stealing them; for he killed many in his anger; and the bodies were sought by the king and were not found.

19 And one of those in Nineue went and informed the king concerning me, that I bury them, and I hid; and learning that I was sought to be put to death, I withdrew in fear.

20 And all my possessions were plundered, and nothing was left to me except Anna my wife and Tobios my son.

21 And fifty days had not passed before his two sons killed him; and they fled to the mountains of Ararat, and Sacherdonos his son reigned in his place. And he appointed Achiacharos of Anael, son of my brother, over all the accounting of his kingdom and over all the administration.

22 And Achiacharos petitioned concerning me, and I came to Nineue. And Achiacharos was the cupbearer and in charge of the ring and administrator and accountant, and Sacherdonos appointed him a second time; and he was my cousin.

Chapter 2

1 And when I came down to my house and Anna my wife and Tobias my son were restored to me, at Pentecost, the feast which is holy, of seven weeks, a fine meal was prepared for me, and I reclined to eat.

2 And I beheld many dishes and said to my son, Go and bring whoever you find among our brothers in need, who remembers the Lord; and behold, I will wait for you.

3 And coming, he said, Father, one of our race has been strangled and cast into the marketplace.

4 And before tasting anything, I sprang up and took him up into a certain building until the sun set.

5 And returning, I bathed and ate my bread in grief;

6 and I remembered the prophecy of Amos, as he said, Your feasts will be turned into mourning and all your rejoicings into lamentation; and I wept.

7 And when the sun set, I went away and dug and buried him.

8 And the neighbors laughed, saying, He is no longer afraid of being murdered on account of this matter; and he ran away, and behold, again he buries the dead.

9 And that very night I returned after burying him and slept, defiled, beside the wall of the courtyard, and my face was uncovered;

10 and I did not know that little birds were in the wall, and while my eyes were open, the little birds deposited hot droppings into my eyes, and white films developed in my eyes. And I went to physicians, and they did not help me; and Achiacharos supported me until he traveled to Elymais.

11 And Anna my wife worked for hire at women's work;

12 and she sent it to the owners, and they themselves paid her the wage, also giving a kid in addition.

13 And when it came to me, it began to cry; and I said to her, Where is the little kid from? Surely it is not stolen? Return it to the owners; for it is not lawful to eat something stolen.

14 And she said, It has been given to me as a gift in addition to the wage. And I did not believe her and told her to return it to the owners and reddened toward her; and answering, she said to me, Where are your acts of mercy and your righteous deeds? Behold, everything is known with you.

Chapter 3

1 And grieved, I wept and prayed with anguish, saying,

2 You are righteous, Lord, and all your works and all your ways are acts of mercy and truth, and you judge a true and righteous judgment for the age.

3 Remember me and look upon me; do not punish me for my sins and my unwitting offenses and those of my fathers, which I committed before you;

4 for they disobeyed your commandments. You gave us over to plunder and captivity and death and a proverb of reproach to all the nations among which we have been scattered.

5 And now many of your judgments are true, to execute upon me concerning my sins and those of my fathers, because we did not perform your commandments; for we did not walk in truth before you.

6 And now do with me according to what is pleasing before you; command that my spirit be taken up, so that I may be released and become earth; because it profits me to die rather than live, because I heard false reproaches, and there is much grief in me; command that I be released from distress now to the eternal place; do not turn your face away from me.

7 On the same day it happened to Sarra the daughter of Ragouel in Ekbatana of Media that she too was reproached by her father's maidservants,

8 because she had been given to seven men, and Asmodaus the evil demon killed them before they were with her as with women. And they said to her, Do you not understand, strangling your husbands? You already had seven and benefited from none of them.

9 Why do you scourge us? If they died, go with them; may we not see a son or daughter of yours for the age.

10 Hearing these things, she grieved exceedingly, so as to hang herself. And she said, I am my father's only one; if I do this, it is a reproach to him, and I will bring his old age down with anguish into Hades.

11 And she petitioned beside the window and said, Blessed are you, Lord my God, and blessed is your holy and honored name for the ages; may all your works bless you for the age.

12 And now, Lord, I have directed my eyes and my face toward you;

13 command that I be released from the earth and no longer hear reproach.

14 You know, Lord, that I am clean from every sin of a man

15 and have not defiled my name or my father's name in the land of my captivity. I am my father's only child, and he has no child who will inherit from him, nor a brother nearby nor a son belonging to him, so that I may keep myself as a wife for him. Seven have already perished for me; why should I live? And if it does not seem good to you to kill me, command that I be looked upon and shown mercy and no longer hear reproach.

16 And the prayer of both was heard before the glory of the great Raphael,

17 and he was sent to heal the two, to peel away Tobit's white films and give Sarra of Ragouel to Tobias the son of Tobit as a wife and bind Asmodaus the evil demon, because it falls to Tobias to inherit her. At that very time Tobit returned and entered his house, and Sarra of Ragouel came down from her upper room.

Chapter 4

1 On that day Tobit remembered concerning the silver which he deposited with Gabael in Rhagoi of Media,

2 and said within himself, I asked for death; why do I not call Tobias my son, so that I may inform him before I die?

3 And calling him, he said, Child, if I die, bury me; and do not disregard your mother; honor her all the days of your life and do what is pleasing to her and do not grieve her.

4 Remember, child, that she has seen many dangers on account of you in the womb; when she dies, bury her beside me in one grave.

5 All the days, child, remember the Lord our God and do not desire to sin and transgress his commandments; do righteousness all the days of your life and do not walk in the ways of injustice;

6 because when you do truth, there will be prosperity in your works.

7 And to all who do righteousness, show mercy from your possessions, and let your eye not begrudge your showing mercy; do not turn your face away from any poor person, and the face of God will certainly not be turned away from you.

8 As you have possessions, according to their abundance show mercy from them; if you have little, do not be afraid to show mercy according to the little;

9 for you store up a good deposit for yourself for a day of distress;

10 because mercy delivers from death and does not allow one to enter into darkness;

11 for mercy is a good gift for all who perform it before the Most High.

12 Guard yourself, child, against all fornication, and first take a wife from the seed of your fathers; do not take a foreign wife who is not from your father's tribe, because we are sons of prophets. Noe, Abraam, Isaak, Iakob, our fathers from of old—remember, child, that all these took wives from their brothers and were blessed in their children, and their seed will inherit land.

13 And now, child, love your brothers and do not be arrogant in your heart toward your brothers and the sons and daughters of your people, to take a wife for yourself from them, because in arrogance there is destruction and much disorder, and in uselessness there is decrease and great need; for uselessness is the mother of famine.

14 Let the wage of every person who works not lodge with you, but pay him immediately, and if you serve God, it will be repaid to you. Guard yourself, child, in all your works, and be disciplined in all your conduct.

15 And what you hate, do to no one. Do not drink wine to drunkenness, and let drunkenness not travel with you on your road.

16 Give from your bread to a hungry person and from your garments to the naked; everything that is surplus for you, give in mercy, and let your eye not begrudge your showing mercy.

17 Pour out your breads upon the grave of the righteous and do not give to sinners.

18 Seek counsel from every prudent person and do not despise any useful counsel.

19 And at every time bless the Lord God and ask of him that your roads may become straight and all your paths and counsels prosper; because no nation has counsel, but the Lord himself gives all good things and humbles whomever he wishes, as he wills. And now, child, remember my commandments, and let them not be erased from your heart.

20 And now I show you the ten talents of silver which I deposited with Gabael of Gabrias in Rhagoi of Media.

21 And do not be afraid, child, because we have become poor; you have much if you fear God and depart from every sin and do what is pleasing before him.

Chapter 5

1 And answering, Tobias said to him, Father, I will do everything that you have commanded me;

2 but how will I be able to receive the silver, when I do not know him?

3 And he gave him the written bond and said to him, Seek for yourself a man who will travel with you, and I will give him a wage while I live; and go and receive the silver.

4 And he went to seek a man and found Raphael, who was an angel, and he did not know;

5 and he said to him, Can I travel with you in Rhagoi of Media, and are you experienced in the places?

6 And the angel said to him, I will travel with you, and I am experienced in the road, and I lodged with Gabael our brother.

7 And Tobias said to him, Wait for me, and I will tell my father.

8 And he said to him, Go, and do not delay.

9 And going in, he said to his father, Behold, I have found one who will travel with me. And he said, Call him to me, so that I may learn of which tribe he is and whether he is faithful to travel with you.

10 And he called him, and he went in, and they greeted one another.

11 And Tobit said to him, Brother, from which tribe and from which homeland are you? Inform me.

12 And he said to him, Are you seeking a tribe and paternal family or a hired man who will travel with your son? And Tobit said to him, I wish, brother, to learn your race and name.

13 And he said, I am Azarias of Ananias the great, of your brothers.

14 And he said to him, May you come in health, brother; and do not be angry with me because I sought to learn your tribe and paternal family. And you happen to be my brother from the fine and good lineage; for I knew Ananias and Iathan, the sons of Semeias the great, when we traveled together to Jerusalem to worship, bringing up the firstborn and the tithes of the produce, and they did not go astray in the error of our brothers. You are from a good root, brother.

15 But tell me what wage I shall give you: a drachma a day and your necessities, as also for my son?

16 And I will add still more to your wage if you return in health.

17 And they agreed thus. And he said to Tobias, Become ready for the road; and may you prosper. And his son prepared the things for the road. And his father said to him, Go with the man; and God who dwells in heaven will prosper your road, and let his angel travel with you. And both went out to depart, and the boy's dog with them.

18 And Anna his mother wept and said to Tobit, Why have you sent our child away? Is he not the staff of our hand as he goes in and goes out before us?

19 May silver not overtake silver, but may it become a thing cast away for our child;

20 for as living has been given to us by the Lord, this is sufficient for us.

21 And Tobit said to her, Do not be concerned, sister; he will come in health, and your eyes will see him;

22 for a good angel will travel with him, and his road will prosper, and he will return in health.

23 And she ceased weeping.

Chapter 6

1 And those traveling the road came in the evening to the Tigris river and lodged there.

2 And the boy went down to wash himself, and a fish sprang up from the river and wished to swallow the boy.

3 And the angel said to him, Take hold of the fish. And the boy seized the fish and cast it up onto the land.

4 And the angel said to him, Cut open the fish, and take the heart and the liver and the gall and put them away safely.

5 And the boy did as the angel told him, and roasting the fish, they ate.

6 And both traveled until they drew near in Ekbatana.

7 And the boy said to the angel, Azarias, brother, what are the liver and the heart and the gall of the fish?

8 And he said to him, The heart and the liver, if a demon or an evil spirit troubles anyone, these must be burned to make smoke before a man or woman, and that person will certainly no longer be troubled;

9 and the gall, to anoint a person who has white films in the eyes, and he will be healed.

10 And as they drew near to Rage,

11 the angel said to the boy, Brother, today we will lodge with Ragouel, and he is your relative, and he has an only daughter named Sarra;

12 I will speak concerning her being given to you as a wife, because her inheritance falls to you, and you alone are of her race; and the girl is beautiful and prudent.

13 And now hear me, and I will speak to her father, and when we return from Rhagoi, we will hold the wedding. Because I know Ragouel, that he will certainly not give her to another man according to the law of Moses, or he will owe death, because it belongs to you to receive the inheritance rather than any man.

14 Then the boy said to the angel, Azarias, brother, I have heard that the girl has been given to seven men and that all have perished in the bridal chamber.

15 And now I am my father's only one, and I am afraid lest I go in and die as also the former ones, because a demon loves her, which harms no one except those approaching her. And now I am afraid lest I die and bring the life of my father and my mother down with anguish over me into their grave; and they have no other son who will bury them.

16 And the angel said to him, Do you not remember the words which your father commanded you concerning taking a wife from your race? And now hear me, brother, because she will be your wife, and take no account of the demon, because this night she will be given to you as a wife.

17 And if you enter the bridal chamber, you will take ashes of incense and place some of the heart and the liver of the fish upon them and make smoke, and the demon will smell it and flee and will not return for the age of the age.

18 And when you approach her, arise, both of you, and cry out to the merciful God, and he will save you and have mercy; do not be afraid, because she was prepared for you from of old, and you will save her, and she will travel with you, and I suppose that you will have children by her.

19 And when Tobias heard these things, he loved her, and his soul clung to her exceedingly.

Chapter 7

1 And they came to Ekbatana and arrived at the house of Ragouel, and Sarra met them and greeted them, and they her, and she brought them into the house.

2 And Ragouel said to Edna his wife, How like Tobit my cousin the young man is.

3 And Ragouel asked them, Where are you from, brothers? And they said to him, From the sons of Nephthali, the captives in Nineue.

4 And he said to them, Do you know Tobit our brother? And they said, We know him.

5 And he said to them, Is he healthy? And they said, He both lives and is healthy; and Tobias said, He is my father.

6 And Ragouel sprang up and kissed him and wept and blessed him and said to him, You of the fine and good man; and hearing that Tobit had lost his eyes, he grieved and wept.

7 And Edna his wife and Sarra his daughter wept and welcomed them eagerly.

8 And they slaughtered a ram of the sheep and set several dishes before them.

9 And Tobias said to Raphael, Azarias, brother, speak concerning the things you were saying on the journey, and let the matter be accomplished.

10 And he communicated the word to Ragouel. And Ragouel said to Tobias, Eat and drink and be glad; for it belongs to you to take my child; nevertheless I will show you the truth.

11 I gave my child to seven men, and whenever they went in to her, they died during the night. But for the present, be glad.

12 And Tobias said, I will taste nothing here until you establish it and stand with me. And Ragouel said, Take her from now according to the judgment; and you are her brother, and she is yours; and the merciful God will prosper the best things for you.

13 And he called Sarra his daughter and took her hand and gave her to Tobias as a wife and said, Behold, according to the law of Moses take her and lead her away to your father; and he blessed them.

14 And he called Edna his wife; and taking a document, he wrote a contract, and they sealed it. And they began to eat.

15 And Ragouel called Edna his wife and said to her, Sister, prepare the other chamber and bring her in.

16 And she did as he said and brought her there and wept; and she received her daughter's tears and said to her,

17 Take courage, child; may the Lord of heaven and earth give you favor in place of this grief of yours; take courage, daughter.

Chapter 8

1 And when they finished dining, they brought Tobias in to her.

2 And as he went, he remembered Raphael's words and took the ashes of the incense and placed the fish's heart and liver upon them and made smoke.

3 And when the demon smelled the odor, it fled to the uppermost parts of Egypt, and the angel bound it.

4 And when both were shut in together, Tobias arose from the bed and said, Arise, sister, and let us pray, so that the Lord may have mercy on us.

5 And Tobias began to say, Blessed are you, God of our fathers, and blessed is your holy and glorious name for the ages; may the heavens and all your creations bless you.

6 You made Adam and gave him Eua as a helper, a support, his wife; from these came the seed of people. You said, It is not good for the man to be alone; let us make him a helper like him.

7 And now, Lord, I take this sister of mine because of truth, not because of fornication; command that I be shown mercy and grow old together with her.

8 And she said with him, Amen.

9 And both slept the night.

10 And Ragouel arose and went and dug a grave, saying, Lest this one also die.

11 And Ragouel came to his house

12 and said to Edna his wife, Send one of the maidservants, and let them see whether he lives; and if not, so that we may bury him and no one know.

13 And the maidservant went in, opening the door, and found the two sleeping.

14 And going out, she reported to them that he lives.

15 And Ragouel blessed God, saying, Blessed are you, God, with every pure and holy blessing, and let your holy ones and all your creations bless you, and let all your angels and your chosen ones bless you for all the ages.

16 Blessed are you because you gladdened me, and it did not happen to me as I supposed, but according to your abundant mercy you dealt with us.

17 Blessed are you because you showed mercy to two only children; show them mercy, Master; bring their life to completion in health with gladness and mercy.

18 And he ordered the household servants to fill in the grave.

19 And he held a wedding for them of fourteen days.

20 And before the days of the wedding were completed, Ragouel told him under oath that he was not to go out unless the fourteen days of the wedding were fulfilled,

21 and then to take half his possessions and travel in health to his father; and the remaining things, when I and my wife die.

Chapter 9

1 And Tobias called Raphael and said to him,

2 Azarias, brother, take with yourself a servant and two camels and travel to Gabael in Rhagoi of Media and bring me the silver and lead him to the wedding;

3 because Ragouel has sworn that I am not to go out,

4 and my father counts the days, and if I delay greatly, he will be exceedingly distressed.

5 And Raphael traveled and lodged with Gabael and gave him the written bond; and he brought out the little bags with their seals and gave them to him.

6 And they arose early together and came to the wedding. And Tobias blessed his wife.

Chapter 10

1 And Tobit his father calculated each day; and when the days of the journey were fulfilled and they did not come,

2 he said, Perhaps they have been put to shame? Or perhaps Gabael died and no one gives him the silver?

3 And he grieved greatly.

4 And his wife said to him, The child has perished, because he has delayed; and she began to lament him and said,

5 Does it not concern me, child, that I let you go, the light of my eyes?

6 And Tobit says to her, Be silent, do not be concerned; he is healthy.

7 And she said to him, Be silent, do not deceive me; my child has perished. And each day she went out to the road by which he had departed, and by day she ate no bread, and at night she did not cease lamenting Tobias her son, until the fourteen days of the wedding were completed, which Ragouel swore to have him spend there.

8 And Tobias said to Ragouel, Send me away, because my father and my mother no longer hope to see me.

9 And his father-in-law said to him, Remain with me, and I will send to your father, and they will tell him the things concerning you. And Tobias says, No, but send me away to my father.

10 And Ragouel arose and gave him Sarra his wife and half the possessions, persons and livestock and silver;

11 and blessing them, he sent them away, saying, The God of heaven will prosper you, children, before I die.

12 And he said to his daughter, Honor your parents-in-law; they are now your parents; may I hear a good report of you. And he kissed her.

13 And Edna said to Tobias, Beloved brother, may the Lord of heaven restore you and grant me to see your children from Sarra my daughter, so that I may rejoice before the Lord; and behold, I entrust my daughter to you as a deposit; do not grieve her.

14 After these things Tobias traveled, blessing God because he prospered his road, and he blessed Ragouel and Edna his wife.

Chapter 11

1 And he traveled until they drew near to Nineue. And Raphael said to Tobias,

2 Do you not know, brother, how you left your father?

3 Let us run ahead of your wife and prepare the house;

4 and take the fish's gall ready at hand. And they traveled, and the dog went along behind them.

5 And Anna sat looking about along the road for her child;

6 and she noticed him coming and said to his father, Behold, your son is coming, and the man who traveled with him.

7 And Raphael said, I know that your father will open his eyes;

8 you, therefore, anoint the gall into his eyes, and stung, he will rub them and cast off the white films and see you.

9 And Anna ran forward and fell upon her son's neck and said to him, I have seen you, child; from now I shall die. And both wept.

10 And Tobit went out toward the door and stumbled, and his son ran forward to him

11 and took hold of his father and sprinkled the gall upon his father's eyes, saying, Take courage, father.

12 And when they were stung, he rubbed his eyes, and the white films peeled away from the corners of his eyes.

13 And seeing his son, he fell upon his neck and wept and said,

14 Blessed are you, God, and blessed is your name for the ages, and blessed are all your holy angels; because you scourged me and showed me mercy, behold, I see Tobias my son.

15 And his son entered rejoicing and reported to his father the great things that had happened to him in Media.

16 And Tobit went out to meet his bride, rejoicing and blessing God, at the gate of Nineue; and those who beheld him walking marveled because he could see, and Tobit gave thanks before them because God had shown him mercy.

17 And when Tobit approached Sarra his bride, he blessed her, saying, May you come in health, daughter; blessed is God who brought you to us, and your father and your mother.

18 And there was joy for all his brothers in Nineue.

19 And Achiacharos and Nasbas his cousin arrived, and Tobias's wedding was held with gladness for seven days.

Chapter 12

1 And Tobit called Tobias his son and said to him, See, child, to a wage for the man who went with you, and it is necessary to add to it for him.

2 And he said to him, Father, I am not harmed by giving him half of what I have brought,

3 because he has brought me to you healthy and healed my wife and brought my silver and likewise healed you.

4 And the old man said, It is his due.

5 And he called the angel and said to him, Take half of everything that you have brought.

6 Then calling the two privately, he said to them, Bless God and give thanks to him; give him greatness and give thanks before all the living concerning what he did with you; it is good to bless God and exalt his name, honorably making known the accounts of God's works, and do not hesitate to give thanks to him.

7 It is good to hide a king's secret, but to reveal God's works gloriously. Do good, and evil will not find you.

8 Prayer with fasting and mercy and righteousness is good; a little with righteousness is better than much with injustice; it is better to show mercy than to store up gold.

9 For mercy delivers from death, and it will cleanse away every sin; those who perform acts of mercy and righteous deeds will be filled with life;

10 but those who sin are enemies of their own life.

11 I will certainly not hide any word from you; I have indeed said, It is good to hide a king's secret, but to reveal God's works gloriously.

12 And now, when you and Sarra your bride prayed, I brought the memorial of your prayer before the Holy One; and when you buried the dead, I was likewise present with you.

13 And when you did not hesitate to arise and leave your meal so that you might go away and wrap the dead man, you did not escape my notice as you did good, but I was with you.

14 And now God sent me to heal you and Sarra your bride.

15 I am Raphael, one of the seven holy angels who bring up the prayers of the holy ones and enter before the glory of the Holy One.

16 And the two were troubled and fell upon their faces, because they were afraid.

17 And he said to them, Do not be afraid; there will be peace for you; and bless God for the age.

18 Because I came by the will of our God, not by my own favor; therefore bless him for the age.

19 All the days I appeared to you, and I neither ate nor drank, but you beheld a vision.

20 And now give thanks to God, because I ascend to the one who sent me, and write everything accomplished in a book.

21 And they arose; and they no longer saw him.

22 And they gave thanks for the great and wonderful works of God and how the angel of the Lord appeared to them.

Chapter 13

1 And Tobit wrote a prayer for exultation and said,

2 Blessed is God who lives for the ages, and his kingdom, because he scourges and has mercy, brings down into Hades and brings up, and there is no one who will escape his hand.

3 Give thanks to him, sons of Israel, before the nations, because he scattered us among them;

4 there show his greatness; exalt him before every living being, because he is our Lord and God; he is our Father for all the ages.

5 And he will scourge us in our injustices and again have mercy and gather us from all the nations, wherever you may have been scattered among them.

6 If you return to him with your whole heart and with your whole soul to do truth before him, then he will return to you and will certainly not hide his face from you.

7 And behold what he will do with you, and give thanks to him with your whole mouth; and bless the Lord of righteousness and exalt the King of the ages.

8 I give thanks to him in the land of my captivity and show his strength and his greatness to a nation of sinners. Return, sinners, and do righteousness before him; who knows whether he will desire you and show mercy to you?

9 I exalt my God, and my soul the King of heaven, and it will exult in his greatness.

10 Let everyone speak and give thanks to him in Jerusalem. Jerusalem, holy city, he will scourge on account of the works of your sons and again have mercy on the sons of the righteous.

11 Give thanks to the Lord well and bless the King of the ages, so that his tent may again be built for you with joy.

12 And may he gladden the captives in you and love the afflicted in you for all the generations of the age.

13 Many nations will come from afar to the name of the Lord God, having gifts in their hands and gifts for the King of heaven; generations of generations will give you exultation.

14 Accursed are all who hate you; blessed will all who love you be for the age.

15 Rejoice and exult over the sons of the righteous, because they will be gathered and will bless the Lord of the righteous; O blessed are those who love you; they will rejoice over your peace.

16 Blessed are all who grieved over all your scourges, because they will rejoice over you, having beheld all your glory, and will be glad for the age. Let my soul bless God, the great King.

17 Because Jerusalem will be built with sapphire and emerald and precious stone, your walls and the towers and the battlements with pure gold, and the broad streets of Jerusalem will be paved with beryl and carbuncle and stone from Souphir.

18 And all her lanes will say, Alleluia, and will praise, saying, Blessed is God, who exalted all the ages.

Chapter 14

1 And Tobit ceased giving thanks.

2 And he was fifty-eight years old when he lost his sight, and after eight years he saw again; and he performed acts of mercy and continued to fear the Lord God and give thanks to him.

3 And he grew very old; and he called his son and his sons and said to him, Child, take your sons; behold, I have grown old and am close to departing from life.

4 Go away to Media, child, because I am persuaded of all that Jonas the prophet spoke concerning Nineue, that it will be overthrown, but in Media there will rather be peace until a time, and that our brothers in the land will be scattered from the good land, and Jerusalem will be desolate, and the house of God in it will be burned down and will be desolate for a time.

5 And again God will have mercy on them and return them to the land, and they will build the house, not such as the former one, until the times of the age are fulfilled. And after these things they will return from the captivities and build Jerusalem honorably, and the house of God in it will be built for all the generations of the age with a glorious building, just as the prophets spoke concerning it.

6 And all the nations will truly turn to fear the Lord God and will bury their idols, and all the nations will bless the Lord.

7 And his people will give thanks to God, and the Lord will exalt his people, and all who love the Lord God in truth and righteousness will rejoice, showing mercy to our brothers.

8 And now, child, go away from Nineue, because what the prophet Jonas spoke will certainly happen.

9 But you, keep the law and the ordinances and become merciful and righteous, so that it may be well with you, and bury me well and your mother with me; and no longer lodge in Nineue.

10 Child, see what Aman did to Achiacharos who reared him, how he brought him from the light into the darkness, and all that he repaid him; and Achiacharos was saved, but to that man the repayment was paid, and he himself went down into the darkness. Manasses showed mercy and was saved from a snare of death which he set for him, but Aman fell into the snare and perished.

11 And now, children, see what mercy does, and what righteousness delivers. And while he was saying these things, his soul failed upon the bed; and he was one hundred fifty-eight years old; and he buried him gloriously.

12 And when Anna died, he buried her with his father. And Tobias went away with his wife and his sons to Ekbatana to Ragouel his father-in-law.

13 And he grew old honorably and buried his parents-in-law gloriously and inherited their property and that of Tobit his father.

14 And he died at one hundred twenty-seven years of age in Ekbatana of Media.

15 And before he died he heard of the destruction of Nineue, which Nabouchodonosor and Asyeros took captive; he rejoiced over Nineue before dying.

2 Tobit

Chapter 1

1 Book of the words of Tobith, of Tobiel, of Ananiel, of Adouel, of Gabael, of Raphael, of Ragouel, from the seed of Asiel, from the tribe of Nephthalim,

2 who was taken captive in the days of Enemessaros the king of the Assyrians, from Thisbe, which is on the right of Kydios of Nephthalim in upper Galilee, above Asser, behind the [road] of the settings of the sun, on the left of Phogor.

3 I, Tobith, walked in ways of truth and in righteous deeds all the days of my life, and I did many acts of mercy for my brothers and for my nation, those who went with me in captivity into the country of the Assyrians, into Nineue.

4 And when I was in my country, in the land of Israel, and when I was young, the whole tribe of Nephthalim my father departed from the house of Dauid my father and from Jerusalem, the city [chosen] out of all the tribes of Israel for all the tribes of Israel to sacrifice; and the temple of the dwelling of God was sanctified and built in it for all the generations of the age.

5 All my brothers and the house of Nephthalim my father, they sacrificed to the calf which Ierobeam the king of Israel made in Dan, on all the mountains of Galilee.

6 And I, most alone, often went to Jerusalem at the feasts, as it is written for all Israel in an everlasting ordinance; having the firstfruits and the first produce and the tithes of the livestock and the first shearings of the sheep, I hurried to Jerusalem

7 and gave them to the priests, the sons of Aaron, at the altar, and the tithe of the grain and the wine and oil and pomegranates and figs and the remaining tree fruits to the sons of Leui who ministered in Jerusalem. And I paid the second tithe in silver for the six years, and went and spent it in Jerusalem each year.

8 And I gave these to the orphans and the widows and proselytes who were attached to the sons of Israel; I brought them and gave them to them in the third year, and we ate them according to the ordinance prescribed concerning them in the law of Moses and according to the commands which Debbora, the mother of Ananiel our father, commanded, because my father left me an orphan and died.

9 And when I became a man, I took a wife from the seed of our family, and begot a son from her and called his name Tobias.

10 After I was taken captive among the Assyrians, and when I was taken captive, I went to Nineue; and all my brothers and those of my race ate of the breads of the nations,

11 but I kept my soul from eating of the breads of the nations.

12 And when I remembered my God with my whole soul,

13 and the Most High gave me favor and form before Enemessaros, and I bought for him everything for his use;

14 and I went to Media and bought for him from there until he died. And I deposited bags with Gabael, the brother, Gabri, in the country of Media, ten talents of silver.

15 And when Enemassar died and Sennacherim his son reigned in his place, and the roads of Media withdrew, and I could no longer go to Media.

16 In the days of Enemessaros I did many acts of mercy for my brothers of my race;

17 I gave my breads to the hungry and clothing to the naked, and if I saw anyone of my nation dead and cast behind the wall of Nineue, I buried him.

18 And if Sennacherim killed anyone when he went away fleeing from Judaea in the days of the judgment which the king of heaven executed upon him concerning the blasphemies which he blasphemed, I buried him; for he killed many of the sons of Israel in his wrath, and I stole their bodies and buried them; and Sennacherim sought them and did not find them.

19 And a certain one of those from Nineue went and informed the king about me, that I bury them, and I hid; and when I learned that the king knew about me and that I was being sought to die, I was afraid and ran away.

20 And everything that belonged to me was seized, and nothing was left to me that was not taken into the royal treasury, except Anna my wife and Tobias my son.

21 And forty days did not pass before his two sons killed him; and they fled to the mountains of Ararat, and Sacherdonos his son reigned after him. And he appointed Achicharos, Anael, the son of my brother, over all the accounting of his kingdom, and he had authority over all the administration.

22 Then Achicharos made a request concerning me, and I came down to Nineue. For Achicharos was the chief cupbearer and keeper of the ring and administrator and accountant under Sennacherim king of the Assyrians, and Sacherdonos appointed him a second time; and he was my cousin and of my kin.

Chapter 2

1 And under King Sacherdonos I came down to my house, and Anna my wife and Tobias my son were restored to me. And at Pentecost, our feast, which is holy, of [seven] weeks, a good meal was prepared for me, and I reclined to eat.

2 And the table was set before me, and more dishes were set before me, and I said to Tobias my son, Child, go, and whomever you find poor among our brothers from the captives in Nineue, who remembers with his whole heart, bring him, and he will eat together with me; and see, I will wait for you, child, until you come.

3 And Tobias went to seek someone poor among our brothers. And returning he says, Father. And I said to him, Here I am, child. And answering he said, Father, behold, one of our nation has been murdered and cast in the marketplace, and there now he has been strangled.

4 And leaping up I left the meal before tasting it, and I take him up from the street and placed him in one of the little houses until the sun sets, and I will bury him.

5 Returning, therefore, I washed myself and ate the bread with mourning;

6 and I remembered the word of the prophet, all that Amos spoke against Baithel, saying, Your feasts will be turned into mourning and all your songs into lamentation, and I wept.

7 And when the sun set, I went away and dug and buried him.

8 And my neighbors laughed at me, saying, He is no longer afraid; for he was already sought to be murdered because of this matter and ran away, and again, behold, he buries the dead.

9 And that very night I washed myself and entered my courtyard and slept beside the wall of the courtyard, and my face was uncovered because of the heat;

10 and I did not know that sparrows were in the wall above me, and their droppings settled warm into my eyes and brought on white films. And I went to the physicians to be healed, and the more they smeared me with the medicines, the more my eyes were blinded by the white films until I became completely blind; and I was disabled in my eyes for four years. And all my brothers grieved about me, and Achiacharos supported me for two years before he went to Elymais.

11 And at that time Anna my wife worked for wages at women's work;

12 and she sent it to its owners, and they paid her the wage. And on the seventh of Dystros she cut the cloth from the loom and sent it to the owners, and they gave her the whole wage and gave her a kid from the goats for the hearth.

13 And when she came in to me, the kid began to cry; and I called her and said, Where is this little kid from? Is it perhaps stolen? Return it to its owners; for we have no authority to eat anything stolen.

14 And she says to me, It has been given to me as a gift in addition to the wage. And I did not believe her and told her to return it to the owners, and I reddened toward her because of this; then answering she says to me, And where are your acts of mercy? Where are your righteous deeds? See, these things are known with you. –

Chapter 3

1 And becoming deeply grieved in soul and groaning, I wept and began to pray with groans,

2 You are righteous, Lord, and all your works are righteous, and all your ways are mercy and truth; you judge the age.

3 And now you, Lord, remember me and look upon me, and do not exact vengeance on me for my sins and in my ignorant offenses and those of my fathers, with which I sinned before you

4 and disobeyed your commands. And you gave us over to plunder and captivity and death and to a proverb and a topic of talk and reproach among all the nations among whom you scattered us.

5 And now your many judgments are true, to execute upon me concerning my sins, because we did not do your commands and did not walk truly before you.

6 And now do with me according to what is pleasing to you, and command my spirit to be taken from me, so that I may be released from the face of the earth and become earth; therefore it profits me to die rather than live, because I have heard false reproaches, and much grief is with me. Lord, command that I be released from this distress; release me to the everlasting place, and do not turn your face, Lord, away from me; therefore it profits me to die rather than see much distress in my life and not hear reproaches.

7 On this day it happened that Sarra, the daughter of Ragouel who was in Ecbatana of Media, also heard reproaches from one of her father's maidservants,

8 because she had been given to seven men, and Asmodaios the evil demon killed them before they were with her, just as is appointed for women. And the maidservant said to her, You are the one who kills your husbands; behold, you have already been given to seven men and were not named for one of them.

9 Why do you whip us concerning your husbands, because they died? Go with them, and may we never see a son of yours or a daughter forever.

10 On that day she was grieved in soul and wept, and going up into her father's upper room she wanted to hang herself. And again she considered and says, Perhaps they will reproach my father and say to him, You had one beloved daughter, and she hanged herself because of the evils; and I will bring my father's old age down with grief into Hades; it is more useful for me not to hang myself, but to beseech the Lord that I die and no longer hear reproaches in my life.

11 At that very time, spreading her hands toward the window, she beseeched and said, Blessed are you, merciful God, and blessed is your name unto the ages, and let all your works bless you forever.

12 And now I have lifted my face and my eyes toward you;

13 command that I be released from the earth and that I no longer hear reproaches.

14 You know, Master, that I am clean from every uncleanness of a man

15 and I have not defiled my name, nor my father's name, in the land of my captivity. I am my father's only child, and he has no other child to inherit him, nor has he a brother nearby or a relative, that I might keep myself as a wife for him. Already seven have perished for me, and why is it still for me to live? And if it does not seem good to you to kill me, Lord, now listen to my reproach.

16 At that very time the prayer of both was heard before the glory of God,

17 and Raphael was sent to heal the two, to release the white films from Tobin's eyes so that he might see the light of God with his eyes, and to give Sarra, Ragouel's daughter, to Tobias the son of Tobith as a wife, and to release Asmodaios the evil demon from her, because it falls to Tobias to inherit her before all those who want to take her. At that time Tobith returned from the courtyard into his house, and Sarra, Ragouel's daughter, also came down from the upper room.

Chapter 4

1 On that day Tobith remembered the silver which he had deposited with Gabael in Rhagoi of Media,

2 and said in his heart, Behold, I have asked for death; why do I not call Tobias my son and inform him about this silver before I die?

3 And he called Tobias his son, and he came to him; and he said to him, Bury me well; and honor your mother and do not abandon her all the days of her life, and do what is pleasing before her, and do not grieve her spirit in any matter.

4 Remember her, child, because she saw many dangers for you in her womb; and when she dies, bury her beside me in one grave.

5 And all your days, child, remember the Lord, and do not wish to sin and transgress his commands; do righteous deeds all the days of your life, and do not walk in the ways of unrighteousness;

6 because those who do truth will prosper in their works.

7 And to all those who do righteousness

19 the Lord will give good counsel; and whomever the Lord wishes, he humbles down to lowest Hades. And now, child, remember these commands, and let them not be blotted out of your heart.

20 And now, child, I inform you that I deposited ten talents of silver with Gabael, the son of Gabri, in Rhagoi of Media.

21 And do not fear, child, because we have become poor; you have many good things if you fear God and flee from every sin and do good things before the Lord your God.

Chapter 5

1 Then answering Tobias said to Tobith his father, Everything that you have commanded me I will do, father;

2 but how will I be able to receive it from him, when he does not know me and I do not know him? What sign should I give him, that he may recognize me and trust me and give me the silver? And I do not know the roads into Media, to go there.

3 Then answering Tobith said to Tobias his son, He gave me his handwritten document, and I gave him a handwritten document; and I divided it into two, and we each took one, and I placed it with the silver; and now, behold, twenty years have passed since I deposited this silver. And now, child, seek for yourself a trustworthy man who will go with you, and we will give him a wage until you come; and receive this silver from him.

4 And Tobias went out to seek a man who would go with him to Media, who was experienced in the road, and he went out and found Raphael the angel standing opposite him, and did not know that he was an angel of God;

5 and he said to him, Where are you from, young man? And he said to him, From the sons of Israel, your brothers, and I have come here to work. And he said to him, Do you know the road to go to Media?

6 And he said to him, Yes, I have often been there and am experienced and know all the roads; many times I went to Media and lodged with Gabael our brother who lives in Rhagoi of Media, and the journey from Ecbatana to Rhaga is two appointed days; for they lie in the mountain.

7 And he said to him, Wait for me, young man, until I go in and inform my father; for I need you to walk with me, and I will give you your wage.

8 And he said to him, Behold, I am waiting; only do not delay.

9 And Tobias went in and informed Tobith his father and said to him, Behold, I have found a man of our brothers, the sons of Israel. And he said to him, Call the man for me, so that I may learn what his race is and from what tribe he is, and whether he is trustworthy to go with you, child.

10 And Tobias went out and called him and said to him, Young man, my father calls you. And he came in to him, and Tobith greeted him first. And he said to him, May much rejoicing come to you. And answering Tobith said to him, What rejoicing do I still have? And I am a man disabled in my eyes and do not see the light of heaven, but lie in darkness like the dead who no longer behold the light; living, I am among the dead; I hear the voice of people and do not see them. And he said to him, Take courage; healing you is near with God; take courage. And Tobith said to him, Tobias my son wants to go to Media; will you be able to go with him and bring him? And I will give you your wage, brother. And he said to him, I will be able to go with him, and I know all the roads, and I often went away to Media and passed through all its plains, and I know its mountains and all its roads.

11 And he said to him, Brother, of what family are you and from what tribe? Inform me, brother.

12 And he said, What need have you of a tribe? And he said to him, I wish to know truly whose you are, brother, and what your name is.

13 And he said to him, I am Azarias, of Ananias the great, of your brothers.

14 And he said to him, May you come in health and safety, brother; and do not be embittered against me, brother, because I wished to know the truth and your family. And you happen to be a brother, and you are from a fine and good lineage; I knew Ananias and Nathan, the two sons of Seme[l]ias the great, and they went with me to Jerusalem and worshiped with me there and did not go astray. Your brothers are good men; you are from a good root, and may you come rejoicing.

15 And he said to him, I give you a wage of a drachma a day and your necessities, just as for my son;

16 and go with my son, and I will add still more to your wage.

17 And he said to him, I will go with him; and do not fear; we will depart in health and return to you in health, because the road is secure. And he said to him, May a blessing come to you, brother. And he called his son and said to him, Child, prepare the things for the road and go out with your brother, and may the God in heaven preserve you there and restore you to me in health, and may his angel accompany you with safety, child. And he went out to travel his road and kissed his father and mother, and Tobith said to him, Go in health. –

18 And his mother wept and said to Tobith, Why is it that you sent my child away? Is he not the staff of our hand, and does he not come in and go out before us?

19 May silver not overtake silver, but may it become the offscouring of our child.

20 As living has been given to us by the Lord, this is sufficient for us.

21 And he said to her, Do not be concerned; our child will go in health and come to us in health, and your eyes will see on the day when he comes to you in health;

22 do not be concerned, do not fear about them, sister; for a good angel will go with him, and his road will prosper, and he will return in health.

23 And she ceased weeping.

Chapter 6

1 And the child went out, and the angel with him, and the dog went out with him and traveled with them; and both traveled, and one night came upon them, and they lodged by the Tigris river.

2 And the child went down into the Tigris river to wash his feet, and a great fish leaped up from the water and wanted to swallow the boy's foot, and he cried out.

3 And the angel said to the boy, Take hold and gain control of the fish. And the boy took hold of the fish and brought it up onto the earth.

4 And the angel said to him, Split open the fish and take out its gall and heart and liver, and put them aside with you, and throw out the entrails; for its gall and heart and liver are useful as medicine.

5 And the boy split open the fish and gathered the gall and heart and liver, and roasted some of the fish and ate and left some of it salted. –

6 And both traveled together until they drew near to Media.

7 And then the boy asked the angel and said to him, Azarias, brother, what medicine is in the fish's heart and liver and in the gall?

8 And he said to him, The fish's heart and liver, burn them to make smoke before a man or woman who has an encounter with a demon or evil spirit, and every encounter will flee from him, and they will certainly not remain with him forever;

9 and the gall, to anoint a person's eyes upon which white films have come up, to blow upon them, upon the white films, and they become healthy.

10 And when he entered Media and was already drawing near to Ecbatana,

11 Raphael says to the boy, Tobias, brother. And he said to him, Here I am. And he said to him, We must lodge at Ragouel's this night, and the man is your relative, and he has a daughter whose name is Sarra;

12 and he has neither a male son nor a daughter except Sarra alone, and you are nearest to her before all people to inherit her, and you have the right to inherit the possessions of her father; and the girl is prudent and courageous and very beautiful, and her father is good.

13 And he said, You have the right to take her; and listen to me, brother, and I will speak to her father about the girl this night, so that we may take her for you as a bride; and when we return from Rhagoi, we will make her wedding. And I know that Ragouel will certainly not be able to withhold her from you or betroth her to another, that he will incur death according to the judgment of the book of Moses, because he knows that the inheritance falls to you to take his daughter before every man. And now listen to me, brother, and we will speak about the girl this night and betroth her to you; and when we return from Rhagoi, we will take her and lead her away with us to your house.

14 Then answering Tobias said to Raphael, Azarias, brother, I heard that she has already been given to seven men, and they died in their bridal chambers at night, whenever they went in to her, and they died. And I heard them saying that a demon kills them.

15 And now I fear — because it does not wrong her, but whoever wants to approach her, it kills him; I am my father's only child — lest I die and bring down my father's and my mother's life with anguish over me into their grave; and they have no other son to bury them.

16 And he says to him, Do you not remember your father's commands, that he commanded you to take a wife from your father's house? And now listen to me, brother, and do not be concerned about this demon, and take her; and I know that this night she will be given to you as a wife.

17 And when you enter the bridal chamber, take some of the fish's liver and the heart, and place them upon the ashes of the incense, and the odor will go forth, and the demon will smell it and flee and will certainly no longer appear about her for the whole age.

18 And when you are about to be with her, first both rise and pray and beseech the Lord of heaven, that mercy and salvation may come upon you; and do not fear, for she has been allotted to you before the age, and you will save her, and she will go with you, and I suppose that you will have children from her, and they will be as brothers to you; do not be concerned.

19 And when Tobias heard Raphael's words and that she was a sister to him from the seed of his father's house, he loved her greatly, and his heart was joined to her.

Chapter 7

1 And when he entered Ecbatana, he says to him, Azarias, brother, lead me straight to Ragouel our brother. And he led him to Ragouel's house, and they found him sitting beside the door of the courtyard and greeted him first, and he said to them, Much greeting, brothers, and you have come well, in health. And he brought them into his house.

2 And he said to Edna his wife, How like Tobei my brother this young man is.

3 And Edna asked them and said to them, Where are you from, brothers? And they said to her, We are from the sons of Nephthalim who were taken captive in Nineue.

4 And she said to them, Do you know Tobin our brother? And they said to her, We know him.

5 And she said to them, Is he in health? And they said to her, He is in health and lives; and Tobias said, He is my father.

6 And Ragouel leaped up and kissed him and wept and spoke and said to him, May a blessing come to you, child of a fine and good father; O miserable evils, that a righteous man who does acts of mercy was blinded. And falling upon the neck of Tobias his brother, he wept.

7 And Edna his wife wept for him, and Sarra their daughter also wept.

8 And he slaughtered a ram from the sheep and welcomed them eagerly.

9 And when they had bathed and washed and reclined to dine, Tobias said to Raphael, Azarias, brother, tell Ragouel to give me Sarra my sister.

10 And Ragouel heard the word and said to the child, Eat and drink and be merry this night; for there is no man to whom it falls to take Sarra my daughter except you, brother, and likewise I have no authority to give her to another man except you, because you are nearest to me; and indeed I will inform you of the truth, child.

11 I gave her to seven men of our brothers, and all died at night whenever they went in to her. And now, child, eat and drink, and the Lord will act among you.

12 And Tobias said, I will certainly not eat from here or drink until you settle the things concerning me. And Ragouel said to him, I do so, and she is given to you according to the judgment of the book of Moses, and from heaven it has been judged that she be given to you; take your sister. From now you are her brother and she is your sister; she has been given to you from today and forever; and the Lord of heaven will prosper you, child, this night, and may he bring mercy and peace upon you.

13 And Ragouel called Sarra his daughter, and she came to him, and taking her hand he handed her over to him and said, Take her according to the law and according to the judgment written in the book of Moses, to give you the wife; have her and lead her away to your father in health; and may the God of heaven prosper peace for you.

14 And he called her mother; and he said to bring a document and wrote a written agreement of a document of living together, and how he gives her to him as a wife according to the judgment of the law of Moses. After that they began to eat and drink.

15 And Ragouel called Edna his wife and said to her, Sister, prepare the other chamber and bring her in there.

16 And she went and spread bedding in the chamber, as he said to her, and brought her there and wept over her and wiped away the tears and said to her,

17 Take courage, daughter; may the Lord of heaven give you joy in place of your grief; take courage, daughter. And she went out.

Chapter 8

1 And when they finished eating and drinking, they wished to sleep. And they led the young man away and brought him into the chamber.

2 And Tobias remembered Raphael's words and took the fish's liver and heart out of the bag which he had, and placed them upon the ashes of the incense.

3 And the odor of the fish hindered, and the demon ran away up into the parts of Egypt, and Raphael went and fettered him there and bound him immediately.

4 And they went out and shut the door of the chamber. And Tobias rose from the bed and said to her, Sister, rise; let us pray and beseech our Lord to bring mercy and salvation upon us.

5 And she rose, and they began to pray and beseech that salvation might come to them, and he began to say, Blessed are you, the God of our fathers, and blessed is your name unto all the ages of the generation; let the heavens and all your creation bless you unto all the ages.

6 You made Adam and made for him a helper, a support, Eua his wife, and from both came the seed of mankind; and you said, It is not good for the man to be alone; let us make him a helper like him.

7 And now I take this sister of mine, not because of fornication, but in truth; command that mercy be shown to me and her, and that we grow old together.

8 And they said with one another, Amen, amen.

9 And they slept that night.

10 And Ragouel rose and called the household servants with him, and they went away and dug a grave; for he said, Perhaps he will die and we will become a laughingstock and a reproach.

11 And when they finished digging the grave, Ragouel came into the house and called his wife

12 and said, Send one of the maidservants, and let her enter and see whether he lives; and if he has died, that we may bury him, that no one may know.

13 And they sent the maidservant and lit the lamp and opened the door, and she entered and found them sleeping and slumbering together.

14 And the maidservant went out and informed them that he lives and there is no evil.

15 And they blessed the God of heaven and said, Blessed are you, God, with every pure blessing; let them bless you unto all the ages.

16 And blessed are you because you have gladdened me, and it did not happen as I suspected, but according to your great mercy you acted with us.

17 And blessed are you because you showed mercy to two only children; bring them mercy and salvation, Master, and bring their life to completion with gladness and mercy.

18 Then he told his household servants to fill in the grave before dawn came.

19 And he told his wife to make many breads; and going to the herd he brought two oxen and four rams and said to finish them, and they began to prepare.

20 And he called Tobias and said to him, For fourteen days you will certainly not move from here, but will remain here eating and drinking with me, and you will gladden the soul of my daughter who has been in anguish;

21 and of all that belongs to me, take half from here and go in health to your father; and the other half, when both I and my wife die, is yours. Take courage, child; I am your father and Edna your mother, and we are with you and your sister from now forever; take courage, child.

Chapter 9

1 Then Tobias called Raphael and said to him,

2 Azarias, brother, take with you four household servants and two camels, and go to Rhaga and come to Gabael and give him the handwritten document and receive the silver and take him with you to the wedding;

34 for you know that my father will be counting the days, and if I delay one day, I will grieve him greatly; and you see what Ragouel swore, and I cannot transgress his oath.

5 And Raphael and the four household servants and the two camels went to Rhaga of Media and lodged with Gabael; and he gave him his handwritten document and informed him about Tobios the son of Tobith, that he had taken a wife and that he calls him to the wedding. And rising he counted out to him the bags with the seals, and they put them together.

6 And they rose early together and came to the wedding. And they came into Ragouel's and found Tobias reclining, and he leaped up and greeted him and wept and blessed him and said to him, Fine and good one, of a fine and good man, righteous and merciful, may the Lord give you a blessing of heaven, and to your wife and your father and the mother of your wife; blessed is God, because I have seen Tobin my cousin, like him.

Chapter 10

1 And each day, day after day, Tobith calculated the days, in how many he would travel and in how many he would return; and when the days were completed and his son was not present,

2 he said, Perhaps he has been detained there? Or perhaps Gabael has died and no one gives him the silver?

3 And he began to grieve.

4 And Anna his wife says, My child has perished and is no longer among the living; and she began to weep and lament about her son, and said,

5 Woe to me, child, because I let you go, the light of my eyes.

6 And Tobith said to her, Be silent, do not be concerned, sister; he is in health; and indeed a distraction has come upon them there, and the man who went with him is trustworthy and one of our brothers; do not grieve about him, sister; he will soon be here.

7 And she said to him, Be silent toward me and do not mislead me; my child has perished. And springing out she watched the road by which her son had gone each day and was persuaded by no one, and when the sun set, she went in and lamented and wept the whole night and had no sleep.

8 And when the fourteen days of the wedding were completed, which Ragouel swore to make for his daughter, Tobias came in to him and said, Send me away, for I know that my father and mother do not believe that they will see me again; and now I ask you, father, to send me away and let me go to my father; I have already told you how I left him.

9 And Ragouel said to Tobias, Remain, child, remain with me, and I will send messengers to Tobin your father, and they will inform him about you. And he said to him, By no means; I ask you to send me away from here to my father.

10 And rising Ragouel handed over to Tobias Sarra his wife and half of everything that belonged to him, male servants and maidservants, oxen and sheep, donkeys and camels, clothing and silver and vessels;

11 and he sent them away in health and greeted him and said to him, Be in health, child, go in health; may the Lord of heaven prosper you and Sarra your wife, and may I see children of yours before I die.

12 And he said to Sarra his daughter, Go to your father-in-law, because from now they are your parents as those who begot you; walk into peace, daughter; may I hear a good report of you while I live. And bidding farewell he released them.

13 And Edna says to Tobias, Child and beloved brother, may the Lord restore you, and may I see children of yours while I live, and of Sarra my daughter, before I die; before the Lord I entrust my daughter to you as a deposit; do not grieve her all the days of your life; child, into peace; from now I am your mother and Sarra your sister; may we all prosper together all the days of our life. And she kissed both and sent them away in health.

14 And Tobias departed from Ragouel in health and rejoicing and blessing the Lord of heaven and earth, the king of all things, because he had prospered his road. And he said to him, It has prospered for you to honor them all the days of their life.

Chapter 11

1 And as they drew near to Kaserin, which is opposite Nineue, Raphael said,

2 You know how we left your father;

3 let us run ahead of your wife and prepare the house while they are coming.

4 And both traveled together, and he said to him, Take the gall at hand. And the dog went with them, from behind him and Tobias.

5 And Anna sat watching her son's road;

6 and she perceived him coming and said to his father, Behold, your son is coming, and the man who went with him.

7 And Raphael said to Tobias before he approached his father, I know that his eyes will be opened;

8 smear the fish's gall into his eyes, and the medicine will make them contract and peel the white films from his eyes, and your father will see again and see the light.

9 And [Anna] ran up and fell upon her son's neck and said to him, I have seen you, child; from now I will die. And she wept.

10 And Tobis rose and stumbled with his feet and went out through the door of the courtyard,

11 and Tobias walked toward him, and the fish's gall was in his hand, and he blew into his eyes and took hold of him and said, Take courage, father; and he applied the medicine upon him and administered it.

12 And he peeled it away with both his hands from the corners of his eyes.

13 And he fell upon his neck and wept and said to him, I have seen you, child, the light of my eyes.

14 And he said, Blessed is God, and blessed is his great name, and blessed are all his holy angels; may his great name be upon us, and blessed are all the angels unto all the ages; because he whipped me, and behold, I see Tobias my son.

15 And Tobias entered rejoicing and blessing God with his whole mouth, and Tobias showed his father that his road had prospered and that he had brought silver, and how he took Sarra the daughter of Ragouel as a wife, and that, behold, she is arriving and is close to the gate of Nineue.

16 And [Tobith] went out to meet his daughter-in-law, rejoicing and blessing God, toward the gate of Nineue; and those in Nineue saw him walking and crossing with all his strength and being led by the hand by no one, and marveled, and Tobith gave thanks before them that God had shown him mercy and had opened his eyes.

17 And Tobith approached Sarra, the wife of Tobias his son, and blessed her and said to her, May you enter in health, daughter, and blessed is your God who brought you to us, daughter; and blessed is your father, and blessed is Tobias my son, and blessed are you, daughter; enter your house in health, in blessing and joy; enter, daughter.

18 On this day there was joy for all the Judeans who were in Nineue.

19 And Achikar and Nabad his cousins came rejoicing to Tobin.

Chapter 12

1 And when the wedding was completed, Tobith called Tobias his son and said to him, Child, see to giving the wage to the man who went with you [and] adding to his wage.

2 And he said to him, Father, how much wage will I give him? I am not harmed by giving him half the possessions which he has brought with me.

3 He has brought me in health and healed my wife and brought the silver with me and healed you; how much more wage should I give him?

4 And Tobis said to him, He has the right, child, to take half of everything that he came having.

5 And he called him and said, Take half of everything that you came having as your wage, and go in health.

6 Then he called the two privately and said to them, Bless God and give thanks to him before all the living for the good things which he did with you, to bless and hymn his name; make the words of God known honorably to all people, and do not hesitate to give thanks to him.

7 It is good to hide a king's secret, but to uncover the works of God and acknowledge them honorably. Do good, and evil will not find you.

8 Prayer with truth and mercy with righteousness are good, rather than wealth with unrighteousness; it is good to do an act of mercy rather than store up gold.

9 Mercy delivers from death, and it cleanses every sin; those who do acts of mercy will be filled with life;

10 those who do sin and unrighteousness are enemies of their own soul.

11 I will make all the truth known to you and will certainly not hide any word from you; I have already informed you and said, It is good to hide a king's secret and to uncover the works of God gloriously.

12 And now, when you prayed, and Sarra, I brought the memorial of your prayer before the glory of the Lord; and when you buried the dead, likewise;

13 and when you did not hesitate to rise and leave your meal and went away and wrapped the dead man, then I have been sent to you to test you.

14 And at the same time God has sent me to heal [you] and Sarra your daughter-in-law.

15 I am Raphael, one of the seven angels who stand by and enter before the glory of the Lord.

16 And the two were troubled and fell upon their faces and were afraid.

17 And he said to them, Do not fear; peace to you; bless God for the whole age.

18 When I was with you, I was with you, not by my own favor, but by the will of God; bless him every day; hymn him.

19 And you beheld me, that I ate nothing, but a vision was being beheld by you.

20 And now bless the Lord upon the earth and give thanks to God. Behold, I ascend to the one who sent me. Write all these things that happened to you. And he ascended.

21 And they rose; and they could no longer see him.

22 And they blessed and hymned God and gave thanks to him for these great works of his, how an angel of God appeared to them.

Chapter 13

1 And he said,

2 Blessed is God who lives forever, and his kingdom, because he whips and shows mercy, brings down to Hades, lowest beneath the earth, and he brings up from the great destruction, and there is nothing that will escape his hand.

3 Give thanks to him, sons of Israel, before the nations, because he scattered you among them;

4 and there he showed you his greatness, and exalt him before every living being, because he is our Lord, and he is our God and he is our Father and he is God unto all the ages.

5 He will whip you for your unrighteous deeds and show mercy to all of you from all the nations, wherever you are scattered among them.

6 When you return to him with your whole heart and with your whole soul to do truth before him, then he will return to you and will certainly no longer hide his face from you.

7 And now behold what he did with you, and give thanks to him with your whole mouth; and bless the Lord of righteousness and exalt the king of the ages. –

11 And again your tent will be built for you with joy.

12 And may he gladden in you all the captives and love in you all the afflicted unto all the generations of the age.

13 A bright light will shine to all the ends of the earth; many nations from afar [will come to you], and inhabitants of all the remotest parts of the earth, toward your holy name and having their gifts in their hands for the king of heaven; generations of generations will give exultation in you, and the name of the chosen one unto the generations of the age.

14 Accursed are all who will speak a harsh word; accursed will be all who tear you down and pull down your walls, and all who overthrow your towers and burn your dwellings; and blessed forever will be all who fear you.

15 Then go and exult toward the sons of the righteous, because all will be gathered together and bless the Lord of the age. Blessed are those who love you, and blessed are those who will rejoice over your peace;

16 and blessed are all the people who will grieve over you, over all your scourges, because in you they will rejoice and see all your joy forever. My soul, bless the Lord, the great king.

17 Because Jerusalem will be built, his house in the city unto all the ages. I will be blessed if the remnant of my seed comes to see your glory and give thanks to the king of heaven. And the doors of Jerusalem will be built with sapphire and emerald, and all your walls with precious stone; the towers of Jerusalem will be built with gold, and their battlements with pure gold; the streets of Jerusalem will be paved with carbuncle and stone of Souphir.

18 And the doors of Jerusalem will speak songs of exultation, and all her houses will say, Alleluia, blessed is the God of Israel; and blessed ones will bless the holy name forever and beyond.

Chapter 14

1 And the words of Tobith's thanksgiving were completed.

2 And he died in peace, one hundred twelve years old, and was buried gloriously in Nineue. And he was sixty-two years old when he became disabled in his eyes, and after seeing again he lived amid good things and did acts of mercy; and he continued still to bless God and acknowledge the greatness of God.

3 And when he was dying, he called Tobias his son and commanded him, saying, Child, take your children away

4 and run away to Media, because I believe the word of God against Nineue, what Naoum spoke, that everything will happen and come upon Athour and Nineue, and everything the prophets of Israel whom God sent spoke will come to pass, and nothing will be diminished from all the words, and everything will happen in its times, and in Media there will be salvation rather than among the Assyrians and in Babylon; therefore I know and believe that everything God said will be completed and happen, and no word from the sayings will fall away; and all our brothers who dwell in the land of Israel will be scattered and taken captive from the good land, and all the land of Israel will be desolate, and Samaria and Jerusalem will be desolate, and the house of God in grief, and it will be burned for a time.

5 And again God will show them mercy, and God will return them to the land of Israel, and again they will build the house, and not like the first, until the time when the time of the seasons is fulfilled. And after these things all will return from their captivity and build Jerusalem honorably, and the house of God in it will be built, as the prophets of Israel spoke about it.

6 And all the nations in the whole earth, all will return and fear God truly, and all will abandon their idols, the false ones that lead them astray in their wandering, and bless the God of the age in righteousness.

7 All the sons of Israel who are saved in those days, remembering God in truth, will be gathered together and come to Jerusalem and dwell forever in the land of Abraam with security, and it will be handed over to them; and those who love God in truth will rejoice, and those who do sin and unrighteousness will vanish from all the earth.

89 And now, children, I command you: serve God in truth and do what is pleasing before him, and it will be enjoined upon your children to do righteousness and mercy, and that they remember God and bless his name at every time in truth and with their whole strength. And now you, child, go out from Nineue and do not remain here; on whatever day you bury your mother with me, on that very day do not lodge within its borders; for I see that much unrighteousness is in it, and much deceit is carried out in it, and they are not ashamed.

10 See, child, all that Nadab did to Achikar who raised him; was he not brought down living into the earth? And God repaid the dishonor before his face, and Achikar came out into the light, and Nadab entered the darkness of the age, because he sought to kill Achikar; by doing an act of mercy he came out from the snare of death which Nadab set for him, and Nadab fell into the snare of death, and it destroyed him.

11 And now, children, see what mercy does, and what unrighteousness does, that it kills; and behold, my soul is failing. – And they placed him upon the bed, and he died; and he was buried gloriously.

12 And when his mother died, Tobias buried her with his father. And he and his wife departed to Media and dwelt in Ecbatana with Ragouel his father-in-law.

13 And he supported them honorably in old age and buried them in Ecbatana of Media and inherited the household of Ragouel and of Tobith his father.

14 And he died gloriously, one hundred seventeen years old.

15 And before he died he saw and heard the destruction of Nineue, and saw its captivity being led into Media, which Achiacharos the king of Media took captive, and he blessed God in all that he did against the sons of Nineue and Athouria; before dying he rejoiced over Nineue and blessed the Lord God unto the ages of the ages.

1 Maccabees

Chapter 1

1 And it happened after Alexandros, the son of Philippos, the Macedonian, who went out from the land of Chettiim, struck Dareios king of the Persians and Medes and reigned in his place, previously over Greece.

2 And he established many wars and took hold of fortifications and slaughtered kings of the earth;

3 and he passed through to the ends of the earth and took spoils of a multitude of nations. And the earth was quiet before him, and he was exalted, and his heart was lifted up.

4 And he gathered an exceedingly strong army and ruled countries of nations and rulers, and they became tributary to him.

5 And after these things he fell upon his bed and knew that he was dying.

6 And he called his glorious servants, those brought up with him from youth, and divided his kingdom among them while he was still living.

7 And Alexandros reigned twelve years and died.

8 And his servants took power, each in his own place.

9 And they all put on diadems after he died, and their sons after them for many years, and they multiplied evils in the earth.

10 And from them came out a sinful root, Antiochos Epiphanes, son of King Antiochos, who was a hostage in Rome; and he reigned in the one hundred thirty-seventh year of the kingdom of the Greeks.

11 In those days lawless sons went out from Israel and persuaded many, saying, Let us go and make a covenant with the nations around us, because since we separated from them many evils have found us.

12 And the word seemed good in their eyes,

13 and some of the people eagerly went to the king, and he gave them authority to do the ordinances of the nations.

14 And they built a gymnasium in Jerusalem according to the customs of the nations

15 and made foreskins for themselves and departed from the holy covenant and were yoked to the nations and sold themselves to do evil.

16 And the kingdom was established before Antiochos, and he undertook to reign over the land of Egypt, so that he might reign over the two kingdoms.

17 And he entered Egypt with a heavy multitude, with chariots and elephants and horsemen and a great fleet,

18 and established war against Ptolemaios king of Egypt; and Ptolemaios was put to flight before him and fled, and many fell wounded.

19 And they took hold of the fortified cities in the land of Egypt, and he took the spoils of the land of Egypt.

20 And Antiochos returned after striking Egypt in the one hundred forty-third year, and went up against Israel and went up to Jerusalem with a heavy multitude.

21 And he entered the sanctuary in arrogance and took the golden altar and the lampstand of light and all its vessels

22 and the table of the presentation and the libation vessels and the bowls and the golden censers and the curtain and the crowns and the golden ornament on the face of the temple, and stripped everything;

23 and he took the silver and the gold and the desirable vessels, and took the hidden treasures which he found;

24 and taking everything he departed to his land. And he committed murder and spoke great arrogance.

25 And great mourning came upon Israel in every place of theirs.

26 And rulers and elders groaned, virgins and young men grew weak, and the beauty of the women was altered.

27 Every bridegroom took up lamentation, and she who sat in the bridal chamber mourned.

28 And the earth was shaken over its inhabitants, and the whole house of Iakob put on shame.

29 After two years of days the king sent a ruler of tribute collection to the cities of Iouda, and he came to Jerusalem with a heavy multitude.

30 And he spoke peaceful words to them in deceit, and they trusted him. And he fell upon the city suddenly and struck it with a great blow and destroyed many people from Israel.

31 And he took the spoils of the city and burned it with fire and tore down its houses and the walls around it.

32 And they took the women and children captive, and took possession of the livestock.

33 And they built up the city of Dauid with a great and strong wall, with strong towers, and it became a citadel for them.

34 And they placed there a sinful nation, lawless men, and they strengthened themselves in it.

35 And they stored weapons and food, and gathering the spoils of Jerusalem they put them away there and became a great snare.

36 And it became an ambush against the sanctuary and an evil adversary against Israel continually.

37 And they poured out innocent blood around the sanctuary and defiled the sanctuary.

38 And the inhabitants of Jerusalem fled because of them, and it became a dwelling of strangers; and it became strange to its offspring, and its children abandoned it.

39 Its sanctuary was laid waste like a wilderness, its feasts were turned into mourning, its sabbaths into reproach, its honor into contempt.

40 In proportion to its glory its dishonor was multiplied, and its height was turned into mourning.

41 And the king wrote to his whole kingdom that all should be one people

42 and each abandon his customs. And all the nations accepted according to the king's word.

43 And many from Israel approved his worship and sacrificed to the idols and profaned the sabbath.

44 And the king sent documents by the hand of messengers to Jerusalem and the cities of Iouda, to walk after customs foreign to the land

45 and to prevent burnt offerings and sacrifice and libation from the sanctuary, and to profane sabbaths and feasts

46 and defile the sanctuary and holy ones,

47 to build altars and sacred precincts and shrines of idols, and to sacrifice swine and unclean livestock,

48 and to leave their sons uncircumcised, to make their souls abominable with everything unclean and with profanation,

49 so as to forget the law and alter all the ordinances;

50 and whoever does not act according to the king's word will die.

51 According to all these words he wrote to his whole kingdom and made overseers over all the people and commanded the cities of Iouda to sacrifice, city by city.

52 And many from the people gathered to them, everyone who abandoned the law, and they did evils in the land

53 and placed Israel in hiding, in every refuge of theirs.

54 And on the fifteenth day of Chaseleu in the one hundred forty-fifth year he built an abomination of desolation upon the altar. And in the cities of Iouda around it they built altars;

55 and at the doors of the houses and in the streets they burned incense.

56 And the books of the law which they found they tore apart and burned with fire.

57 And wherever a book of the covenant was found with anyone, and if anyone approved the law, the king's decree put him to death.

58 In their strength they acted against Israel, against those found in the cities each and every month.

59 And on the twenty-fifth of the month, sacrificing upon the altar which was upon the altar of sacrifice.

60 And the women who had circumcised their children they put to death according to the ordinance

61 and hung the infants from their necks, and their households and those who had circumcised them.

62 And many in Israel grew strong and fortified themselves within themselves not to eat unclean things

63 and accepted death, so that they might not be defiled by the foods or profane the holy covenant, and they died.

64 And exceedingly great wrath came upon Israel.

Chapter 2

1 In those days Mattathias son of Ioannes, of Symeon, a priest of the sons of Ioarib, arose from Jerusalem and settled in Modein.

2 And he had five sons, Ioannes called Gaddi,

3 Simon called Thassi,

4 Ioudas called Makkabaios,

5 Eleazar called Auaran, Ionathes called Apphous.

6 And he saw the blasphemies happening in Iouda and Jerusalem

7 and said, Alas for me, why was I born for this, to see the crushing of my people and the crushing of the holy city, and to sit there when it was given into the hand of enemies, the sanctuary into the hand of strangers?

8 Its temple became like a man without glory,

9 the vessels of its glory were led away captive, its infants were killed in its streets, its young men by an enemy's sword.

10 What nation has not inherited royal possessions and taken hold of its spoils?

11 All its adornment was removed; instead of free it became a slave.

12 And behold, our holy things and our beauty and our glory were laid waste, and the nations profaned them.

13 Why is there still life for us?

14 And Mattathias and his sons tore their garments and put on sackcloth and mourned exceedingly.

15 And those from the king who compelled apostasy came to the city of Modein, so that they might sacrifice.

16 And many from Israel approached them; and Mattathias and his sons were gathered.

17 And those from the king answered and spoke to Mattathias, saying, You are a ruler and glorious and great in this city, and supported by sons and brothers;

18 now approach first and do the king's ordinance, as all the nations and the men of Iouda and those left in Jerusalem have done, and you and your sons will be among the king's friends, and you and your sons will be glorified with silver and gold and many gifts.

19 And Mattathias answered and said with a great voice, If all the nations in the house of the king's kingdom obey him, each to depart from the worship of his fathers, and have chosen his commands,

20 yet I and my sons and my brothers will walk in the covenant of our fathers;

21 far be it from us to abandon law and ordinances;

22 we will not obey the king's words, to depart from our worship to the right or left.

23 And as he ceased speaking these words, a Judean man approached in the eyes of all to sacrifice upon the altar in Modein according to the king's ordinance.

24 And Mattathias saw and was zealous, and his kidneys trembled, and he brought up wrath according to the judgment, and running he slaughtered him upon the altar;

25 and the king's man who compelled sacrifice he killed at that time, and tore down the altar.

26 And he was zealous for the law, as Phinees did to Zambri son of Salom.

27 And Mattathias cried out in the city with a great voice, saying, Let everyone zealous for the law and upholding the covenant come out after me.

28 And he and his sons fled into the mountains and abandoned all they had in the city.

29 Then many seeking righteousness and judgment went down into the wilderness to settle there,

30 they and their sons and their wives and their livestock, because the evils grew harsh against them.

31 And it was reported to the king's men and the armies which were in Jerusalem, the city of Dauid, that men who had rejected the king's command had gone down into the hiding places in the wilderness.

32 And many ran after them and overtook them and encamped against them and established war against them on the day of the sabbaths

33 and said to them, Until now; come out and act according to the king's word, and you will live.

34 And they said, We will not come out or do the king's word, to profane the day of the sabbaths.

35 And they hastened war against them.

36 And they did not answer them or throw a stone at them or block up the hiding places,

37 saying, Let us all die in our integrity; heaven and earth bear witness concerning us that you destroy us without judgment.

38 And they rose against them in war on the sabbaths, and they and their wives and their children and their livestock died, up to a thousand human souls.

39 And Mattathias and his friends learned of it and mourned exceedingly over them.

40 And a man said to his neighbor, If we all do as our brothers did and do not fight against the nations for our soul and our ordinances, now they will more quickly destroy us from the earth.

41 And they resolved on that day, saying, Every person who comes against us for war on the day of the sabbaths, let us fight against him, and we will certainly not all die as our brothers died in the hiding places.

42 Then an assembly of Asidaians gathered to them, strong in power from Israel, everyone who willingly offered himself for the law;

43 and all who fled from the evils joined them and became a support for them.

44 And they established an army and struck sinners in their anger and lawless men in their wrath; and the rest fled to the nations to be saved.

45 And Mattathias and his friends went around and tore down the altars

46 and circumcised the uncircumcised boys, all whom they found within the borders of Israel, by force,

47 and pursued the sons of arrogance, and the work prospered in their hand;

48 and they rescued the law from the hand of the nations and the kings, and did not give a horn to the sinner.

49 And the days for Mattathias to die drew near, and he said to his sons, Now arrogance and rebuke have been established, and a time of overthrow and wrath of anger.

50 Now, children, be zealous for the law and give your souls for the covenant of our fathers, 51 and remember the works of the fathers which they did in their generations, and receive great glory and an everlasting name.

52 Was not Abraam found faithful in trial, and was it not reckoned to him as righteousness?

53 Ioseph in the time of his distress kept the command and became lord of Egypt.

54 Phinees our father, in being zealous with zeal, received a covenant of everlasting priesthood.

55 Iesous, in fulfilling the word, became a judge in Israel.

56 Chaleb, in bearing witness in the assembly, received an inheritance of land.

57 Dauid, in his mercy, inherited a throne of kingship unto ages.

58 Elias, in being zealous with zeal for the law, was taken up into heaven.

59 Ananias, Azarias, Misael believed and were saved from the flame.

60 Daniel, in his integrity, was delivered from the mouth of lions.

61 And thus consider generation by generation, that all who hope in him will not grow weak.

62 And do not fear the words of a sinful man, because his glory is for dung and worms;

63 today he will be exalted and tomorrow he will certainly not be found, because he returned to his dust, and his reasoning will perish.

64 Children, be courageous and strong in the law, because in it you will be glorified.

65 And behold, Symeon your brother, I know that he is a man of counsel; listen to him all the days; he will be your father.

66 And Ioudas Makkabaios is strong in power from his youth; he will be your commander of the army and will fight the war of peoples.

67 And you will bring to yourselves all the doers of the law, and avenge the vengeance of your people;

68 repay a repayment to the nations, and attend to the ordinance of the law. –

69 And he blessed them; and was added to his fathers.

70 And he died in the one hundred forty-sixth year and was buried in the tombs of his fathers in Modein, and all Israel lamented him with a great lamentation.

Chapter 3

1 And Ioudas his son, called Makkabaios, arose in his place.

2 And all his brothers and all who had joined his father helped him, and fought the war of Israel with gladness.

3 And he enlarged glory for his people and put on a breastplate like a giant and girded on his war equipment and established wars, protecting the army with a sword.

4 And he was like a lion in his works, and like a young lion roaring for prey.

5 And he pursued lawless men, searching them out, and burned those who troubled his people.

6 And lawless men shrank back from fear of him, and all the workers of lawlessness were troubled, and salvation prospered in his hand.

7 And he embittered many kings and gladdened Iakob with his works, and his memorial is for a blessing forever.

8 And he passed through the cities of Iouda and destroyed the ungodly out of it and turned wrath away from Israel

9 and was named to the end of the earth and gathered those who were perishing.

10 And Apollonios gathered nations and a great army from Samaria to fight against Israel.

11 And Ioudas learned of it and went out to meet him and struck him and killed him; and many fell wounded, and the remainder fled.

12 And they took their spoils, and Ioudas took the sword of Apollonios and fought with it all the days.

13 And Seron, the commander of the army of Syria, heard that Ioudas had gathered a gathering and an assembly of faithful men with him, who went out to war,

14 and he said, I will make a name for myself and be glorified in the kingdom, and I will fight Ioudas and those with him who despise the king's word.

15 And he proceeded, and a strong army of ungodly men went up with him to help him execute vengeance upon the sons of Israel.

16 And he drew near as far as the ascent of Baithoron, and Ioudas went out to meet him with few men.

17 And when they saw the army coming to meet them, they said to Ioudas, How will we be able, being few, to fight against so strong a multitude? And we are exhausted, having eaten nothing today.

18 And Ioudas said, It is easy for many to be shut into the hands of few, and there is no difference before heaven in saving by many or by few;

19 because victory in war is not in the multitude of an army, but strength is from heaven.

20 They come against us with a multitude of insolence and lawlessness, to remove us and our wives and our children, to despoil us,

21 but we fight for our souls and our customs.

22 And he will crush them before our face, but do not fear them.

23 And when he ceased speaking, he leaped upon them suddenly, and Seron and his army were crushed before him.

24 And they pursued him on the descent of Baithoron as far as the plain; and about eight hundred men of them fell, and the rest fled to the land of Phylistiim.

25 And the fear of Ioudas and his brothers began, and terror fell upon the nations around them;

26 and his name reached as far as the king, and the nations recounted the battles of Ioudas.

27 And when King Antiochos heard these words, he was angered with wrath and sent and gathered all the armies of his kingdom, an exceedingly strong army.

28 And he opened his treasury and gave pay to the armies for a year and commanded them to be ready for every need.

29 And he saw that the silver had run out from the treasuries, and the tributes of the country were few because of the dissension and blow which he had brought about in the land, to remove the customs which had been from the earliest days,

30 and he feared that he might not have, as once and twice before, for the expenses and the gifts which he formerly gave with a lavish hand, and he had surpassed the kings before him,

31 and he was exceedingly perplexed in his soul and resolved to go to Persia and take the tributes of the countries and gather much silver.

32 And he left Lysias, a glorious man and of royal lineage, over the king's affairs from the Euphrates river as far as the borders of Egypt,

33 and to rear Antiochos his son until he returned;

34 and he handed over to him half the armies and the elephants and commanded him concerning everything he wished, and concerning the inhabitants of Judaea and Jerusalem,

35 to send an army against them to wipe out and remove the strength of Israel and the remnant of Jerusalem, and remove their memorial from the place,

36 and settle sons of foreigners in all their borders and allot their land as an inheritance.

37 And the king took the remaining half of the armies and departed from Antioch, from the city of his kingdom, in the one hundred forty-seventh year, and crossed the Euphrates river and traveled through the upper countries.

38 And Lysias chose Ptolemaios son of Dorymenes and Nikanor and Gorgias, powerful men among the king's friends,

39 and sent with them forty thousand men and seven thousand cavalry to come into the land of Iouda and destroy it according to the king's word.

40 And he departed with all their army, and they came and encamped near Ammaous in the level land.

41 And the merchants of the country heard their name and took exceedingly much silver and gold and fetters and came into the camp to take the sons of Israel as slaves. And an army of Syria and the land of foreigners joined them.

42 And Ioudas and his brothers saw that the evils had multiplied and the armies were encamping within their borders, and they learned the king's words which he commanded to be done to the people for destruction and annihilation,

43 and each said to his neighbor, Let us raise up the fallen state of our people, and fight for our people and the holy things.

44 And the assembly was gathered to be ready for war and to pray and ask for mercy and compassion.

45 And Jerusalem was uninhabited like a wilderness; there was no one coming in and going out from its offspring, and the sanctuary was being trampled, and sons of foreigners were in the citadel, a lodging for the nations; and delight was removed from Iakob, and flute and lyre ceased.

46 And they gathered and came to Massepha opposite Jerusalem, because formerly there was a place of prayer in Massepha for Israel.

47 And they fasted on that day and put on sackcloth and ashes upon their head and tore their garments.

48 And they spread out the book of the law concerning which the nations searched out the likenesses of their idols.

49 And they brought the garments of the priesthood and the first produce and the tithes, and brought forward the Nazirites who had fulfilled their days,

50 and cried with a voice to heaven, saying, What should we do with these, and where should we lead them away,

51 when your holy things have been trampled and profaned and your priests are in mourning and humiliation?

52 And behold, the nations have gathered against us to remove us; you know what they devise against us.

53 How will we be able to stand before their face unless you help us?

54 And they sounded the trumpets and cried with a great voice.

55 And after this Ioudas appointed leaders of the people, commanders of thousands and commanders of hundreds and commanders of fifties and commanders of tens.

56 And he told those building houses and betrothing wives and planting vineyards and the cowardly to return, each to his house, according to the law.

57 And the army departed, and they encamped south of Ammaous.

58 And Ioudas said, Gird yourselves and become mighty sons, and be ready for morning to fight against these nations gathered against us to remove us and our holy things;

59 because it is better for us to die in war than to look upon the evils of our nation and the holy things.

60 And as the will in heaven may be, so he will do.

Chapter 4

1 And Gorgias took five thousand men and a thousand chosen cavalry, and the army departed by night

2 to fall upon the camp of the Judeans and strike them suddenly; and sons of the citadel were his guides.

3 And Ioudas heard and departed, he and the mighty men, to strike the king's army in Ammaous,

4 while the armies were still scattered away from the camp.

5 And Gorgias came into Ioudas's camp by night and found no one; and he sought them in the mountains, because he said, These men are fleeing from us.

6 And at daybreak Ioudas appeared in the plain with three thousand men; except they did not have coverings and swords as they wished.

7 And they saw an army of nations, strong and wearing breastplates, and cavalry surrounding it, and these were trained in war.

8 And Ioudas said to the men with him, Do not fear their multitude or be cowardly at their assault;

9 remember how our fathers were saved in the Red Sea when Pharao pursued them with an army;

10 and now let us cry to heaven, whether he will favor us and remember the covenant of the fathers and crush this army before our face today,

11 and all the nations will know that there is one who redeems and saves Israel.

12 And the foreigners lifted their eyes and saw them coming opposite them

13 and went out of the camp to war; and those with Ioudas sounded the trumpet

14 and joined battle, and the nations were crushed and fled into the plain,

15 and all those in the rear fell by the sword. And they pursued them as far as Gazera and as far as the plains of Idumaea and Azotos and Iamneia, and about three thousand men of them fell.

16 And Ioudas and the army returned from pursuing after them

17 and he said to the people, Do not desire the spoils, because war is opposite us,

18 and Gorgias and the army are in the mountain near us; but stand now before our enemies and fight them, and after these things take the spoils with confidence.

19 While Ioudas was still completing these words, a certain part appeared looking out from the mountain;

20 and it saw that they had been routed and that they were burning the camp; for the smoke that was seen made what had happened evident.

21 And seeing these things they became exceedingly cowardly; and seeing also Ioudas's army in the plain ready for battle,

22 they all fled into the land of foreigners.

23 And Ioudas returned to the plundering of the camp, and they took much gold and silver and blue cloth and sea-purple and great wealth.

24 And returning they hymned and blessed toward heaven, because it is good, because his mercy is forever.

25 And great salvation came to Israel on that day.

26 And all the foreigners who were preserved came and reported to Lysias everything that had happened.

27 And hearing it he was confounded and disheartened, because such things had happened to Israel as he did not wish, and it did not turn out as the king had commanded him.

28 And in the coming year he assembled sixty thousand chosen men and five thousand cavalry to make war upon them.

29 And they came into Idumaea and encamped in Baithsoura, and Ioudas met them with ten thousand men.

30 And he saw the strong army and prayed and said, Blessed are you, the savior of Israel, who crushed the assault of the mighty man by the hand of your servant Dauid, and you handed over the army of foreigners into the hands of Ionathes son of Saoul and the bearer of his equipment;

31 thus shut this army into the hand of your people Israel, and let them be ashamed of their army and their cavalry;

32 give them cowardice and melt the boldness of their strength, and let them be shaken at their crushing;

33 cast them down by the sword of those who love you, and let all who know your name praise you with hymns.

34 And they engaged one another, and about five thousand men fell from Lysias's army, and they fell opposite them.

35 And Lysias, seeing the rout of his own formation and the courage that had arisen in Ioudas's, and how they were ready either to live or to die nobly, departed to Antioch and recruited more mercenaries to come again into Judaea.

36 And Ioudas and his brothers said, Behold, our enemies have been crushed; let us go up to cleanse the holy things and dedicate them.

37 And the whole army gathered, and they went up to Mount Sion.

38 And they saw the sanctuary laid waste and the altar profaned and the doors burned down, and plants grown in the courts as in a forest or as on one of the mountains, and the chambers torn down.

39 And they tore their garments and lamented with a great lamentation and put on ashes

40 and fell face down upon the earth and sounded the signaling trumpets and cried to heaven.

41 Then Ioudas commanded men to fight those in the citadel until he cleansed the holy things.

42 And he chose blameless priests who desired the law,

43 and they cleansed the holy things and took the stones of defilement to an unclean place.

44 And they deliberated concerning the profaned altar of burnt offering, what they should do with it;

45 and good counsel came to them to tear it down, lest it become a reproach to them because the nations had defiled it; and they tore down the altar

46 and put away the stones on the mountain of the house in a suitable place until a prophet came to answer concerning them.

47 And they took whole stones according to the law and built a new altar like the former one.

48 And they built the holy things and the interior of the house and sanctified the courts

49 and made new holy vessels and brought the lampstand and the altar of incense and the table into the temple.

50 And they burned incense upon the altar and kindled the lamps upon the lampstand, and they shone in the temple.

51 And they placed breads upon the table and spread out the curtains. And they completed all the works which they did.

52 And they rose early in the morning on the twenty-fifth of the ninth month [this is the month Chaseleu] of the one hundred forty-eighth year

53 and offered sacrifice according to the law upon the new altar of burnt offerings which they made.

54 At the season and on the day on which the nations had profaned it, on that day it was dedicated with songs and harps and lyres and cymbals.

55 And all the people fell upon their faces and worshiped and blessed toward heaven the one who had prospered them.

56 And they celebrated the dedication of the altar for eight days and offered burnt offerings with gladness and sacrificed a sacrifice of salvation and praise.

57 And they adorned the face of the temple with golden crowns and small shields and dedicated the gates and the chambers and fitted them with doors.

58 And exceedingly great gladness came among the people, and the reproach of the nations was turned away.

59 And Ioudas and his brothers and the whole assembly of Israel established that the days of the dedication of the altar should be observed at their seasons, year by year, for eight days from the twenty-fifth of the month Chaseleu, with gladness and joy.

60 And at that time they built high walls and strong towers around Mount Sion, lest the nations come and trample them as they did formerly.

61 And he stationed an army there to guard it and fortified it to guard Baithsoura, so that the people might have a fortification before Idumaea.

Chapter 5

1 And it happened when the surrounding nations heard that the altar had been built and the sanctuary dedicated as formerly, they were exceedingly angry

2 and resolved to remove the race of Iakob, those among them, and began to put to death among the people and to remove them.

3 And Ioudas fought against the sons of Esau in Idumaea, Akrabattene, because they besieged Israel, and he struck them with a great blow and subdued them and took their spoils.

4 And he remembered the wickedness of the sons of Baian, who were a snare and a stumbling block to the people by ambushing them on the roads;

5 and they were shut up by him in the towers, and he encamped against them and devoted them to destruction and burned its towers with fire together with all who were within.

6 And he crossed over against the sons of Ammon and found a mighty hand and many people, and Timotheos their leader;

7 and he joined many battles against them, and they were crushed before his face, and he struck them.

8 And he seized Iazer and its daughters and returned to Judaea.

9 And the nations in Galaad gathered against Israel, those within their borders, to remove them, and they fled into Dathema the fortress

10 and sent letters to Ioudas and his brothers, saying, The nations around us have gathered against us to remove us

11 and are preparing to come and seize the fortress into which we fled, and Timotheos leads their army;

12 now therefore come and deliver us from their hand, because a multitude of us has fallen,

13 and all our brothers in the places of Toubias have been put to death, and they have taken their wives and children and baggage captive, and destroyed there about a thousand-man company.

14 The letters were still being read, and behold, other messengers arrived from Galilee, having torn their garments, reporting according to these words,

15 saying that those from Ptolemais and Tyre and Sidon and all Galilee of foreigners had gathered against them to consume us utterly.

16 And when Ioudas and the people heard these words, a great assembly gathered to deliberate what they should do for their brothers who were in affliction and were being fought by them.

17 And Ioudas said to Simon his brother, Choose men for yourself and go and deliver your brothers in Galilee, but I and Ionathan my brother will go to Galaaditis.

18 And he left Iosepos son of Zacharias and Azarias, a leader of the people, with the remainder of the army in Judaea to guard it,

19 and commanded them, saying, Stand over this people and do not join battle against the nations until we return.

20 And three thousand men were allotted to Simon to go to Galilee, and eight thousand men to Ioudas for Galaaditis.

21 And Simon went to Galilee and joined many battles against the nations, and the nations were crushed before him,

22 and he pursued them as far as the gate of Ptolemais. And about three thousand men fell from the nations, and he took their spoils.

23 And he took those from Galilee and in Arbatta with their wives and children and everything they had, and brought them into Judaea with great gladness.

24 And Ioudas Makkabaios and Ionathan his brother crossed the Jordan and traveled a journey of three days in the wilderness.

25 And they met the Nabataeans, and they met them peacefully and recounted to them everything that had happened to their brothers in Galaaditis,

26 and that many of them are confined in Bosorra and Bosor, in Alema, Chaspho, Maked and Karnain; all these cities are fortified and great;

27 and they are confined in the remaining cities of Galaaditis; for tomorrow they are appointed to encamp against the fortifications and seize them and remove all these in one day.

28 And Ioudas and his army turned their route into the wilderness toward Bosorra suddenly; and he seized the city and killed every male by the mouth of the sword and took all their spoils and burned it with fire.

29 And he departed from there by night, and they traveled as far as the fortress;

30 and it happened in the morning, they lifted their eyes, and behold, many people without number, carrying ladders and engines to seize the fortress, and they were fighting them.

31 And Ioudas saw that the battle had begun and the cry of the city went up to heaven with trumpets and a great cry,

32 and he said to the men of the army, Fight today for our brothers.

33 And he went out in three divisions behind them, and they sounded the trumpets and cried in prayer.

34 And Timotheos's army recognized that it was Makkabaios, and they fled before him, and he struck them with a great blow, and about eight thousand men of them fell on that day.

35 And he turned aside to Alema and fought it and seized it and killed every male of it and took its spoils and burned it with fire.

36 From there he departed and seized Chaspho, Maked and Bosor and the remaining cities of Galaaditis.

37 And after these matters Timotheos gathered another army and encamped opposite Raphon beyond the torrent.

38 And Ioudas sent to spy out the camp, and they reported to him, saying, All the nations around us have gathered to him, an exceedingly numerous army;

39 and they have hired Arabs to help them and are encamping beyond the torrent, ready to come against you for war. And Ioudas went to meet them.

40 And Timotheos said to the commanders of his army as Ioudas and his army approached the torrent of water, If he crosses toward us first, we will not be able to withstand him, because he will surely prevail against us;

41 but if he becomes cowardly and encamps beyond the river, we will cross over toward him and prevail against him.

42 And when Ioudas approached the torrent of water, he stationed the scribes of the people at the torrent and commanded them, saying, Do not let any person encamp, but let all come to the battle.

43 And he crossed against them first, and all the people behind him, and all the nations were crushed before their face and threw down their weapons and fled into the sacred precinct of Karnain.

44 And they seized the city and burned the sacred precinct with fire together with all those in it; and Karnain was routed, and they could no longer withstand Ioudas before his face.

45 And Ioudas gathered all Israel in Galaaditis, from small to great, and their wives and their children and their baggage, an exceedingly great company, to come into the land of Iouda.

46 And they came as far as Ephron, and this was a great city on the road, exceedingly fortified; it was not possible to turn aside from it to the right or left, but only to travel through its midst;

47 and those from the city shut them out and blocked the gates with stones.

48 And Ioudas sent to them with peaceful words, saying, We will pass through your land to depart into our land, and no one will harm you; only on our feet will we pass through. And they did not wish to open to him.

49 And Ioudas commanded a proclamation in the camp that each should encamp in the place where he was;

50 and the men of the army encamped, and he fought the city all that day and all the night, and the city was handed over into his hand.

51 And he destroyed every male by the mouth of the sword and uprooted it and took its spoils and passed through the city over those who had been killed.

52 And they crossed the Jordan into the great plain opposite Baithsan.

53 And Ioudas was gathering those who fell behind and encouraging the people along the whole road until he came into the land of Iouda.

54 And they went up to Mount Sion in gladness and joy and offered burnt offerings, because none of them had fallen until they returned in peace.

55 And in the days when Ioudas and Ionathan were in the land of Galaad and Simon his brother was in Galilee opposite Ptolemais,

56 Ioseph son of Zacharias and Azarias, commanders of the army, heard of the brave deeds and the war, what things they had done,

57 and said, Let us also make a name for ourselves and go to fight against the nations around us.

58 And he gave orders to those of the army with them, and they went against Iamneia.

59 And Gorgias went out from the city, and his men, to meet them for war.

60 And Iosepos and Azarias were routed and pursued as far as the borders of Judaea, and about two thousand men of the people of Israel fell on that day.

61 And a great rout came among the people, because they did not obey Ioudas and his brothers, thinking to perform brave deeds;

62 but they were not of the seed of those men through whose hand the salvation of Israel was given.

63 And the man Ioudas and his brothers were exceedingly glorified before all Israel and all the nations wherever their name was heard;

64 and they gathered to them, speaking praise.

65 And Ioudas and his brothers went out and fought the sons of Esau in the land toward the south, and he struck Chebron and its daughters and tore down its fortifications and burned its towers all around.

66 And he departed to go into the land of foreigners and traveled through Marisa.

67 On that day priests fell in war, wishing to perform brave deeds by going out into war without deliberation.

68 And Ioudas turned aside to Azotos in the land of foreigners and tore down their altars and burned the carved images of their gods with fire and plundered the spoils of the cities and returned into the land of Iouda.

Chapter 6

1 And King Antiochos traveled through the upper countries and heard that Elymais in Persia was a city glorious in wealth, silver and gold;

2 and the temple in it was exceedingly rich, and there were golden coverings and breastplates and weapons which Alexandros son of Philippos, the Macedonian king who reigned first among the Greeks, left there.

3 And he came and sought to seize the city and plunder it, and could not, because the matter became known to those of the city,

4 and they opposed him in war, and he fled and departed from there with great grief to return to Babylon.

5 And someone came reporting to him in Persia that the armies which went into the land of Iouda had been routed,

6 and Lysias went with a strong army among the foremost and was put to flight before them, and they grew strong with weapons and an army and many spoils which they took from the armies they cut down,

7 and tore down the abomination which he built upon the altar in Jerusalem, and surrounded the sanctuary with high walls as formerly, and Baithsoura his city.

8 And it happened when the king heard these words, he was astonished and exceedingly shaken and fell upon his bed and fell into sickness from grief, because it did not happen for him as he intended.

9 And he was there for several days, because great grief was renewed upon him, and he reckoned that he was dying.

10 And he called all his friends and said to them, Sleep departs from my eyes, and I have collapsed in heart from anxiety,

11 and I said in my heart, To what affliction have I come, and what great surge in which I now am? For I was kind and beloved in my authority.

12 But now I remember the evils which I did in Jerusalem, and I took all the silver and golden vessels in it and sent to remove the inhabitants of Iouda without cause.

13 I know that because of these things these evils have found me; and behold, I perish with great grief in a foreign land.

14 And he called Philippos, one of his friends, and appointed him over his whole kingdom;

15 and he gave him the diadem and his robe and ring, to guide Antiochos his son and rear him to reign.

16 And King Antiochos died there in the one hundred forty-ninth year.

17 And Lysias learned that the king had died, and appointed Antiochos his son, whom he had reared when younger, to reign, and called his name Eupator.

18 And those from the citadel were shutting Israel in around the holy things and seeking evils throughout and a support for the nations.

19 And Ioudas resolved to remove them and called all the people into assembly to besiege them;

20 and they gathered together and besieged it in the one hundred fiftieth year, and he made stations for missiles and engines.

21 And some of them came out from the confinement, and some of the ungodly from Israel joined them,

22 and they went to the king and said, How long will you not execute judgment and avenge our brothers?

23 We willingly serve your father and walk according to what he says and follow his ordinances.

24 And the sons of our people besieged it because of this and became estranged from us; moreover, all of us who were found were put to death, and our inheritances were plundered.

25 And they stretched out a hand not only against us but also against all their borders;

26 and behold, today they have encamped against the citadel in Jerusalem to seize it; and they fortified the sanctuary and Baithsoura;

27 and unless you forestall them quickly, they will do greater things than these, and you will not be able to restrain them.

28 And the king became angry when he heard, and gathered all his friends, commanders of his army and those over the reins;

29 and from other kingdoms and from islands of seas hired armies came to him;

30 and the number of his armies was a hundred thousand infantry and twenty thousand cavalry and thirty-two elephants that knew war.

31 And they came through Idumaea and encamped against Baithsoura and fought for many days and made engines; and they went out and burned them with fire and fought manfully.

32 And Ioudas departed from the citadel and encamped at Baithzacharia opposite the king's army.

33 And the king rose early in the morning and moved the army in its assault along the road to Baithzacharia, and the armies were prepared for war and sounded the trumpets.

34 And they showed the elephants the blood of grapes and mulberries to rouse them for war.

35 And they divided the beasts among the phalanxes and stationed with each elephant a thousand men armored in chain mail, and bronze helmets upon their heads, and five hundred chosen cavalry assigned to each beast;

36 these were beforehand wherever the beast was, and wherever it went they went together; they did not depart from it.

37 And strong covered wooden towers were upon them, upon each beast, fastened upon it by devices, and upon each four men of the army who fought upon them, and its Indian.

38 And he stationed the remaining cavalry on this side and that, on the two sides of the army, brandishing weapons and protecting themselves within the phalanxes.

39 And as the sun gleamed upon the golden and bronze shields, the mountains gleamed from them and shone like torches of fire.

40 And a certain part of the king's army extended over the high mountains, and some over the low places; and they came securely and in order.

41 And all who heard the sound of their multitude and the marching of the multitude and the clash of the weapons were shaken; for the army was exceedingly great and strong.

42 And Ioudas and his army drew near for battle, and six hundred men fell from the king's army.

43 And Eleazaros Auaran saw one of the beasts armored with royal breastplates, and it surpassed all the beasts, and he thought that the king was upon it;

44 and he gave himself to save his people and acquire an everlasting name for himself;

45 and he ran boldly toward it into the midst of the phalanx and put to death on the right and left, and they split away from him on this side and that;

46 and he slipped under the elephant and thrust beneath it and killed it, and it fell upon the earth on top of him, and he died there.

47 And they saw the strength of the kingdom and the assault of the armies and turned away from them.

48 And those from the king's army went up to meet them in Jerusalem, and the king encamped in Judaea and at Mount Sion.

49 And he made peace with those from Baithsoura, and they went out from the city, because they had no sustenance there to be shut up in it, because it was a sabbath for the land;

50 and the king seized Baithsoura and stationed a garrison there to guard it.

51 And he encamped against the sanctuary for many days and stationed there missile stations and engines and fire throwers and stone throwers and small scorpions for shooting missiles and slings.

52 And they also made engines against their engines and fought for many days.

53 But there was no food in the vessels because it was the seventh year, and those who were saved into Judaea from the nations had eaten up the remainder of the stored provisions.

54 And few men remained in the holy places, because famine overcame them, and they scattered, each to his own place.

55 And Lysias heard that Philippos, whom King Antiochos appointed while he was still living to rear Antiochos his son so that he might reign,

56 had returned from Persia and Media, and the armies which went with the king were with him, and that he seeks to take over the affairs.

57 And he hastened and assented to departing, and said to the king and the leaders of the army and the men, We diminish each day, and our food is little, and the place where we encamp is fortified, and the affairs of the kingdom press upon us;

58 now therefore let us give right hands to these people and make peace with them and with their whole nation,

59 and establish for them that they may walk in their customs as formerly; for because of their customs which we abolished they became angry and did all these things.

60 And the word pleased the king and the rulers, and he sent to them to make peace, and they accepted.

61 And the king and the rulers swore to them; on these terms they went out from the fortress.

62 And the king entered Mount Sion and saw the fortification of the place and rejected the oath which he swore and commanded that the wall be torn down all around.

63 And he departed in haste and returned to Antioch and found Philippos ruling the city and fought against him and seized the city by force.

Chapter 7

1 In the one hundred fifty-first year Demetrios son of Seleukos went out from Rome and went up with a few men into a seaside city and reigned there.

2 And it happened as he entered the house of the kingdom of his fathers, the armies seized Antiochos and Lysias to bring them to him.

3 And the matter became known to him, and he said, Do not show me their faces.

4 And the armies killed them, and Demetrios sat upon the throne of his kingdom.

5 And all the lawless and ungodly men from Israel came to him, and Alkimos led them, wishing to be priest.

6 And they accused the people before the king, saying, Ioudas and his brothers destroyed all your friends and scattered us from our land;

7 now therefore send a man whom you trust, and let him go and see all the destruction which he did to us and to the king's country, and let him punish them and all who assist them.

8 And the king chose Bakchides, of the king's friends, ruling beyond the river and great in the kingdom and faithful to the king,

9 and sent him and the ungodly Alkimos and established the priesthood for him and commanded him to execute vengeance upon the sons of Israel.

10 And they departed and came with a numerous army into the land of Iouda; and he sent messengers to Ioudas and his brothers with peaceful words in deceit.

11 And they did not attend to their words; for they saw that they came with a numerous army.

12 And an assembly of scribes gathered to Alkimos and Bakchides to seek just things,

13 and the Asidaians were first among the sons of Israel and sought peace from them;

14 for they said, A man, a priest of the seed of Aaron, has come with the armies and will not wrong us.

15 And he spoke peaceful words with them and swore to them, saying, We will not seek evil for you and your friends.

16 And they trusted him; and he seized sixty men of them and killed them in one day according to the word which he wrote,

17 The flesh of your holy ones and their blood they poured out around Jerusalem, and there was no one to bury them.

18 And fear and trembling of them fell upon all the people, because they said, There is no truth and judgment in them, for they transgressed the agreement and the oath which they swore.

19 And Bakchides departed from Jerusalem and encamped at Bethzaith and sent and seized many of the men who had deserted to him, and some of the people, and slaughtered them into the great well.

20 And he committed the country to Alkimos and left an army with him to help him; and Bakchides departed to the king.

21 And Alkimos struggled for the high priesthood,

22 and all who troubled their people gathered to him and took hold of the land of Iouda and inflicted a great blow in Israel.

23 And Ioudas saw all the wickedness which Alkimos and those with him did among the sons of Israel, beyond the nations,

24 and went out into all the borders of Judaea around it and executed vengeance upon the men who deserted, and they were restrained from going out into the country.

25 And when Alkimos saw that Ioudas and those with him had grown strong, and knew that he could not withstand them, he returned to the king and accused them of evil things.

26 And the king sent Nikanor, one of his glorious rulers, who hated Israel and was hostile to it, and commanded him to remove the people.

27 And Nikanor came to Jerusalem with a numerous army and sent to Ioudas and his brothers in deceit with peaceful words, saying,

28 Let there be no battle between me and you; I will come with a few men so that I may see your faces in peace.

29 And he came to Ioudas, and they greeted one another peacefully; and the enemies were ready to seize Ioudas.

30 And the matter became known to Ioudas, that he came against him in deceit, and he was alarmed by him and no longer wished to see his face.

31 And Nikanor knew that his plan had been uncovered, and went out to meet Ioudas in war near Chapharsalama.

32 And about five hundred men of those with Nikanor fell, and they fled into the city of Dauid.

33 And after these words Nikanor went up to Mount Sion. And some of the priests went out from the holy places, and some of the elders of the people, to greet him peacefully and show him the burnt offering being offered for the king.

34 And he sneered at them and laughed at them and defiled them and spoke arrogantly;

35 and he swore with wrath, saying, Unless Ioudas and his army are handed over into my hands now, it will happen, if I return in peace, that I will burn this house. And he went out with great wrath.

36 And the priests entered and stood before the face of the altar and the temple and wept and said,

37 You chose this house for your name to be invoked upon it, to be a house of prayer and supplication for your people;

38 execute vengeance upon this man and his army, and let them fall by the sword; remember their evil speech and do not give them continuance.

39 And Nikanor went out from Jerusalem and encamped in Baithoron, and an army of Syria met him.

40 And Ioudas encamped in Adasa with three thousand men; and Ioudas prayed and said,

41 When those from the king spoke evil, your angel went out and struck a hundred eighty-five thousand among them;

42 thus crush this army before us today, and let the remainder know that he spoke evilly against your holy things, and judge him according to his wickedness.

43 And the armies joined battle on the thirteenth of the month Adar, and Nikanor's army was crushed, and he fell first in the battle.

44 And when his army saw that Nikanor had fallen, they threw down their weapons and fled.

45 And they pursued them a journey of one day from Adasa until coming to Gazera and sounded the signaling trumpets behind them.

46 And they went out from all the villages of Judaea around it and outflanked them, and these turned back toward those, and they all fell by the sword, and not even one of them was left.

47 And they took the spoils and plunder, and cut off Nikanor's head and his right hand which he had stretched out arrogantly, and brought them and displayed them beside Jerusalem.

48 And the people were exceedingly glad, and observed that day as a great day of gladness;

49 and they established that this day should be observed each year on the thirteenth of Adar.

50 And the land of Iouda was quiet for a few days.

Chapter 8

1 And Ioudas heard the name of the Romans, that they are mighty in strength and they take pleasure in all those joining them, and as many as approach them, they establish friendship with them, and that they are mighty in strength.

2 And they related to him their wars and the deeds of courage which they do among the Galatians, and that they prevailed over them and brought them under tribute,

3 and whatever they did in the land of Spain to gain possession of the mines of silver and gold there;

4 and they gained possession of the whole place by their counsel and their patience, and the place was very far distant from them, and of the kings who came against them from the end of the earth, until they crushed them and struck a great blow among them, and those remaining give them tribute yearly;

5 and Philip and Perseus, king of the Kitians, and those raised up against them, they crushed them in war and prevailed over them;

6 and Antiochos, the great king of Asia, who went against them for war, having one hundred and twenty elephants and cavalry and chariots and a very great force, and he was crushed by them,

7 and they took him alive and established that he and those reigning after him should give them great tribute and give hostages and a stipulated agreement

8 and the Indian land and Media and Lydia, from their finest lands, and having taken them from him, they gave them to Eumenes the king;

9 and that those from Greece planned to come and remove them,

10 and the matter became known to them, and they sent one commander against them and fought against them, and many wounded fell from among them, and they took their wives and their children captive and plundered them and gained possession of the land and pulled down their strongholds and enslaved them until this day;

11 and the remaining kingdoms and the islands, as many as ever stood against them, they destroyed and enslaved them, but with their friends and those relying on them they maintained friendship;

12 and they prevailed over the kings nearby and those far away, and as many as heard their name were afraid of them.

13 And those whom they wish to help and to reign, reign; but those whom they wish, they remove; and they were greatly exalted.

14 And in all these things not even one of them put on a diadem, nor did they clothe themselves in purple so as to be magnified in it;

15 and they made themselves a council chamber, and daily three hundred and twenty deliberated, deliberating continually concerning the multitude, that they should be well ordered;

16 and they entrust one man to rule them yearly and to exercise lordship over all their land, and all obey the one, and there is no envy or jealousy among them.

17 And Ioudas selected Eupolemos, son of Ioannes, of Akkos, and Iason, son of Eleazar, and sent them to Rome to establish friendship and alliance

18 and to lift the yoke from them, because they saw the kingdom of the Greeks enslaving Israel with slavery.

19 And they went to Rome, and the journey was very long, and they entered the council chamber and answered and said,

20 Ioudas, also called Makkabaios, and his brothers and the multitude of the Judeans sent us to you to establish alliance and peace with you and for us to be registered as your allies and friends.

21 And the statement was pleasing before them.

22 And this is the copy of the letter which they copied on bronze tablets and sent to Ierousalem to be with them there as a memorial of peace and alliance:

23 May it go well with the Romans and the nation of the Judeans on the sea and on the dry land forever, and may sword and enemy be put far from them.

24 But if war arises first for Rome or for all their allies in all their dominion,

25 the nation of the Judeans shall act as allies, as the occasion prescribes for them, with a full heart;

26 and to those waging war they shall not give or supply grain, weapons, silver, ships, as Rome decided; and they shall keep their obligations, taking nothing.

27 And in the same way, if war happens first to the nation of the Judeans, the Romans shall act as allies from the soul, as the occasion prescribes for them?

28 And to those allied, grain, weapons, silver, ships shall not be given, as Rome decided; and they shall keep these obligations, and without deceit. —

29 According to these words the Romans thus established an agreement with the people of the Judeans.

30 But if after these words these and those decide to add or remove, they shall do so by their own choice, and whatever they add or remove shall be authoritative.

31 And concerning the evils which King Demetrios carries out against them, we wrote to him, saying, Why have you made your yoke heavy upon our friends, the allied Judeans?

32 If therefore they petition against you again, we shall execute judgment for them and wage war against you by sea and by dry land.

Chapter 9

1 And Demetrios heard that Nikanor and his force had fallen in war, and he proceeded to send Bakchides and Alkimos a second time into the land of Iouda, and the right wing with them.

2 And they went by the road to Galgala and encamped against Maisaloth in Arbela and seized it beforehand and destroyed many human lives.

3 And in the first month of the one hundred and fifty-second year they encamped against Ierousalem;

4 and they departed and went to Berea with twenty thousand men and two thousand cavalry.

5 And Ioudas was encamped in Elasa, and three thousand chosen men with him.

6 And they saw the multitude of the forces, that they were many, and were very afraid; and many slipped away from the camp; none were left of them except eight hundred men.

7 And Ioudas saw that his camp had slipped away and the war was pressing him, and he was crushed in heart, because he had no opportunity to gather them,

8 and he grew faint and said to those left, Let us arise and go up against our adversaries, if perhaps we can fight against them.

9 And they tried to turn him back, saying, We certainly cannot, but let us save our own lives now; let us return, and our brothers, and fight against them, but we are few.

10 And Ioudas said, May it not happen that we do this thing, flee from them; and if our time has drawn near, let us also die with courage for the sake of our brothers and not leave a charge against our glory.

11 And the force departed from the camp and they stood to meet them, and the cavalry was divided into two parts, and the slingers and the archers went before the force, and the foremost fighters, all the mighty men, but Bakchides was in the right wing.

12 And the phalanx drew near from the two parts and they sounded with the trumpets, and those with Ioudas also blew with the trumpets;

13 and the earth was shaken by the sound of the camps, and the battle was joined from morning until evening.

14 And Ioudas saw that Bakchides and the strength of the camp were on the right, and all those courageous in heart came together with him,

15 and the right part was crushed by them, and he pursued after them as far as Mount Azotos.

16 And those in the left wing saw that the right wing was crushed, and they turned on the heels of Ioudas and those with him from behind.

17 And the battle became heavy, and many wounded fell from these and from those,

18 and Ioudas fell, and the rest fled.

19 And Ionathan and Simon lifted Ioudas their brother and buried him in the tomb of his fathers in Modein.

20 And all Israel wept for him and lamented him with a great lamentation and mourned for many days and said,

21 How a mighty man has fallen, who saved Israel.

22 And the remaining accounts of Ioudas and the wars and the deeds of courage which he did, and his greatness, were not recorded; for they were very many.

23 And it happened after the death of Ioudas that the lawless emerged in all the borders of Israel, and all those working injustice sprang up.

24 In those days a very great famine occurred, and the land deserted to their side.

25 And Bakchides chose the impious men and appointed them masters of the land.

26 And they sought out and searched for the friends of Ioudas and brought them to Bakchides, and he punished them and mocked them.

27 And great affliction came in Israel, such as had not occurred from the day when a prophet was not seen by them.

28 And all the friends of Ioudas were gathered and said to Ionathan,

29 Since your brother Ioudas has died, and there is no man like him to go out and come in against the enemies and Bakchides and among those hostile to our nation;

30 now therefore we have chosen you today to be for us in his place as ruler and leader, to fight our war.

31 And Ionathan accepted the leadership at that time and arose in place of Ioudas his brother.

32 And Bakchides learned of it and sought to kill him.

33 And Ionathan and Simon his brother and all those with him learned of it and fled into the wilderness of Thekoe and encamped by the water of the pool Asphar.

34 And Bakchides learned of it on the sabbath day and came, he and all his army, beyond the Iordan. —

35 And he sent his brother, leader of the crowd, and entreated the Nabateans, his friends, to deposit with them their abundant baggage.

36 And the sons of Iambri from Medaba came out and seized Ioannes and all that he had and departed with it.

37 After these matters they reported to Ionathan and Simon his brother that the sons of Iambri are holding a great wedding and are bringing the bride from Nadabath, daughter of one of the great nobles of Chanaan, with a great escort.

38 And they remembered the blood of Ioannes their brother and went up and hid under the shelter of the mountain.

39 And they lifted their eyes and saw, and behold, a commotion and abundant baggage, and the bridegroom came out, and his friends and his brothers, to meet them with drums and musicians and many weapons.

40 And they rose against them from the ambush and killed them, and many wounded fell, and those remaining fled into the mountain; and they took all their spoils.

41 And the wedding was turned into mourning and the sound of their musicians into lamentation.

42 And they exacted vengeance for the blood of their brother and returned to the marsh of the Iordan. —

43 And Bakchides heard and came on the sabbath day as far as the banks of the Iordan with a great force.

44 And Ionathan said to those with him, Let us now arise and fight for our lives, for today is not as yesterday and the third day;

45 for behold, the battle is in front and behind us, and the water of the Iordan on this side and that side, and marsh and woodland; there is no place to turn aside;

46 now therefore cry out to heaven, so that you may be saved from the hand of our enemies.

47 And the battle joined; and Ionathan stretched out his hand to strike Bakchides, and he turned aside from him backward.

48 And Ionathan and those with him leaped into the Iordan and swam across to the other side, and they did not cross the Iordan against them.

49 And on that day about a thousand men fell on Bakchides' side.

50 And he returned to Ierousalem, and they built fortified cities in Judea, the stronghold in Iericho and Ammaous and Baithoron and Baithel and Thamnatha Pharathon and Tephon, with high walls and gates and bars;

51 and he placed a garrison in them to act against Israel.

52 And he fortified the city Baithsoura and Gazara and the citadel and placed forces and stores of food in them.

53 And he took the sons of the leaders of the land as hostages and placed them in the citadel in Ierousalem under guard.

54 And in the one hundred and fifty-third year, in the second month, Alkimos ordered the wall of the inner court of the holy places to be pulled down; and he pulled down the works of the prophets and began to pull down.

55 At that time Alkimos was struck, and his works were hindered, and his mouth was stopped, and he was paralyzed and could no longer speak a word or give orders concerning his house.

56 And Alkimos died at that time with great torment.

57 And Bakchides saw that Alkimos had died and returned to the king. And the land of Iouda was quiet for two years.

58 And all the lawless plotted, saying, Behold, Ionathan and those with him dwell in quiet, confidently; now therefore we shall bring up Bakchides, and he will seize them all in one night.

59 And they went and counseled him.

60 And he departed to come with a great force and secretly sent letters to all his allies in Judea, that they should seize Ionathan and those with him; and they could not, because their plan became known.

61 And they seized about fifty men from the men of the land, the leaders of the wickedness, and killed them.

62 And Ionathan and Simon and those with him withdrew to Baithbasi in the wilderness, and he rebuilt its demolished parts, and they strengthened it.

63 And Bakchides learned of it and gathered all his multitude and gave orders to those from Judea;

64 and he came and encamped against Baithbasi and fought against it for many days and made engines.

65 And Ionathan left Simon his brother in the city and went out into the country and came with a number of men.

66 And he struck Odomera and his brothers and the sons of Phasiron in their dwelling, and they began to strike and went up with the forces.

67 And Simon and those with him came out of the city and burned the engines;

68 and they fought against Bakchides, and he was crushed by them, and they afflicted him greatly, because his plan and his assault were empty.

69 And he was angry in wrath with the lawless men who had counseled him to come into the country and killed many of them and decided to depart to his own land.

70 And Ionathan learned of it and sent ambassadors to him to agree on peace with him and to return the captives to them.

71 And he accepted and did according to his words and swore to him not to seek harm for him all the days of his life;

72 and he returned to him the captives whom he had previously taken captive from the land of Iouda, and he turned back and departed to his own land and did not again come into their borders.

73 And the sword ceased from Israel; and Ionathan dwelt in Machmas, and Ionathan began to judge the people and removed the impious from Israel.

Chapter 10

1 And in the one hundred and sixtieth year Alexandros, the son of Antiochos, the Illustrious, went up and seized Ptolemais, and they received him, and he reigned there.

2 And Demetrios the king heard and gathered very many forces and went out to meet him for war.

3 And Demetrios sent letters to Ionathan with peaceful words so as to magnify him;

4 for he said, Let us act first to establish peace with them before he establishes it with Alexandros against us;

5 for he will remember all the evils which we carried out against him and against his brothers and against the nation.

6 And he gave him authority to gather forces and prepare weapons and to be his ally, and he said to hand over to him the hostages in the citadel.

7 And Ionathan came to Ierousalem and read the letters into the ears of all the people and those from the citadel.

8 And they feared with great fear when they heard that the king had given him authority to gather a force.

9 And those from the citadel handed the hostages over to Ionathan, and he returned them to their parents.

10 And Ionathan dwelt in Ierousalem and began to build and renew the city.

11 And he told those doing the works to build the walls and Mount Sion all around with four-foot stones for fortification, and they did so.

12 And the foreigners who were in the strongholds which Bakchides had built fled,

13 and each left his place and departed to his own land;

14 except in Baithsoura some of those who had abandoned the law and the ordinances remained; for it was a refuge.

15 And Alexandros the king heard the promises, as many as Demetrios had sent to Ionathan, and they related to him the wars and the deeds of courage which he and his brothers had done, and the labors which they had endured,

16 and he said, Surely we shall not find one such man? And now we shall make him our friend and ally.

17 And he wrote letters and sent them to him according to these words, saying,

18 King Alexandros to his brother Ionathan, greetings.

19 We have heard concerning you that you are a man mighty in strength and fit to be our friend.

20 And now we have appointed you today high priest of your nation and for you to be called a friend of the king [and he sent him purple and a golden crown] and to think of our affairs and maintain friendship toward us.

21 And Ionathan put on the holy robe in the seventh month of the one hundred and sixtieth year, at the feast of tent-pitching, and gathered forces and prepared many weapons.

22 And Demetrios heard these words and was grieved and said,

23 What is this we have done, that Alexandros has anticipated us in gaining friendship with the Judeans as a support?

24 I too shall write them words of encouragement and exaltation and gifts, so that they may be with me for help.

25 And he sent to them according to these words: King Demetrios to the nation of the Judeans, greetings.

26 Since you have maintained the agreements with us and remained in our friendship and have not gone over to our enemies, we heard and rejoiced.

27 And now continue still to maintain faithfulness toward us, and we shall repay you good things in return for what you do with us.

28 And we shall grant you many remissions and give you gifts.

29 And now I release you and exempt all the Judeans from the tributes and the price of salt and from the crowns,

30 and instead of the third of the sowing and instead of the half of the fruit of the trees which falls to me to receive, I remit from today and onward the receiving of it from the land of Iouda and from the three districts added to it from Samaria and Galilee, from today and for all time.

31 And let Ierousalem be holy and exempt, and its borders, the tithes and the taxes.

32 I also relinquish authority over the citadel in Ierousalem and give it to the high priest, so that he may appoint in it men whom he himself chooses to guard it.

33 And every soul of the Judeans taken captive from the land of Iouda into any part of my kingdom I release free without payment; and let all remit the tributes, also those on their livestock.

34 And all the feasts and the sabbaths and new moons and appointed days, and three days before a feast and three after a feast, let them all be days of exemption and remission for all the Judeans who are in my kingdom,

35 and no one shall have authority to exact payment and trouble any of them concerning any matter.

36 And let about thirty thousand men of the Judeans be enrolled in the forces of the king, and allowances shall be given to them, as is fitting for all the forces of the king.

37 And some of them shall be appointed in the great strongholds of the king, and from these some shall be appointed over affairs of the kingdom that require trust; and let those over them and the rulers be from among them, and let them walk by their own laws, as the king also ordered in the land of Iouda.

38 And the three districts added to Judea from the country of Samaria, let them be added to Judea to be reckoned as being under one, so as not to obey another authority except the high priest.

39 I have given Ptolemais and the territory belonging to it as a gift to the holy places in Ierousalem for the expenditure due to the holy places.

40 And I give yearly fifteen thousand shekels of silver from the accounts of the king, from the appropriate places.

41 And all the surplus which they did not pay from the revenues as in the first years, from now they shall give for the works of the house.

42 And besides these, five thousand shekels of silver which they used to receive yearly from the revenues of the holy place from the account, these also are remitted because they belong to the priests who minister.

43 And as many as flee to the temple in Ierosolyma and within all its borders, owing royal dues or any obligation, let them be released, and all that belongs to them in my kingdom.

44 And for the works of the holy places to be built and renewed, the expense shall also be given from the account of the king.

45 And for the walls of Ierousalem to be built and fortified all around, the expense shall also be given from the account of the king, and for the walls in Judea to be built.

46 But when Ionathan and the people heard these words, they did not believe them or accept them, because they remembered the great wickedness which he had done in Israel and had afflicted them greatly.

47 And they were pleased with Alexandros, because he had become for them the initiator of peaceful words, and they acted as his allies all the days.

48 And Alexandros the king gathered great forces and encamped opposite Demetrios.

49 And the two kings joined battle, and the camp of Demetrios fled, and Alexandros pursued him and prevailed over them;

50 and he pressed the battle very hard until the sun set, and Demetrios fell on that day.

51 And Alexandros sent ambassadors to Ptolemaios, king of Egypt, according to these words, saying,

52 Since I returned to my kingdom and sat on the throne of my fathers and took hold of the rule, and crushed Demetrios and gained possession of our country

53 and joined battle against him, and he and his camp were crushed by us, and we sat on the throne of his kingdom;

54 and now let us establish friendship with one another, and now give me your daughter as wife, and I shall become your son-in-law and give gifts to you and to her worthy of you.

55 And Ptolemaios the king answered, saying, Good is the day on which you returned to the land of your fathers and sat on the throne of their kingdom.

56 And now I shall do for you what you wrote, but meet me at Ptolemais, so that we may see one another, and I shall become related to you by marriage, as you have said.

57 And Ptolemaios went out from Egypt, he and Kleopatra his daughter, and came to Ptolemais in the one hundred and sixty-second year.

58 And Alexandros the king met him, and he gave him Kleopatra his daughter in marriage and held her wedding in Ptolemais as kings do, with great glory. —

59 And Alexandros the king wrote to Ionathes to come to meet him.

60 And he went with glory to Ptolemais and met the two kings; and he gave them silver and gold, and to their friends, and many gifts, and found favor before them.

61 And pestilent men from Israel, lawless men, gathered against him to petition against him, and the king did not pay attention to them.

62 And the king ordered, and they stripped Ionathan of his garments and clothed him in purple, and they did so.

63 And the king seated him with himself and said to his rulers, Go out with him into the midst of the city and proclaim that no one is to petition against him concerning any matter, and let no one trouble him concerning any statement.

64 And it happened when those petitioning saw his glory, as he had proclaimed, and him clothed in purple, that they all fled.

65 And the king glorified him and registered him among the first friends and appointed him commander and governor of a district.

66 And Ionathan returned to Ierousalem with peace and gladness.

67 And in the one hundred and sixty-fifth year Demetrios, son of Demetrios, came from Crete into the land of his fathers.

68 And Alexandros the king heard and was greatly grieved and returned to Antiocheia.

69 And Demetrios appointed Apollonios, who was over Coele Syria, and he gathered a great force and encamped against Iamneia; and he sent to Ionathan the high priest, saying,

70 You alone raise yourself against us, but I have become a laughingstock and a reproach because of you; and why do you exercise power against us in the mountains?

71 Now therefore, if you trust in your forces, come down to us into the plain, and let us contend with one another there, because with me is a force from the cities.

72 Ask and learn who I am and the rest who help us, and they say, You have no foothold before us, because your fathers were routed twice in their land.

73 And now you will not be able to withstand the cavalry and such a force in the plain, where there is no stone or pebble or place to flee.

74 But when Ionathan heard the words of Apollonios, he was stirred in his mind and selected ten thousand men and went out from Ierousalem, and Simon his brother met him to help him.

75 And he encamped against Ioppe, and those from the city shut it, because a garrison of Apollonios was in Ioppe; and they fought against it,

76 and those from the city became afraid and opened it, and Ionathan became master of Ioppe.

77 And Apollonios heard and encamped with three thousand cavalry and a great force and went to Azotos as though passing through, and at the same time advanced into the plain because he had a multitude of cavalry and trusted in it.

78 And he pursued after him to Azotos, and the camps joined in battle.

79 And Apollonios left a thousand cavalry secretly behind them.

80 And Ionathan knew that there was an ambush behind him, and they surrounded his camp and hurled the shafts at the people from morning until evening;

81 but the people stood as Ionathan had ordered, and their horses grew weary.

82 And Simon brought his force forward and joined against the phalanx, for the cavalry had grown faint, and they were crushed by him and fled,

83 and the cavalry was scattered in the plain. And they fled to Azotos and entered Bethdagon, their idol temple, to be saved.

84 And Ionathan burned Azotos and the cities around it and took their spoils, and the temple of Dagon and those who had fled together into it he burned with fire.

85 And those fallen by the sword, together with those burned, amounted to about eight thousand men.

86 And Ionathan departed from there and encamped against Askalon, and those from the city came out to meet him with great glory.

87 And Ionathan returned to Ierousalem with those with him, having many spoils.

88 And it happened when Alexandros the king heard these matters, that he proceeded to glorify Ionathan further;

89 and he sent him a golden clasp, as it is customary to give to the relatives of kings, and gave him Akkaron and all its borders as an inheritance.

Chapter 11

1 And the king of Egypt gathered many forces, like the sand beside the shore of the sea, and many ships, and sought to gain possession of the kingdom of Alexandros by deceit and add it to his own kingdom.

2 And he went out into Syria with peaceful words, and those from the cities opened to him and met him, because there was a command of Alexandros the king to meet him because he was his father-in-law;

3 but as Ptolemaios entered the cities, he stationed the forces as a garrison in each city.

4 But when they drew near Azotos, they showed him the temple of Dagon burned and Azotos and its surrounding towns demolished and the bodies cast down and those burned whom he had burned in the war; for they had made heaps of them in his path.

5 And they related to the king what Ionathan had done, to blame him; and the king was silent.

6 And Ionathan met the king at Ioppe with glory, and they greeted one another and slept there.

7 And Ionathan went with the king as far as the river called Eleutheros and returned to Ierousalem.

8 But King Ptolemaios became master of the coastal cities as far as Seleukeia by the sea and considered wicked designs concerning Alexandros.

9 And he sent ambassadors to Demetrios the king, saying, Come, let us make a covenant with one another, and I shall give you my daughter whom Alexandros had, and you shall reign over the kingdom of your father;

10 for I regret giving him my daughter, for he sought to kill me.

11 And he blamed him because he desired his kingdom;

12 and having taken his daughter away from him, he gave her to Demetrios and became estranged from Alexandros, and their enmity became evident.

13 And Ptolemaios entered Antiocheia and put on the diadem of Asia; and he put two diadems around his head, that of Egypt and of Asia.

14 But Alexandros the king was in Cilicia at those times, because those from those places were revolting.

15 And Alexandros heard and came against him in war. And Ptolemaios led out and met him with a strong hand and routed him;

16 and Alexandros fled into Arabia to be sheltered there, but King Ptolemaios was exalted.

17 And Zabdiel the Arab removed the head of Alexandros and sent it to Ptolemaios.

18 And King Ptolemaios died on the third day, and those who were in his strongholds were destroyed by those in the strongholds.

19 And Demetrios reigned in the one hundred and sixty-seventh year.

20 In those days Ionathan gathered those from Judea to wage war against the citadel in Ierousalem and made many engines against it.

21 And some lawless men who hated their nation went to the king and reported to him that Ionathan was besieging the citadel.

22 And on hearing it he became angry; and when he heard, he immediately set out and came to Ptolemais and wrote to Ionathan not to besiege it and to meet him, to confer with him in Ptolemais as quickly as possible.

23 But when Ionathan heard, he ordered the siege to continue and selected some of the elders of Israel and of the priests and gave himself to the danger;

24 and taking silver and gold and clothing and many other gifts, he also went to the king in Ptolemais and found favor before him.

25 And some lawless men from the nation were petitioning against him.

26 And the king did for him as those before him had done for him and exalted him before all his friends.

27 And he confirmed for him the high priesthood and whatever other honors he previously had and caused him to be reckoned among the first friends.

28 And Ionathan requested the king to make Judea free of tribute, and the three districts and Samaria, and promised him three hundred talents.

29 And the king consented and wrote letters to Ionathan concerning all these things, having this form:

30 King Demetrios to Ionathan his brother and to the nation of the Judeans, greetings.

31 The copy of the letter which we wrote to Lasthenes our relative concerning you we have also written to you, so that you may know.

32 King Demetrios to Lasthenes his father, greetings.

33 We decided to do good to the nation of the Judeans, our friends, who maintain their just obligations toward us, because of their goodwill toward us.

34 We have confirmed for them both the borders of Judea and the three districts Aphairema and Lydda and Rathamin; they were added to Judea from Samaria, and all that belongs to them, for all those sacrificing in Ierosolyma, in place of the royal dues which the king previously received from them yearly from the produce of the land and the fruits of the trees.

35 And the other things belonging to us from now, of the tithes and the taxes belonging to us, and the salt lakes and the crowns belonging to us, we shall grant them all.

36 And not even one of these shall be set aside from now for all time.

37 Now therefore take care to make a copy of these, and let it be given to Ionathan and placed on the holy mountain in a conspicuous place.

38 And Demetrios the king saw that the land was quiet before him and nothing stood against him, and he discharged all his forces, each to his own place, except the foreign forces which he had recruited from the islands of the nations; and all the forces inherited from the fathers became hostile to him.

39 But Tryphon was formerly among those with Alexandros and saw that all the forces were murmuring against Demetrios, and he went to Imalkoue the Arab, who was raising Antiochos, the little boy of Alexandros.

40 And he pressed him to hand him over to him, so that he might reign in place of his father; and he reported to him whatever Demetrios had carried out and the enmity with which his forces were hostile to him, and he remained there many days.

41 And Ionathan sent to Demetrios the king, that he should expel those from the citadel from Ierousalem and those in the strongholds; for they were fighting Israel.

42 And Demetrios sent to Ionathan, saying, I shall do not only these things for you and your nation, but with glory I shall glorify you and your nation, if I obtain an opportunity;

43 now therefore you will do rightly by sending me men who will act as my allies, because all my forces have revolted.

44 And Ionathan sent him three thousand men mighty in strength to Antiocheia, and they came to the king, and the king rejoiced at their arrival.

45 And those from the city gathered into the midst of the city, about one hundred and twenty thousand men, and wished to kill the king.

46 And the king fled into the court, and those from the city seized the passages of the city and began to fight.

47 And the king called the Judeans for help, and they all gathered to him together and scattered in the city and killed about one hundred thousand on that day;

48 and they burned the city and took many spoils on that day and saved the king.

49 And those from the city saw that the Judeans had gained possession of the city as they wished, and they grew weak in their minds and cried out to the king with entreaty, saying,

50 Give us your right hands, and let the Judeans stop fighting us and the city.

51 And they threw down their weapons and made peace. And the Judeans were glorified before the king and before all those in his kingdom and returned to Ierousalem with many spoils.

52 And Demetrios the king sat on the throne of his kingdom, and the land was quiet before him.

53 And he proved false in everything he had said and became estranged from Ionathan and did not repay the kindnesses which he had rendered him, and afflicted him greatly.

54 But after these things Tryphon returned, and Antiochos with him, a young boy; and he reigned and put on a diadem.

55 And all the forces which Demetrios had dismissed gathered to him and fought against him, and he fled and was routed.

56 And Tryphon took the beasts and gained possession of Antiocheia.

57 And Antiochos the younger wrote to Ionathes, saying, I confirm the high priesthood for you and appoint you over the four districts and to be among the friends of the king.

58 And he sent him golden vessels and a table service and gave him authority to drink from golden vessels and to be in purple and to have a golden clasp;

59 and he appointed Simon his brother commander from the ladder of Tyre as far as the borders of Egypt.

60 And Ionathan went out and was traveling beyond the river and in the cities, and the entire force of Syria gathered to him for alliance; and he came to Askalon, and those from the city met him gloriously.

61 And he departed from there to Gaza, and those from Gaza shut it, and he encamped around it and burned its surrounding towns with fire and plundered them.

62 And those from Gaza entreated Ionathan, and he gave them his right hand and took the sons of their rulers as hostages and sent them away to Ierousalem; and he passed through the country as far as Damascus.

63 And Ionathan heard that the rulers of Demetrios were present at Kedes in Galilee with a great force, wishing to remove him from his office.

64 And he met them, but left Simon his brother in the country.

65 And Simon encamped against Baithsoura and fought against it for many days and shut it in.

66 And they entreated him to receive right hands, and he gave them to them; and he expelled them from there and seized the city and placed a garrison over it.

67 And Ionathan and his camp encamped by the water of Gennesar; and they rose early in the morning to the plain of Asor.

68 And behold, the camp of foreigners met him in the plain, and they sent out an ambush against him in the mountains, but they themselves met him opposite.

69 And the ambushes rose from their places and joined battle.

70 And all those with Ionathes fled; not even one of them was left except Mattathias, the son of Apsalomos, and Ioudas, the son of Chalphi, rulers of the army of the forces.

71 And Ionathan tore his garments and placed earth on his head and prayed.

72 And he turned back toward them in battle and routed them, and they fled.

73 And those fleeing from him saw and returned to him and pursued with him as far as Kedes, as far as their camp, and encamped there.

74 And about three thousand men of the foreigners fell on that day. And Ionathan returned to Ierousalem.

Chapter 12

1 And Ionathan saw that the occasion was working with him, and he selected men and sent them to Rome to establish and renew the friendship with them.

2 And to the Spartans and other places he sent letters in the same way.

3 And they went to Rome and entered the council chamber and said, Ionathan the high priest and the nation of the Judeans sent us to renew for themselves the friendship and alliance as before.

4 And they gave them letters to those in each place, so that they might escort them to the land of Iouda with peace.

5 And this is the copy of the letters which Ionathan wrote to the Spartans:

6 Ionathan the high priest and the council of elders of the nation and the priests and the rest of the people of the Judeans to the Spartans, their brothers, greetings.

7 Even earlier letters were sent to Onias the high priest from Areios, who reigned among you, that you are our brothers, as the copy set out below shows.

8 And Onias received the man who had been sent gloriously and took the letters in which matters of alliance and friendship were made clear.

9 We therefore, being without need of these things, having as encouragement the holy books in our hands,

10 attempted to send to renew the brotherhood and friendship with you, so as not to become estranged from you; for many times have passed since you sent to us.

11 We therefore at every time, unceasingly, both at the feasts and on the other appropriate days, remember you at the sacrifices which we offer and in our prayers, as it is necessary and fitting to remember brothers.

12 And we rejoice at your glory.

13 But many afflictions and many wars surrounded us, and the kings around us fought against us.

14 We therefore did not wish to trouble you and our other allies and friends in these wars;

15 for we have the help from heaven helping us, and we were delivered from the enemies, and our enemies were humbled.

16 We therefore selected Noumenios, son of Antiochos, and Antipatros, son of Iason, and have sent them to the Romans to renew the former friendship and alliance with them.

17 We therefore also instructed them to go to you and greet you and deliver to you the letters from us concerning the renewal and our brotherhood.

18 And now you will do well by answering us concerning these things.

19 And this is the copy of the letters which they sent to Onias:

20 Areios, king of the Spartans, to Onias the great priest, greetings.

21 It was found in writing concerning both the Spartans and the Judeans that they are brothers and that they are of the race of Abraam.

22 And now, since we have learned these things, you will do well by writing to us concerning your peace,

23 and we also write back to you: Your livestock and your possessions are ours, and ours are yours. We therefore give orders that they report to you according to these things.

24 And Ionathan heard that the rulers of Demetrios had returned with a great force, greater than before, to fight against him.

25 And he departed from Ierousalem and met them in the country of Amathitis; for he did not give them an opportunity to enter his country.

26 And he sent spies into their camp, and they returned and reported to him that they were thus arranging to fall upon them at night.

27 But when the sun set, Ionathan ordered those with him to stay awake and be at their weapons, preparing for battle throughout the whole night, and he sent out advance guards around the camp.

28 And the adversaries heard that Ionathan and those with him were prepared for battle, and they feared and cowered in their heart and kindled fires in their camp.

29 But Ionathan and those with him did not know until morning, for they saw the lights burning.

30 And Ionathan pursued after them and did not overtake them, for they had crossed the Eleutheros river.

31 And Ionathan turned aside against the Arabs called the Zabadeans and struck them and took their spoils.

32 And he set out and came to Damascus and passed through all the country.

33 And Simon went out and passed through as far as Askalon and the nearby strongholds and turned aside to Ioppe and seized it beforehand;

34 for he heard that they wished to hand the stronghold over to those with Demetrios; and he placed a garrison there to guard it.

35 And Ionathan returned and assembled the elders of the people and deliberated with them about building strongholds in Judea

36 and raising the walls of Ierousalem further and raising a great height between the citadel and the city to separate it from the city, so that it might be alone, so that they might neither buy nor sell.

37 And they gathered to build the city, and part of the wall of the torrent on the east fell, and he repaired what is called Chaphenatha.

38 And Simon built Adida in Sephela and fortified it and installed doors and bars.

39 And Tryphon sought to reign over Asia and put on the diadem and stretch out a hand against Antiochos the king.

40 And he was wary lest Ionathan should not permit him and lest he fight against him, and sought to seize him to destroy him, and departed and came to Baithsan.

41 And Ionathan went out to meet him with forty thousand men selected for battle and came to Baithsan.

42 And Tryphon saw that he had come with a great force, and was wary of stretching out hands against him.

43 And he received him gloriously and commended him to all his friends and gave him gifts and ordered his friends and his forces to obey him as himself.

44 And he said to Ionathan, Why have you wearied all this people when no war has arisen for us?

45 And now send them to their houses, but select for yourself a few men who will be with you, and come with me to Ptolemais, and I shall hand it over to you, and the remaining strongholds and the remaining forces and all those over the affairs, and I shall turn back and depart; for I am here for this purpose.

46 And he trusted him and did as he said, and sent away the forces, and they departed to the land of Iouda.

47 But he left with himself three thousand men, of whom he left two thousand in Galilee, but a thousand went with him.

48 But when Ionathan entered Ptolemais, the people of Ptolemais shut the gates and seized him, and all those who had entered together with him they killed with the sword.

49 And Tryphon sent forces and cavalry into Galilee and the great plain to destroy all those with Ionathes.

50 And they learned that he had been seized and had perished, and those with him, and they encouraged one another and were marching closely together, ready for battle.

51 And those pursuing saw that it was a matter of life for them, and turned back.

52 And they all came with peace to the land of Iouda and mourned Ionathan and those with him and were greatly afraid; and all Israel mourned with great mourning.

53 And all the nations around them sought to wipe them out; for they said, They have no ruler or helper; now therefore let us fight them and remove their memorial from among human beings.

Chapter 13

1 And Simon heard that Tryphon had gathered a great force to come into the land of Iouda and wipe it out.

2 And he saw the people, that they were trembling and terrified, and went up to Ierousalem and gathered the people

3 and encouraged them and said to them, You yourselves know whatever I and my brothers and the house of my father have done for the laws and the holy places, and the wars and the straits which we have seen.

4 For this reason all my brothers perished for the sake of Israel, and I alone was left.

5 And now may it not happen to me to spare my life at any time of affliction; for I am not better than my brothers.

6 But I shall exact vengeance for my nation and for the holy places and for your wives and children, because all the nations have gathered to wipe us out because of enmity.

7 And the spirit of the people was rekindled as soon as they heard these words,

8 and they answered with a loud voice, saying, You are our leader in place of Ioudas and Ionathes your brother;

9 fight our war, and everything that you say to us we shall do.

10 And he gathered all the fighting men and hastened to finish the walls of Ierousalem and fortified it all around.

11 And he sent Ionathan, the son of Apsalomos, and with him a sufficient force to Ioppe, and he expelled those in it and remained there in it.

12 And Tryphon departed from Ptolemais with a great force to come into the land of Iouda, and Ionathan with him under guard.

13 But Simon encamped in Adida facing the plain.

14 And Tryphon learned that Simon had arisen in place of Ionathes his brother and that he was about to join battle with him, and sent ambassadors to him, saying,

15 On account of silver which Ionathan your brother owed to the royal treasury because of the offices he held, we are detaining him;

16 and now send a hundred talents of silver and two of his sons as hostages, so that when released he may not revolt from us, and we shall release him.

17 And Simon knew that they were speaking to him deceitfully, and he sends to collect the silver and the boys, lest he incur great enmity with the people,

18 saying, Because I did not send him the silver and the boys, he perished.

19 And he sent the boys and the hundred talents, and he proved false and did not release Ionathan.

20 And after these things Tryphon came to enter the country and wipe it out, and they went around by the road to Adora. And Simon and his camp marched opposite him to every place wherever he went.

21 But those from the citadel were sending ambassadors to Tryphon, urging him to come to them through the wilderness and send them food.

22 And Tryphon prepared all his cavalry to come, and on that night there was very much snow, and he did not come because of the snow. And he departed and came to Galaaditis.

23 But when he drew near Baskama, he killed Ionathan, and he was buried there.

24 And Tryphon turned back and departed to his own land.

25 And Simon sent and took the bones of Ionathes his brother and buried him in Modein, the city of his fathers.

26 And all Israel lamented him with a great lamentation and mourned him for many days.

27 And Simon built upon the tomb of his father and his brothers and raised it high to the sight with hewn stone at the back and the front.

28 And he erected seven pyramids, one opposite the other, for his father and his mother and his four brothers.

29 And for these he made constructions, setting great pillars around them, and on the pillars he made suits of armor for an everlasting name, and beside the suits of armor, carved ships to be seen by all those sailing the sea.

30 This is the tomb which he made in Modein, until this day.

31 But Tryphon dealt deceitfully with Antiochos the younger king and killed him

32 and reigned in his place and put on the diadem of Asia and inflicted a great blow upon the land.

33 And Simon built the strongholds of Judea and walled them around with high towers and great walls and gates and bars and placed food in the strongholds.

34 And Simon selected men and sent them to Demetrios the king to grant remission to the country, because all Tryphon's exactions were acts of plunder.

35 And Demetrios the king sent to him according to these words and answered him and wrote him such a letter:

36 King Demetrios to Simon, high priest and friend of kings, and to the elders and the nation of the Judeans, greetings.

37 We have received the golden crown and the palm branch which you sent and are ready to make great peace with you and write to those over the affairs to grant you the remissions.

38 And whatever we established with you stands, and let the strongholds which you built belong to you.

39 And we forgive errors of ignorance and the sins until today and the crown which you owed, and if anything else was taxed in Ierousalem, let it no longer be taxed.

40 And if any of you are fit to be enrolled among those around us, let them be enrolled, and let there be peace between us.

41 In the one hundred and seventieth year the yoke of the nations was lifted from Israel,

42 and the people began to write in the contracts and transactions: In the first year under Simon, great high priest and commander and leader of the Judeans.

43 In those days he encamped against Gazara and surrounded it with camps and made a siege tower and brought it up to the city and struck one tower and seized it.

44 And those in the siege tower leaped out into the city, and a great disturbance arose in the city.

45 And those in the city went up with wives and children onto the wall, having torn their garments, and cried out with a loud voice, requesting Simon to give them right hands,

46 and said, Do not deal with us according to our wickednesses, but according to your mercy.

47 And Simon relented toward them and did not fight them; and he expelled them from the city and cleansed the houses in which the idols were, and thus entered it, singing hymns and blessing.

48 And he expelled all uncleanness from it and settled in it men who would do the law and fortified it further and built himself a dwelling in it.

49 But those from the citadel in Ierousalem were prevented from going out and going into the country to buy and sell and became very hungry, and many of them perished by famine.

50 And they cried out to Simon to receive right hands, and he gave them to them; and he expelled them from there and cleansed the citadel from its defilements.

51 And they entered it on the twenty-third of the second month of the one hundred and seventy-first year, with praise and palm branches and with lyres and with cymbals and with harps and with hymns and with songs, because a great enemy had been crushed out of Israel.

52 And he established that this day should be observed yearly with gladness. And he further fortified the mountain of the temple beside the citadel; and he and those with him dwelt there.

53 And Simon saw Ioannes his son, that he was a man, and appointed him leader of all the forces; and he dwelt in Gazara.

Chapter 14

1 And in the one hundred and seventy-second year Demetrios the king gathered his forces and went to Media to draw help to himself, so that he might fight Tryphon.

2 And Arsakes, the king of Persia and Media, heard that Demetrios had entered his borders, and sent one of his rulers to seize him alive.

3 And he went and struck the camp of Demetrios and seized him and brought him to Arsakes, and he placed him under guard.

4 And the land of Iouda was quiet all the days of Simon, and he sought good things for his nation, and his authority and his glory pleased them all the days.

5 And with all his glory he took Ioppe as a harbor and made an entrance to the islands of the sea.

6 And he widened the borders for his nation and held possession of the country.

7 And he gathered many captives and became master of Gazara and Baithsoura and the citadel; and he removed the uncleannesses from it, and there was none opposing him.

8 And they were cultivating their land with peace, and the land gave its produce and the trees of the plains their fruit.

9 Elders sat in the broad streets; all were conversing about good things, and the young men put on glorious garments and robes of war.

10 He supplied food to the cities and furnished them with equipment for fortification, until the name of his glory was named as far as the end of the earth.

11 He made peace upon the land, and Israel rejoiced with great gladness.

12 And each sat under his vine and his fig tree, and there was none terrifying them.

13 And one fighting them ceased from the land, and the kings were crushed in those days.

14 And he strengthened all the lowly of his people; he sought out the law and removed every lawless and wicked person;

15 he glorified the holy places and multiplied the vessels of the holy places.

16 And it was heard in Rome that Ionathan had died, and as far as Sparta, and they were greatly grieved.

17 But when they heard that Simon his brother had become high priest in his place and that he held possession of the country and the cities in it,

18 they wrote to him on bronze tablets to renew with him the friendship and alliance which they had established with Ioudas and Ionathan his brothers.

19 And they were read before the assembly in Ierousalem.

20 And this is the copy of the letters which the Spartans sent: The rulers of the Spartans and the city to Simon the great priest and the elders and the priests and the rest of the people of the Judeans, their brothers, greetings.

21 The ambassadors sent to our people reported to us concerning your glory and honor, and we rejoiced at their arrival.

22 And we recorded what was said by them in the deliberations of the people thus: Noumenios, son of Antiochos, and Antipatros, son of Iason, ambassadors of the Judeans, came to us renewing the friendship with us.

23 And it pleased the people to receive the men gloriously and to place the copy of their words in the books designated for the people, so that the people of the Spartans might have a memorial. And they wrote the copy of these things to Simon the high priest.

24 After these things Simon sent Noumenios to Rome, having a great golden shield weighing a thousand minas, to establish the alliance with them.

25 But when the people heard these matters, they said, What thanks shall we repay Simon and his sons?

26 For he and his brothers and the house of his father gave strength and fought the enemies of Israel away from them and established freedom for it. And they recorded it on bronze tablets and placed it on pillars on Mount Sion.

27 And this is the copy of the writing: On the eighteenth of Eloul of the one hundred and seventy-second year — and this is the third year under Simon the great high priest in asaramel —

28 at a great gathering of priests and people and rulers of the nation and the elders of the country, he made it known to us;

29 since wars occurred often in the country, but Simon, son of Mattathias, a priest of the sons of Ioarib, and his brothers gave themselves to the danger and stood against the adversaries of their nation, so that their holy places and the law might stand, and with great glory they glorified their nation.

30 And Ionathan gathered their nation and became high priest for them and was added to his people,

31 and their enemies wished to enter their country and stretch out hands against their holy places;

32 then Simon stood against them and fought for his nation and expended much of his own money and supplied weapons to the men of the force of his nation and gave them pay

33 and fortified the cities of Judea and Baithsoura on the borders of Judea, where the weapons of the enemies had been previously, and placed a garrison there, Judean men.

34 And he fortified Ioppe by the sea and Gazara on the borders of Azotos, in which the enemies had previously dwelt, and settled Judeans there, and whatever was suitable for their restoration he placed in them.

35 And the people saw the faithfulness of Simon and the glory which he had resolved to bring to his nation, and appointed him their leader and high priest because he had done all these things, and the righteousness and the faithfulness which he maintained toward his nation, and he sought in every way to exalt his people.

36 And in his days it prospered in his hands for the nations to be removed from their country, and those in the city of Dauid in Ierousalem who had made themselves a citadel, from which they went out and defiled the surroundings of the holy places and inflicted a great blow upon purity.

37 And he settled Judean men in it and fortified it for the security of the country and the city and raised the walls of Ierousalem.

38 And King Demetrios confirmed the high priesthood for him according to these things

39 and made him one of his friends and glorified him with great glory.

40 For he heard that the Judeans had been called friends and allies and brothers by the Romans, and that they had met Simon's ambassadors gloriously,

41 and that the Judeans and the priests had consented that Simon should be their leader and high priest forever, until a faithful prophet should arise,

42 and that he should be commander over them, and that he should have care concerning the holy places, to appoint through himself those over their works and over the country and over the weapons and over the strongholds,

43 and that he should have care concerning the holy places, and that he should be obeyed by all, and that all contracts in the country should be written in his name, and that he should clothe himself in purple and wear gold;

44 and it shall not be permitted to anyone of the people and the priests to set aside any of these things or contradict what will be spoken by him or gather a gathering in the country without him or clothe himself in purple or fasten on a golden clasp;

45 but whoever acts contrary to these things or sets aside any of these things shall be liable.

46 And all the people consented to establish for Simon that he should act according to these words.

47 And Simon accepted and consented to serve as high priest and to be commander and ruler of the nation of the Judeans and priests and to preside over all.

48 And they said to place this writing on bronze tablets and erect them in the enclosure of the holy places in a conspicuous place,

49 but to place their copies in the treasury, so that Simon and his sons might have them.

Chapter 15

1 And Antiochos, son of Demetrios the king, sent letters from the islands of the sea to Simon, priest and ruler of the nation of the Judeans, and to the whole nation,

2 and they contained this form: King Antiochos to Simon the great priest and ruler of the nation and to the nation of the Judeans, greetings.

3 Since some pestilent men have gained possession of the kingdom of our fathers, but I wish to claim the kingdom, so that I may restore it as it was previously, and I have recruited a multitude of forces and prepared warships,

4 and I wish to land in the country, so that I may pursue those who have destroyed our country and those who have desolated many cities in my kingdom,

5 now therefore I confirm for you all the remissions which the kings before me granted you, and whatever other gifts they granted you.

6 And I have permitted you to make your own coinage, currency for your country,

7 and for Ierousalem and the holy places to be free; and all the weapons, as many as you prepared, and the strongholds which you built, which you possess, let them remain yours.

8 And every royal debt and the future royal dues, from now and for all time, let them be remitted to you;

9 but when we take hold of our kingdom, we shall glorify you and your nation and the temple with great glory, so that your glory may become manifest in all the earth.

10 In the one hundred and seventy-fourth year Antiochos went out into the land of his fathers, and all the forces came together to him, so that few were with Tryphon.

11 And Antiochos pursued him, and he came fleeing to Dora, which is by the sea;

12 for he knew that evils had gathered against him, and the forces had abandoned him.

13 And Antiochos encamped against Dora, and with him were one hundred and twenty thousand fighting men and eight thousand cavalry.

14 And he surrounded the city, and the ships joined from the sea, and he pressed the city from the land and the sea and permitted no one to go out or enter.

15 And Noumenios and those with him came from Rome, having letters to the kings and the countries in which these things had been written:

16 Leukios, consul of the Romans, to King Ptolemaios, greetings.

17 The ambassadors of the Judeans came to us, our friends and allies, renewing the friendship and alliance from the beginning, sent from Simon the high priest and the people of the Judeans,

18 and they brought a golden shield of a thousand minas.

19 It therefore pleased us to write to the kings and the countries that they should not seek evils for them and should not fight them and their cities and their country, and that they should not act as allies of those fighting against them.

20 And we decided to receive the shield from them.

21 If therefore any pestilent men have escaped from their country to you, hand them over to Simon the high priest, so that he may punish them according to their law.

22 And he wrote the same things to Demetrios the king and Attalos and Ariarathes and Arsakes

23 and to all the countries, and Sampsame and the Spartans and to Delos and to Myndos and to Sikyon and to Caria and to Samos and to Pamphylia and to Lycia and to Halikarnassos and to Rhodes and to Phaselis and to Kos and to Side and to Arados and Gortyna and Knidos and Cyprus and Kyrene.

24 And they wrote the copy of these things to Simon the high priest.

25 But Antiochos the king encamped against Dora a second time, continually bringing his hands against it and making engines, and shut Tryphon in from going out and entering.

26 And Simon sent him two thousand chosen men to act as his allies, and silver and gold and sufficient equipment.

27 And he did not wish to receive them, but set aside everything that he had previously agreed with him, and was becoming estranged from him.

28 And he sent to him Athenobios, one of his friends, to confer with him, saying, You hold possession of Ioppe and Gazara and the citadel in Ierousalem, cities of my kingdom.

29 You have desolated their borders and inflicted a great blow upon the land and become masters of many places in my kingdom.

30 Now therefore hand over the cities which you seized and the tributes of the places of which you became masters outside the borders of Judea.

31 But if not, give in their place five hundred talents of silver, and for the destruction which you have wrought and the tributes of the cities another five hundred talents; but if not, we shall come and wage war against you.

32 And Athenobios, the friend of the king, came to Ierousalem and saw Simon's glory and a sideboard with golden and silver vessels and a substantial retinue, and was astonished and reported to him the words of the king.

33 And Simon answered and said to him, We have neither taken foreign land nor gained possession of things belonging to others, but of the inheritance of our fathers; but it was seized by our enemies without judgment at a certain time;

34 but we, having an opportunity, hold fast to the inheritance of our fathers.

35 But concerning Ioppe and Gazara, which you demand, these inflicted a great blow upon the people and our country; for these we shall give a hundred talents.

36 And he did not answer him a word, but returned with wrath to the king and reported to him these words and Simon's glory and everything that he had seen, and the king was angry with great anger.

37 But Tryphon boarded a ship and fled to Orthosia.

38 And the king appointed Kendebaios chief commander of the coast and gave him infantry and cavalry forces;

39 and he ordered him to encamp facing Judea and ordered him to build Kedron and fortify the gates and to fight the people; but the king was pursuing Tryphon.

40 And Kendebaios arrived at Iamneia and began to provoke the people and enter Judea and take the people captive and murder.

41 And he built Kedron and stationed horsemen and forces there, so that going out they might traverse the roads of Judea, as the king had ordered him.

Chapter 16

1 And Ioannes went up from Gazara and reported to Simon his father what Kendebaios had carried out.

2 And Simon called his two elder sons, Ioudas and Ioannes, and said to them, I and my brothers and the house of my father have fought the wars of Israel from youth until today, and it prospered in our hands to deliver Israel many times;

3 but now I have grown old, and you, by mercy, are sufficient in years; take the place of me and my brother, and go out and fight on behalf of our nation, and may the help from heaven be with you.

4 And he selected from the country twenty thousand fighting men and horsemen, and they went against Kendebaios and slept in Modein.

5 And they arose in the morning and went into the plain, and behold, a great force to meet them, infantry and horsemen, and a torrent was between them.

6 And he encamped facing them, he and his people. And he saw the people afraid to cross the torrent and crossed first; and the men saw him and crossed behind him.

7 And he divided the people, and the horsemen in the midst of the infantry; but the cavalry of the adversaries was very numerous.

8 And they blew with the trumpets, and Kendebaios and his camp were routed, and many wounded fell from among them; but those left fled into the stronghold.

9 Then Ioudas, the brother of Ioannes, was wounded; but Ioannes pursued them until he came to Kedron, which he had built.

10 And they fled into the towers in the fields of Azotos, and he burned it with fire, and about two thousand men fell from among them. And he returned to Judea with peace.

11 And Ptolemaios, the son of Aboubos, had been appointed commander over the plain of Iericho and had much silver and gold;

12 for he was the son-in-law of the high priest.

13 And his heart was exalted, and he wished to gain possession of the country and was plotting deceitfully against Simon and his sons to remove them.

14 But Simon was visiting the cities in the country and attending to their care; and he went down to Iericho, he and Mattathias and Ioudas his sons, in the one hundred and seventy-seventh year, in the eleventh month [this is the month Sabat].

15 And the son of Aboubos received them deceitfully in the small stronghold called Dok, which he had built, and made them a great drinking feast and hid men there.

16 And when Simon and his sons became drunk, Ptolemaios and those with him rose and took their weapons and came in upon Simon at the banquet and killed him and his two sons and some of his servants.

17 And he committed great treachery and repaid evil things in place of good things.

18 And Ptolemaios wrote these things and sent them to the king, so that he might send him forces for help and hand over their country and the cities.

19 And he sent others to Gazara to remove Ioannes, and to the commanders of thousands he sent letters to come to him, so that he might give them silver and gold and gifts,

20 and he sent others to seize Ierousalem and the mountain of the temple.

21 And someone ran ahead and reported to Ioannes in Gazara that his father and his brothers had perished, and that he has sent to kill you also.

22 And on hearing it he was greatly astonished and seized the men who had come to destroy him and killed them; for he learned that they were seeking to destroy him.

23 And the remaining accounts of Ioannes and his wars and his deeds of courage which he courageously performed, and the building of the walls which he built, and his acts,

24 behold, these have been written in the book of the days of his high priesthood, from when he became high priest after his father.

2 Maccabees

Chapter 1

1 To the brothers, the Judeans in Egypt, greetings: the brothers, the Judeans in Ierosolyma and those in the country of Judea, good peace;

2 and may God do good to you and remember his covenant with Abraam and Isaak and Iakob, his faithful servants;

3 and may he give you all a heart to revere him and do his wills with a great heart and a willing soul;

4 and may he open your heart in his law and in the ordinances and make peace

5 and hear your petitions and be reconciled to you and not abandon you at an evil time.

6 And now we are here praying for you.

7 While Demetrios was reigning, in the one hundred and sixty-ninth year, we the Judeans have written to you in the affliction and in the crisis that came upon us in these years, since Iason and those with him revolted from the holy land and the kingdom

8 and burned the gateway and poured out innocent blood; and we entreated the Lord and were heard and offered sacrifice and fine flour and lit the lamps and set out the loaves.

9 And now, that you may observe the days of tent-pitching of the month Chaseleu. In the one hundred and eighty-eighth year.

10 Those in Ierosolyma and those in Judea and the council of elders and Ioudas to Aristoboulos, teacher of Ptolemaios the king, who is of the race of the anointed priests, and to the Judeans in Egypt, greetings and good health.

11 Having been saved by God from great dangers, we thank him greatly, as being arrayed against a king;

12 for he himself cast out those arrayed in the holy city.

13 For the leader, having come to Persia, and the force around him that seemed irresistible were cut down in the temple of Nanaia, the priests of Nanaia having used deception.

14 For Antiochos and the friends with him arrived at the place as though to dwell with her, for the sake of receiving the greater funds on account of a dowry,

15 and when the priests of Nanaion had set them out and he had approached with a few into the enclosure of the sacred precinct, having shut the temple as Antiochos entered,

16 having opened the hidden door of the paneled ceiling, throwing stones they struck down the leader, and having cut them into limbs and removed their heads, they threw them to those outside.

17 In all things blessed is our God, who handed over those who acted impiously.

18 Being about to observe the purification of the temple on the twenty-fifth of Chaseleu, we considered it necessary to explain to you, so that you yourselves also may observe the feast of tent-pitching and of the fire, when Neemias, who built both the temple and the altar, offered sacrifices.

19 For also when our fathers were being led to Persia, the pious priests of that time took some of the fire of the altar and secretly hid it in the hollow of a well having a dry condition, in which they secured it so that the place was unknown to all.

20 But after many years had passed, when it pleased God, Neemias, sent by the king of Persia, sent the descendants of the priests who had hidden it to fetch the fire; but when they explained to us that they had not found fire but thick water, he ordered them to draw it and bring it.

21 And when the things for the sacrifices had been brought up, Neemias ordered the priests to sprinkle with the water both the wood and the things laid upon it.

22 And when this happened and time passed and the sun shone out, having previously been clouded, a great fire was kindled, so that all marveled.

23 And the priests made prayer while the sacrifice was being consumed, both the priests and all, Ionathes beginning, and the rest responding, as did Neemias;

24 and the prayer had this form: Lord, Lord God, creator of all, fearful and strong and just and merciful, the only king and kind,

25 the only provider, the only just and almighty and eternal one, who saves Israel from every evil, who made the fathers chosen and sanctified them,

26 accept the sacrifice on behalf of all your people Israel and preserve your portion and sanctify it.

27 Gather together our dispersion, free those enslaved among the nations, look upon those despised and abhorred, and let the nations know that you are our God.

28 Torment those who oppress and outrage in arrogance.

29 Plant your people in your holy place, as Moyses said.

30 And the priests sang the hymns in accompaniment.

31 And when the things of the sacrifice had been consumed, Neemias also ordered the remaining water to be poured upon larger stones.

32 And when this happened, a flame was kindled; but when the light from the altar shone back, it was consumed.

33 And when the matter became manifest, it was also reported to the king of the Persians that in the place where the deported priests had hidden the fire the water appeared, from which those with Neemias also purified the things of the sacrifice,

34 and the king fenced it around and made it sacred, having examined the matter.

35 And from those whom the king favored he received many valuable things and shared them.

36 And those with Neemias called this nephthar, which is interpreted as purification; but it is called nephthai by most.

Chapter 2

1 And it is found in the records that Ieremias the prophet ordered those being deported to take some of the fire, as has been indicated,

2 and how the prophet instructed those being deported, having given them the law, that they should not forget the ordinances of the Lord, and that they should not be led astray in their minds on seeing golden and silver statues and the adornment around them;

3 and saying other such things, he exhorted that the law should not depart from their heart.

4 And it was in the writing how the prophet, a divine communication having come to him, ordered the tent and the ark to follow along; and how he went out to the mountain where Moyses had gone up and beheld the inheritance of God.

5 And Ieremias came and found a cavernous dwelling and brought the tent and the ark and the altar of incense in there and blocked the door.

6 And some of those following along approached to mark the way, and they could not find it.

7 But when Ieremias learned of it, he blamed them and said, The place shall also be unknown until God gathers a gathering of the people and becomes merciful;

8 and then the Lord shall show these things, and the glory of the Lord and the cloud shall be seen, as it was manifested in the time of Moyses, as Salomon also requested that the place should be greatly sanctified.

9 And it was also explained how, having wisdom, he offered a sacrifice of dedication and of the completion of the temple.

10 Just as Moyses also prayed to the Lord, and fire came down from heaven and consumed the things of the sacrifice, so Salomon also prayed, and the fire came down and consumed the whole burnt offerings.

11 And Moyses said, Because the offering concerning sin was not eaten, it was consumed.

12 In the same way Salomon also observed the eight days.

13 And in the records and in the memoirs concerning Neemias the same things were also related, and how, founding a library, he gathered the books concerning the kings and prophets and those of Dauid and letters of kings concerning votive offerings.

14 And in the same way Ioudas also gathered all the things scattered because of the war that had occurred for us, and they are with us;

15 if therefore you have need of them, send those who will carry them away for you.

16 Being about to observe the purification, therefore, we wrote to you; you will therefore do well by observing the days.

17 And God, who saved all his people and restored to all the inheritance and the kingship and the priesthood and the sanctification,

18 as he promised through the law; for we hope in God that he will quickly have mercy on us and gather us from what is under heaven into the holy place; for he delivered us from great evils and purified the place.

19 And the matters concerning Ioudas Makkabaios and his brothers and the purification of the very great temple and the dedication of the altar,

20 and further the wars against Antiochos the Illustrious and his son Eupator,

21 and the manifestations from heaven that occurred for those who zealously performed courageous deeds on behalf of Judaism, so that, being few, they plundered the whole country and pursued the barbarian multitudes,

22 and recovered the temple renowned throughout the whole inhabited world and freed the city and restored the laws that were about to be dissolved, the Lord having become merciful to them with all gentleness,

23 set forth by Iason of Kyrene in five books, we shall attempt to abridge in one composition.

24 For seeing the mass of the numbers and the existing difficulty for those wishing to enter into the narratives of the history because of the multitude of the material,

25 we took care for entertainment for those wishing to read, and for ease for those eager to take it up through memory, and for benefit for all those encountering it.

26 And for us who have accepted the hardship of the abridgment it is not easy, but the undertaking is one of sweat and sleeplessness,

27 just as it is not easy for one preparing a banquet and seeking the benefit of others; nevertheless, for the gratitude of the many we shall gladly bear the hardship,

28 leaving the exact examination of each matter to the author, but laboring to follow the outlines of the abridgment.

29 For just as the architect of a new house must take care of the whole foundation, but the one undertaking encaustic work and painting must examine the things suitable for adornment, so I think it is also with us.

30 To enter in and make a circuit of accounts and inquire minutely into particulars belongs to the originator of the history;

31 but to pursue conciseness of expression and decline the elaborate treatment of the subject must be allowed to the one making the recasting.

32 From here therefore let us begin the narrative, having added this much to what was said before; for it is foolish to multiply what is before the history but abridge the history.

Chapter 3

1 While the holy city was inhabited with all peace and the laws were maintained most excellently because of both the piety and hatred of wickedness of Onias the high priest,

2 it happened that even the kings themselves honored the place and glorified the temple with the finest gifts,

3 so that even Seleukos, the king of Asia, supplied from his own revenues all the expenses falling due for the services of the sacrifices.

4 But a certain Simon of the tribe of Beniamin, appointed superintendent of the temple, quarreled with the high priest concerning the supervision of the market in the city;

5 and being unable to overcome Onias, he came to Apollonios, son of Tharseas, who at that time was commander of Coele Syria and Phoenicia,

6 and reported that the treasury in Ierosolyma was full of unspeakable wealth, so that the multitude of valuables was innumerable, and that they did not belong to the account of the sacrifices, but that it was possible for these things to fall under the king's authority.

7 And Apollonios met with the king and informed him concerning the funds reported to him; and he selected Heliodoros, who was over the affairs, and sent him, giving orders to carry away the aforementioned funds.

8 And immediately Heliodoros undertook the journey, ostensibly to visit the cities in Coele Syria and Phoenicia, but in reality to fulfill the king's intention.

9 And arriving in Ierosolyma and being kindly received by the high priest of the city, he related the report that had been made and explained why he was present; and he inquired whether these things were actually so.

10 And the high priest pointed out that they were deposits of both widows and orphans,

11 and some also of Hyrkanos, son of Tobias, a man placed in very great eminence — thus the impious Simon was misrepresenting it — and the whole was four hundred talents of silver and two hundred of gold;

12 and that it was entirely impossible that those who had trusted in the holiness of the place and in the dignity and inviolability of the temple honored throughout the whole world should be wronged.

13 But Heliodoros, because of the royal orders he held, said that these things must in every case be taken up into the royal treasury.

14 And having appointed a day, he entered to manage the inspection concerning these things; and there was no small anguish throughout the whole city.

15 And the priests, having cast themselves before the altar in their priestly robes, called toward heaven upon the one who had legislated concerning a deposit, to preserve these things safe for those who had deposited them.

16 And to see the appearance of the high priest was to be wounded in mind; for his face and the alteration of his complexion manifested the anguish of his soul;

17 for a certain dread and trembling of body had poured around the man, through which the pain present in his heart became evident to those beholding him.

18 And further they sprang out of the houses in crowds for a supplication of all the people, because the place was about to come into contempt.

19 And the women, girded with sackcloth beneath their breasts, filled the roads; and of the secluded virgins, some ran together to the gateways, others to the walls, and some leaned out through the windows;

20 and all, stretching their hands toward heaven, made their entreaty;

21 and the mingled prostration of the multitude and the expectation of the greatly anguished high priest were to be pitied.

22 They therefore called upon the all-powerful Lord to preserve the entrusted things safe for those who had entrusted them, with all security.

23 But Heliodoros carried out what had been decided.

24 And when he was already present there with the bodyguards at the treasury, the ruler of the spirits and of all authority made a great manifestation, so that all those who had dared to come together, struck by the power of God, turned to faintness and cowardice;

25 for a certain horse appeared to them, having a fearful rider and adorned with most beautiful harness, and rushing forcefully it struck at Heliodoros with its front hoofs; and the one seated upon it appeared to have golden armor.

26 And two other young men appeared to him, outstanding in strength and most beautiful in glory and splendid in dress, who also stood around him on either side and scourged him unceasingly, casting many blows upon him.

27 And when he suddenly fell to the ground and was enveloped in great darkness, they seized him and placed him on a litter,

28 and carried the one who had just entered the aforementioned treasury with a great retinue and all his bodyguard, now helpless to himself, having manifestly recognized the power of God.

29 And he lay cast down because of the divine working, speechless and deprived of all hope and salvation,

30 but they blessed the Lord who wondrously glorified his own place, and the temple, which a little before had been full of dread and disturbance, was filled with joy and gladness when the almighty Lord appeared.

31 And quickly some of Heliodoros' associates requested Onias to call upon the Most High and grant life to the one lying utterly at his last breath.

32 And the high priest, becoming apprehensive lest the king should form an opinion that some wrongdoing concerning Heliodoros had been carried out by the Judeans, offered a sacrifice for the man's salvation.

33 And while the high priest made the atonement, the same young men appeared again to Heliodoros, clothed in the same garments, and stood and said, Have much gratitude to Onias the high priest, for because of him the Lord has granted you life;

34 but you, having been scourged from heaven, proclaim to all the magnificent might of God. And having said these things, they became invisible.

35 And Heliodoros offered a sacrifice to the Lord and vowed very great vows to the one who had preserved his life, and greeted Onias and broke camp to go to the king.

36 And he testified to all the works of the greatest God which he had beheld with his eyes.

37 And when the king asked Heliodoros what sort of man would be suitable to be sent once again to Ierosolyma, he said,

38 If you have any enemy or plotter against your affairs, send him there, and you will receive him scourged, if indeed he is even saved, because some power of God is truly about the place;

39 for the one who himself has his dwelling in heaven is overseer and helper of that place, and strikes and destroys those arriving to do harm.

40 And the matters concerning Heliodoros and the preservation of the treasury proceeded thus.

Chapter 4

1 But the aforementioned Simon, who had become informer concerning the funds and the fatherland, spoke evil of Onias, as though he himself had shaken Heliodoros and had become the maker of the evils,

2 and he dared to call the benefactor of the city and guardian of his fellow nationals and zealot for the laws a plotter against the affairs.

3 And when the enmity advanced so far that even murders were being carried out through one of those approved by Simon,

4 Onias, seeing the severity of the rivalry and Apollonios, son of Menestheus, the commander of Coele Syria and Phoenicia, increasing Simon's wickedness,

5 went to the king, becoming no accuser of the citizens, but looking to the advantage, common and individual, of the whole multitude;

6 for he saw that without royal care it was impossible for affairs still to obtain peace and that Simon would take no pause from his folly.

7 But when Seleukos departed this life and Antiochos, called the Illustrious, received the kingdom, Iason, the brother of Onias, fraudulently supplanted him in the high priesthood,

8 promising the king in an interview three hundred and sixty talents of silver and eighty talents from some other revenue.

9 And besides these he promised to pay another hundred and fifty, if through his authority he were permitted to establish a gymnasium and an institution for youths and register those in Ierosolyma as Antiochenes.

10 And when the king consented and he took hold of the office, he immediately shifted his fellow tribesmen to the Greek character.

11 And setting aside the benevolent royal concessions established for the Judeans through Ioannes, the father of Eupolemos, who had made the embassy for friendship and alliance with the Romans, and dissolving the lawful civic institutions, he introduced unlawful customs.

12 For he gladly established a gymnasium beneath the citadel itself, and subjecting the best of the youths, brought them under the broad-brimmed hat.

13 And there was thus a certain height of Hellenism and an advance of foreign ways because of the surpassing impurity of the impious Iason, who was no high priest,

14 so that the priests were no longer eager for the services of the altar, but despising the temple and neglecting the sacrifices, they hurried to participate in the unlawful provision in the wrestling ground after the summons of the discus,

15 and setting the ancestral honors at nothing, but considering the Greek glories most beautiful.

16 Because of these things a severe predicament also encompassed them, and those whose ways they envied and to whom they wished to be entirely assimilated, these they had as enemies and punishers;

17 for to act impiously toward the divine laws is no light thing, but the following time will show these things.

18 And when the five-year games were being held in Tyre and the king was present,

19 the polluted Iason sent sacred envoys, being Antiochenes from Ierosolyma, carrying three hundred drachmas of silver for the sacrifice of Herakles, which those carrying them also requested not to use for sacrifice, because it was not fitting, but to put toward another expense.

20 These things therefore were assigned by the sender to the sacrifice of Herakles, but because of those carrying them to the construction of the triremes.

21 And when Apollonios, son of Menestheus, had been sent into Egypt for the first enthronement ceremonies of King Philometor, Antiochos learned that he had become estranged from his affairs and took care for his own security; therefore, arriving at Ioppe, he came to Ierosolyma.

22 And being magnificently received by Iason and the city, he was welcomed with torch-bearing and shouts; then thus he marched to camp in Phoenicia.

23 And after a period of three years Iason sent Menelaos, brother of the previously mentioned Simon, carrying the funds to the king and to complete reports concerning necessary affairs.

24 And he, being introduced to the king and glorifying him with the appearance of authority, brought the high priesthood to himself, exceeding Iason by three hundred talents of silver.

25 And having received the royal orders, he arrived, bringing nothing worthy of the high priesthood, but having the passions of a cruel tyrant and the rages of a barbarous beast.

26 And Iason, who had fraudulently supplanted his own brother, being fraudulently supplanted by another, was driven as a fugitive into the Ammanite country.

27 But Menelaos held the office, yet was not keeping anything in order concerning the funds promised to the king;

28 and Sostratos, the governor of the citadel, was demanding payment, for the collection of the funds belonged to him; for this reason the two were summoned by the king,

29 and Menelaos left Lysimachos his own brother as successor in the high priesthood, but Sostratos left Krates, who was over the Cyprians.

30 And while such things were taking place, it happened that the people of Tarsos and Mallos were revolting because they had been given as a gift to Antiochis, the king's concubine.

31 The king therefore came quickly to settle the affairs, leaving Andronikos, one of those in high rank, as his deputy.

32 But Menelaos, thinking he had obtained a favorable opportunity, stole some of the golden vessels of the temple and presented them to Andronikos, and had sold others both to Tyre and to the surrounding cities.

33 And Onias, having learned these things clearly, exposed them, having withdrawn into a place of asylum at Daphne, situated near Antiocheia.

34 Therefore Menelaos took Andronikos privately and exhorted him to subdue Onias; and he came to Onias, having been persuaded to deceit, and greeted him, giving his right hand with oaths, and although under suspicion, persuaded him to come out of the asylum, and immediately shut him out of life, without reverence for justice.

35 For this reason not only Judeans but also many of the other nations were indignant and distressed at the unjust murder of the man.

36 And when the king returned from the places in Cilicia, the Judeans in the city petitioned concerning the unreasonable killing of Onias, the Greeks also sharing their hatred of the wickedness.

37 Antiochos therefore was grieved in soul and turned to mercy and wept because of the moderation and great good order of the departed,

38 and inflamed with anger, immediately removed Andronikos' purple and tore his tunics and led him around through the whole city to the very place where he had acted impiously against Onias; there he removed the bloodstained man from life, the Lord having repaid him the fitting punishment.

39 And when many temple robberies had been committed in the city by Lysimachos with Menelaos' consent, and the report had spread abroad, the multitude gathered against Lysimachos, many golden vessels having already been carried away.

40 And when the crowds were rising and filling with anger, Lysimachos armed about three thousand and began unjust violence, a certain Auranos leading, advanced in age but no less also in folly;

41 and seeing Lysimachos' attack, some seized stones, others thick pieces of wood, and some grasped handfuls of the ashes lying nearby, and hurled them indiscriminately at those with Lysimachos;

42 for this reason they made many of them wounded and also struck some down and drove all into flight, but the temple robber himself they subdued beside the treasury.

43 And concerning these things a trial arose against Menelaos.

44 And when the king arrived in Tyre, the three men sent by the council of elders made their plea before him.

45 But Menelaos, already defeated, promised sufficient money to Ptolemaios, son of Dorymenes, to persuade the king.

46 Therefore Ptolemaios took the king aside into a certain colonnade as though to refresh him, and changed his mind,

47 and he released Menelaos, the cause of the whole wickedness, from the accusations, but upon the wretched men, who, even if they had pleaded before Scythians, would have been released uncondemned, upon these he pronounced death.

48 Quickly therefore those who had spoken for the city and peoples and the sacred vessels underwent the unjust penalty.

49 For this reason even the Tyrians, hating the wickedness, magnificently supplied the things for their burial.

50 But Menelaos, because of the greed of those in power, remained in office, growing in wickedness, having become a great plotter against the citizens.

Chapter 5

1 And about this time Antiochos undertook the second expedition into Egypt.

2 And it happened throughout the whole city for almost forty days that horsemen appeared running through the air, having robes interwoven with gold and armed with lances in companies, and drawings of swords,

3 and squadrons of horses arrayed and assaults taking place and charges of both sides and movements of shields and multitudes of spears and discharges of missiles and flashes of golden adornments and armor of every kind.

4 Therefore all requested that the manifestation should have occurred for good.

5 And when a false rumor arose that Antiochos had departed this life, Iason took no fewer than a thousand and suddenly carried out an attack upon the city; and when those upon the wall were driven together and the city was finally already being seized, Menelaos fled into the citadel.

6 And Iason slaughtered his own citizens unsparingly, not considering that success against his kinsmen was the greatest misfortune, but thinking he was erecting trophies over enemies and not fellow nationals.

7 He did not take hold of the office, but receiving shame as the end of his plot, departed again as a fugitive into Ammanitis.

8 Finally therefore he met an evil end. Accused before Aretas, the ruler of the Arabs, fleeing from city to city, pursued by all, hated as an apostate from the laws and abhorred as executioner of his fatherland and citizens, he was cast out into Egypt,

9 and he who had alienated many from their fatherland perished in a foreign land, having sailed to the Lakedaimonians as though to obtain shelter because of their kinship.

10 And he who had cast out a multitude unburied became unmourned and shared in no burial whatsoever or ancestral tomb.

11 And when reports concerning what had happened reached the king, he supposed that Judea was revolting; therefore, setting out from Egypt, made beastlike in soul, he took the city by the spear

12 and ordered the soldiers to cut down unsparingly those they encountered and slaughter those going up into the houses.

13 And there was killing of young and elderly, destruction of the immature and women and children, slaughter of virgins and infants.

14 And eighty thousand were destroyed in the whole three days, forty thousand in attacks of hands, and no fewer than those slaughtered were sold.

15 And not satisfied with these things, he dared to enter the holiest temple of all the earth, having as guide Menelaos, who had become betrayer of both the laws and the fatherland,

16 and taking the sacred vessels with his polluted hands and dragging together with his profane hands the things dedicated by other kings for the increase and glory and honor of the place.

17 And Antiochos was exalted in mind, not seeing that because of the sins of those dwelling in the city the Master had been briefly angered, therefore neglect had occurred concerning the place.

18 But if it had not happened to be involved in many sins, as was Heliodoros, sent by Seleukos the king for the inspection of the treasury, this man, advancing, would immediately have been scourged and overturned from his audacity.

19 But the Lord did not choose the nation because of the place, but the place because of the nation.

20 Therefore the place itself also, having shared in the nation's misfortunes, partook in benefits that occurred afterward, and what had been abandoned in the anger of the Almighty was again restored with all glory in the reconciliation of the great Master.

21 Antiochos therefore, having carried away eighteen hundred talents from the temple, departed quickly into Antiocheia, supposing in his arrogance that he could make the land navigable and the open sea walkable because of the exaltation of his heart.

22 And he also left overseers to afflict the race: in Ierosolyma, Philip, a Phrygian by race, but having a character more barbarous than the one who appointed him,

23 and in Garizin, Andronikos, and besides these Menelaos, who exalted himself against the citizens worst of the others, and having a hateful disposition toward the Judean citizens.

24 And he sent Apollonios, the commander of the Mysians, with an army of twenty-two thousand, ordering him to slaughter all those of full age, but sell the women and the younger ones.

25 And he arrived in Ierosolyma and pretended to be peaceful, and waited until the holy day of the sabbath, and finding the Judeans inactive, ordered those under him to parade under arms

26 and stabbed all those who had come out to view it, and rushing into the city with the weapons, laid low considerable multitudes.

27 But Ioudas, also called Makkabaios, being one of about ten and withdrawing into the wilderness, lived in the mountains in the manner of beasts with those with him, and they continued eating vegetation as food, so as not to partake of the pollution.

Chapter 6

1 And after no long time the king sent out an elderly Athenian to compel the Judeans to depart from the ancestral laws and not conduct their life by the laws of God,

2 and also to pollute the temple in Ierosolyma and name it after Olympian Zeus, and the one in Garizin, as those dwelling in the place happened to be, after Zeus of Strangers.

3 And the intensification of the wickedness was severe and altogether grievous.

4 For the temple was filled with debauchery and revels by the nations, who dallied with courtesans and had intercourse with women in the sacred enclosures, and further brought inside things that were not fitting.

5 And the altar was filled with unlawful things forbidden by the laws.

6 And it was not possible to keep the sabbath or preserve ancestral feasts or simply confess oneself to be a Judean,

7 and they were led with bitter compulsion to eat sacrificial entrails on the monthly birthday of the king, and when the feast of Dionysia occurred, they were compelled to carry ivy and march in procession for Dionysos.

8 And a decree went out to the neighboring Greek cities, Ptolemaios having proposed that they conduct the same treatment against the Judeans and make them eat sacrificial entrails,

9 but slaughter those not choosing to change over to Greek ways. It was therefore possible to see the present misery.

10 For two women were brought up who had circumcised their children; and having hung the infants from their breasts and publicly led the women around the city, they hurled them down from the wall.

11 And others who had run together into the nearby caves secretly to observe the seventh day were reported to Philip and burned together, because they scrupled to help themselves in view of the dignity of the most solemn day.

12 I therefore exhort those encountering this book not to shrink back because of the calamities, but to consider the punishments to be for the discipline of our race, not for destruction;

13 for indeed, that those acting impiously are not permitted a long time, but immediately fall into penalties, is a sign of great beneficence.

14 For the Master did not judge that it should also be with us as with the other nations, for whom he waits patiently until they reach the fullness of sins, to punish them,

15 so that he may not afterward punish us when we have reached the completion of our sins.

16 Therefore he never withdraws mercy from us, but while disciplining through calamity, does not abandon his own people.

17 But let these things have been said by us as a reminder; and through a few words we must come to the narrative.

18 A certain Eleazar, one of the foremost scribes, a man already advanced in age and most beautiful in facial appearance, was compelled, with mouth gaping, to eat pork.

19 But he, embracing death with good fame rather than life with pollution, voluntarily advanced to the torture rack,

20 but having spat it out, in the way in which those who endure must approach, resisting the tasting of things not lawful because of affection for life.

21 And those appointed over the unlawful eating of sacrificial entrails, because of their acquaintance with the man from earlier times, took him aside privately and exhorted him to bring meat which it was fitting for him to use, prepared by himself, but to pretend to be eating the meat from the sacrifice ordered by the king,

22 so that by doing this he might be released from death and because of his old friendship with them obtain humane treatment.

23 But he took up a noble resolve worthy of his age and the eminence of his old age and the acquired and conspicuous gray hair and his most excellent conduct from childhood, but rather of the holy and God-established legislation, and accordingly declared quickly, saying to send him onward to Hades.

24 For it is not worthy of our age to pretend, so that many of the young, supposing that the ninety-year-old Eleazar has changed over to foreign ways,

25 may themselves also be led astray because of me through my pretense and for the sake of a little and momentary life, and I acquire pollution and a stain upon my old age.

26 For even if for the present I escape the punishment from human beings, yet neither living nor dead shall I escape the hands of the Almighty.

27 Therefore, courageously departing this life now, I shall appear worthy of my old age,

28 and having left the young a noble example to die eagerly and nobly for the solemn and holy laws. And having said so much, he immediately came to the torture rack.

29 And those leading him changed their goodwill toward him of a little before into ill will, because the aforementioned words, as they supposed, were madness,

30 and being about to die from the blows, he groaned and said, It is manifest to the Lord who has holy knowledge that, though able to be released from death, I endure severe pains in body while being scourged, but in soul I gladly suffer these things because of fear of him.

31 And he therefore departed in this way, having left his own death as an example of nobility and a memorial of virtue, not only to the young but also to most of the nation.

Chapter 7

1 And it also happened that seven brothers with their mother were seized and compelled by the king to partake of unlawful pork, being tortured with whips and sinews.

2 And one of them became spokesman and said thus, What are you going to ask and learn from us? For we are ready to die rather than transgress the ancestral laws.

3 And the king became furious and ordered pans and cauldrons to be heated.

4 And when they were immediately heated, he ordered the tongue of the one who had become their spokesman to be cut out and, after scalping him, to cut off his extremities, the remaining brothers and the mother looking on.

5 And when he had become entirely helpless, he ordered him to be brought to the fire while breathing and fried in the pan. And as the vapor from the pan spread far, they with their mother exhorted one another to die nobly, saying thus,

6 The Lord God watches and truly has compassion upon us, as Moyses explained through the song that testifies against them to their face, saying, And he shall have compassion upon his servants.

7 And when the first departed in this way, they led the second to the mockery, and having torn off the skin of his head with the hair, asked, Will you eat before your body is punished limb by limb?

8 But he answered in the ancestral tongue and said, No. Therefore this one also received the torture in turn, as the first.

9 And coming to his last breath, he said, You, accursed one, release us from the present life, but the king of the world will raise us, who die for his laws, to an eternal revival of life.

10 And after him the third was mocked, and when asked for his tongue, quickly put it forward and confidently stretched out his hands

11 and nobly said, From heaven I possess these, and because of his laws I disregard these, and from him I hope to receive these again;

12 so that the king himself and those with him were astonished at the soul of the young man, how he counted the pains as nothing.

13 And when this one also departed, they tortured the fourth in the same way, maltreating him.

14 And coming near death, he said thus, It is preferable, departing by human hands, to await the hopes from God, to be raised again by him; for you there shall be no resurrection to life.

15 And next they brought the fifth and maltreated him.

16 And looking toward him he said, Having authority among human beings, though corruptible, you do what you wish; but do not think that our race has been abandoned by God;

17 but you wait and behold his magnificent might, how he will torment you and your seed.

18 And after him they led the sixth, and being about to die, he said, Do not be deceived in vain, for we suffer these things because of ourselves, having sinned against our own God; things worthy of wonder have happened;

19 but do not suppose that you will be guiltless, having undertaken to fight God.

20 And the mother was exceedingly marvelous and worthy of good remembrance, who, seeing seven sons perish within the time of one day, bore it courageously because of her hopes in the Lord.

21 And she exhorted each of them in the ancestral tongue, filled with noble resolve and stirring her womanly reasoning with manly spirit, saying to them,

22 I do not know how you appeared in my womb, nor did I grant you spirit and life, and I did not arrange the composition of each;

23 therefore the creator of the world, who formed the origin of humankind and devised the origin of all things, also gives spirit and life back to you again with mercy, as you now disregard yourselves because of his laws.

24 But Antiochos, thinking he was despised and suspecting the reproachful voice, while the youngest was still alive, made his exhortation not only through words, but also assured through oaths that he would both enrich him and make him blessed if he changed from the ancestral ways, and would have him as a friend and entrust him with offices.

25 But when the young man paid no attention at all, the king summoned the mother and urged her to become an adviser to the youth for his salvation.

26 And when he had urged her greatly, she accepted to persuade her son;

27 but bending toward him, mocking the cruel tyrant, she said thus in the ancestral tongue, Son, have mercy on me, who carried you in the womb nine months and nursed you three years and raised you and brought you to this age and nourished you.

28 I request you, child, to look up to heaven and the earth and see all things in them and know that God made them not out of existing things, and the race of human beings comes into being thus.

29 Do not fear this executioner, but becoming worthy of your brothers, accept death, so that in mercy I may receive you with your brothers.

30 And while she was still finishing, the young man said, Whom are you waiting for? I do not obey the command of the king, but I obey the ordinance of the law given to our fathers through Moyses.

31 But you, having become inventor of every wickedness against the Hebrews, shall certainly not escape the hands of God.

32 For we suffer because of our own sins.

33 But if for rebuke and discipline our living Lord has been briefly angered, he will also again be reconciled to his own servants.

34 But you, unholy one and most polluted of all human beings, do not vainly exalt yourself, raging with uncertain hopes, raising a hand against the heavenly children;

35 for you have not yet escaped the judgment of the almighty, overseeing God.

36 For now our brothers, having borne a brief pain, have fallen under God's covenant of perpetual life; but you, by God's judgment, shall bear the just penalties of your arrogance.

37 But I, like the brothers, surrender both body and soul for the ancestral laws, calling upon God to become quickly merciful to the nation and for you, through trials and scourges, to confess that he alone is God,

38 and in me and my brothers to stop the anger of the Almighty which has justly been brought upon our whole race.

39 And the king became furious and treated this one worse than the others, bearing the mockery bitterly.

40 And this one therefore departed pure, trusting entirely in the Lord.

41 And last after the sons the mother died.

42 Let the matters concerning the eating of sacrificial entrails and the surpassing tortures therefore have been set forth to this extent.

Chapter 8

1 But Ioudas, also called Makkabaios, and those with him secretly entered the villages and called their kinsmen, and taking along those who had remained in Judaism, gathered about six thousand.

2 And they called upon the Lord to look upon the people trampled by all, and also to pity the temple profaned by the impious men,

3 and also to have mercy on the city being destroyed and about to become level with the ground, and to hear the blood crying out to him,

4 and also to remember the unlawful destruction of the sinless infants, and concerning the blasphemies that had occurred against his name, and to hate the wickedness.

5 And Makkabaios, having formed a body, was already becoming irresistible to the nations, the Lord's anger having turned to mercy.

6 And coming unexpectedly, he burned cities and villages, and taking the advantageous places and routing not a few of the enemies,

7 he especially took the nights as fellow workers for such attacks. And talk of his manliness resounded everywhere.

8 But Philip, seeing the man gradually coming to advancement and progressing more frequently in successes, wrote to Ptolemaios, the commander of Coele Syria and Phoenicia, to help the king's affairs.

9 And he quickly selected Nikanor, son of Patroklos, one of the first friends, and sent him, subjecting to him nations of all tribes, no fewer than twenty thousand, to remove the entire race of Judea; and he associated with him also Gorgias, a commander and man having experience in warlike affairs.

10 And Nikanor determined to fulfill the tribute for the king to the Romans, being two thousand talents, from the captivity of the Judeans.

11 And immediately he sent to the coastal cities, inviting the purchase of Judean bodies, promising to give ninety bodies for a talent, not expecting the judgment from the Almighty that was about to follow upon him.

12 And news concerning Nikanor's advance reached Ioudas, and when he communicated the presence of the army to those with him,

13 those acting cowardly and distrusting God's judgment were slipping away and removing themselves.

14 But the others sold all the things remaining, and together requested the Lord to deliver those who had been sold by the impious Nikanor before meeting him;

15 and if not because of themselves, yet because of the covenants with their fathers and because of the invocation upon them of his solemn and magnificent name.

16 And Makkabaios gathered those around him, being six thousand in number, and exhorted them not to be struck with terror by the enemies or fear the great multitude of the nations unjustly coming against them, but to contend nobly,

17 having before their eyes the outrage lawlessly carried out by them against the holy place and the maltreatment of the mocked city, and further the dissolution of the ancestral civic order.

18 For they trust in weapons and audacities together, he said, but we trust in the almighty God, who is able to cast down both those coming against us and the whole world with one nod.

19 And further recounting to them also the aids that had occurred in the time of the ancestors and that in the time of Sennacherim, how one hundred and eighty-five thousand perished,

20 and the battle against the Galatians that occurred in Babylonia, how the whole number who came to the affair was eight thousand with four thousand Macedonians, and when the Macedonians were at a loss, the eight thousand destroyed the one hundred and twenty thousand because of the help that came to them from heaven, and received much benefit.

21 By these things he made them confident and ready to die for the laws and the fatherland, and made the army into four parts.

22 And appointing his brothers, Simon and Iosepos and Ionathes, to lead each division, subjecting fifteen hundred to each,

23 and further also Eleazar, having read aloud the sacred book and given the watchword of God's help, himself leading the first company, he joined battle with Nikanor.

24 And when the Almighty became their ally, they slaughtered more than nine thousand of the enemies and made the greater part of Nikanor's army wounded and disabled in their limbs, and compelled all to flee.

25 And they took the money of those who had come for their purchase; and having pursued them together for a considerable distance, they returned, being constrained by the hour;

26 for it was the day before the sabbath, for which reason they did not prolong the pursuit of them.

27 And having collected their weapons and stripped the spoils from the enemies, they occupied themselves with the sabbath, abundantly blessing and giving thanks to the Lord who had saved them for this day, having appointed for them a beginning of mercy.

28 And after the sabbath, having apportioned some of the spoils to those maltreated and to the widows and orphans, they themselves and the children divided the rest.

29 And having accomplished these things and made a common supplication, they requested the merciful Lord to be entirely reconciled to his own servants.

30 And contending with those around Timotheos and Bakchides, they killed more than twenty thousand of them and gained very firm possession of high strongholds and divided much booty, making themselves and those maltreated and orphans and widows and further also elders equal sharers.

31 And having carefully collected their own weapons, they deposited everything in the advantageous places, but brought the rest of the spoils to Ierosolyma.

32 And they killed the tribal leader of those around Timotheos, a most unholy man who had greatly grieved the Judeans.

33 And celebrating victory in the fatherland, they set fire to those who had burned the sacred gateways and to Kallisthenes, who had fled into one small house, and he received the reward worthy of his impiety.

34 But the thrice-accursed Nikanor, who had brought the thousand merchants for the sale of the Judeans,

35 humbled by those considered by him to be least, through the Lord's help, put off his glorious clothing and, making himself solitary, came through the inland country to Antiocheia in the manner of a runaway, having been supremely fortunate at the destruction of the army.

36 And he who had undertaken to accomplish the tribute to the Romans from the captivity of those in Ierosolyma proclaimed that the Judeans had a champion, and that for this reason the Judeans were invulnerable, because they followed the laws ordained by him.

Chapter 9

1 About that time Antiochos happened to have withdrawn in disorder from the regions around Persis.

2 For he had entered the city called Persepolis and attempted to plunder temples and hold the city; therefore, when the multitudes rushed to the aid of arms, they were routed, and it happened that Antiochos, routed by the inhabitants, made a disgraceful retreat.

3 While he was at Ekbatana, news of what had happened to Nikanor and those around Timotheos reached him.

4 Lifted up in anger, he thought to inflict upon the Jews also the malice of those who had put him to flight; therefore he ordered the charioteer to drive without stopping and complete the journey, the judgment from heaven already accompanying him; for he said thus arrogantly, “I will make Hierosolyma a mass grave of Jews when I arrive there.”

5 But the all-seeing Lord, the God of Israel, struck him with an incurable and invisible blow; and just as he finished the statement, an irremediable pain of the entrails and bitter torments within seized him,

6 very justly, since he had tormented the entrails of others with many strange calamities.

7 But he in no way ceased from his haughtiness, and was still filled with arrogance, breathing fire in his anger against the Jews and commanding that the journey be hastened. But it also happened that he fell from the chariot as it sped with a rushing sound, and, suffering a grievous fall, had all the limbs of his body twisted.

8 He who had just thought to command the waves of the sea because of his arrogance beyond human measure, and imagined he would weigh the heights of the mountains in a balance, having come to the ground, was carried along in a litter, displaying to all the manifest power of God,

9 so that worms swarmed up from the body of the impious man, and while he lived in anguish and pain his flesh fell away, and the whole camp was burdened with the putrefaction from his smell.

10 And no one could carry along him who a little earlier thought to touch the heavenly stars, because of the unbearable weight of the smell.

11 Then, therefore, shattered, he began to cease from his great arrogance and to come to recognition, being intensified in his pains at every moment by a divine scourge.

12 And unable even to endure his own smell, he said this: “It is just to submit to God and, being mortal, not to think oneself equal to God.”

13 But the polluted man prayed to the Master who would no longer have mercy on him, saying thus:

14 that he would declare free the holy city, which he was hastening to reach to level to the ground and build into a mass grave,

15 and would make all the Jews equal to Athenians, whom he had resolved not even to consider worthy of burial, but to cast out with their infants to beasts, to be eaten by birds;

16 and would adorn with most beautiful offerings the holy temple which he had previously plundered, and restore all the sacred vessels many times over, and supply from his own revenues the contributions required for the sacrifices;

17 and besides these things would also become a Jew and go through every inhabited place proclaiming the might of God.

18 But as the pains in no way ceased, for the just judgment of God had come upon him, despairing of his own situation, he wrote to the Jews the letter written below, having the character of a supplication, and containing the following:

19 “To the good Jews, the citizens, abundant greetings and health and prosperity, from King and General Antiochos.

20 If you and the children are well, and your affairs are according to your wishes; having my hope toward heaven,

21 I remembered your honor and goodwill affectionately. Returning from the regions of Persis and falling into an illness involving difficulty, I considered it necessary to think of the common security of all.

22 Not despairing of my own situation, but having much hope of escaping the illness,

23 and observing that my father also, at the times when he campaigned in the upper regions, designated his successor,

24 so that, if anything unexpected should happen or anything difficult be reported, those throughout the country, knowing to whom affairs have been left, might not be disturbed;

25 and besides these things considering that the neighboring rulers adjoining the kingdom watch the times and await what will happen, I have designated my son Antiochos king, whom I often entrusted and commended to most of you when going up to the upper satrapies; and I have written to him what is written below.

26 I therefore exhort you and ask that, remembering the benefits collectively and each individually, you maintain your existing goodwill toward me and my son;

27 for I am persuaded that he, following my policy with equity and humanity, will accommodate himself to you.”

28 So the murderer and blasphemer, having suffered the worst things, as he had treated others, ended his life in a foreign land in the mountains by a most pitiable fate.

29 Philippos, his companion from childhood, was conveying the body; he, fearing the son of Antiochos, also made his way to Ptolemaios Philometor in Egypt.

Chapter 10

1 Makkabaios and those with him, the Lord leading them, recovered the sanctuary and the city,

2 and tore down the altars constructed by the foreigners in the marketplace, and also sacred precincts,

3 and, purifying the temple, made another altar; and, heating stones and taking fire from them, offered sacrifices after a period of two years, and provided incense and lamps and the setting out of the loaves.

4 Having done these things, they fell upon their bellies and asked the Lord that they might no longer fall into such evils, but, if ever they should sin, might be disciplined by him with equity and not be handed over to blasphemous and barbarous nations.

5 On the day on which the temple had been profaned by foreigners, it happened that the purification of the temple took place on the same day, the twenty-fifth of the same month, which is Chaseleu.

6 And they celebrated eight days with gladness in the manner of booths, remembering how a little time before, at the feast of tents, they had been dwelling in the mountains and caves like beasts.

7 Therefore, bearing ivy-wreathed rods and beautiful branches, and also palms, they offered hymns to him who had prospered the purification of his own place.

8 They decreed by a common ordinance and vote that the whole nation of the Jews should celebrate these days yearly.

9 And thus were the circumstances of the death of Antiochos, who was called Epiphanes.

10 Now we will make known the affairs of Antiochos Eupator, who was the son of the impious man, abridging the evils attending the wars themselves.

11 For he, receiving the kingdom, appointed a certain Lysias over affairs, and chief general of Coele Syria and Phoinike.

12 For Ptolemaios, called Makron, preferring to maintain justice toward the Jews because of the injustice done to them, tried to conduct affairs with them peaceably;

13 therefore, being accused before Eupator by the Friends, and hearing himself called a traitor at every turn because he had abandoned Kypros, entrusted to him by Philometor, and withdrawn to Antiochos Epiphanes, and having failed to ennoble his authority as noble, he poisoned himself and departed from life.

14 Gorgias, becoming general of the regions, maintained mercenaries and at every turn fostered war against the Jews.

15 Together with him the Idoumaians also, holding strategically placed fortifications, harassed the Jews and, taking in those who had banished them from Hierosolyma, attempted to foster war.

16 Those around Makkabaios, making supplication and asking God to become their ally, rushed upon the fortifications of the Idoumaians,

17 and, attacking them vigorously, gained control of the places and repelled all those fighting upon the wall, and slaughtered those who fell into their hands; they killed no fewer than twenty thousand.

18 When no fewer than nine thousand fled together into two exceedingly strong towers, possessing everything needed for a siege,

19 Makkabaios, leaving Simon and Iosepos, and also Zakchaios and those with him, sufficient for their siege, himself departed to places requiring urgent attention.

20 But those around Simon, becoming greedy for money, were persuaded with silver by some of those in the towers; and, receiving seventy thousand drachmas, allowed some to slip away.

21 When what had happened was reported to Makkabaios, he gathered the leaders of the people and accused them of having sold their brothers for silver by releasing their enemies against them.

22 He therefore killed these men who had become traitors, and immediately took possession of the two towers.

23 Prospering in everything undertaken with arms in his hands, he destroyed more than twenty thousand in the two fortifications.

24 Timotheos, previously defeated by the Jews, gathered vast mercenary forces and assembled no few horses from Asia, and came intending to take Ioudaia as a conquest of the spear.

25 When he approached, those around Makkabaios, for supplication to God, sprinkled their heads with earth and girded their loins with sackcloth,

26 and, falling upon the step opposite the altar, asked him to become gracious to them, to be an enemy to their enemies and oppose those opposing them, as the law makes clear.

27 Leaving their prayer and taking up their arms, they advanced farther from the city; and, approaching the enemies, remained by themselves.

28 Just as the dawn spread, both sides attacked, the one having their refuge in the Lord as a guarantee of success and victory with valor, the other appointing anger as the leader of their contests.

29 When a fierce battle arose, five distinguished men from heaven upon horses with golden bridles appeared to the adversaries, and led the Jews,

30 who also took Makkabaios into their midst and, shielding him with their own full armor, kept him unwounded; and they hurled arrows and thunderbolts at the adversaries, who therefore, confused by blindness, were cut down, filled with turmoil.

31 Twenty thousand and five hundred were slaughtered, and six hundred cavalrymen.

32 Timotheos himself fled with others into the fortification called Gazara, an exceedingly strong fortress, where Chaireas was commander.

33 Those around Makkabaios gladly besieged the fortress for four days.

34 Those within, trusting in the strength of the place, blasphemed exceedingly and uttered unlawful words.

35 As the fifth day began to appear, twenty young men of those around Makkabaios, inflamed in anger because of the blasphemies, attacked the wall manfully and with beastlike fury cut down whoever they encountered;

36 others likewise climbed up during the diversion against those within and set the towers on fire, and, kindling fires, burned the blasphemers alive; others broke through the gates and, admitting the rest of the formation, took possession of the city.

37 And they slaughtered Timotheos, hidden in a certain pit, and his brother Chaireas and Apollophanes.

38 Having accomplished these things, with hymns and acknowledgments they blessed the Lord, who greatly benefited Israel and gave them the victory.

Chapter 11

1 After a very short little interval, Lysias, the king’s guardian and kinsman and the one over affairs, bearing what had happened very heavily,

2 gathered about eighty thousand and all the cavalry, and came against the Jews, calculating that he would make the city a dwelling place for Greeks,

3 and the sanctuary subject to a levy of silver, like the other sacred precincts of the nations, and would make the high priesthood purchasable yearly,

4 in no way reckoning with the might of God, but elated by the tens of thousands of infantry and the thousands of cavalry and the eighty elephants.

5 Entering Ioudaia and approaching Baithsoura, which was a strong place and about five stadia distant from Hierosolyma, he pressed it hard.

6 When those around Makkabaios learned that he was besieging the fortifications, with lamentations and tears they supplicated the Lord together with the multitudes to send a good angel for the salvation of Israel.

7 Makkabaios himself first took up arms and exhorted the others to risk themselves together with him to aid their brothers; and they set out together eagerly.

8 While they were there near Hierosolyma, a horseman in white clothing appeared, leading them, brandishing golden armor.

9 Together they all blessed the merciful God and were strengthened in their souls, being ready to pierce not only men, but the wildest beasts and walls of iron.

10 They advanced in battle array, having their ally from heaven, the Lord having shown them mercy.

11 Charging like lions into the enemies, they laid low eleven thousand of them, and sixteen hundred cavalrymen; and compelled them all to flee.

12 Most of them escaped wounded and naked; and Lysias himself also escaped, fleeing disgracefully.

13 Being no fool, he considered within himself the loss that had befallen him, and realized that the Hebrews were invincible when the powerful God fought alongside them,

14 and sent to them and persuaded them to settle on all just terms, and that he would also persuade the king, compelling him to become their friend.

15 Makkabaios consented to all that Lysias requested, taking thought for what was advantageous; for all that Makkabaios submitted to Lysias in writing concerning the Jews, the king granted.

16 For the letters written to the Jews by Lysias contained the following: “Lysias to the multitude of the Jews, greetings.

17 Ioannes and Abessalom, sent by you, submitted the communication written below and made requests concerning the matters indicated by it.

18 Whatever therefore needed to be brought before the king also, I made clear; and what was admissible, he granted.

19 If therefore you maintain your goodwill toward affairs, I will try in the future also to be instrumental in good things.

20 Concerning these things and the particulars, I have instructed both these men and those from me to speak with you.

21 Farewell. Year one hundred and forty-eight, the twenty-fourth of Dios Korinthios.”

22 The king’s letter contained the following: “King Antiochos to his brother Lysias, greetings.

23 Our father having departed to the gods, we wish those of the kingdom to be undisturbed in attending to their own affairs,

24 and have heard that the Jews do not approve of our father’s change to Greek ways, but prefer their own manner of life and ask that their lawful customs be permitted them;

25 therefore, choosing that this nation also be free from disturbance, we judge that the sanctuary should be restored to them and that they should conduct their life according to the customs of their ancestors.

26 You will therefore do well to send to them and give pledges, so that, knowing our policy, they may be of good cheer and gladly occupy themselves with the management of their own affairs.”

27 The king’s letter to the nation was as follows: “King Antiochos to the senate of the Jews and the other Jews, greetings.

28 If you are well, it would be as we wish; we ourselves also are in health.

29 Menelaos informed us that you wish to come down and attend to your own affairs.

30 Therefore, for those coming down by the thirtieth of Xanthikos there will be a pledge with permission

31 for the Jews to use their own provisions and laws, as formerly also, and none of them will be harassed in any manner concerning the things done in ignorance.

32 I have also sent Menelaos to encourage you.

33 Farewell. Year one hundred and forty-eight, the fifteenth of Xanthikos.”

34 The Romans also sent them a letter containing the following: “Kointos Memmios, Titos Manios, ambassadors of the Romans, to the people of the Jews, greetings.

35 Concerning what Lysias, the king’s kinsman, granted you, we too approve.

36 But concerning what he judged should be brought before the king, consider these matters and send someone immediately, so that we may set them forth as is appropriate for you; for we are proceeding toward Antiocheia.

37 Therefore hasten and send some men, so that we too may know what opinion you hold.

38 Be in health. Year one hundred and forty-eight, the fifteenth of Xanthikos.”

Chapter 12

1 When these agreements had been made, Lysias went away to the king, and the Jews occupied themselves with agriculture.

2 But of the local generals, Timotheos and Apollonios son of Gennaios, and also Hieronymos and Demophon, and besides these Nikanor the governor of Kypros, did not allow them to remain settled and live quietly.

3 The Ioppites committed this great impious deed: they invited the Jews dwelling with them to embark with their wives and children in the boats they had provided, as though no hostility toward them existed,

4 and according to the common vote of the city; and when they accepted, as wishing to live in peace and having no suspicion, they took them out and drowned them, no fewer than two hundred.

5 Ioudas, learning of the cruelty done to his fellow countrymen, gave orders to the men around him

6 and, invoking God, the just judge, came against the murderers of his brothers, and burned the harbor by night and set the boats ablaze, and pierced those who had fled together there.

7 But when the place was shut up, he withdrew, intending to come again and uproot the whole community of the Ioppites.

8 Learning also that those in Iamneia wished to deal in the same manner with the Jews dwelling among them,

9 he attacked the Iamnites by night and set the harbor on fire together with the fleet, so that the rays of the light were visible in Hierosolyma, two hundred and forty stadia away.

10 When they had withdrawn nine stadia from there, while making their journey against Timotheos, Arabs, no fewer than five thousand, and five hundred cavalrymen attacked him.

11 A fierce battle arose, and those around Ioudas prospered through the help from God; the nomads, defeated, asked Ioudas to give them pledges, promising both to give livestock and to benefit them in other matters.

12 Ioudas, considering that they were truly useful in many things, agreed to keep peace with them; and, receiving pledges, they departed to their tents.

13 He also attacked a certain city, strong with earthworks and enclosed by walls and inhabited by a mixture of nations, whose name was Kaspin.

14 Those within, trusting in the strength of the walls and the stores of food, treated those around Ioudas very rudely, reviling and further blaspheming and saying things that were not lawful.

15 Those around Ioudas, invoking the great Sovereign of the world, who without rams and mechanical engines had hurled down Iericho in the times of Iesous, hurled themselves fiercely against the wall.

16 Taking possession of the city by the will of God, they wrought unspeakable slaughter, so that the adjoining lake, two stadia in breadth, appeared flooded and filled with blood.

17 Withdrawing from there, they completed seven hundred and fifty stadia to Charax, to the Jews called Toubianoi.

18 They did not find Timotheos in the regions, as he had then withdrawn from the regions without accomplishing anything, but had left a very strong garrison in a certain place.

19 Dositheos and Sosipatros, commanders of those around Makkabaios, marched out and destroyed those left by Timotheos in the fortification, more than ten thousand men.

20 Makkabaios, arranging the army around him by companies, appointed them over the companies and rushed against Timotheos, who had around him one hundred and twenty thousand infantry and twenty-five hundred cavalrymen.

21 Learning of the approach of Ioudas, Timotheos sent ahead the women and children and the other baggage into the place called Karnion; for the place was difficult to besiege and difficult to approach because of the narrowness of all the approaches.

22 When the first company of Ioudas appeared, and dread came upon the enemies and fear from the manifestation of him who oversees all things came upon them, they rushed into flight, each being carried in a different direction, so that they were often injured by their own men and impaled on the points of their swords.

23 Ioudas pursued more vigorously, piercing the offenders, and destroyed about thirty thousand men.

24 Timotheos himself, falling into the hands of those around Dositheos and Sosipatros, requested with much deception that they release him safe, because he held the parents of many and the brothers of some, and it would happen that these would be disregarded.

25 When he had confirmed through many assurances the agreement to restore these unharmed, they released him for the sake of the safety of their brothers.

26 Going out against Karnion and the Atergateion, he slaughtered twenty-five thousand persons.

27 After their rout and destruction he also marched against Ephron, a strong city, in which Lysias and multitudes of every tribe dwelt; strong young men stationed before the walls fought back vigorously, and there were many stores of engines and missiles there.

28 Invoking the Sovereign who powerfully crushes the strength of enemies, they brought the city under their hand and laid low about twenty-five thousand of those within.

29 Departing from there, they set out against the city of the Scythians, six hundred stadia distant from Hierosolyma.

30 The Jews settled there testified to the goodwill which the Scythopolitans had toward them, and their gentle treatment in the times of misfortune,

31 and, giving thanks and further exhorting them to be well-disposed toward their people in the future also, they arrived in Hierosolyma, the feast of weeks being near.

32 After the feast called Pentecost, they set out against Gorgias, the general of Idoumaia.

33 He came out with three thousand infantry and four hundred cavalrymen.

34 When they engaged in battle, it happened that a few of the Jews fell.

35 A certain Dositheos of the men of Bakenor, a strong mounted man, held onto Gorgias and, grasping his cloak, dragged him vigorously, wishing to take the accursed man alive; but when one of the Thracian cavalrymen charged him and struck down his shoulder, Gorgias escaped to Marisa.

36 Those around Esdris having fought for a long time and being exhausted, Ioudas invoked the Lord to appear as an ally and leader of the war;

37 beginning the shout with hymns in the ancestral language, and charging unexpectedly against those around Gorgias, he brought about their rout.

38 Ioudas, taking up the army, came to the city of Odollam; and as the seventh day approached, they purified themselves according to custom and passed the sabbath there.

39 On the following day, when it had become necessary, those around Ioudas came to recover the bodies of those who had fallen and restore them with their relatives to the ancestral tombs.

40 Under the tunics of each of the dead they found sacred objects of the idols from Iamneia, from which the law forbids the Jews; and it became clear to all that these men had fallen for this reason.

41 Therefore all, blessing the deeds of the Lord, the just judge who makes hidden things manifest,

42 turned to supplication, asking that the sin committed be completely blotted out. The noble Ioudas exhorted the multitude to keep themselves without sin, having seen before their eyes what had happened because of the sin of those who had fallen.

43 Making a collection man by man amounting to two thousand silver drachmas, he sent it to Hierosolyma to offer a sacrifice for sin, acting very well and nobly, taking thought concerning resurrection;

44 for if he were not expecting those who had fallen to rise, it would be superfluous and foolish to pray for the dead;

45 or else looking to a most beautiful reward laid up for those who fall asleep in piety, the thought was holy and pious; therefore he made expiation concerning the dead, that they might be released from sin.

Chapter 13

1 In the one hundred and forty-ninth year, news reached those around Ioudas that Antiochos Eupator was coming with multitudes against Ioudaia,

2 and with him Lysias, the guardian and the one over affairs, each having a Greek force of one hundred and ten thousand infantry and five thousand three hundred cavalrymen and twenty-two elephants, and three hundred scythed chariots.

3 Menelaos also joined them and encouraged Antiochos with much dissimulation, not for the salvation of his homeland, but imagining that he would be established in office.

4 But the King of kings roused the anger of Antiochos against the offender; and when Lysias pointed out that this man was responsible for all the evils, he commanded them to take him to Beroia and put him to death, as is the custom in the place.

5 In the place there is a tower of fifty cubits, full of ashes, and it had a circular contrivance, precipitous on every side into the ashes.

6 There they all push to destruction anyone guilty of temple plundering or one who has committed an excess of certain other evils.

7 By such a fate it happened that the lawless Menelaos died, obtaining not even earth;

8 very justly; for since he had committed many sins concerning the altar, whose fire and ashes were pure, he received death in ashes.

9 The king, made barbarous in his intentions, was coming to show the Jews the worst things that had happened under his father.

10 Ioudas, learning these things, commanded the multitude to invoke the Lord day and night, if ever at any other time, now also to aid those about to be deprived of law and homeland and holy sanctuary,

11 and not to allow the people who had just briefly revived to become subject to the ill-speaking nations.

12 When all had done the same together and petitioned the merciful Lord with weeping and fasts and prostration for three days without ceasing, Ioudas encouraged them and commanded them to assemble.

13 Meeting privately with the elders, he resolved that before the king’s army invaded Ioudaia and gained control of the city, they should go out and decide matters with the help of God.

14 Entrusting the direction to the Creator of the world, he exhorted those with him to contend nobly to death for laws, sanctuary, city, homeland, citizenship; and he made his camp around Modein.

15 Giving those around him the watchword “God’s victory,” with chosen excellent young men he attacked by night the camp at the royal quarters and killed about two thousand men, and pierced the foremost of the elephants together with the one in its housing,

16 and finally they filled the camp with dread and turmoil and withdrew successfully;

17 this had happened as day was already beginning to appear, because of the Lord’s protection aiding him.

18 The king, having received a taste of the Jews’ boldness, tried the places by stratagems.

19 He advanced against Baithsoura, a strong fortress of the Jews, was routed, encountered resistance, was defeated;

20 and Ioudas sent the necessities in to those within.

21 Rodokos of the Jewish ranks reported the secrets to the enemies; he was sought out and seized and confined.

22 The king spoke a second time to those in Baithsoura, gave a pledge, received one, went away, attacked those around Ioudas, was defeated,

23 learned that Philippos, left over affairs in Antiocheia, had become desperate, was disturbed, appealed to the Jews, submitted and swore to all just terms, made a settlement and offered a sacrifice, honored the temple and treated the place humanely;

24 and he received Makkabaios, left Hegemonides as general from Ptolemais as far as the Gerrhenoi.

25 He came to Ptolemais; the Ptolemaians were displeased with the agreements, for they were indignant over them and wished to annul the stipulations.

26 Lysias went up to the platform, defended the matter as well as possible, persuaded them, calmed them, made them well-disposed, departed to Antiocheia. Thus proceeded the matters of the king’s advance and departure.

Chapter 14

1 After a period of three years, news reached those around Ioudas that Demetrios son of Seleukos, sailing in through the harbor at Tripolis with a strong multitude and a fleet,

2 had gained control of the country, having killed Antiochos and his guardian Lysias.

3 A certain Alkimos, formerly high priest, but voluntarily defiled in the times of separation, realizing that in no manner was there safety for him or any longer access to the holy altar,

4 came to King Demetrios about the one hundred and fifty-first year, bringing him a golden crown and a palm, and besides these some of the customary branches of the sanctuary, and kept quiet that day.

5 Taking an opportunity as an accomplice of his own folly, when summoned to council by Demetrios and asked in what disposition and intention the Jews stood, he said in response:

6 “Those of the Jews called Asidaioi, whom Ioudas Makkabaios leads, foster war and raise sedition, not allowing the kingdom to obtain stability.

7 Therefore, having laid aside my ancestral glory [I mean the high priesthood], I have now come here,

8 first, genuinely taking thought for the matters belonging to the king, and second, also considering my own fellow citizens; for through the recklessness of the aforementioned men our whole people suffers no small misfortune.

9 Having learned each of these things, you, O king, take thought both for the country and for our beleaguered people, according to the gracious humanity you have toward all.

10 For as long as Ioudas survives, it is impossible for affairs to obtain peace.”

11 When such things were spoken by him, the other Friends, hostile toward Ioudas, quickly inflamed Demetrios further.

12 Immediately choosing Nikanor, formerly commander of the elephants, and appointing him general of Ioudaia, he sent him out,

13 giving orders to kill Ioudas himself, scatter those with him, and establish Alkimos as high priest of the greatest sanctuary.

14 The nations throughout Ioudaia who had put Ioudas to flight joined Nikanor in herds, thinking that the misfortunes and calamities of the Jews would be their own successes.

15 Hearing of Nikanor’s advance and the attack of the nations, they sprinkled themselves with earth and supplicated him who had established his own people forever and always helps his own portion by manifestation.

16 At the leader’s command, immediately departing from there, he meets them at the village of Dessaou.

17 Simon, the brother of Ioudas, had engaged Nikanor, but had stumbled slowly because of the sudden speechlessness of the opponents;

18 nevertheless Nikanor, hearing of the valor which those around Ioudas possessed and their courage in contests for their homeland, was wary of deciding the matter through bloodshed.

19 Therefore he sent Posidonios and Theodotos and Mattathias to give and receive pledges.

20 When considerable examination of these matters had taken place, and the leader had communicated with the multitudes, and a unanimous opinion appeared, they agreed to the terms.

21 They appointed a day on which they would meet privately in the same place; and a two-seated chariot came forward from each, and they set out seats.

22 Ioudas stationed armed men ready in strategically placed positions, lest wickedness suddenly arise from the enemies; they held the appropriate conference.

23 Nikanor stayed in Hierosolyma and did nothing improper, and dismissed the multitudes gathered in herds.

24 He kept Ioudas continually in his presence; he was attached to the man in soul.

25 He encouraged him to marry and beget children; he married, settled down, shared in life.

26 But Alkimos, perceiving their goodwill toward each other and taking the agreements that had been made, came to Demetrios and said that Nikanor was thinking contrary to affairs; for he had designated Ioudas, the plotter against the kingdom, as his own successor.

27 The king, becoming enraged and provoked by the slanders of the utterly wicked man, wrote to Nikanor, declaring that he was displeased with the agreements, and commanding him to send Makkabaios bound to Antiocheia quickly.

28 When these things reached Nikanor, he was disturbed and distressed that he would annul the stipulations when the man had done no wrong.

29 But since it was not possible to act against the king, he watched for a favorable opportunity to accomplish this by stratagem.

30 Makkabaios, seeing that Nikanor was conducting his dealings with him more harshly and had made their customary meetings more rude, and understanding that the harshness did not come from the best intention, gathered no few of those around him and hid from Nikanor.

31 The other, recognizing that he had been skillfully outmaneuvered by the man, came to the greatest and holy sanctuary while the priests were offering the due sacrifices and commanded them to hand over the man.

32 When they declared with oaths that they did not know where the man sought was,

33 he stretched his right hand toward the temple and swore these things: “Unless you hand Ioudas over to me bound, I will make this enclosure of God into a plain and dig down the altar and raise a conspicuous sanctuary here to Dionysos.”

34 Having said these things, he went away; the priests, stretching their hands toward heaven, invoked him who continually champions our nation, saying these things:

35 “You, Lord of all, being in need of nothing, were pleased that a temple for your dwelling should come to be among us;

36 and now, holy Lord of all sanctification, preserve forever undefiled this house recently purified.”

37 A certain Razis, one of the elders from Hierosolyma, was denounced to Nikanor, a man who loved his fellow citizens and was exceedingly well spoken of, and for his goodwill was called father of the Jews.

38 For in the former times of separation he had been brought to judgment for Judaism, and had risked both body and soul for Judaism with all earnestness.

39 Nikanor, wishing to make evident the hostility he had toward the Jews, sent more than five hundred soldiers to arrest him;

40 for he thought that by arresting that man he would work calamity upon them.

41 When the multitudes were about to capture the tower and were forcing the courtyard door and commanding that fire be brought and the doors set alight, being surrounded, he turned his sword against himself,

42 wishing to die nobly rather than become subject to the offenders and be outraged unworthily of his own nobility.

43 But not striking true with the blow because of the haste of the contest, and the multitudes invading within the doorways, he ran nobly up onto the wall and manfully hurled himself down into the multitudes.

44 They quickly stepped back, leaving a space, and he landed in the middle of the empty space.

45 Still breathing and inflamed in spirit, he rose, his blood flowing in streams and his wounds being grievous, ran through the multitudes and stood upon a precipitous rock,

46 already becoming wholly drained of blood, pulled out his entrails and took them in both hands and hurled them at the multitudes, and, invoking the Master of life and spirit to restore these to him again, departed in this manner.

Chapter 15

1 Nikanor, learning that those around Ioudas were in the regions of Samareia, resolved to attack them with complete security on the day of rest.

2 When the Jews accompanying him under compulsion said, “By no means destroy so savagely and barbarously, but allot glory to the day honored with holiness by him who oversees all things,”

3 the thrice-offending man asked whether there was a Sovereign in heaven who had ordered the observance of the sabbath day;

4 when they declared, “There is the living Lord himself, Sovereign in heaven, who commanded the observance of the seventh day,”

5 the other says, “I too am a sovereign upon earth, who commands the taking up of arms and the performance of the king’s requirements.” Nevertheless he did not succeed in accomplishing his cruel intention.

6 Nikanor, lifting his neck with all arrogance, had resolved to set up a common trophy over those around Ioudas.

7 But Makkabaios was continually confident, with all hope, that he would obtain help from the Lord,

8 and encouraged those with him not to fear the advance of the nations, but, keeping in mind the helps from heaven that had previously come to them, now also to expect the victory that would be theirs from the Almighty.

9 Comforting them from the law and the prophets, and further reminding them of the contests they had accomplished, he made them more eager.

10 Rousing them in spirit, he gave orders, at the same time pointing out the faithlessness of the nations and their violation of oaths.

11 Arming each of them not so much with the security of shields and spears as with the encouragement in good words, and further relating a trustworthy dream, something like a waking vision, he gladdened them all.

12 Its vision was as follows: Onias, who had been high priest, a fine and good man, modest in his encounters, gentle in manner and uttering speech fittingly, and from childhood having practiced all things belonging to virtue, stretched out his hands and prayed for the whole body of the Jews.

13 Then in this manner a man appeared, distinguished by gray hair and glory, and the majesty around him was wondrous and most magnificent.

14 Onias answered and said, “This is the lover of the brothers, who prays much for the people and the holy city, Ieremias, the prophet of God.”

15 Ieremias stretched out his right hand and handed Ioudas a golden sword, and, giving it, addressed him thus:

16 “Take the holy sword, a gift from God, through which you will shatter the adversaries.”

17 Encouraged by the words of Ioudas, very fine and able to impel to valor and make the souls of the young manly, they resolved not to campaign, but to charge nobly and, engaging with all manliness, decide matters, because the city and the holy things and the sanctuary were in danger;

18 for concern for wives and children, and also brothers and relatives, occupied a lesser place for them, but the fear for the consecrated temple was greatest and first.

19 Those confined in the city also had no incidental anxiety, being disturbed about the attack in the open country.

20 When all were already awaiting the coming decision, and the enemies had already approached, and the army had been drawn out and the beasts stationed at a suitable position and the cavalry arranged on the flank,

21 Makkabaios, seeing the presence of the multitudes and the varied equipment of arms and the savagery of the beasts, raised his hands toward heaven and invoked the wonder-working Lord, knowing that it is not through arms, but as it may be judged by him, that he secures victory for the worthy.

22 Invoking him, he spoke in this manner: “You, Master, sent your angel in the time of Ezekias, king of Ioudaia, and he killed about one hundred and eighty-five thousand from the camp of Sennacherim;

23 and now, Sovereign of the heavens, send a good angel before us for dread and trembling;

24 by the greatness of your arm may those coming with blasphemy against your holy people be struck with terror.” And he ended with these words.

25 Those around Nikanor advanced with trumpets and paeans.

26 Those around Ioudas engaged the enemies with invocation and prayers.

27 Contending with their hands and praying to God with their hearts, they laid low no fewer than thirty-five thousand, greatly gladdened by the manifestation of God.

28 Leaving the engagement and withdrawing with joy, they recognized that Nikanor had fallen with his full armor.

29 A shout and commotion arose, and they blessed the Sovereign in the ancestral language.

30 He who in every respect was the foremost champion in body and soul for the citizens, who had preserved his lifelong goodwill toward his fellow countrymen, commanded them to cut off Nikanor’s head and his hand with the shoulder and carry them to Hierosolyma.

31 Arriving there and calling together his fellow countrymen and stationing the priests before the altar, he sent for those from the citadel.

32 Showing the head of the polluted Nikanor and the hand of the ill-speaking man, which he had stretched out against the holy house of the Almighty and boasted greatly,

33 and cutting out the tongue of the impious Nikanor, he said he would give it piece by piece to the birds, and hang up the recompense of his folly opposite the temple.

34 They all blessed toward heaven the manifest Lord, saying, “Blessed is he who preserved his own place undefiled.”

35 He hung Nikanor’s head from the citadel, a sign visible to all and manifest of the Lord’s help.

36 They all decreed by a common vote by no means to leave this day unmarked, but to keep conspicuous the thirteenth of the twelfth month — called Adar in the Syrian language — one day before the day of Mardochaios.

37 The affairs concerning Nikanor having proceeded thus, and the city having been held by the Hebrews from those times, I too will cease the account here.

38 If well and aptly in composition, this I myself wished; but if cheaply and moderately, this was attainable for me.

39 For just as drinking wine alone, and likewise water alone again, is harmful, but wine mixed with water is sweet and produces delightful pleasure, so also the construction of the account delights the ears of those who encounter the composition. Here will be the end.

Chapter 1

1 Philopator, learning from those who had returned that the regions under his control had been taken away by Antiochos, gave orders to all the infantry and cavalry forces and, taking along his sister Arsinoe, set out as far as the regions around Raphia, where those around Antiochos had encamped.

2 A certain Theodotos, intending to fulfill the plot, took the best of the Ptolemaic arms previously assigned to him and made his way by night to Ptolemaios’s tent, intending to kill him single-handedly and thereby end the war.

3 But Dositheos, called the son of Drimylos, a Jew by birth, but later having changed his lawful customs and become alienated from the ancestral ordinances, had taken him away and laid down an obscure man in the tent, who happened to receive the punishment intended for him.

4 When a fierce battle arose and affairs were going considerably better for Antiochos, Arsinoe went through the forces and, with compassion and tears and her locks loosened, exhorted them to aid themselves and their children and wives boldly, promising to give each two minas of gold if they conquered.

5 And thus it happened that the opponents were destroyed in hand-to-hand fighting, and many were also captured as prisoners of the spear.

6 Having overcome the plot, he decided to visit and encourage the nearby cities.

7 Having done this and allotted gifts to the sacred precincts, he made his subjects confident.

8 When the Jews sent to him men from the senate and the elders to greet him and bring gifts of hospitality and congratulate him on what had happened, it happened that he became more eager to visit them as quickly as possible.

9 Making his way to Hierosolyma and sacrificing to the greatest God and giving thanks and doing something further for the place, and indeed coming to the place and being struck by its dignity and beauty,

10 and also admiring the good order of the sanctuary, he conceived the intention of entering the temple.

11 When they said that this ought not to happen, because not even those of the nation were permitted to enter, nor all the priests, but only the high priest who presided over all, and he once a year, he was in no way persuaded.

12 When the law was read aloud, he did not desist even then, asserting that he ought to enter, saying, “Even if they are deprived of this honor, I ought not to be.”

13 And he inquired for what reason none of those present had prevented him when he entered every sacred precinct.

14 And someone heedlessly said that this very thing was wrongly made much of as a marvel.

15 “But if this happened for some reason,” he says, “will I not certainly enter, whether they wish it or not?”

16 When the priests fell down in all their vestments and begged the greatest God to aid them in their present circumstances and turn aside the impulse of the one making the wicked attack, and filled the sanctuary with crying and tears,

17 those remaining throughout the city, disturbed, rushed out, considering what was happening uncertain.

18 The virgins confined in chambers rushed out with their mothers and, sprinkling their hair, gave it over to dust, and filled the broad streets with lamentation and groans.

19 Those also who had just been arrayed, abandoning the bridal chambers prepared for the meeting and the appropriate modesty, took to a disorderly course through the city.

20 The mothers and nurses attending the newborn children abandoned them here and there, some in houses and some in the streets, and gathered without turning back into the supremely exalted sanctuary.

21 Varied was the supplication of those gathered into it concerning the things impiously undertaken by him.

22 Together with these, those who had become bold on behalf of the citizens could not endure his pressing on completely and intending to fulfill his purpose,

23 and, crying out to rush to arms and die boldly for the ancestral law, caused considerable agitation in the place; but, barely turned aside by the aged men and the elders, they came to the same position of supplication.

24 The multitude continued in these things as before, making supplication.

25 The elders around the king tried in many ways to turn his haughty mind away from the intended plot.

26 But, growing bold and dismissing everything, he was already making his approach, thinking to bring the aforementioned matter to completion.

27 Those around him also, seeing these things, turned to invoking with our people him who possesses all might, to aid those present, not overlooking the lawless and arrogant deed.

28 From the exceedingly dense and anguished crying of the multitudes gathered together there arose an indescribable clamor;

29 for it seemed that not only the people, but also the walls and the whole ground resounded, since all were then choosing death in exchange for the profanation of the place.

Chapter 2

1 The high priest Simon, bending his knees opposite the temple and stretching out his hands, therefore made this supplication in an orderly manner:

2 “Lord, Lord, King of the heavens and Master of all creation, holy among holy ones, sole Ruler, Almighty, attend to us, oppressed by an impious and profane man puffed up with audacity and strength.

3 For you who created all things and rule over everything are a just Sovereign, and judge those who act with insolence and haughtiness.

4 You destroyed those who formerly committed injustice, among whom were also giants trusting in strength and audacity, bringing immeasurable water upon them.

5 You burned with fire and sulfur the Sodomites who practiced arrogance and became conspicuous for their wickedness, making them an example for those coming afterward.

6 You, testing with many and varied punishments the audacious Pharao who had enslaved your holy people Israel, made known your power, whereby you made known your great might;

7 and when he pursued with chariots and a multitude of crowds, you overwhelmed him in the depth of the sea, but brought safely through those who trusted in you, who rule over all creation,

8 who also, seeing the works of your hand, praised you, the Almighty.

9 You, O King, creating the boundless and immeasurable earth, chose this city and sanctified this place for your name, you who need none of all things, and glorified it in a magnificent manifestation, establishing it for the glory of your great and honored name.

10 Loving the house of Israel, you promised that if we should turn away and distress overtake us, and we should come into this place and supplicate, you would hear our supplication.

11 And indeed you are faithful and true.

12 Since, when our fathers were often afflicted, you aided them in their humiliation and rescued them from great evils,

13 behold now, holy King, because of our many and great sins we are oppressed and have been subjected to our enemies and are enfeebled in weaknesses.

14 In our downfall this audacious and profane man undertakes to outrage the holy place designated upon earth for the name of your glory.

15 For your dwelling place is the heaven of heaven, inaccessible to men.

16 But since, being pleased with your glory among your people Israel, you sanctified this place,

17 do not punish us through their uncleanness or chastise us through profanation, lest the lawless boast in their anger or exult in the arrogance of their tongue, saying,

18 ‘We trampled the house of sanctification, as the houses of abominations are trampled.’

19 Blot out our sins and scatter our errors and manifest your mercy at this hour.

20 Let your compassions quickly come beforehand to meet us, and put praises in the mouth of those fallen and crushed in soul, making peace for us.”

21 Then God, the Overseer of all and Forefather, holy among holy ones, hearing the lawful supplication, scourged him who was greatly lifted up in insolence and audacity,

22 shaking him to and fro like a reed in the wind, so that he lay helpless upon the ground, also paralyzed in his limbs, unable even to speak, struck all around by a just judgment.

23 Therefore the Friends and bodyguards, seeing the sharp chastisement that had overtaken him and fearing that he might even cease to live, quickly dragged him out, struck with overwhelming fear.

24 Later, after some time, recovering himself, he in no way came to repentance after being rebuked, but uttered bitter threats and withdrew.

25 Making his way into Egypt and increasing his wickedness through the previously mentioned drinking companions and associates, separated from all justice,

26 he was not satisfied merely with countless acts of licentiousness, but advanced to such audacity that ill-speaking arose in the regions, and many of the Friends, looking intently at the king’s purpose, themselves also followed his will.

27 He proposed to spread public reproach against the nation; setting up a pillar on the tower at the palace, he carved an inscription:

28 that none of those who did not sacrifice should enter their sanctuaries, and that all the Jews should be brought to registration and the condition of slaves, and that those objecting should be taken by force and removed from life,

29 and those registered should also be marked on the body by fire with an ivy leaf, the emblem of Dionysos, and enrolled under the previously stipulated authority.

30 But so that he might not appear hateful to all, he added underneath: “If any of them choose to associate with those initiated in the rites, these shall be equal citizens with the Alexandrians.”

31 Some therefore, superficially loathing the foundations of the city’s piety, readily gave themselves over, as though they would share some great glory from their coming association with the king.

32 But most held firm with noble soul and did not depart from piety, and, exchanging their possessions for their life, fearlessly tried to rescue themselves from the registrations;

33 and they remained hopeful of obtaining help, and abhorred those departing from them and judged them as enemies of the nation, and deprived them of common association and beneficial services.

Chapter 3

1 Learning these things, the impious man became so enraged that he was not only furious with those in Alexandreia, but opposed those in the country more grievously, and commanded that they hasten to gather all into the same place and remove them from life by the worst fate.

2 While these things were being arranged, a hostile report resounded against the people through men united in purpose for evildoing, an occasion being given for their disposition, as though the Jews were preventing them from their lawful customs.

3 But the Jews had been maintaining unwavering goodwill and faithfulness toward the kings,

4 and, revering God and conducting their life by his law, kept separate in matters of food, for which reason they appeared hateful to some.

5 But, adorning their association by the good practice of just deeds, they had become well esteemed by all men.

6 The foreigners therefore in no way took account of the good conduct of the people, talked of among all,

7 but kept talking of the difference concerning acts of worship and foods, asserting that these men were allied by treaty neither with the king nor with the forces, but were hostile and greatly opposed affairs; and they attached no ordinary reproach to them.

8 The Greeks throughout the city, having suffered no wrong, seeing unexpected disturbance concerning these men and heedless gatherings taking place, had no strength to help, for the disposition was tyrannical, but encouraged them and were distressed and supposed that these things would change;

9 for so great a body, having done nothing wrong, would not be overlooked in this manner.

10 Already some neighbors and friends and business associates, drawing some aside secretly, gave assurances that they would stand alongside them and bring every earnest effort to their assistance.

11 He therefore, elated by his present success and not perceiving the might of the greatest God, but supposing that he would continually persist in the same purpose, wrote this letter against them:

12 “King Ptolemaios Philopator to the generals and soldiers throughout Egypt and in each place, greetings and health;

13 I myself also am well, and our affairs are well.

14 Our campaign into Asia, of which you yourselves also know, having been brought duly to completion through the unfailing alliance of the gods,

15 we thought to nurture the nations inhabiting Coele Syria and Phoinike, not by force of the spear, but by equity and much humanity, and gladly to benefit them.

16 Allotting very great revenues to the sanctuaries in each city, we proceeded also to go up to Hierosolyma and honor the sanctuary of the offenders who never cease from folly.

17 They welcomed our presence in word, but in deed insincerely, and when we were eager to enter their temple and honor it with distinguished and most beautiful offerings,

18 carried away by ancient conceits, they excluded us from entry, falling short of our strength because of the humanity we have toward all men.

19 Making their hostility toward us evident, as though they alone among the nations lift their necks against kings and their own benefactors, they are unwilling to offer anything genuine.

20 But we, bearing with their folly and making our way with victory into Egypt, treated all nations humanely, doing as was fitting,

21 and among these made our freedom from resentment toward their fellow tribesmen known to all; and, because of their alliance and the countless affairs entrusted to them with simplicity from the beginning, daring to alter matters, we wished also to deem them worthy of Alexandrian citizenship and make them participants in the perpetual sacred rites.

22 But they, taking the contrary view and rejecting what is good through their innate ill nature, and continually inclining toward what is base,

23 not only turned away from the priceless citizenship, but also abhor in word and silence the few among them genuinely disposed toward us, at every turn suspecting that we will quickly overthrow their affairs, with their most inglorious manner of life.

24 Therefore, well persuaded by proofs that these men are ill-disposed toward us in every manner, and taking thought lest, if sudden disturbance should arise for us afterward, we have these impious men behind us as traitors and barbarous enemies,

25 we have commanded that, as soon as this letter arrives, immediately those dwelling there, with wives and children, be sent to us with insults and maltreatment, confined on every side in iron bonds, for an irremediable and inglorious slaughter fitting for enemies.

26 For with these punished together, we have determined that for the remaining time our affairs will be established completely in stability and the best condition.

27 Whoever shelters any of the Jews, from an aged man to an infant and even those at the breast, will be beaten to death with the most disgraceful tortures, together with his whole household.

28 Let whoever wishes inform, on condition that he shall receive the property of the one falling under the punishment and two thousand silver drachmas from the royal treasury, and shall be crowned with freedom.

29 Every place where a Jew is found sheltered at all shall become inaccessible and burned with fire, and shall appear wholly useless to every mortal creature for all time.”

30 And the form of the letter had been written thus.

Chapter 4

1 Everywhere this ordinance arrived, a public banquet arose among the nations with shouts and joy, as the hatred long hardened in their minds now appeared openly.

2 But for the Jews there was unceasing grief and a wholly lamentable cry with tears, their hearts everywhere inflamed with groans as they lamented the unexpected destruction suddenly decreed against them.

3 What district or city or inhabited place at all, or what streets, were not filled with beating of breasts and lamentations for them?

4 For they were sent away with such bitterness of a merciless soul by the generals in each city, all with one accord, that even some of their enemies, in view of the extraordinary punishments, placing common compassion before their eyes and considering the uncertain end of life, wept at their most miserable deportation.

5 For a multitude of aged men, covered with gray hair, was led along, their stooping slowness of feet from old age being driven to a swift march by the impulse of violent overthrow, without any respect.

6 The young women who had just entered the bridal chamber for partnership of life, receiving lamentations instead of delight and mingling their perfume-soaked hair with dust, and being led unveiled, began a lament together instead of wedding songs, as though torn apart by maltreatment from foreign nations;

7 and bound in public, they were dragged by force until their embarkation into the ship.

8 Their spouses also, their necks entangled in nooses instead of wreaths, in the prime of youthful age, passed the remaining days of their wedding in lamentations instead of feasting and youthful ease, already seeing Hades lying at their feet.

9 They were brought down, led like beasts in constraints of iron bonds, some fastened by their necks to the beams of the ships, others secured by their feet in unbreakable fetters,

10 and with dense planking placed overhead also, so that, their eyes darkened on every side, they might receive the treatment of those plotted against throughout the whole voyage downstream.

11 When they were brought to the place called Schedia and the voyage was completed, as had been decreed by the king, he commanded them to encamp in the hippodrome before the city, which had an immense circumference and was most suitable for making a public example to all entering the city and those of them departing into the country on a journey, so that they might neither associate with his forces nor be deemed worthy of enclosures at all.

12 When this happened, hearing that their fellow countrymen from the city were coming out secretly more frequently to lament the inglorious misery of their brothers,

13 he became furious and commanded that these also be treated together carefully in the same manner as those, falling short of their punishment in no way,

14 and that the whole tribe be registered by name, not for the laborious service of work mentioned briefly a little before, but that, tortured by the ordered outrages, they should finally be annihilated within the space of one day.

15 Their registration therefore took place with bitter haste and ambitious persistence from sunrise until sunset for forty days, its completion remaining unaccomplished.

16 The king, greatly and continually filled with joy, held drinking parties before all the idols, with a mind wandering far from truth and a profane mouth, praising the dumb things unable to speak to them or aid them, but speaking things unfitting against the greatest God.

17 After the aforementioned interval of time, the scribes reported to the king that they were no longer able to make the registration of the Jews because of their immeasurable multitude,

18 although most were still throughout the country, some still gathered in houses and others in the locality, as the task had become impossible for all the generals over Egypt.

19 When he threatened them more harshly, as having been bribed to contrive an escape, it happened that he was clearly assured concerning this,

20 when they stated with proof that both the writing material and the writing reeds they used had already run out.

21 This was the working of the invincible providence of him who aids the Jews from heaven.

Chapter 5

1 Then, summoning Hermon, who attended to the care of the elephants, filled with heavy anger and wholly inflexible in his rage,

2 he commanded that for the coming day all the elephants, five hundred in number, be given abundant handfuls of frankincense and much unmixed wine to drink, and, made savage by the plentiful provision of the drink, be brought in to meet the doom of the Jews.

3 Giving these orders, he turned to the banquet, gathering those of the Friends and the army who were most hostile toward the Jews.

4 Hermon, the commander of the elephants, carried out the command firmly.

5 The servants attending these matters went out in the evening and bound the hands of the afflicted, and contrived the rest of their security for the night, thinking that the tribe would together receive the end of its destruction.

6 But the Jews, who seemed to the nations to be bereft of all protection because of the constraint encompassing them on every side with bonds,

7 all invoked with tears and a cry difficult to silence the Almighty Lord, who rules over every power, their merciful God and Father, begging

8 him to turn aside the impious purpose against them and rescue them by a magnificent manifestation from the doom ready at their feet.

9 Their supplication therefore ascended earnestly into heaven.

10 Hermon, having given drink to the pitiless elephants, filled with the plentiful supply of wine and saturated with frankincense, came to the palace early to report these things to the king.

11 But a portion of sleep, the beautiful creation from eternal time, bestowed in night and day by him who grants it to all whom he wishes, he sent upon the king,

12 and he was held in most pleasant and deep sleep by the working of the Master, greatly thwarted in his lawless purpose and greatly disappointed in his inflexible intention.

13 The Jews, escaping the previously indicated hour, praised their holy God and again asked him, readily reconciled, to show the might of his very powerful hand to arrogant nations.

14 When it was already nearly the middle of the tenth hour, the one assigned to the invitations, seeing the invited guests gathered together, approached and nudged the king.

15 Barely awakening him, he pointed out that the time for the drinking party was already passing, making his report about these things.

16 The king, considering it and turning to drinking, commanded those who had come to the drinking party to recline opposite him.

17 When this had happened, he urged them to give themselves to feasting and, being greatly honored, devote the present portion of the drinking party to gladness.

18 As the conversation proceeded further, the king summoned Hermon and with a bitter threat inquired for what reason the Jews had been allowed to survive the remaining day.

19 When he pointed out that he had brought the command to completion while it was still night, and the Friends also bore witness to him,

20 he, possessing cruelty worse than Phalaris, said that they owed thanks to today’s sleep; “But without delay prepare the elephants in the same manner for the following day, for the annihilation of the unlawful Jews.”

21 When the king had spoken, all those present gladly agreed together with joy, and each withdrew to his own house.

22 They used the time of night not so much for sleep as for devising every kind of mockery against those thought wretched.

23 The cock had just crowed early, and Hermon, having armed the beasts, was moving them about in the great colonnade.

24 The multitudes throughout the city had gathered for the most pitiable spectacle, eagerly awaiting the morning.

25 The Jews, their souls being drawn out at each indivisible moment, stretching their hands to heaven in a supplication full of tears and lamenting songs, begged the greatest God again to help them speedily.

26 The rays of the sun had not yet spread, and while the king awaited the Friends, Hermon came forward and called him to go out, pointing out that the king’s eager desire lay ready.

27 Receiving him and being astonished at the lawless departure, wholly possessed by ignorance, he inquired what the matter was for which this had been eagerly accomplished for him;

28 this was the working of God, who rules over all, having placed in his mind forgetfulness of the things previously contrived by him.

29 Hermon and all the Friends explained, “The beasts and the forces have been prepared, O king, according to your earnest purpose.”

30 Filled with heavy rage at what was said, because through God’s providence all his thought concerning these things had been scattered, he looked intently with a threat and said:

31 “Whatever parents were present or offspring of children, I would have prepared these as an abundant feast for wild beasts instead of the blameless Jews, who have shown exceptionally complete and steadfast faithfulness to me and my ancestors.

32 Indeed, were it not for the affection of our upbringing together and your service, you would have been deprived of life instead of these.”

33 Thus Hermon endured an unexpected dangerous threat, and shrank in gaze and countenance.

34 Each of the Friends slipped out gloomily, and they dismissed those gathered, each to his own occupation.

35 The Jews, hearing the things from the king, praised the manifest God, Lord, King of kings, having obtained this help from him also.

36 According to the same customs, the king assembled the whole drinking party and encouraged them to turn to gladness.

37 Summoning Hermon, he said with a threat, “How many times must I command you about these very things, most wretched man?

38 Arm the elephants yet again now for tomorrow, for the annihilation of the Jews.”

39 The kinsmen reclining with him, wondering at his unstable mind, put forward these words:

40 “O king, how long do you test us as irrational men, commanding now for the third time that they be annihilated, and again, when it comes to the matter, changing and dissolving your decrees?

41 Because of these things the city is disturbed by the expectation and, filled with gatherings, already often runs the risk of being plundered.”

42 Therefore the king, a Phalaris in every respect, filled with recklessness and regarding as nothing the changes of soul arising in him for the visitation of the Jews, firmly declaring a most unfulfilled oath, said that he would send them without delay to Hades, mangled by the knees and feet of beasts,

43 and, campaigning against Ioudaia, would quickly level it with fire and spear, and would swiftly cast their temple, inaccessible to us, headlong by fire, and make it bereft forever of those performing sacrifices there.

44 Then the Friends and kinsmen, departing overjoyed, confidently stationed the forces in the most suitable places of the city for guarding.

45 The commander of the elephants, having brought the beasts almost, so to speak, into a maddened condition with most fragrant drinks of wine infused with frankincense, fearfully adorned with equipment,

46 entered the palace around dawn, the city already filled with countless multitudes toward the hippodrome, and urged the king on to the matter proposed.

47 Filling his impious mind with heavy anger, he set out with all his weight together with the beasts, wishing with unwounded heart and the pupils of his eyes to behold the painful and miserable destruction of those previously indicated.

48 When the elephants were going out near the gate, and the armed force followed and the multitude marched, the Jews, seeing the dust and hearing the deep-sounding tumult,

49 thinking that this was their last moment of life, the end of their most wretched expectation, turned to compassion and lamentations and kissed one another, embracing their relatives and falling upon their necks, parents upon children and mothers upon young women, while others held newborn infants at their breasts, drawing milk for the last time.

50 Nevertheless, also perceiving the helps from heaven that had previously come to them, they threw themselves face down with one accord and separated the infants from their breasts,

51 and cried out with an exceedingly loud voice, supplicating the Sovereign of all power to pity them with a manifestation, already standing at the gates of Hades.

Chapter 6

1 A certain Eleazaros, a distinguished man among the priests from the country, already having attained old age and adorned with every virtue in life, quieted the elders around him to invoke the holy God, and prayed these things:

2 “King of great might, Most High, Almighty God, governing all creation with compassions,

3 look upon the seed of Abraam, upon the children of sanctified Iakob, the people of your sanctified portion, strangers in a foreign land being unjustly destroyed, O Father.

4 You destroyed Pharao, abounding in chariots, the former sovereign of this Egypt, lifted up with lawless audacity and a boastful tongue, together with his arrogant army, drowned in the sea, manifesting a light of mercy to the people of Israel.

5 You shattered Sennacherim, the grievous king of the Assyrians, elated by countless forces, already having taken all the earth under his hand by the spear and lifted up against your holy city, speaking grievous things with boasting and audacity; you, Master, showed your might manifest to many nations.

6 You rescued the three companions in Babylonia, who voluntarily gave their lives to fire so as not to serve vain things, cooling the fiery furnace and leaving them unharmed to a hair, sending flame upon all the adversaries.

7 You brought Daniel unharmed up into the light, who through envious slanders had been thrown underground to lions as food for beasts.

8 And, seeing Ionas wasting away in the belly of a sea creature nurtured in the depths, you showed him unharmed to all his own people, O Father.

9 And now, Hater of insolence, abundantly merciful Protector of all, quickly manifest yourself to those of the people of Israel, outraged by abhorred lawless nations.

10 If our life in our settlement abroad has become entangled in impieties, rescue us from the hand of enemies and destroy us by whatever fate you choose, Master.

11 Do not let the vain-minded bless vain things over the destruction of your beloved, saying, ‘Not even their God rescued them.’

12 But you, eternal One possessing all strength and all sovereignty, look now; have mercy on us, who are being removed from life by the reckless insolence of lawless men, in the manner of those plotted against.

13 Let nations cower before your invincible power today, honored One possessing power for the salvation of the people of Iakob.

14 The whole multitude of infants and their parents supplicate you with tears.

15 Let it be shown to all nations that you are with us, Lord, and have not turned your face away from us; but as you said, ‘Not even when they were in the land of their enemies did I overlook them,’ so accomplish it, Lord.”

16 As Eleazaros was just ending the prayer, the king came along toward the hippodrome with the beasts and all the arrogance of his force.

17 Seeing him, the Jews cried aloud greatly to heaven, so that the neighboring valleys also resounded and caused an uncontrollable terror in the whole camp.

18 Then the greatly glorious Almighty and true God, manifesting his holy face, opened the heavenly gates, from which two glorified angels of fearful appearance descended, visible to all except the Jews,

19 and stood against them and filled the force of the adversaries with turmoil and cowardice and bound them with immovable fetters.

20 The king’s body also became shuddering, and forgetfulness seized his fiercely angry audacity.

21 They turned the beasts against the armed forces following, and they trampled and destroyed them.

22 The king’s anger changed to compassion and tears concerning the things previously contrived by him.

23 For, hearing the cry and seeing them all face down for destruction, weeping, he threatened the Friends with anger, saying:

24 “You usurp kingship and have surpassed tyrants in cruelty, and already attempt to remove me myself, your benefactor, from office and from breath, secretly contriving things unprofitable for the kingdom.

25 Who, removing each from his home, irrationally gathered here those who faithfully held the fortifications of our country?

26 Who so lawlessly surrounded with outrages those who from the beginning surpassed all nations in every respect in goodwill toward us, and often underwent the worst dangers among men?

27 Loose, release the unjust bonds; send them to their own homes with peace, asking pardon for the things previously done.

28 Release the sons of the Almighty heavenly living God, who from our ancestors until now grants unhindered stability with glory to our affairs.”

29 He therefore spoke these things; and they, released in an indivisible moment, blessed their holy Savior God, having just escaped death.

30 Then the king, departing into the city, summoned the one over revenues and commanded that wines and the other supplies for a banquet be provided to the Jews for seven days, deciding that in the place where they had thought to receive destruction, in this place they should celebrate deliverance with all gladness.

31 Then those formerly reproached and near Hades, or rather having stepped upon it, instead of a bitter and grievously lamentable fate, held a drinking feast for deliverance and, full of joy, apportioned with reclining places the place prepared for their downfall and grave.

32 Ceasing the wholly lamentable melody of dirges, they took up an ancestral song, praising God, their Savior and Wonder-worker; and, dismissing all wailing and shrieking, they formed dances as a sign of peaceful gladness.

33 Likewise the king also, gathering a great drinking party for these things, continually made magnificent acknowledgment toward heaven for the unexpected deliverance that had occurred for him.

34 Those who formerly supposed that they would be destroyed and eaten by birds, and had registered them with joy, groaned, clothing themselves with shame, their fire-breathing audacity ingloriously extinguished.

35 The Jews, as we have said before, forming the aforementioned dance, passed their time with feasting in cheerful acknowledgments and psalms.

36 Determining a common ordinance concerning these things throughout their whole settlement abroad for generations, they established the observance of the aforementioned days with gladness, not for drinking and gluttony, but for the deliverance which had come to them through God.

37 They petitioned the king, asking for their release to their own homes.

38 They register them from the twenty-fifth of Pachon until the fourth of Epiphi, for forty days, and arrange their destruction from the fifth of Epiphi until the seventh, for three days,

39 in which the Sovereign of all, gloriously manifesting his mercy, rescued them all together without stumbling.

40 They feasted, everything being supplied by the king, until the fourteenth, on which they also made the petition concerning their release.

41 Agreeing with them, the king wrote for them the letter written below to the generals in each city, conveying his earnest concern magnanimously:

Chapter 7

1 “King Ptolemaios Philopator to the generals throughout Egypt and all those appointed over affairs, greetings and health;

2 we ourselves and our children are well, the great God having directed affairs for us as we choose.

3 Some of the Friends, through ill nature, persistently pressing upon us, persuaded us to gather the Jews under the kingdom as a body and punish them with extraordinary punishments of rebels,

4 asserting that our affairs would never be stable until this was accomplished, because of the hostility these men have toward all nations.

5 They brought them down bound with maltreatment, as slaves, or rather as plotters, and without any inquiry or examination attempted to kill them, having clothed themselves with cruelty more savage than the custom of Scythians.

6 But we, threatening them more harshly concerning these things, according to the equity we have toward all men, barely granting them life, and recognizing that the heavenly God has securely defended the Jews, continually fighting for them as a father for sons,

7 and considering the steadfast goodwill of a friend which they have toward us and our ancestors, have justly released them from every accusation in whatever manner,

8 and have commanded everyone that all should return to their own homes in every place, no one harming them at all or reproaching them for the things that happened contrary to reason.

9 For know that if we wickedly contrive any evil against these men or distress them at all, we will have opposing us, not a man, but the Most High God who rules over every power, for vengeance upon affairs, in every respect inescapably and continually. Farewell.”

10 Receiving this letter, they did not hasten immediately to attend to their departure, but further requested the king that those of the Jewish people who had voluntarily transgressed against the holy God and the law of God should receive through them the punishment owed,

11 asserting that those who had transgressed the divine ordinances for the sake of the belly would never be well-disposed even toward the king’s affairs.

12 He, accepting that they spoke the truth and approving, gave them permission for everything, so that they might openly destroy those who had transgressed God’s law throughout every place under his kingdom, without any royal authorization or oversight.

13 Then, acclaiming him as was fitting, their priests and the whole multitude shouted the allelouia and departed with joy.

14 Thus they punished any defiled fellow countryman they encountered along the road and killed them with public examples.

15 On that day they killed more than three hundred men, and celebrated it with gladness and joy, having subdued the profane.

16 Those who themselves had held to God until death, receiving complete enjoyment of deliverance, departed from the city crowned with every kind of most fragrant flower, with gladness and shouting, in praises and hymns of every melody, giving thanks to the God of their fathers, the eternal Savior of Israel.

17 Arriving in Ptolemais, called rose-bearing because of the character of the place, where the fleet waited for them seven days according to their common decision,

18 they held there a drinking feast for deliverance, the king having generously supplied them with everything for each one’s arrival as far as his own home.

19 Landing with peace and fitting acknowledgments, they likewise established there also the observance of these days with gladness during the time of their settlement abroad.

20 Consecrating these days on a pillar and establishing a place of prayer at the place of the drinking party, they departed unharmed, free, exceedingly joyful, brought safely back by land and sea and river at the king’s command, each to his own home,

21 and possessing much greater authority among their enemies than before, with glory and fear, being deprived of none of their possessions by extortion at all.

22 All recovered all their own things according to the registration, so that those who possessed anything restored it to them with the greatest fear, the greatest God having perfectly accomplished great deeds for their deliverance.

23 Blessed is the Rescuer of Israel for all time. Amen.

Chapter 1

1 About to present a most philosophical discourse, whether pious reason is sovereign over the passions, I would rightly advise you to attend eagerly to philosophy.

2 For the discourse is necessary for knowledge to everyone, and moreover contains praise of the greatest virtue, I mean prudence.

3 If therefore reason appears to prevail over the passions hindering temperance, both gluttony and desire,

4 it also manifestly rules over the passions obstructing justice, such as ill nature, and the passions obstructing courage, anger and fear and pain.

5 “How then,” some might perhaps say, “if reason masters the passions, does it not rule over forgetfulness and ignorance?” attempting to say something ridiculous.

6 For reason does not master its own passions, but those opposed to justice and courage and temperance, and these not so as to abolish them, but so as not to yield to them.

7 From many sources and elsewhere I could therefore show you that reason is ruler over the passions,

8 but much more could I demonstrate this from the valor of those who died for virtue, Eleazaros and the seven brothers and their mother.

9 For all these, disregarding pains unto death, demonstrated that reason completely masters the passions.

10 For their virtues therefore it falls to me to praise the men who at this time died with their mother for nobility and goodness, and for their honors I would call them blessed.

11 For, admired not only by all men for their courage and endurance, but also by their tormentors, they became responsible for the overthrow of the tyranny against the nation, conquering the tyrant by endurance, so that the homeland was purified through them.

12 But it will be possible to speak about this presently also, beginning with the subject, as I am accustomed to do; and thus I will turn to the discourse concerning them, giving glory to the all-wise God.

13 We therefore inquire whether reason is ruler over the passions.

14 We distinguish what reason is and what passion is, and how many forms of passions there are, and whether reason prevails over all these.

15 Reason therefore is a mind which with right reasoning prefers the life of wisdom.

16 Wisdom therefore is knowledge of divine and human matters and their causes.

17 This therefore is the instruction of the law, through which we learn divine matters reverently and human matters profitably.

18 The forms of wisdom are prudence and justice and courage and temperance;

19 most authoritative of all is prudence, through which reason prevails over the passions.

20 The two most comprehensive natures of passions are pleasure and pain; each of these naturally concerns both body and soul.

21 There are also many sequences of passions concerning pleasure and pain.

22 Before pleasure therefore is desire, and after pleasure joy.

23 Before pain is fear, and after pain grief.

24 Anger is a passion common to pleasure and pain, if one considers that he has fallen into it.

25 In pleasure there is also the ill-natured disposition, which is the most varied of all passions,

26 and those of the soul are arrogance and love of money and love of glory and contentiousness and envy,

27 and concerning the body, eating everything and greediness and eating alone.

28 As therefore there are two plants of body and soul, pleasure and pain, there are many offshoots of these plants,

29 each of which reason, the universal cultivator, cleanses and prunes and binds and waters and tends in every manner, taming the woodlands of dispositions and passions.

30 For reason is leader of the virtues and ruler of the passions. Observe therefore first, through the deeds hindering temperance, that reason is sovereign over the passions.

31 Temperance therefore is mastery of desires,

32 and of desires some belong to the soul and others to the body, and reason appears to prevail over both these.

33 For why, when moved toward forbidden foods, do we turn away from their pleasures? Is it not because reason can prevail over appetites? I think so.

34 Therefore, desiring aquatic creatures and birds and quadrupeds and every kind of food forbidden us according to the law, we abstain through the mastery of reason.

35 For the passions of appetites are restrained, checked by the temperate mind, and all the movements of the body are muzzled by reason.

Chapter 2

1 And what is wondrous if the desires of the soul for participation in beauty are annulled?

2 In this respect therefore the temperate Ioseph is praised, because by thought he completely mastered sensual pleasure.

3 For, being young and in his prime for intercourse, he annulled by reason the frenzy of the passions.

4 Reason appears to prevail not only over the maddening impulse of sensual pleasure, but also over every desire.

5 The law therefore says, “You shall not desire your neighbor’s wife, nor whatever belongs to your neighbor.”

6 And indeed, since the law has told us not to desire, I could much more persuade you that reason can master desires. Likewise also the passions hindering justice;

7 for in what manner is someone whose character is to eat alone and be gluttonous, or also drunken, reeducated, unless it is clear that reason is master of the passions?

8 For immediately, conducting his life by the law, even if someone loves money, he constrains his own manner, lending to those in need without interest and canceling the loan when the seventh periods arrive;

9 and even if someone is miserly, he is mastered by the law through reason, neither gleaning his harvests nor gathering the remaining grapes of his vineyards. In the other matters also it is possible to recognize this, that reason masters the passions;

10 for the law also masters goodwill toward parents, not betraying virtue for their sake,

11 and prevails over affection toward a wife, reproving her because of lawlessness,

12 and rules over affection for children, punishing them because of wickedness,

13 and governs familiarity with friends, exposing them because of evil.

14 And do not suppose it unexpected, since reason can also prevail over enmity through the law, neither cutting down the cultivated plants of enemies, but preserving the things of enemies for those who lost them and helping raise those that have fallen.

15 Reason also appears to master the more violent passions, love of rule and vainglory and arrogance and boasting and envy;

16 for the temperate mind repels all these ill-natured passions, as also anger; for it rules over this also.

17 Indeed Moyses, angry against Dathan and Abiron, did nothing against them in anger, but regulated his anger by reason.

18 For the temperate mind is able, as I said, to excel against the passions and alter some of them, and also annul others.

19 For why does our all-wise father Iakob blame those around Symeon and Leui, who slaughtered the Sikimites as a whole nation without reason, saying, “Accursed is their anger”?

20 For if reason could not master anger, he would not have spoken thus.

21 For when God fashioned man, he planted his passions and dispositions around him;

22 and when he enthroned above all the holy leader, the mind, through the organs of sense,

23 he also gave it a law, according to which, conducting its life, it will reign with a temperate and just and good and courageous reign.

24 “How then,” someone might say, “if reason is master of the passions, does it not master forgetfulness and ignorance?”

Chapter 3

1 But the argument is altogether ridiculous; for reason appears to prevail not over its own passions, but over those of the body.

2 For example, none of us can cut out desire, but reason can provide that one not be enslaved to desire.

3 One cannot cut anger out of your soul, but it is possible for reason to help with anger.

4 None of us can cut out ill nature, but reason could fight alongside us so that we not be bent by ill nature;

5 for reason is not an uprooter of the passions, but an antagonist.

6 It is therefore possible to consider this more clearly through the thirst of King Dauid.

7 For when Dauid, attacking the foreigners throughout a whole day, killed many of them with the soldiers of the nation,

8 then, when evening came, sweating and exceedingly weary, he came to the royal tent, around which the whole army of our ancestors had encamped.

9 All the others therefore were at supper,

10 but the king, exceedingly thirsty, although having abundant springs, could not cure his thirst through them,

11 but an irrational desire for the water among the enemies intensified and parched him, and weakened and burned him.

12 Therefore, when the shield-bearers lamented the king’s desire, two young strong soldiers, respecting the king’s desire, armed themselves with their full equipment and, taking a pitcher, crossed the enemies’ palisades,

13 and, escaping the notice of the guards at the gates, went through, searching throughout the whole camp of the enemies,

14 and, discovering the spring, boldly brought the drink from it to the king;

15 but he, although burning with thirst, reasoned that a drink reckoned equivalent to blood was a most terrible danger to the soul,

16 and therefore, setting reason against desire, poured the drink as a libation to God.

17 For the temperate mind is able to conquer the compulsions of the passions and extinguish the inflammations of frenzy,

18 and wrestle down the exceedingly great pains of bodies, and through the nobility and goodness of reason spit away all the dominions of the passions.

19 Now the occasion also calls us to the demonstration from history of temperate reason.

20 For since our fathers had deep peace through good observance of law and prospered, so that even Seleukos Nikanor, king of Asia, allotted them money for sacred service and accepted their constitution, 21 then some, introducing innovations against the common concord, experienced manifold calamities.

Chapter 4

1 For a certain Simon, opposing Onias, who then held the high priesthood for life, a fine and good man, since by slandering in every manner he was unable to harm him before the nation, went away as a fugitive to betray the homeland.

2 Therefore, coming to Apollonios, the general of Syria and Phoinike and Kilikia, he said:

3 “Being well-disposed toward the king’s affairs, I come reporting that many tens of thousands in private funds have been stored in the treasuries of Hierosolyma, not belonging to the sacred funds, and that these belong to King Seleukos.”

4 Learning each of these things, Apollonios praises Simon for his care toward the king, and, going up to Seleukos, reported the treasure of funds.

5 Receiving authority concerning them, quickly into our homeland with the accursed Simon and a most grievous army,

6 he came and said he had arrived by the king’s commands to take the private funds of the treasury.

7 The nation lamented and objected to the statement, and, considering it most terrible if those who entrusted deposits to the sacred treasury should be deprived, they prevented him as far as possible.

8 But Apollonios went into the sanctuary with threats.

9 When the priests with women and children in the sanctuary supplicated God to defend the sacred place being treated with contempt,

10 and Apollonios went up with his fully armed army to seize the funds, mounted angels appeared beforehand from heaven, flashing all around with their arms and instilling much fear and trembling in them.

11 Indeed Apollonios, falling half dead upon the sanctuary’s enclosure for all tribes, stretched his hands toward heaven and with tears exhorted the Hebrews to pray for him and appease the heavenly army.

12 For he said that he had sinned so as to deserve even death, and that, if saved, he would hymn to all men the blessedness of the sacred place.

13 Moved by these words, Onias the high priest, although also wary lest King Seleukos suppose that Apollonios had been killed by a human plot and not divine justice, prayed for him.

14 Unexpectedly preserved, he departed to make known to the king what had happened to him.

15 When King Seleukos died, his son Antiochos Epiphanes succeeds to the rule, an arrogant and terrible man,

16 who removed Onias from the high priesthood and established his brother Iason as high priest,

17 who agreed to give three thousand six hundred and sixty talents yearly if he entrusted the office to him.

18 He permitted him both to serve as high priest and to lead the nation;

19 and he changed the nation’s way of life and constitution toward every lawlessness,

20 so that he not only constructed a gymnasium upon the very citadel of our homeland, but also dissolved the care of the sanctuary.

21 Indignant at these things, divine justice made Antiochos himself wage war against them.

22 For when he was warring in Egypt against Ptolemaios, and heard that, a report of his death having spread, the Hierosolymites rejoiced exceedingly, he quickly marched against them,

23 and, when he had ravaged them, made a decree that if any of them were found conducting their lives by the ancestral law, they should die.

24 Since he was in no way able through the decrees to overthrow the nation’s good observance of law, but saw all his threats and punishments being overthrown,

25 so that even women, because they circumcised their children, were hurled down with their infants, knowing beforehand that they would suffer this;

26 since therefore his decrees were despised by the people, he himself through tortures compelled each individual of the nation to renounce Judaism by tasting polluted foods.

Chapter 5

1 Indeed the tyrant Antiochos, taking his seat with the councilors upon a certain high place, with his armed troops standing around him,

2 commanded the spear-bearers to drag forward each Hebrew and compel him to taste pork and food sacrificed to idols;

3 and if any were unwilling to eat polluted food, these should be tortured on the wheel and killed.

4 Many being seized together, one first from the crowd, named Eleazaros, a priest by birth, learned in the law and advanced in age, and known to many around the tyrant because of his age, was brought near him.

5 Seeing him, Antiochos said:

6 “Before beginning the tortures against you, old man, I would advise you these things, that by tasting pork you might be saved;

7 for I respect your age and gray hair, which you have after so long a time, yet you do not seem to me to practice philosophy, using the religion of the Jews.

8 For why do you abhor eating the flesh of this animal, when nature has granted it as most excellent?

9 For this is senseless, not to enjoy pleasant things without reproach, and unjust to turn away the gifts of nature.

10 And you seem to me likely to act even more senselessly if, vainly boasting concerning the truth, you further despise me also to your own punishment.

11 Will you not awaken from your prattling philosophy and scatter the nonsense from your reasonings, and, taking up a mind worthy of your age, philosophize upon the truth of what is advantageous,

12 and, reverencing my humane counsel, pity your own old age?

13 For consider that, even if there is some overseeing power of this religion of yours, it would pardon you for every transgression arising through compulsion."

14 When the tyrant urged him in this manner toward unlawful eating of flesh, Eleazaros asked to speak,

15 and, receiving permission to speak, began to address them thus:

16 "We, Antiochos, persuaded to conduct our life by divine law, consider no compulsion stronger than our obedience to the law;

17 therefore we deem it proper in no manner to transgress the law.

18 Indeed, if our law were not in truth divine, as you suppose, but we otherwise considered it divine, even so it would not be permissible for us to annul our conviction concerning piety.

19 Do not therefore suppose that this would be a small sin, if we ate polluted food;

20 for transgressing the law in small and great things is equivalent,

21 for through either the law is similarly treated with arrogance.

22 You mock our philosophy as though we did not live in it with sound reasoning;

23 for it teaches us temperance so as to master all pleasures and desires, and trains courage so as willingly to endure every pain,

24 and instructs in justice so as to practice equality of law in all dispositions, and teaches piety so as magnificently to revere only the God who exists.

25 Therefore we do not eat polluted food; for, believing that the law is established by God, we know that the Creator of the world sympathizes with us according to nature in legislating;

26 he permitted us to eat what would be suited to our souls, but forbade the eating of flesh of what would be opposed to them.

27 It is tyrannical not only to compel us to transgress the law, but also to eat, so that you may laugh at us for this most hateful eating of polluted food.

28 But you will not laugh this laugh against me,

29 nor will I abandon the holy oaths of the ancestors concerning keeping the law,

30 not even if you cut out my eyes and melt my entrails.

31 I am not so old and cowardly that through piety my reason does not remain youthful.

32 Therefore prepare wheels and blow the fire more fiercely.

33 I do not pity my own old age so much that through myself I would overthrow the ancestral law.

34 I will not betray you, instructing law, nor renounce you, beloved self-control,

35 nor shame you, philosophical reason, nor deny you, honored priesthood and knowledge of legislation;

36 nor will you defile my reverent mouth of old age or my lifetime of lawful life.

37 The fathers will receive me pure, not having feared your compulsions unto death.

38 For you will tyrannize over the impious, but will rule over my reasonings for piety neither by words nor through deeds.”

Chapter 6

1 When he had answered the tyrant's exhortations in this manner, the guards standing by dragged Eleazaros bitterly to the instruments of torture.

2 And first they stripped the aged man, adorned with the dignity belonging to piety;

3 then, binding his arms behind him, they maltreated him with whips on either side,

4 while a herald cried out from the other side, “Obey the king's commands.”

5 But Eleazaros, truly magnanimous and noble, as though being tortured in a dream, did not change in any way,

6 but, raising his eyes high toward heaven, the old man had his flesh torn by the whips and was drenched with blood, and his sides were pierced through.

7 And falling to the ground because his body could not bear the pains, he kept his reason upright and unbending.

8 Indeed, one of the bitter guards, springing at his flanks, struck him with his foot so that he would rise when falling.

9 But he endured the pains and despised the compulsion and persisted through the maltreatments,

10 and, like a noble athlete, the old man, while being struck, defeated those torturing him;

11 indeed, sweating in the face and panting heavily, he was admired even by those torturing him for his courage.

12 Therefore, partly pitying the circumstances of his old age,

13 partly feeling sympathy from familiarity, and partly admiring his endurance, some of the king's men approached him and said,

14 “Why do you unreasonably destroy yourself with these evils, Eleazar?

15 We will indeed set before you some of the cooked foods, and you, pretending to taste the pork, save yourself.”

16 And Eleazaros, as though more bitterly maltreated by the counsel, cried out,

17 “May we, the children of Abraam, not think so badly as to become fainthearted and act out a performance unfitting for us.

18 For it is also unreasonable if, having lived our life until old age according to truth and lawfully guarded the reputation belonging to it, we should now change

19 and we ourselves should become a pattern of impiety to the young, so that we become an example of eating defiled food.

20 And it is shameful if we shall live on for a little time, and that while being laughed at by everyone for cowardice,

21 and be despised by the tyrant as unmanly, but should not defend our divine law until death.

22 In view of these things, you, children of Abraam, die nobly for piety.

23 And you guards of the tyrant, why do you delay?”

24 Seeing him thus magnanimous in the face of the compulsions and not changing even in response to their pity, they led him up to the fire;

25 there, burning him with maliciously devised instruments, they flung him about, and poured foul-smelling liquids into his nostrils.

26 But he, already burned down to his bones and about to faint, raised his eyes toward God and said,

27 “You know, God, that although I can save myself, I am dying in burning tortures because of the law.

28 Be gracious to your nation, being satisfied with our punishment on their behalf.

29 Make my blood their purification, and take my life as an exchange for their lives.”

30 And having said these things, the holy man died nobly in the tortures, and until the tortures of death resisted by reason because of the law.

31 Therefore, admittedly, pious reason is master of the passions.

32 For if the passions had prevailed over reason, we would have given them the testimony of supremacy;

33 but now, since reason has defeated the passions, we suitably assign to it the authority of leadership.

34 And it is just for us to acknowledge that the might belongs to reason, since it prevails even over pains from outside, for it is also ridiculous.

35 And I demonstrate that reason has not only prevailed over pains, but also rules pleasures and yields nothing to them.

Chapter 7

1 For like an excellent pilot, the reason of our father Eleazaros, steering the ship of piety in the sea of the passions

2 and being maltreated by the tyrant's threats and flooded by the stormy waves of the tortures,

3 did not in any way turn the tillers of piety until it sailed into the harbor of immortal victory.

4 No city, besieged with many and varied engines, ever held out in this way, as did that most holy man. Being set on fire in his sacred soul with maltreatments and racks, he defeated those besieging him through reason, which defends piety.

5 For father Eleazar, extending his own understanding like a headland with steep cliffs, broke the raging surges of the passions.

6 O priest worthy of the priesthood, you did not defile your sacred teeth, nor did you profane with defiled eating the belly that had made room for reverence for God and purification.

7 O one in accord with the law and philosopher of divine life.

8 Such must be those who put the law into practice, defending it with their own blood and noble sweat against sufferings unto death.

9 You, father, confirmed our observance of law unto glory through your endurance, and, having spoken reverently of holiness, you did not overthrow it, and through deeds you made credible the discourses of your divine philosophy,

10 O old man more forceful than tortures, aged man stronger than fire, and greatest king of the passions, Eleazar.

11 For just as father Aaron, armed with the censer and running through the multitude of the nation, defeated the burning angel,

12 so Eleazar, the descendant of Aaron, being melted away by the fire, did not change his reason.

13 And indeed, most wondrous of all, although an old man, with the tensions of his body already loosened, his flesh slackened all around, and his sinews also exhausted, he became young again

14 in spirit through reason, and through reason like Isaak's he rendered the many-headed rack powerless.

15 O blessed old age and venerable gray hair and lawful life, which a faithful seal of death brought to completion.

16 If, therefore, an old man despised tortures unto death because of piety, admittedly pious reason is leader of the passions.

17 But perhaps some might say, “Not everyone masters the passions, because not everyone has prudent reason.”

18 But all who take thought for piety with their whole heart, these alone can rule the passions of the flesh,

19 believing that they do not die to God, just as neither do our patriarchs Abraam and Isaak and Iakob, but they live to God.

20 Therefore, the fact that some appear to be ruled by passions because of weak reason presents no opposition;

21 for who, pursuing philosophy according to the whole rule of philosophy and having trusted God,

22 and knowing that it is blessed to endure every pain because of virtue, would not master the passions because of reverence for God?

23 For the wise and courageous man alone is lord of the passions.

Chapter 8

1 Indeed, for this reason youths also, pursuing philosophy by the reason of piety, prevailed over harsher instruments of torture.

2 For when, at the first trial, the tyrant was conspicuously defeated, being unable to compel an old man to eat defiled food, then, with exceedingly great passion, he commanded that others be brought from the captive Hebrews, and that, if they ate defiled food, they be released after eating, but if they spoke against it, they be tortured more bitterly.

3 When the tyrant had ordered these things, seven brothers were brought in with an aged mother, handsome and modest and noble and gracious in everything.

4 Seeing them surrounding their mother in the middle, as in a chorus, the tyrant took pleasure in them, and, struck by their good appearance and nobility, smiled at them and called them near and said,

5 “O young men, I admire each one of you with goodwill; esteeming highly the beauty and the number of so many brothers, I not only counsel you not to go mad with the same madness as the old man tortured before you, but also urge you to yield to me and enjoy my friendship;

6 and just as I could punish those disobeying my commands, so also could I benefit those readily obeying me.

7 Trust, therefore, and you will receive leading offices over my affairs, having denied your ancestral ordinance of citizenship;

8 and, having partaken of Greek life and changed your way of living, luxuriate in your youth;

9 for if you make me angry through disobedience, you will compel me, with dreadful punishments, to destroy each one of you through tortures.

10 Have pity on yourselves, therefore, whom even I, your enemy, pity for your age and beauty.

11 Will you not consider this, that if you disobey, nothing is laid up for you except to die with tortures?”

12 Saying these things, he commanded that the instruments of torture be placed before them, so that through fear also he might persuade them to eat defiled food.

13 And when the guards had set out wheels and joint-presses, racks and rollers and catapults and cauldrons, frying pans and finger-sheaths and iron hands and wedges and the glowing embers of the fire, the tyrant took up the speech and said,

14 “Youths, be afraid, and the justice you revere will be gracious to you when you transgress the law through compulsion.”

15 But they, hearing enticing things and seeing dreadful things, not only were not afraid, but also answered the tyrant with philosophy and through sound reasoning overthrew his tyranny.

16 And indeed, let us consider: if some among them had been cowardly and unmanly, what words would they have used? Would they not have been these?

17 “O wretched and exceedingly senseless us! Since the king calls us and invites us to benefits if we should obey him, 18 why do we delight ourselves with empty wishes and dare death-bearing disobedience?

19 Shall we not fear the instruments of torture, men, brothers, and consider the threats of tortures, and flee this vainglory and destruction-bearing arrogance?

20 Let us pity our own ages and have compassion on our mother's old age, 21 and reflect that, if we disobey, we shall be dead.

22 And divine justice also will forgive us for fearing the king through compulsion.

23 Why do we lead ourselves out of sweetest life and deprive ourselves of the sweet world?

24 Let us not contend by force against compulsion, nor be vainglorious over our own torture.

25 Neither does the law itself willingly put us to death for fearing the instruments of torture.

26 From where has such great contentiousness melted into us, and why does death-bearing endurance please us, when it is possible to live without disturbance by obeying the king?”

27 But the young men about to be tortured neither said nor considered any of these things.

28 For they were disdainful of the passions and sovereign over the pains,

29 so that, as soon as the tyrant ceased counseling them to eat defiled food, they all said together with one voice, as though from the same soul,

Chapter 9

1 “Why do you delay, tyrant? For we are ready to die rather than transgress our ancestral commandments;

2 for we would rightly be ashamed before our forefathers if we did not employ obedience to the law and Moyses as counselor.

3 Tyrant, counselor of lawlessness, do not, while hating us, pity us beyond ourselves.

4 For we consider your pity concerning our unlawful preservation to be harsher than death itself.

5 And you terrify us by threatening us with death through tortures, as though you had not learned from Eleazaros a little while ago.

6 But if the old men of the Hebrews practiced piety by enduring even tortures because of piety, more justly would we young men die, disregarding the tortures of your compulsions, which our aged instructor also defeated.

7 Make trial, therefore, tyrant; and if you put our lives to death because of piety, do not think you harm us by torturing us.

8 For through this suffering and endurance we shall have the prizes of virtue and shall be with God, because of whom we also suffer;

9 but because of your bloodshed against us, you will endure sufficient eternal torture by fire from divine justice.”

10 When they had said these things, the tyrant not only raged against them as disobedient, but also became angry against them as ungrateful.

11 Therefore, having been commanded, the shield-bearers brought forward the eldest of them, and, tearing his tunic, bound his hands and arms with straps on either side.

12 And when they grew weary of striking him with whips, accomplishing nothing, they threw him up onto the wheel;

13 stretched upon it, the noble young man was being dislocated.

14 And being broken in every limb, he reviled him, saying,

15 “Most defiled tyrant and enemy of heavenly justice and savage-minded one, you maltreat me in this manner although I have not murdered nor acted impiously, but defend divine law.”

16 And when the guards said, “Agree to eat, so that you may be released from the tortures,”

17 he said, “Your wheel is not so strong, defiled servants, as to strangle my reason; cut my limbs and burn my flesh and rack my joints.

18 For through all the tortures I will convince you that the children of the Hebrews alone are invincible for virtue.”

19 As he said these things, they spread fire beneath him and tightened further what set the wheel in motion;

20 and the wheel was stained everywhere with blood, and the heap of charcoal was being quenched by drops of bodily fluids, and his flesh flowed around the axles of the instrument.

21 And already having the framework of his bones cut all around, the magnanimous young man of Abraam did not groan,

22 but, as though being transformed in fire into incorruption, nobly endured the racks,

23 saying, “Imitate me, brothers; do not desert my contest, nor disown my brotherhood of courage.

24 Wage a sacred and noble campaign for piety, through which our just and ancestral providence, becoming gracious to the nation, might punish the accursed tyrant.”

25 And having said these things, the young man worthy of holiness breathed out his soul.

26 And while everyone admired his steadfastness of soul, the guards brought the second in age after the first, and, fitting iron hands with sharp claws, bound him to an instrument and catapult.

27 And when, asking whether he wished to eat before being tortured, they heard his noble resolve,

28 pulling with the iron hands from the sinews as far as the cheeks, the leopard-like beasts dragged away all his flesh and the skin of his head. But he, enduring this grievous pain, said,

29 “How sweet is every manner of death because of our ancestral piety.” And he said to the tyrant,

30 “Do you not think, cruelest tyrant of all, that you are being tortured more than I, seeing your arrogant reason of tyranny defeated by our endurance because of piety?

31 For I lighten my pain with the pleasures arising from virtue,

32 but you are tortured among the threats of impiety. And you will not escape, most defiled tyrant, the punishments of divine wrath.”

Chapter 10

1 And when this one had endured the death celebrated in song, the third was brought, being urged much by many to save himself by tasting.

2 But he cried out and said, “Do you not know that the same father begot me as those who died, and the same mother gave birth to me, and I was brought up in the same teachings?

3 I do not disown the noble kinship of the brotherhood.”

5 But they, taking the man's frank speech bitterly, dislocated his hands and feet with joint-pressing instruments, and, levering them out of their joints, tore his limbs apart,

6 and broke his fingers and arms and legs and elbows all around.

7 And being unable in any way to strangle him, they loosened the instruments and scalped him along with the very tips of his fingers.

8 And immediately they brought him onto the wheel, upon which, being torn apart at the vertebrae, he saw his own flesh torn all around and drops of blood flowing down over his entrails.

9 And being about to die, he said,

10 “We, most defiled tyrant, suffer these things because of the instruction and virtue of God;

11 but you, because of impiety and bloodshed, will endure tortures that cannot be ended.”

12 And when this one had died in a manner worthy of his brothers, they dragged forward the fourth, saying,

13 “Do not you also go mad with the same madness as your brothers, but obey the king and save yourself.”

14 But he said to them, “You do not have fire so much more burning against me as to make me act cowardly.

15 By the blessed death of my brothers and the eternal destruction of the tyrant and the everlasting life of the pious, I will not deny the noble brotherhood.

16 Devise tortures, tyrant, so that through them also you may learn that I am a brother of those tortured before me.”

17 Hearing these things, the blood-devouring and murderous and utterly most defiled Antiochos commanded that his tongue be cut out.

18 But he said, “Even if you take away the instrument of the voice, God hears even those who are silent;

19 look, the tongue is stretched out; cut it, for you will not thereby cut out the tongue of our reason.

20 Gladly we have the limbs of our body mutilated for God.

21 But God will swiftly pursue you, for you cut out the tongue that sings divine hymns.”

Chapter 11

1 And when this one also, maltreated by the tortures, died in them, the fifth sprang forward, saying,

2 “I am not going to beg off from torture for virtue, tyrant,

3 but I came forward myself, of my own accord, so that, killing me also, you may owe heavenly justice punishment for more wrongdoings.

4 O hater of virtue and hater of humanity, what have we done that you ravage us in this manner?

5 Is it because we reverence the creator of all and live according to his virtuous law?

6 But these things are worthy of honors, not tortures.”

9 And as he said such things, the guards bound him and dragged him onto the catapult,

10 upon which, binding him at the knees and fitting these into iron foot-traps, they bent his waist around a wedge on the wheel, around which, being bent backward in his entirety around the wheel in the manner of a scorpion, he was being torn limb from limb.

11 In this manner, being constricted in breath and strangled in body also,

12 he said, “Unwillingly you grant us fine favors, tyrant, providing us through nobler pains the opportunity to show our endurance toward the law.”

13 And when this one also had died, the sixth youth was brought, who, when the tyrant asked whether he wished to eat and be released, said,

14 “I am younger than my brothers in age, but of their age in understanding;

15 for having been born and brought up for the same things, we also ought likewise to die for the same things;

16 so, if it seems good to you to torture one who does not eat defiled food, torture.”

17 When he had said these things, they brought him onto the wheel,

18 upon which, being carefully stretched and having his vertebrae dislocated, he was burned from beneath.

19 And heating sharp skewers, they applied them to his back and, piercing his sides, burned through his entrails.

20 But while being tortured he said, “O contest worthy of holiness, to which so many brothers were called because of piety for an exercise in pains, and we were not defeated.

21 For pious knowledge is invincible, tyrant.

22 Armed with nobility and goodness, I too shall die with my brothers,

23 myself also bringing a great avenging spirit against you, inventor of tortures and enemy of those who truly practice piety.

24 Six youths have overthrown your tyranny;

25 for is your inability to persuade our reason to change or to force it toward defiled eating not your overthrow?

26 Your fire is cold to us, and the catapults painless, and your force powerless.

27 For our guards have stood in defense of divine law, not of a tyrant; because of this we have invincible reason.”

Chapter 12

1 And when this one also died blessedly, having been thrown into a cauldron, the seventh, youngest of all, came forward.

2 Pitying him, although terribly reviled by his brothers, and seeing the bonds already placed around him, the tyrant summoned him nearer and tried to exhort him, saying,

3 “You see the end of your brothers' madness; for, racked because of disobedience, they are dead.

4 But if you do not obey, wretched one, you too will be tortured and will be dead before your time,

5 but if you obey, you will be a friend and will lead the affairs of the kingdom.”

6 And urging these things, he summoned the child's mother, so that, pitying her who had been deprived of so many sons, he might urge the remaining one toward saving obedience.

7 But when his mother had exhorted him in the Hebrew tongue, as we shall say a little later,

8 he says, “Release me, that I may speak to the king and all the friends with him.”

9 And exceedingly pleased at the child's promise, they quickly released him.

10 And running near the frying pans,

11 he says, “Unholy tyrant and most impious of all wicked men, having received good things and the kingdom from God, were you not ashamed to kill his servants and rack those who exercise piety?

12 In return for these things, justice will reserve you for more intense and eternal fire and tortures, which will not release you for the whole age.

13 Were you not ashamed, being human, most beastly one, to cut out the tongues of those with like feelings and made from the same elements, and to torture them, maltreating them in this manner?

14 But they, dying nobly, fulfilled their piety toward God, while you will wail grievously for killing the contenders for virtue without cause.”

15 Therefore, being about to die himself also, he said,

16 “I do not desert the valor of my brothers;

17 but I call upon the ancestral God, that he may become gracious to our nation.

18 And he will punish you both in the present life and when you have died.”

19 And having prayed these things, he threw himself onto the frying pans, and thus gave up his life.

Chapter 13

1 If, therefore, the seven brothers despised pains unto death, it is agreed from every side that pious reason is sovereign master of the passions.

2 For if, enslaved to the passions, they had eaten defiled food, we would say that they had been defeated by them;

3 but now it was not so; rather, by reason praised before God, they overcame the passions,

4 and their leadership of understanding cannot be overlooked, for they prevailed over both passion and pains.

5 How, therefore, can one fail to acknowledge in these men sound reasoning's rule over the passions, when they did not turn back from the pains through fire?

6 For just as towers projecting at harbors, checking the threats of the waves, provide a calm anchorage for those sailing in,

7 so the seven-towered sound reasoning of the young men, fortifying the harbor of piety, defeated the licentiousness of the passions.

8 For, forming a sacred chorus of piety, they encouraged one another, saying,

9 “Let us die as brothers, brothers, for the law; let us imitate the three young men in Assyria, who despised the furnace that shared their citizenship.

10 Let us not act cowardly in the demonstration of piety.”

11 And one said, “Take courage, brother,” and another, “Endure nobly,”

12 and another, recalling, said, “Remember where you are from, or by the hand of what father Isaak endured being slaughtered because of piety.”

13 And each one, all together looking at one another, cheerful and very courageous, said, “Let us dedicate ourselves with the whole heart to God, who gave our lives, and let us lend our bodies to the guarding of the law.

14 Let us not fear the one who seems to kill;

15 for great is the contest of the soul and the danger lying in eternal torture for those who transgress the commandment of God.

16 Let us therefore arm ourselves with divine reason's rule over the passions.

17 For when we have died in this manner, Abraam and Isaak and Iakob will receive us, and all the fathers will praise us.”

18 And to each one of their brothers being dragged away, those remaining said, “Do not put us to shame, brother, nor prove false to our brothers who died before us.”

19 And you are not ignorant of the affections of brotherhood, which divine and all-wise providence apportioned through fathers to those being born, having planted them also through the maternal womb,

20 in which brothers dwelt for an equal time and were formed in the same time and grew from the same blood and were brought to completion through the same soul,

21 and were delivered after equal periods and drank milk from the same springs, from which embraces brother-loving souls are nourished together;

22 and they grow more strongly through upbringing together and daily familiarity and the other instruction and our exercise in God's law.

23 Thus, therefore, brotherly love being established in sympathy, the seven brothers had greater sympathy toward one another.

24 For, instructed in the same law and having exercised the same virtues and been brought up together in righteous life, they loved one another more.

25 For shared zeal for nobility and goodness intensified their goodwill and concord toward one another;

26 for together with piety they made brotherly love more desirable to themselves.

27 But nevertheless, although nature and familiarity and the habits of virtue increased the affections of brotherhood for them, those remaining endured their brothers because of piety, seeing those maltreated being tortured unto death,

Chapter 14

1 further urging them on toward maltreatment, so that they not only despised the pains, but also ruled the passions of brotherly love.

2 O reasons more royal than kings and freer than free men.

3 O sacred and well-harmonized concord of the seven brothers concerning piety.

4 None of the seven youths became cowardly or hesitated before death,

5 but all, as though running onto a road of immortality, hastened toward death through tortures.

6 Just as the hands and feet move in accord with the soul's directions, so those holy youths, as though under the immortal soul of piety, agreed together upon death for it.

7 O most holy seven of brothers in concord. For just as the seven days of the creation of the world around piety,

8 so the youths, dancing around the seven, circled, overthrowing the fear of tortures.

9 Now we shudder on hearing the affliction of those young men; but they, not merely seeing, nor merely hearing the immediate word of threat, but also suffering, persisted, and this in pains through fire;

10 what could be more painful than these? For the force of fire, being sharp and swift, quickly dissolved their bodies.

11 And do not consider it wondrous if reason mastered those men in the tortures, since even a woman's mind despised pains of more varied kinds;

12 for the mother of the seven young men bore the tortures upon each one of her children.

13 And observe how intricate is the affection of love for children, drawing everything toward heartfelt sympathy,

14 since even irrational animals have sympathy and affection toward those born from them similar to humans.

15 For among the birds, the tame ones walking on roofs around the houses defend their nestlings,

16 while the others, having built nests on mountaintops and in the clefts of ravines and the hollows of trees and their summits, lay their young and hinder anyone approaching;

17 and if they cannot hinder them, flying all around them, grieving in their affection and crying out in their own voice, they help their children as they can.

18 And why must one demonstrate sympathy toward children through irrational animals,

19 when even bees, about the time of wax-making, defend themselves against those approaching and strike with their sting, as though with iron, those approaching their nest, and ward them off until death?

20 But sympathy for children did not move the young men's mother, who shared Abraam's soul.

Chapter 15

1 O reason, tyrant over passions concerning children, and piety more desirable to a mother than children.

2 The mother, with two things set before her, piety and the temporary preservation of seven sons according to the tyrant's promise,

3 loved piety more, which saves unto eternal life according to God.

4 O in what manner might I describe parents' passions of love for children? We impress a likeness of both soul and form into the wondrous small image of a child, especially because mothers are more sympathetic than fathers to the sufferings of those born.

5 For insofar as mothers are weaker in soul and more prolific, so much more do they love their children.

6 And the mother of the seven children became more loving of children than all mothers, who, through seven pregnancies, planting further her affection toward them,

7 and compelled through the many birth pains for each one of them to have sympathy toward them,

8 disregarded the temporary preservation of her children because of her fear toward God.

9 Indeed, also because of her sons' nobility and goodness and their obedience toward the law, she had greater affection for them.

10 For they were righteous and temperate and courageous and magnanimous and loving of brothers and loving of their mother, so as to obey her even unto death while keeping the ordinances.

11 But nevertheless, although there were so many things concerning love for children drawing the mother toward sympathy, the tortures of every varied kind were unable to change her reason in the case of any of them,

12 but the mother exhorted both each child and all together toward the death of piety.

13 O sacred nature and parents' affections and affectionate generation and nurture and mothers' untamable passions.

14 Seeing each one racked and burned, the mother did not change because of piety.

15 She saw her children's flesh melting around the fire and the toes and fingers twitching upon the earth and the flesh of their heads as far as the cheeks laid out like masks.

16 O mother, now tried by more bitter pains than the birth pains for them.

17 O woman who alone gave birth to piety in its entirety.

18 Your firstborn breathing his last did not change you, nor the second looking piteously toward you in tortures, nor the third expiring,

19 and seeing the eyes of each one looking like a bull upon the same maltreatment in the tortures, and their nostrils giving signs beforehand of their death, you did not weep.

20 Seeing children's flesh burned away upon children's flesh, and hands cut off upon hands, and heads severed from their necks upon heads, and dead falling upon dead, and seeing the place become a common grave of your children through the tortures, you did not shed tears.

21 Neither sirens' melodies nor swans' voices draw listeners toward delight in hearing as do the voices of children calling their mother amid tortures.

22 With how great and how many tortures was the mother then tortured, while her sons were tortured with wheels and burning irons.

23 But pious reason, making her heart courageous in the very passions, urged her to disregard temporary love for children.

24 Although seeing the destruction of seven children and the intricate variety of racks, the noble mother rendered them all powerless through faith toward God.

25 For, as though in a council chamber, seeing in her own soul dreadful counselors, nature and generation and love for children and the tortures of children,

26 the mother, holding two votes for her children, one death-bearing and one saving,

27 did not choose the preservation that saved seven sons for a little time,

28 but the daughter remembered the God-revering endurance of Abraam.

29 O mother of a nation, vindicator of the law and defender of piety and prize-bearer of the contest through the heart;

30 O nobler than males in steadfastness and more courageous than men in endurance.

31 For just as Noe's ark, bearing the world in the world-filling flood, steadfastly endured the surges,

32 so you, guardian of the law, flooded from every side in the deluge of the passions and beset by strong winds, the tortures of your sons, nobly endured the storms for piety.

Chapter 16

1 If, therefore, even a woman, aged and mother of seven children, endured while seeing her children's tortures unto death, admittedly pious reason is sovereign over the passions.

2 Therefore I demonstrated that not only men ruled the passions, but also a woman despised the greatest tortures.

3 And neither were the lions around Daniel so savage, nor the furnace of Misael blazing with most furious fire, as the nature of love for children burned around her while she saw her seven sons tortured in such varied ways.

4 But by the reason of piety the mother quenched passions so many and so great.

5 For consider this also, that if the woman had been cowardly, although being a mother, she would have lamented over them and perhaps would have said these things:

6 “O miserable me and many times thrice-wretched, who, having borne seven children, have become mother of none.

7 O vain seven pregnancies and profitless seven periods of ten months and fruitless nursing and wretched milk-feeding.

8 And in vain for you, children, I endured many birth pains and the harsher cares of upbringing.

9 O my children, some unmarried, others married without profit; I shall not see your children nor be called grandmother and pronounced blessed.

10 O I, the woman with many children and beautiful children, widowed and alone, full of mourning;

11 nor, if I die, will I have any of my sons to bury me.”

12 But the sacred and God-revering mother lamented for none with this lament, nor turned any of them aside so that they might not die, nor grieved as though they were dying,

13 but, as though having an adamantine mind and giving birth anew to the number of her sons unto immortality, she rather exhorted them toward death for piety, entreating them.

14 O mother, soldier of God through piety, aged woman and wife, through steadfastness you defeated even a tyrant and were found mightier than a man in both deeds and words.

15 For when you were seized with your children, you stood seeing Eleazaros being tortured and said to your children in the Hebrew tongue,

16 “O children, noble is the contest to which you were called for the testimony of the nation; contend eagerly in it for the ancestral law;

17 for it is shameful that this old man should endure the pains because of piety, but you young men be struck with terror by the tortures.

18 Remember that because of God you partook of the world and enjoyed life,

19 and because of this you ought to endure every pain because of God,

20 because of whom our father Abraam also hastened to slaughter his son Isaak, father of the nation, and he, seeing his father's sword-bearing hand descending upon him, did not cower.

21 And righteous Daniel was thrown among lions, and Ananias and Azarias and Misael were hurled into a furnace of fire and endured because of God.

22 Therefore you also, having the same faith toward God, do not be distressed.

23 For it is unreasonable, knowing piety, not to withstand the pains.”

24 Through these words the mother of seven, exhorting each one of her sons, persuaded them to die rather than transgress the commandment of God,

25 and further knowing these things also, that those dying because of God live to God, as do Abraam and Isaak and Iakob and all the patriarchs.

Chapter 17

1 And some of the guards also said that, when she herself was about to be seized for death, so that no one might touch her body, she threw herself onto the pyre.

2 O mother who, with seven children, overthrew the tyrant's force and rendered his evil designs powerless and showed the nobility of faith.

3 For like a roof, you, nobly established upon the pillars of your children, bore without bending the earthquake through the tortures.

4 Take courage, therefore, mother of a sacred soul, having the hope of endurance firm toward God.

5 The moon has not stood so venerable in heaven with stars as you, having guided your seven star-like children with light toward piety, have stood honored by God and have been established with them in heaven;

6 for your childbearing was from Abraam the father.

7 But if it were possible for us to paint the history of your piety as upon something, would not the spectators shudder, seeing a mother of seven children who endured varied tortures unto death because of piety?

8 For it was also worthy to inscribe upon the tomb itself these things also, said for remembrance to those of the nation:

9 “Here an old priest and an aged woman and seven children have been buried through the force of a tyrant wishing to overthrow the citizenship of the Hebrews,

10 who also vindicated the race, looking toward God and enduring the tortures unto death.”

11 For truly divine was the contest that took place through them.

12 For virtue then presided over the contest, testing through endurance. The victory: incorruption in long-lasting life.

13 And Eleazar contended first, and the mother of the seven children competed, and the brothers contended;

14 the tyrant contended against them, while the world and human life watched;

15 and reverence for God was victorious, crowning its own athletes.

16 Who did not admire the athletes of the divine legislation? Who were not astounded?

17 Indeed, the tyrant himself and the whole council admired their endurance,

18 through which they also now stand beside the divine throne and live the blessed age.

19 For Moyses also says, “And all those sanctified under your hands.”

20 And these, therefore, having been sanctified because of God, have been honored, not only with this honor, but also by the fact that through them the enemies did not prevail over our nation,

21 and the tyrant was punished and the homeland purified, as though they had become an exchange of lives for the nation's sin.

22 And through the blood of those pious men and the propitiation of their death, divine providence preserved Israel, who had previously been afflicted.

23 For looking toward their courage in virtue and their endurance in the tortures, the tyrant Antiochos proclaimed their endurance as an example to his soldiers,

24 and he had them noble and courageous for infantry battle and siege, and, having ravaged, defeated all the enemies.

Chapter 18

1 O descendant children of the seeds of Abraam, Israelites, obey this law and practice piety in every manner,

2 knowing that pious reason is master of the passions, and not only of those within, but also of the pains from outside.

3 In return for these things, having surrendered their bodies to pains because of piety, those men were not only admired by humans, but also deemed worthy of a divine portion.

4 And because of them the nation was at peace, and, having renewed observance of law in the homeland, they have ravaged the enemies.

5 And the tyrant Antiochos has been punished on earth also, and, having died, is being chastised; for when he was utterly unable in any way to compel the inhabitants of Ierosolyma to adopt foreign ways and depart from their ancestral customs of living, then, departing from Ierosolyma, he campaigned against the Persians.

6 And the mother of the seven children also said these ordinances to her children:

7 “I became a pure virgin and did not go beyond my father's house, but guarded the built rib.

8 Neither did a ravager of the wilderness, a corrupter in the plain, corrupt me, nor did a ravager of deceit, a serpent, ruin the pure things of my virginity.

9 And I remained with a husband for the time of my prime; but when these had come of age, their father died, blessed indeed was he, for having lived through the life of having good children, he did not suffer the time of childlessness.

10 He taught you the law and the prophets while still being with you.

11 And he read to you of Abel killed by Kain and Isaak being offered as a whole offering and Ioseph in prison.

12 And he told you of the zealous Phinees, and taught you of Ananias and Azarias and Misael in fire.

13 And he also glorified Daniel in the lions' pit, whom he pronounced blessed.

14 And he also reminded you of the writing of Esaias that says, ‘Even if you pass through fire, a flame will not burn you up.’

15 He sang to you the hymn-writer Dauid, saying, ‘Many are the afflictions of the righteous.’

16 He recited proverbs to you from Salomon, saying, ‘It is a tree of life to those who do his will.’

17 He made credible Iezekiel, who says, ‘Will these dry bones live?’

18 For he did not forget to teach the song that Moyses taught, which says,

19 ‘I will kill and make alive; this is your life and the length of your days.’”

20 O bitter day then and not bitter, when the bitter tyrant of the Greeks, quenching fire with fire in cruel cauldrons and with boiling rages, brought the seven children of the woman of Abraam onto the catapult and again to his tortures,

21 maimed the pupils of their eyes and cut out their tongues and killed them with varied tortures.

22 For these things divine justice pursued and will pursue the accursed tyrant.

23 But the children of Abraam, with their prize-bearing mother, gather together into the chorus of the fathers, having received pure and immortal souls from God.

24 To whom be the glory unto the ages of the ages; amen.

Psalms

Chapter 1

1 Blessed is the man who did not walk in the counsel of the impious and did not stand in the way of sinners and did not sit on the seat of pestilent men,

2 but his will is in the law of the Lord, and in his law he will meditate by day and by night.

3 And he will be like the tree planted beside the outlets of the waters, which will give its fruit in its season, and its leaf will not fall off; and everything he does will be prospered.

4 Not so the impious, not so, but like the chaff that the wind casts away from the face of the earth.

5 Because of this the impious will not rise in judgment, nor sinners in the counsel of the righteous;

6 for the Lord knows the way of the righteous, and the way of the impious will perish.

Chapter 2

1 Why did nations rage and peoples meditate on empty things?

2 The kings of the earth stood forth, and the rulers gathered together against the Lord and against his anointed one. Interlude.

3 “Let us tear apart their bonds and cast away their yoke from us.”

4 The one dwelling in the heavens will laugh at them, and the Lord will mock them.

5 Then he will speak to them in his wrath and in his anger will trouble them.

6 “But I was appointed king by him upon Sion, his holy mountain,

7 proclaiming the ordinance of the Lord. The Lord said to me, ‘You are my son; I have begotten you today;

8 ask of me, and I will give you nations as your inheritance and the ends of the earth as your possession;

9 you will shepherd them with an iron rod; like a potter's vessel you will shatter them.’”

10 And now, kings, understand; be instructed, all who judge the earth.

11 Serve the Lord in fear and exult in him with trembling.

12 Take hold of instruction, lest the Lord become angry and you perish from a righteous way. When his anger is quickly kindled, blessed are all who have trusted in him.

Chapter 3

1 A psalm for Dauid, when he was fleeing from the presence of Abessalom his son.

2 Lord, why have those afflicting me multiplied? Many rise up against me;

3 many say to my soul, “There is no salvation for him in his God.” Interlude.

4 But you, Lord, are my helper, my glory and the one lifting up my head.

5 With my voice I cried to the Lord, and he heard me from his holy mountain. Interlude.

6 I lay down and slept; I awoke, for the Lord will help me.

7 I will not fear myriads of people who together attack me all around.

8 Rise, Lord; save me, my God, for you struck all those who are my enemies without cause; you shattered sinners' teeth.

9 Salvation belongs to the Lord, and your blessing is upon your people.

Chapter 4

1 For the end, in psalms; a song for Dauid.

2 When I called, the God of my righteousness heard me; in affliction you made room for me; have compassion on me and hear my prayer.

3 Sons of humans, how long will you be heavy-hearted? Why do you love vanity and seek falsehood? Interlude.

4 And know that the Lord made his holy one wondrous; the Lord will hear me when I cry to him.

5 Be angry and do not sin; speak in your hearts and upon your beds be pierced with remorse. Interlude.

6 Sacrifice a sacrifice of righteousness and hope in the Lord.

7 Many say, “Who will show us good things?” The light of your face was marked upon us, Lord.

8 You gave gladness into my heart; from the season of their grain and wine and oil they were multiplied.

9 In peace I will both lie down and sleep, for you, Lord, alone made me dwell in hope.

Chapter 5

1 For the end, concerning her who inherits; a psalm for Dauid.

2 Give ear to my words, Lord; understand my cry;

3 attend to the voice of my petition, my king and my God. For to you I will pray, Lord;

4 in the morning you will hear my voice; in the morning I will stand before you and watch.

5 For you are not a God willing lawlessness, nor will one doing evil sojourn with you;

6 lawless men will not remain before your eyes; you hated all who work lawlessness.

7 You will destroy all who speak falsehood; the Lord abhors a man of bloodshed and deceit.

8 But I, in the abundance of your mercy, will enter your house; I will bow toward your holy temple in fear of you.

9 Lord, guide me in your righteousness because of my enemies; make your way straight before me.

10 For there is no truth in their mouth; their heart is vain; their throat is an opened grave; with their tongues they practiced deceit.

11 Judge them, God; let them fall away from their counsels; according to the abundance of their impieties cast them out, for they embittered you, Lord.

12 And let all who hope in you be glad; they will exult forever, and you will dwell among them, and all who love your name will boast in you.

13 For you will bless a righteous man; Lord, as with a shield of favor you crowned us.

Chapter 6

1 For the end, in hymns, concerning the eighth; a psalm for Dauid.

2 Lord, do not rebuke me in your anger nor instruct me in your wrath.

3 Have mercy on me, Lord, for I am weak; heal me, Lord, for my bones were troubled,

4 and my soul was exceedingly troubled; and you, Lord, how long?

5 Return, Lord; rescue my soul; save me for the sake of your mercy.

6 For in death there is no one remembering you; and in Hades who will give thanks to you?

7 I grew weary in my groaning; every night I will wash my bed; with my tears I will wet my bedding.

8 My eye was troubled from anger; I grew old among all my enemies.

9 Depart from me, all who work lawlessness, for the Lord heard the voice of my weeping;

10 the Lord heard my petition; the Lord accepted my prayer.

11 May all my enemies be ashamed and exceedingly troubled; may they turn back and be exceedingly put to shame swiftly.

Chapter 7

1 A psalm for Dauid, which he sang to the Lord concerning the words of Chousi son of Iemeni.

2 Lord my God, in you I hoped; save me from all who pursue me and rescue me,

3 lest he seize my soul like a lion, with no one redeeming or saving.

4 Lord my God, if I did this, if there is injustice in my hands,

5 if I repaid evil to those repaying me, then may I fall away empty from my enemies,

6 then may the enemy pursue my soul and overtake it and trample my life into the earth and make my glory dwell in dust. Interlude.

7 Rise, Lord, in your wrath; be exalted at the boundaries of my enemies; awake, Lord my God, in the ordinance that you commanded,

8 and a gathering of peoples will surround you, and for its sake return on high.

9 The Lord will judge peoples; judge me, Lord, according to my righteousness and according to my innocence upon me.

10 Let the wickedness of sinners now come to an end, and you will direct a righteous man; God examines hearts and kidneys.

11 My help is righteous, from God who saves the upright in heart.

12 God is a righteous judge and strong and long-suffering, not bringing wrath every day.

13 If you do not turn back, he will polish his sword; he drew his bow and prepared it,

14 and on it he prepared instruments of death; he fashioned his arrows for those being burned.

15 Look, he labored with injustice, conceived trouble and gave birth to lawlessness;

16 he dug a pit and excavated it and will fall into the hole that he made;

17 his trouble will return upon his head, and his injustice will descend upon his crown.

18 I will give thanks to the Lord according to his righteousness and sing to the name of the Lord Most High.

Chapter 8

1 For the end, concerning the winepresses; a psalm for Dauid.

2 Lord our Lord, how wondrous is your name in all the earth, for your magnificence was lifted above the heavens.

3 From the mouth of infants and nursing children you established praise because of your enemies, to overthrow an enemy and an avenger.

4 For I will see the heavens, works of your fingers, the moon and stars, which you founded.

5 What is a human that you remember him, or a son of a human that you visit him?

6 You made him a little less than angels; with glory and honor you crowned him;

7 and you appointed him over the works of your hands; you subjected everything beneath his feet,

8 sheep and all oxen, and also the beasts of the plain,

9 the birds of heaven and the fish of the sea, the things passing along paths of seas.

10 Lord our Lord, how wondrous is your name in all the earth.

Chapter 9

1 For the end, concerning the hidden things of the son; a psalm for Dauid.

2 I will give thanks to you, Lord, with my whole heart; I will recount all your wonders;

3 I will be glad and exult in you; I will sing to your name, Most High.

4 When my enemy turns backward, they will weaken and perish from your presence,

5 for you carried out my judgment and my cause; you sat upon a throne, judging righteousness.

6 You rebuked nations, and the impious one perished; you erased their name forever and for the age of the age;

7 the enemy's swords failed completely, and you pulled down cities; their remembrance perished with a sound.

8 And the Lord remains forever; he prepared his throne in judgment,

9 and he himself will judge the inhabited world in righteousness; he will judge peoples in uprightness.

10 And the Lord became a refuge for the needy, a helper at opportune times in affliction;

11 and let those knowing your name hope in you, for you did not abandon those seeking you, Lord.

12 Sing to the Lord who dwells in Sion; proclaim his practices among the nations,

13 for, seeking out bloodshed, he remembered them; he did not forget the cry of the needy.

14 Have mercy on me, Lord; see my humiliation from my enemies, you who lift me from the gates of death,

15 so that I may proclaim all your praises in the gates of the daughter of Sion; I will exult in your salvation.

16 Nations were caught in the destruction that they made; in this trap that they hid their foot was seized;

17 the Lord is known by executing judgments; in the works of his hands the sinner was seized. A song of interlude.

18 Let sinners turn back into Hades, all the nations forgetting God;

19 for the poor will not be forgotten completely; the endurance of the needy will not perish forever.

20 Rise, Lord; let a human not grow strong; let nations be judged before you;

21 appoint, Lord, a lawgiver over them; let nations know that they are humans. Interlude.

22 Why, Lord, have you stood far away, overlooking at opportune times in affliction?

23 When the impious one acts arrogantly, the poor one is set on fire; they are caught in the counsels that they devise.

24 For the sinner is praised in the desires of his soul, and the one doing injustice is blessed;

25 the sinner provoked the Lord: “According to the abundance of his wrath he will not seek out”; God is not before him.

26 His ways are profaned at every time; your judgments are removed from his presence; he will lord it over all his enemies;

27 for he said in his heart, “I will certainly not be shaken, from generation to generation without evil.”

28 His mouth is full of a curse and bitterness and deceit; under his tongue are toil and trouble.

29 He sits in ambush with rich men, in hidden places to kill an innocent man; his eyes look toward the needy;

30 he lies in ambush in a hidden place like a lion in his enclosure; he lies in ambush to seize a poor man, to seize a poor man by dragging him;

31 in his trap he will humble him; he will stoop and fall when he lords it over the needy.

32 For he said in his heart, “God has forgotten; he turned away his face so as not to see at all.”

33 Rise, Lord God; let your hand be lifted up; do not forget the needy;

34 for what reason did the impious one provoke God? For he said in his heart, “He will not seek out.”

35 You see, for you observe trouble and anger, to deliver them into your hands; to you, therefore, the poor one has been left; you were helping the orphan.

36 Shatter the arm of the sinful and wicked one; his sin will be sought, and he will certainly not be found because of it;

37 the Lord will reign forever and for the age of the age; you will perish, nations, from his earth.

38 The Lord heard the desire of the needy; your ear attended to the preparation of their heart,

39 to judge for the orphan and the lowly, so that a human upon the earth may no longer continue boasting greatly.

Chapter 10

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid. In the Lord I have trusted; everyone, will you say to my soul, “Migrate to the mountains like a little bird”?

2 For look, sinners drew a bow; they prepared arrows for a quiver, to shoot in the dark moon at the upright in heart.

3 For what you established they pulled down; but what did the righteous one do?

4 The Lord is in his holy temple; the Lord, his throne is in heaven. His eyes look toward the needy; his eyelids examine the sons of humans.

5 The Lord examines the righteous and the impious, but the one loving injustice hates his own soul.

6 He will rain traps upon sinners; fire and sulfur and a storm wind are the portion of their cup.

7 For the Lord is righteous and loved righteous deeds; his face saw uprightness.

Chapter 11

1 For the end, concerning the eighth; a psalm for Dauid.

2 Save me, Lord, for a holy one has failed, for truths have diminished among the sons of humans.

3 Each spoke vain things to his neighbor; deceitful lips spoke with a heart and with a heart.

4 May the Lord destroy all deceitful lips and a boastful tongue,

5 those who said, “We magnify our tongue; our lips are from us; who is our lord?”

6 “Because of the misery of the poor and because of the groaning of the needy, now I will rise,” says the Lord; “I will place in salvation; I will speak openly in it.”

7 The sayings of the Lord are pure sayings, silver tried by fire, tested for the earth, purified sevenfold.

8 You, Lord, will guard us and preserve us from this generation and forever.

9 The impious walk all around; according to your height you cared greatly for the sons of humans.

Chapter 12

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid.

2 How long, Lord, will you forget me completely? How long will you turn your face away from me?

3 Until when will I set counsels in my soul, pains in my heart by day? How long will my enemy be exalted over me?

4 Look upon me; hear me, Lord my God; enlighten my eyes, lest I sleep unto death,

5 lest my enemy say, “I prevailed against him”; those afflicting me will exult if I am shaken.

6 But I hoped in your mercy; my heart will exult in your salvation; I will sing to the Lord who benefited me and sing to the name of the Lord Most High.

Chapter 13

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid. A fool said in his heart, “There is no God”; they corrupted and became abominable in their practices; there is no one doing goodness, there is not even one.

2 The Lord looked down from heaven upon the sons of humans to see whether there is one understanding or seeking God.

3 All turned aside; together they became worthless; there is no one doing goodness, there is not even one. [Their throat is an opened grave; with their tongues they practiced deceit; the venom of asps is under their lips, whose mouth is full of a curse and bitterness; their feet are swift to shed blood; destruction and misery are in their ways, and they did not know a way of peace; there is no fear of God before their eyes.]

4 Will not all who work lawlessness know? Those devouring my people as a meal of bread did not call upon the Lord.

5 There they became cowardly with fear where there was no fear, for God is in a righteous generation.

6 You put a poor man's counsel to shame, for the Lord is his hope.

7 Who will give the salvation of Israel from Sion? When the Lord returns the captivity of his people, let Iakob exult and let Israel be glad.

Chapter 14

1 A psalm for Dauid. Lord, who will sojourn in your dwelling, and who will dwell on your holy mountain?

2 One walking blamelessly and working righteousness, speaking truth in his heart,

3 who did not practice deceit with his tongue nor do evil to his neighbor and did not take up reproach against those nearest him;

4 one doing evil is despised before him, but he glorifies those fearing the Lord; one swearing to his neighbor and not setting it aside;

5 he did not give his silver at interest and did not take gifts against innocent people. One doing these things will not be shaken forever.

Chapter 15

1 An inscription on a pillar for Dauid. Guard me, Lord, for in you I hoped.

2 I said to the Lord, “You are my Lord, for you have no need of my good things.”

3 For the holy ones in his earth he made all his wishes wondrous among them.

4 Their weaknesses were multiplied; after these things they hastened; I will certainly not gather their gatherings from bloodshed, nor will I remember their names through my lips.

5 The Lord is the portion of my inheritance and of my cup; you are the one restoring my inheritance to me.

6 Measuring cords fell to me among the best things; for indeed my inheritance is best for me.

7 I will bless the Lord who gave me understanding; moreover, even until night my kidneys instructed me.

8 I kept seeing the Lord before me continually, for he is at my right, so that I may not be shaken.

9 Because of this my heart was glad and my tongue exulted; moreover, my flesh also will dwell in hope,

10 for you will not abandon my soul to Hades nor allow your holy one to see corruption.

11 You made known to me ways of life; you will fill me with gladness with your presence; delights are in your right hand to the end.

Chapter 16

1 A prayer of Dauid. Hear my righteousness, Lord; attend to my petition; give ear to my prayer, not with deceitful lips.

2 May my judgment come out from your presence; let my eyes see upright things.

3 You tested my heart; you visited by night; you tried me by fire, and injustice was not found in me.

4 So that my mouth might not speak the works of humans, because of the words of your lips I guarded hard ways.

5 Establish my steps in your paths, so that my steps may not be shaken.

6 I cried, for you heard me, God; incline your ear to me and hear my words.

7 Make your mercies wondrous, you who save those hoping in you from those resisting your right hand.

8 Guard me like the pupil of an eye; in the shelter of your wings you will shelter me

9 from the presence of the impious who made me miserable. My enemies surrounded my soul;

10 they enclosed their fat; their mouth spoke arrogance.

11 Casting me out, now they surrounded me; they set their eyes to turn aside upon the earth.

12 They took me like a lion ready for prey and like a young lion dwelling in hidden places.

13 Rise, Lord; get ahead of them and trip them up; rescue my soul from an impious man, your sword from the enemies of your hand.

14 Lord, separate them from a few, from the earth, in their life. And their belly was filled with your hidden things; they were satisfied with sons and left the remnants to their infants.

15 But I will appear before your face in righteousness; I will be satisfied when your glory appears.

Chapter 17

1 For the end; for the Lord's servant Dauid, the words of this song that he spoke to the Lord on the day when the Lord rescued him from the hand of all his enemies and from the hand of Saoul,

2 and he said, “I will love you, Lord my strength.”

3 The Lord is my firmness and my refuge and my rescuer; my God is my helper, and I will hope in him, my defender and the horn of my salvation, my helper.

4 Praising, I will call upon the Lord, and I will be saved from my enemies.

5 Birth pains of death surrounded me, and torrents of lawlessness greatly troubled me;

6 birth pains of Hades encircled me; traps of death got ahead of me.

7 And when I was afflicted I called upon the Lord and cried to my God; he heard my voice from his holy temple, and my cry before him will enter his ears.

8 And the earth was shaken and became trembling, and the foundations of the mountains were troubled and shaken, for God became angry with them.

9 Smoke went up in his wrath, and fire from his presence burned fiercely; coals were kindled from him.

10 And he bent heaven and descended, and darkness was under his feet.

11 And he mounted upon cheroubin and flew; he flew upon wings of winds.

12 And he made darkness his hiding place; his tent was around him, dark water in clouds of the air.

13 From the radiance before him the clouds passed, hail and coals of fire.

14 And the Lord thundered from heaven, and the Most High gave his voice;

15 and he sent out arrows and scattered them, and multiplied lightning flashes and threw them into confusion.

16 And the springs of the waters appeared, and the foundations of the inhabited world were uncovered at your rebuke, Lord, at the blowing of the breath of your wrath.

17 He sent out from on high and took me; he took me to himself out of many waters.

18 He will rescue me from my mighty enemies and from those hating me, for they became stronger than I.

19 They got ahead of me on the day of my affliction, and the Lord became my support

20 and brought me out into a broad place; he will rescue me, for he wanted me. [He will rescue me from my mighty enemies and from those hating me.]

21 And the Lord will repay me according to my righteousness, and according to the cleanness of my hands he will repay me,

22 for I guarded the ways of the Lord and did not act impiously away from my God,

23 for all his judgments are before me, and I did not put his ordinances away from me.

24 And I will be blameless with him and guard myself from my lawlessness.

25 And the Lord will repay me according to my righteousness and according to the cleanness of my hands before his eyes.

26 With a holy one you will act holily, and with an innocent man you will be innocent,

27 and with a chosen one you will be chosen, and with a crooked one you will act crookedly.

28 For you will save a lowly people and humble the eyes of the arrogant.

29 For you will light my lamp, Lord; my God, you will enlighten my darkness.

30 For in you I will be rescued from a band of raiders, and in my God I will pass over a wall.

31 My God, his way is blameless; the sayings of the Lord are tried by fire; he is defender of all who hope in him.

32 For who is God except the Lord? And who is God except our God?

33 God is the one girding me with power, and he made my way blameless,

34 the one establishing my feet like a deer's and setting me upon the heights,

35 teaching my hands for war; and you made my arms a bronze bow;

36 and you gave me the defense of my salvation, and your right hand helped me, and your instruction set me upright completely, and your instruction itself will teach me.

37 You broadened my steps beneath me, and my footprints did not weaken.

38 I will pursue my enemies and overtake them and will not turn back until they fail;

39 I will crush them, and they will certainly not be able to stand; they will fall under my feet.

40 And you girded me with power for war; you fettered all who rose against me beneath me,

41 and you gave me my enemies' back and destroyed those hating me.

42 They cried, and there was no one saving; to the Lord, and he did not hear them.

43 And I will grind them fine like dust before the wind; like mud of streets I will smooth them down.

44 You will rescue me from the contradictions of a people; you will appoint me head of nations; a people whom I did not know served me,

45 at the hearing of an ear it obeyed me; foreign sons lied to me,

46 foreign sons grew old and limped away from their paths.

47 The Lord lives, and blessed is my God, and let the God of my salvation be exalted,

48 God who gives me acts of vengeance and subjected peoples beneath me,

49 my rescuer from my angry enemies; you will exalt me above those rising against me; you will rescue me from an unjust man.

50 Because of this I will give thanks to you among nations, Lord, and sing to your name,

51 he who magnifies the salvations of his king and does mercy to his anointed one, to Dauid and to his seed forever.

Chapter 18

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid.

2 The heavens recount God's glory, and the firmament proclaims the making of his hands;

3 day pours forth a word to day, and night proclaims knowledge to night.

4 There are no speeches nor words whose voices are not heard;

5 their sound went out into all the earth, and their words to the ends of the inhabited world. In the sun he set his dwelling;

6 and he himself, like a bridegroom coming out of his bridal chamber, will exult like a giant to run his way.

7 His departure is from the end of heaven, and his arrival as far as the end of heaven, and there is no one who will be hidden from his heat.

8 The law of the Lord is blameless, turning souls back; the testimony of the Lord is faithful, making infants wise;

9 the ordinances of the Lord are upright, gladdening a heart; the commandment of the Lord is radiant, enlightening eyes;

10 the fear of the Lord is pure, remaining for the age of the age; the judgments of the Lord are true, justified together,

11 desirable beyond gold and much precious stone, and sweeter than honey and honeycomb.

12 For indeed your servant guards them; in guarding them there is much repayment.

13 Who will understand trespasses? Cleanse me from my hidden things.

14 And spare your servant from foreign ones; if they do not lord it over me, then I will be blameless and will be cleansed from great sin.

15 And the sayings of my mouth and the meditation of my heart will be for acceptance before you continually, Lord, my helper and my redeemer.

Chapter 19

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid.

2 May the Lord hear you in a day of affliction; may the name of the God of Iakob defend you.

3 May he send help to you from the holy place and help you from Sion.

4 May he remember all your sacrifice, and let him make your whole burnt offering fat. Interlude.

5 May he give you according to your heart and fulfill all your counsel.

6 We will exult in your salvation and be magnified in the name of our God. May the Lord fulfill all your requests.

7 Now I knew that the Lord saved his anointed one; he will hear him from his holy heaven; the salvation of his right hand is in mighty acts.

8 These in chariots and these in horses, but we will be magnified in the name of the Lord our God.

9 They were fettered together and fell, but we rose and were set upright.

10 Lord, save your king and hear us on whatever day we call upon you.

Chapter 20

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid.

2 Lord, in your power the king will be glad and in your salvation he will exult exceedingly.

3 You gave him the desire of his soul and did not deprive him of the wish of his lips. Interlude.

4 For you went before him with blessings of goodness; you placed a crown of precious stone upon his head.

5 He asked you for life, and you gave it to him, length of days for the age of the age.

6 Great is his glory in your salvation; you will place glory and magnificence upon him;

7 for you will give him blessing for the age of the age; you will gladden him with joy in your presence.

8 For the king hopes in the Lord, and in the mercy of the Most High he will certainly not be shaken.

9 May your hand be found by all your enemies; may your right hand find all who hate you.

10 You will make them like an oven of fire at the time of your presence; the Lord in his wrath will throw them into confusion, and fire will devour them.

11 You will destroy their fruit from the earth and their seed from the sons of humans,

12 for they inclined evils against you; they devised a counsel that they will certainly not be able to establish.

13 For you will make them turn their back; among your remnants you will prepare their face.

14 Be exalted, Lord, in your power; we will sing and make music of your mighty acts.

Chapter 21

1 For the end, concerning the morning help; a psalm for Dauid.

2 God, my God, attend to me; why did you abandon me? Far from my salvation are the words of my trespasses.

3 My God, I will cry by day, and you will not hear, and by night, and it is not unto folly for me.

4 But you dwell among holy ones, the praise of Israel.

5 In you our fathers hoped; they hoped, and you rescued them;

6 to you they cried and were saved; in you they hoped and were not put to shame.

7 But I am a worm and not a human, a reproach of a human and a despised thing of a people.

8 All who see me mocked me; they spoke with lips, they moved their head:

9 “He hoped in the Lord; let him rescue him; let him save him, for he wants him.”

10 For you are the one who drew me from the belly, my hope from my mother's breasts;

11 upon you I was cast from the womb; from my mother's belly you are my God.

12 Do not depart from me, for affliction is near, for there is no one helping.

13 Many calves encircled me; fat bulls surrounded me;

14 they opened their mouth against me like a lion seizing and roaring.

15 Like water I was poured out, and all my bones were scattered; my heart became like wax melting in the midst of my belly;

16 my strength dried up like a potsherd, and my tongue has stuck to my throat, and you brought me down into dust of death.

17 For many dogs surrounded me; a gathering of evildoers surrounded me; they dug through my hands and feet.

18 I counted all my bones, but they observed and looked upon me.

19 They divided my garments among themselves and cast a lot for my clothing.

20 But you, Lord, do not put my help far away; attend to my assistance.

21 Rescue my soul from a sword and my only one from the hand of a dog;

22 save me from a lion's mouth, and my humiliation from the horns of one-horned beasts.

23 I will recount your name to my brothers; in the midst of an assembly I will hymn you:

24 “You who fear the Lord, praise him; all the seed of Iakob, glorify him; let all the seed of Israel fear him,

25 for he did not despise nor become vexed at the petition of the poor, nor turn his face away from me, and when I cried to him he heard me.”

26 My praise is from you in a great assembly; I will pay my vows before those fearing him.

27 The needy will eat and be filled, and those seeking him will praise the Lord; their hearts will live for the age of the age.

28 All the ends of the earth will remember and turn back to the Lord, and all the families of the nations will bow before you,

29 for the kingdom belongs to the Lord, and he rules the nations.

30 All the fat ones of the earth ate and bowed; all those descending into the earth will fall before him. And my soul lives to him,

31 and my seed will serve him; the coming generation will be proclaimed to the Lord,

32 and they will proclaim his righteousness to a people who will be born, for the Lord did it.

Chapter 22

1 A psalm for Dauid. The Lord shepherds me, and nothing will be lacking to me.

2 In a place of green grass, there he made me dwell; at water of rest he nourished me;

3 he turned my soul back. He guided me upon paths of righteousness for the sake of his name.

4 For even if I walk in the midst of a shadow of death, I will not fear evils, for you are with me; your rod and your staff, these comforted me.

5 You prepared a table before me opposite those afflicting me; you enriched my head with oil, and your cup intoxicates like the best.

6 And your mercy will pursue me all the days of my life, and my dwelling in the Lord's house will be for length of days.

Chapter 23

1 A psalm for Dauid; of the first day of the week. The earth belongs to the Lord and its fullness, the inhabited world and all who dwell in it;

2 he founded it upon seas and prepared it upon rivers.

3 Who will ascend to the mountain of the Lord, and who will stand in his holy place?

4 One innocent in hands and pure in heart, who did not take his soul for vanity and did not swear deceitfully to his neighbor.

5 This one will receive blessing from the Lord and mercy from God his savior.

6 This is the generation of those seeking him, seeking the face of the God of Iakob. Interlude.

7 Raise gates, your rulers, and be lifted up, eternal gates, and the king of glory will enter.

8 Who is this king of glory? The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in war.

9 Raise gates, your rulers, and be lifted up, eternal gates, and the king of glory will enter.

10 Who is this king of glory? The Lord of powers, he is the king of glory.

Chapter 24

1 A psalm for Dauid. To you, Lord, I lifted my soul, my God.

2 In you I have trusted; may I not be put to shame, nor let my enemies laugh at me.

3 For indeed all who wait for you will certainly not be put to shame; let all who act lawlessly without cause be ashamed.

4 Make your ways known to me, Lord, and teach me your paths.

5 Guide me into your truth and teach me, for you are God my savior, and I waited for you the whole day.

6 Remember your compassions, Lord, and your mercies, for they are from eternity.

7 Do not remember the sins of my youth and my ignorance; according to your mercy remember me yourself, for the sake of your goodness, Lord.

8 Good and upright is the Lord; because of this he will instruct sinners in the way.

9 He will guide the meek in judgment; he will teach the meek his ways.

10 All the Lord's ways are mercy and truth for those seeking his covenant and his testimonies.

11 For the sake of your name, Lord, you will also be gracious toward my sin, for it is great.

12 Who is the human fearing the Lord? He will instruct him in the way that he chose.

13 His soul will lodge among good things, and his seed will inherit earth.

14 The Lord is the strength of those fearing him, [and the name of the Lord belongs to those fearing him,] and his covenant is to make it plain to them.

15 My eyes are continually toward the Lord, for he himself will draw my feet out of a trap.

16 Look upon me and have mercy on me, for I am alone and poor.

17 The afflictions of my heart were broadened; bring me out of my necessities.

18 See my humiliation and my toil and forgive all my sins.

19 See my enemies, for they multiplied and hated me with unjust hatred.

20 Guard my soul and rescue me; may I not be put to shame, for I hoped in you.

21 Innocent and upright men clung to me, for I waited for you, Lord.

22 Redeem Israel, God, from all his afflictions.

Chapter 25

1 Of Dauid. Judge me, Lord, for I walked in my innocence, and hoping in the Lord I will certainly not weaken.

2 Test me, Lord, and try me; try my kidneys and my heart by fire.

3 For your mercy is before my eyes, and I was well pleasing in your truth.

4 I did not sit with a council of vanity, and I will certainly not enter with those transgressing the law;

5 I hated an assembly of evildoers, and I will certainly not sit with the impious.

6 I will wash my hands among innocent people and circle your altar, Lord,

7 to hear a voice of praise and recount all your wonders.

8 Lord, I loved the beauty of your house and the place of the dwelling of your glory.

9 Do not destroy my soul together with the impious, nor my life with men of bloodshed,

10 in whose hands are lawless deeds; their right hand was filled with gifts.

11 But I walked in my innocence; redeem me and have mercy on me.

12 For my foot stood in uprightness; in assemblies I will bless you, Lord.

Chapter 26

1 Of Dauid; before being anointed. The Lord is my enlightenment and my savior; whom will I fear? The Lord is defender of my life; of whom will I be afraid?

2 When evildoers drew near against me to eat my flesh, those afflicting me and my enemies themselves weakened and fell;

3 if an encampment arrays itself against me, my heart will not fear; if war rises against me, in this I hope.

4 One thing I asked from the Lord, this I will seek: that I dwell in the Lord's house all the days of my life, that I see the delight of the Lord and visit his temple.

5 For he hid me in a tent on a day of my evils; he sheltered me in the hidden place of his tent; on a rock he exalted me;

6 and now look, he lifted my head over my enemies; I circled and sacrificed a sacrifice of shouting in his tent; I will sing and make music to the Lord.

7 Hear, Lord, my voice with which I cried; have mercy on me and hear me.

8 My heart said to you, “It sought my face”; your face, Lord, I will seek.

9 Do not turn your face away from me; do not turn aside in wrath from your servant; become my helper; do not spurn me and do not abandon me, God my savior.

10 For my father and my mother abandoned me, but the Lord took me to himself.

11 Instruct me, Lord, in your way and guide me in a straight path because of my enemies.

12 Do not deliver me into the souls of those afflicting me, for unjust witnesses rose against me, and injustice lied to itself.

13 I believe that I will see the good things of the Lord in the land of the living.

14 Wait for the Lord; be courageous, and let your heart grow strong, and wait for the Lord.

Chapter 27

1 Of Dauid. To you, Lord, I cried, my God; do not keep silence toward me, lest you keep silence toward me and I become like those descending into a pit.

2 Hear the voice of my petition when I petition you, when I lift my hands toward your holy temple.

3 Do not drag my soul away with sinners, and do not destroy me together with those working injustice, who speak peace with their neighbors but have evils in their hearts.

4 Give them according to their works and according to the wickedness of their practices; according to the works of their hands give them; repay their repayment to them.

5 For they did not understand the works of the Lord and the works of his hands; you will pull them down and will certainly not build them up.

6 Blessed is the Lord, for he heard the voice of my petition.

7 The Lord is my helper and my defender; my heart hoped in him, and I was helped, and my flesh flourished anew; and from my will I will give thanks to him.

8 The Lord is the strength of his people and defender of the salvations of his anointed one.

9 Save your people and bless your inheritance and shepherd them and lift them up forever.

Chapter 28

1 A psalm for Dauid; of the departure of the tent. Bring to the Lord, sons of God; bring to the Lord sons of rams; bring to the Lord glory and honor,

2 bring to the Lord glory for his name; bow to the Lord in his holy court.

3 The Lord's voice is over the waters; the God of glory thundered; the Lord is over many waters.

4 The Lord's voice is in strength; the Lord's voice is in magnificence.

5 The voice of the Lord who shatters cedars; and the Lord will shatter the cedars of Libanos

6 and grind them fine like the calf, Libanos, and the beloved one like a son of one-horned beasts.

7 The voice of the Lord who cuts through a flame of fire,

8 the voice of the Lord who shakes a wilderness; and the Lord will shake the wilderness of Kades.

9 The voice of the Lord who establishes deer; and he will uncover forests; and in his temple everyone speaks glory.

10 The Lord will settle the flood, and the Lord sits as king forever.

11 The Lord will give strength to his people; the Lord will bless his people in peace.

Chapter 29

1 For the end; a psalm of a song of the dedication of the house; for Dauid.

2 I will exalt you, Lord, for you took me up and did not gladden my enemies over me.

3 Lord my God, I cried to you, and you healed me;

4 Lord, you brought my soul up from Hades; you saved me from those descending into a pit.

5 Sing to the Lord, his holy ones, and give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness;

6 for wrath is in his anger, and life in his will; weeping will lodge in the evening, and exultation in the morning.

7 But I said in my prosperity, “I will certainly not be shaken forever.”

8 Lord, in your will you provided strength for my beauty; but you turned away your face, and I became troubled.

9 To you, Lord, I will cry, and to my God I will petition:

10 “What profit is there in my blood, in my descending into corruption? Will dust give thanks to you or proclaim your truth?”

11 The Lord heard and had mercy on me; the Lord became my helper.

12 You turned my mourning into dancing for me; you tore apart my sackcloth and girded me with gladness,

13 so that my glory may sing to you and I may certainly not be pierced with grief; Lord my God, forever I will give thanks to you.

Chapter 30

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid; of bewilderment.

2 In you, Lord, I hoped; may I not be put to shame forever; in your righteousness rescue me and deliver me.

3 Incline your ear toward me; hasten to deliver me; become for me a defending God and a house of refuge to save me.

4 For you are my strength and my refuge, and for the sake of your name you will guide me and nourish me;

5 you will bring me out of this trap that they hid for me, for you are my defender.

6 Into your hands I will entrust my spirit; you redeemed me, Lord, God of truth.

7 You hated those guarding vanities in vain; but I hoped in the Lord.

8 I will exult and be glad in your mercy, for you looked upon my humiliation; you saved my soul from necessities

9 and did not enclose me in an enemy's hands; you set my feet in a spacious place.

10 Have mercy on me, Lord, for I am afflicted; my eye was troubled in anger, my soul and my belly.

11 For my life failed in pain and my years in groanings; my strength weakened in poverty, and my bones were troubled.

12 Among all my enemies I became a reproach, and exceedingly to my neighbors, and a fear to my acquaintances; those seeing me outside fled from me.

13 I was forgotten from the heart like a dead man; I became like a lost vessel.

14 For I heard the reproach of many dwelling all around; when they gathered together against me, they counseled to take my soul.

15 But I hoped in you, Lord; I said, “You are my God.”

16 My times are in your hands; rescue me from the hand of my enemies and from those pursuing me.

17 Make your face shine upon your servant; save me in your mercy.

18 Lord, may I not be put to shame, for I called upon you; may the impious be ashamed and brought down into Hades.

19 Let deceitful lips become speechless, those speaking lawlessness against the righteous in arrogance and contempt.

20 How great is the abundance of your goodness, Lord, which you hid for those fearing you, which you worked for those hoping in you before the sons of humans.

21 You will hide them in the hidden place of your presence from the turmoil of humans; you will shelter them in a tent from the contradiction of tongues.

22 Blessed is the Lord, for he made his mercy wondrous in a city under siege.

23 But I said in my bewilderment, “Then I have been cast away from before your eyes.” Because of this you heard the voice of my petition when I cried to you.

24 Love the Lord, all his holy ones, for the Lord seeks truths and repays those acting with excessive arrogance.

25 Be courageous, and let your heart grow strong, all who hope in the Lord.

Chapter 31

1 For Dauid; of understanding. Blessed are those whose lawless deeds were forgiven and whose sins were covered;

2 blessed is the man whose sin the Lord will certainly not reckon, nor is there deceit in his mouth.

3 For I kept silence; my bones grew old from my crying the whole day;

4 for by day and by night your hand weighed heavily upon me; I was turned into misery when a thorn was fixed in me. Interlude.

5 I made my sin known and did not cover my lawlessness; I said, “I will declare against myself my lawlessness to the Lord”; and you forgave the impiety of my sin. Interlude.

6 For this every holy one will pray to you at a suitable time; surely in a flood of many waters they will not draw near him.

7 You are my refuge from the affliction surrounding me; my exultation, redeem me from those encircling me. Interlude.

8 I will give you understanding and instruct you in this way that you will walk; I will fix my eyes upon you.

9 Do not become like a horse and mule, in whom there is no understanding; with bridle and muzzle tighten their jaws, of those not drawing near you.

10 Many are the scourges of the sinner, but mercy will surround the one hoping in the Lord.

11 Be glad in the Lord and exult, righteous ones, and boast, all the upright in heart.

Chapter 32

1 For Dauid. Exult, righteous ones, in the Lord; praise befits the upright.

2 Give thanks to the Lord with a lyre; with a ten-stringed psaltery sing to him.

3 Sing him a new song; make music well with shouting.

4 For the word of the Lord is upright, and all his works are in faithfulness;

5 he loves mercy and judgment; the earth is full of the Lord's mercy.

6 By the Lord's word the heavens were established, and by the breath of his mouth all their host;

7 he gathers the sea's waters like a wineskin, placing abysses in treasuries.

8 Let all the earth fear the Lord, and let all who inhabit the inhabited world be shaken before him;

9 for he himself spoke, and they came to be; he himself commanded, and they were created.

10 The Lord scatters nations' counsels, and sets aside peoples' reasonings and sets aside rulers' counsels;

11 but the Lord's counsel remains forever, the reasonings of his heart from generation to generation.

12 Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord, the people whom he chose as an inheritance for himself.

13 From heaven the Lord looked down; he saw all the sons of humans;

14 from his prepared dwelling he looked upon all who inhabit the earth,

15 he who formed their hearts individually, who understands all their works.

16 A king is not saved through a great host, and a giant will not be saved by the abundance of his strength;

17 a horse is false for salvation, and in the abundance of its power it will not be saved.

18 Look, the Lord's eyes are upon those fearing him, those hoping in his mercy,

19 to rescue their souls from death and nourish them in famine.

20 Our soul waits for the Lord, for he is our helper and defender;

21 for in him our heart will be glad, and in his holy name we hoped.

22 May your mercy, Lord, be upon us, just as we hoped in you.

Chapter 33

1 For Dauid, when he altered his face before Abimelech, and he released him, and he departed.

2 I will bless the Lord at every time; continually his praise is in my mouth.

3 In the Lord my soul will be praised; let the meek hear and be glad.

4 Magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together.

5 I sought the Lord, and he heard me and rescued me from all my sojournings.

6 Draw near him and be enlightened, and your faces will certainly not be put to shame.

7 This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him and saved him from all his afflictions.

8 An angel of the Lord will encamp around those fearing him and rescue them.

9 Taste and see that the Lord is good; blessed is the man who hopes in him.

10 Fear the Lord, his holy ones, for there is no lack for those fearing him.

11 Rich men became poor and hungry, but those seeking the Lord will not be deprived of any good thing. Interlude.

12 Come, children, hear me; I will teach you fear of the Lord.

13 Who is the human desiring life, loving to see good days?

14 Stop your tongue from evil and your lips from speaking deceit.

15 Turn aside from evil and do good; seek peace and pursue it.

16 The Lord's eyes are upon the righteous, and his ears toward their petition.

17 But the Lord's face is against those doing evils, to destroy their remembrance from the earth.

18 The righteous cried, and the Lord heard them and rescued them from all their afflictions.

19 The Lord is near those broken in heart, and he will save the lowly in spirit.

20 Many are the afflictions of the righteous, and from all of them he will rescue them.

21 The Lord guards all their bones; not one of them will be shattered.

22 The death of sinners is evil, and those hating the righteous one will offend.

23 The Lord will redeem the souls of his servants, and all who hope in him will certainly not offend.

Chapter 34

1 For Dauid. Judge, Lord, those wronging me; wage war against those warring against me.

2 Take hold of a shield and a large shield, and rise to my help;

3 draw out a sword and close off against those pursuing me; say to my soul, “I am your salvation.”

4 Let those seeking my soul be ashamed and abashed; let those devising evils for me turn backward and be put to shame.

5 Let them become like chaff before the wind, and an angel of the Lord pressing them out;

6 let their way become darkness and slipping, and an angel of the Lord pursuing them;

7 for without cause they hid the destruction of their trap for me; in vain they reproached my soul.

8 Let a trap come to them that they do not know, and let the snare that they hid catch them, and they will fall in the trap, in it.

9 But my soul will exult in the Lord; it will delight in his salvation;

10 all my bones will say, “Lord, who is like you, rescuing a poor man from the hand of those stronger than he, and a poor and needy man from those plundering him?”

11 Unjust witnesses rose and questioned me about things I did not know;

12 they repaid me wicked things for good things, and childlessness for my soul.

13 But when they troubled me I clothed myself in sackcloth and humbled my soul with fasting, and my prayer will return into my bosom.

14 As for a neighbor, as for our brother, so I was well pleasing; as one mourning and looking gloomy, so I humbled myself.

15 And they were glad against me and gathered; scourges gathered against me, and I did not know; they were torn apart and were not pierced with remorse.

16 They tried me; they mocked me with mockery; they gnashed their teeth against me.

17 Lord, when will you look upon this? Restore my soul from their villainy, my only one from lions.

18 I will give thanks to you, Lord, in a large assembly; among a mighty people I will praise you.

19 May those unjustly hostile to me not rejoice over me, those hating me without cause and signaling with their eyes.

20 For they spoke peaceful things to me, but devised deceits toward anger,

21 and opened their mouth wide against me; they said, “Well done, well done, our eyes saw.”

22 You saw, Lord; do not keep silence; Lord, do not depart from me;

23 awake, Lord, and attend to my judgment, my God and my Lord, to my cause.

24 Judge me according to your righteousness, Lord my God, and may they not rejoice over me;

25 may they not say in their hearts, “Well done, well done for our soul”; nor may they say, “We swallowed him.”

26 May those rejoicing at my evils be ashamed and abashed together; let those boasting greatly against me clothe themselves in shame and disgrace.

27 May those desiring my righteousness exult and be glad, and let those desiring the peace of his servant say continually, “Let the Lord be magnified.”

28 And my tongue will meditate on your righteousness, on your praise the whole day.

Chapter 35

1 For the end; for the Lord's servant Dauid.

2 The lawless man speaks of sinning within himself; there is no fear of God before his eyes;

3 for he practiced deceit before him, to find his lawlessness and hate it.

4 The words of his mouth are lawlessness and deceit; he did not wish to understand so as to do good;

5 he devised lawlessness upon his bed; he stood in every way that is not good, but was not vexed at wickedness.

6 Lord, your mercy is in heaven, and your truth as far as the clouds;

7 your righteousness is like mountains of God; your judgments are a great abyss; you will save humans and beasts, Lord.

8 How you multiplied your mercy, God; and the sons of humans will hope in the shelter of your wings.

9 They will be intoxicated with the richness of your house, and you will give them the torrent of your delight to drink;

10 for with you is a spring of life; in your light we will see light.

11 Extend your mercy to those knowing you and your righteousness to the upright in heart.

12 Let a foot of arrogance not come to me, and may a hand of sinners not shake me.

13 There those working lawlessness fell; they were cast out and will certainly not be able to stand.

Chapter 36

1 Of Dauid. Do not be jealous among evildoers, nor envy those doing lawlessness;

2 for like grass they will quickly dry up, and like green herbs they will quickly fall away.

3 Hope in the Lord and do goodness and dwell in the earth, and you will be shepherded upon its wealth;

4 delight in the Lord, and he will give you the requests of your heart.

5 Uncover your way to the Lord and hope in him, and he himself will act

6 and bring out your righteousness like light and your judgment like midday.

7 Be subjected to the Lord and entreat him; do not be jealous of the one prospering in his way, of a human committing lawless acts.

8 Cease from wrath and abandon anger; do not be jealous so as to do evil;

9 for evildoers will be destroyed, but those waiting for the Lord themselves will inherit earth.

10 And yet a little while, and the sinner will certainly not exist, and you will seek his place and certainly not find it;

11 but the meek will inherit earth and delight in an abundance of peace.

12 The sinner will watch the righteous one and gnash his teeth against him;

13 but the Lord will laugh at him, for he foresees that his day will come.

14 Sinners drew a sword; they drew their bow to cast down a poor and needy man, to slaughter the upright in heart;

15 may their sword enter their heart, and may their bows be shattered.

16 A little for the righteous one is better than great wealth of sinners;

17 for sinners' arms will be shattered, but the Lord supports the righteous.

18 The Lord knows the ways of the blameless, and their inheritance will be forever;

19 they will not be put to shame in an evil time, and in days of famine they will be satisfied.

20 For sinners will perish, and the Lord's enemies, as soon as they are glorified and exalted, failing like smoke, failed.

21 The sinner borrows and will not repay, but the righteous one has compassion and gives;

22 for those blessing him will inherit earth, but those cursing him will be destroyed.

23 A human's steps are directed by the Lord, and he will desire his way;

24 when he falls, he will not be dashed down, for the Lord supports his hand.

25 I was younger and indeed grew old, and I did not see a righteous man abandoned, nor his seed seeking loaves;

26 the whole day he has mercy and lends, and his seed will be for a blessing.

27 Turn aside from evil and do good and dwell for the age of the age;

28 for the Lord loves judgment and will not abandon his holy ones; they will be guarded forever. But lawless ones will be driven out, and the seed of the impious will be destroyed;

29 but the righteous will inherit earth and dwell upon it for the age of the age.

30 A righteous one's mouth will meditate on wisdom, and his tongue will speak judgment;

31 the law of his God is in his heart, and his steps will not be tripped up.

32 The sinner observes the righteous one and seeks to put him to death,

33 but the Lord will certainly not abandon him into his hands, nor condemn him when he is judged against him.

34 Wait for the Lord and guard his way, and he will exalt you to inherit earth; when sinners are destroyed, you will see.

35 I saw an impious man greatly exalted and lifted up like the cedars of Libanos;

36 and I passed by, and look, he was not there, and I sought him, and his place was not found.

37 Guard innocence and see uprightness, for there is a remnant for a peaceful human;

38 but lawless men will be destroyed together; the remnants of the impious will be destroyed.

39 But the salvation of the righteous is from the Lord, and he is their defender in a time of affliction,

40 and the Lord will help them and rescue them and deliver them from sinners and save them, for they hoped in him.

Chapter 37

1 A psalm for Dauid; for remembrance concerning the sabbath.

2 Lord, do not rebuke me in your anger nor instruct me in your wrath.

3 For your arrows were fixed in me, and you pressed your hand upon me;

4 there is no healing in my flesh because of your wrath; there is no peace for my bones because of my sins.

5 For my lawless deeds rose over my head; like a heavy burden they weighed heavily upon me.

6 My bruises stank and rotted because of my folly;

7 I became miserable and was bowed down completely; the whole day I walked looking gloomy.

8 For my loins were filled with mockeries, and there is no healing in my flesh;

9 I was afflicted and humbled exceedingly; I roared from the groaning of my heart.

10 Lord, all my desire is before you, and my groaning was not hidden from you.

11 My heart was troubled; my strength abandoned me, and the light of my eyes, even it is not with me.

12 My friends and my neighbors drew near opposite me and stood, and those nearest me stood far away;

13 and those seeking my soul used force, and those seeking evils for me spoke vanities and meditated on deceits the whole day.

14 But I, like a deaf man, did not hear, and like a speechless man not opening his mouth,

15 and I became like a human not hearing and not having rebukes in his mouth.

16 For in you, Lord, I hoped; you will hear, Lord my God.

17 For I said, “Lest my enemies rejoice over me”; and when my feet were shaken they boasted greatly against me.

18 For I am ready for scourges, and my pain is before me continually.

19 For I will proclaim my lawlessness and be anxious about my sin.

20 But my enemies live and have become stronger than I, and those unjustly hating me multiplied;

21 those repaying evils for good things slandered me, since I pursued righteousness, [and they cast me, the beloved one, away like an abhorred dead man.]

22 Do not abandon me, Lord; my God, do not depart from me;

23 attend to my help, Lord of my salvation.

Chapter 38

1 For the end, for Idithoun; a song for Dauid.

2 I said, “I will guard my ways so as not to sin with my tongue”; I placed a guard at my mouth when the sinner stood before me.

3 I became deaf and was humbled and kept silence from good things, and my pain was renewed.

4 My heart grew hot within me, and in my meditation fire will be kindled. I spoke with my tongue:

5 “Make known to me, Lord, my end and the number of my days, what it is, so that I may know what I lack.

6 Look, you made my days handbreadths, and my existence is like nothing before you; surely all things are vanity, every living human.” Interlude.

7 Indeed, a human passes along in an image; surely they are troubled in vain; he treasures up and does not know for whom he will gather them.

8 And now what is my waiting? Is it not the Lord? And my existence is from you.

9 Rescue me from all my lawless deeds; you gave me as a reproach to a fool.

10 I became deaf and did not open my mouth, for you are the one who made me.

11 Remove your scourges from me; from the strength of your hand I failed.

12 With rebukes for lawlessness you instructed a human and melted his soul like a spider; surely every human is troubled in vain. Interlude.

13 Hear my prayer, Lord, and give ear to my petition; do not keep silence at my tears, for I am a sojourner with you and a stranger, as all my fathers.

14 Release me, so that I may be refreshed before I depart and no longer exist.

Chapter 39

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid.

2 Waiting, I waited for the Lord, and he attended to me and heard my petition

3 and brought me up from a pit of misery and from mud of mire, and set my feet upon a rock and directed my steps,

4 and put a new song into my mouth, a hymn to our God; many will see and fear and hope in the Lord.

5 Blessed is the man whose hope is the Lord's name, and who did not look toward vanities and false frenzies.

6 You did many things, Lord my God, your wonders, and in your thoughts there is no one who will be likened to you; I proclaimed and spoke; they multiplied beyond number.

7 You did not desire sacrifice and offering, but you fashioned ears for me; you did not ask for a whole burnt offering and an offering for sin.

8 Then I said, “Look, I have come; in a scroll of a book it has been written concerning me;

9 I wished to do your will, my God, and your law is in the midst of my belly.”

10 I proclaimed righteousness as good news in a great assembly; look, I will certainly not restrain my lips; Lord, you knew.

11 I did not hide your righteousness in my heart; I spoke your truth and your salvation; I did not hide your mercy and your truth from a large gathering.

12 But you, Lord, do not put your compassions far from me; your mercy and your truth helped me continually.

13 For evils surrounded me, of which there is no number; my lawless deeds overtook me, and I could not see; they multiplied beyond the hairs of my head, and my heart abandoned me.

14 Be pleased, Lord, to rescue me; Lord, attend to helping me.

15 May those seeking my soul to remove it be put to shame and abashed together; may those desiring evils for me turn backward and be abashed;

16 let those saying to me, “Well done, well done,” receive their shame immediately.

17 May all who seek you exult and be glad in you, Lord, and let those loving your salvation say continually, “Let the Lord be magnified.”

18 But I am poor and needy; the Lord will care for me. You are my helper and my defender; my God, do not delay.

Chapter 40

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid.

2 Blessed is the one understanding concerning a poor and needy man; in an evil day the Lord will rescue him.

3 May the Lord preserve him and make him live and pronounce him blessed on the earth, and may he not deliver him into his enemy's hands.

4 May the Lord help him upon his bed of pain; you turned his whole bed in his sickness.

5 I said, “Lord, have mercy on me; heal my soul, for I sinned against you.”

6 My enemies spoke evils against me: “When will he die and his name perish?”

7 And if he entered to see, he spoke vainly; his heart gathered lawlessness for itself; he went outside and spoke.

8 All my enemies whispered together against me; against me they devised evils for me;

9 they laid down a lawless word against me: “Surely the one lying down will not rise again?”

10 For even the human of my peace, in whom I hoped, the one eating my loaves, magnified a heel-trip against me;

11 but you, Lord, have mercy on me and raise me, and I will repay them.

12 By this I knew that you have desired me, for my enemy will certainly not rejoice over me.

13 But you helped me because of innocence, and you established me before you forever.

14 Blessed is the Lord, the God of Israel, from eternity and unto eternity. May it be, may it be. – –

Chapter 41

1 For the end; for understanding, for the sons of Kore.

2 As the deer longs for the springs of the waters, so my soul longs for you, God.

3 My soul thirsted for the living God; when will I come and appear before God's face?

4 My tears became bread for me by day and by night, while it was said to me every day, “Where is your God?”

5 I remembered these things and poured out my soul upon me, for I will pass through the place of a wondrous tent as far as God's house, with a voice of exultation and thanksgiving, a sound of one celebrating a feast.

6 Why are you sorrowful, soul, and why do you trouble me? Hope in God, for I will give thanks to him; my God is the salvation of my face.

7 My soul was troubled within myself; because of this I will remember you from the land of Iordanes and Ermoniim, from a small mountain.

8 Abyss calls upon abyss at the sound of your waterfalls; all your surges and your waves passed over me.

9 By day the Lord will command his mercy, and by night a song is with me, a prayer to the God of my life.

10 I will say to God, “You are my helper; why did you forget me? Why do I walk looking gloomy while my enemy oppresses?”

11 While my bones were crushed, those afflicting me reproached me, saying to me every day, “Where is your God?”

12 Why are you sorrowful, soul, and why do you trouble me? Hope in God, for I will give thanks to him; my God is the salvation of my face.

Chapter 42

1 A psalm for Dauid. Judge me, God, and judge my cause against an unholy nation; rescue me from an unjust and deceitful human.

2 For you, God, are my strength; why did you reject me? And why do I walk looking gloomy while my enemy oppresses?

3 Send out your light and your truth; these guided me and brought me to your holy mountain and to your dwellings.

4 And I will enter toward God's altar, toward God who gladdens my youth; I will give thanks to you with a lyre, God, my God.

5 Why are you sorrowful, soul, and why do you trouble me? Hope in God, for I will give thanks to him; my God is the salvation of my face.

Chapter 43

1 For the end; for the sons of Kore, a psalm for understanding.

2 God, we heard with our ears; our fathers proclaimed to us a work that you worked in their days, in ancient days.

3 Your hand destroyed nations, and you planted them; you afflicted peoples and cast them out.

4 For they did not inherit earth by their sword, and their arm did not save them, but your right hand and your arm and the enlightenment of your face, for you were pleased with them.

5 You yourself are my king and my God, commanding the salvations of Iakob;

6 in you we will gore our enemies, and in your name we will despise those rising against us.

7 For I will not hope in my bow, and my sword will not save me;

8 for you saved us from those afflicting us and put those hating us to shame.

9 In God we will be praised the whole day, and in your name we will give thanks forever. Interlude.

10 But now you rejected and put us to shame, and you will not go out with our hosts;

11 you turned us backward before our enemies, and those hating us plundered for themselves.

12 You gave us like sheep for eating and scattered us among the nations;

13 you sold your people without a price, and there was no abundance in their exchanges.

14 You made us a reproach to our neighbors, mockery and ridicule to those around us;

15 you made us a parable among the nations, a movement of the head among the peoples.

16 The whole day my disgrace is before me, and the shame of my face covered me,

17 from the voice of one reproaching and speaking abusively, from the presence of an enemy and persecutor.

18 All these things came upon us, and we did not forget you and did not act unjustly in your covenant,

19 and our heart did not depart backward; and you turned our paths aside from your way.

20 For you humbled us in a place of affliction, and a shadow of death covered us.

21 If we forgot the name of our God and if we spread out our hands toward a foreign god,

22 will not God seek these things out? For he himself knows the hidden things of the heart.

23 For because of you we are put to death the whole day; we were reckoned like sheep for slaughter.

24 Awake; why do you sleep, Lord? Rise and do not reject completely.

25 Why do you turn away your face, forget our poverty and our affliction?

26 For our soul was humbled into dust; our belly stuck to the earth.

27 Rise, Lord; help us and redeem us for the sake of your name.

Chapter 44

1 For the end, concerning those who will be changed; for the sons of Kore, for understanding; a song concerning the beloved one.

2 My heart poured forth a good word; I speak my works to the king; my tongue is a reed of a swift-writing scribe.

3 Beautiful in beauty beyond the sons of humans, grace was poured out on your lips; because of this God blessed you forever.

4 Gird your sword upon your thigh, mighty one, in your beauty and your comeliness,

5 and draw and prosper and reign for the sake of truth and meekness and righteousness, and your right hand will guide you wondrously.

6 Your arrows are sharpened, mighty one—peoples will fall beneath you—in the heart of the king's enemies.

7 Your throne, God, is for the age of the age; a rod of uprightness is the rod of your kingdom.

8 You loved righteousness and hated lawlessness; because of this God, your God, anointed you with oil of exultation beyond your companions.

9 Myrrh and stacte and cassia are from your garments, from ivory palaces, from which they gladdened you.

10 Kings' daughters are in your honor; the queen stood at your right, clothed in gold-woven clothing, adorned in varied colors.

11 Hear, daughter, and see and incline your ear, and forget your people and your father's house,

12 for the king desired your beauty, for he himself is your lord.

13 And daughters of Tyros will bow to him with gifts; the rich of the people will entreat your face.

14 All her glory, a king's daughter, is within, clothed in golden fringes, adorned in varied colors.

15 Virgins will be brought to the king behind her; her companions will be brought to you;

16 they will be brought with gladness and exultation; they will be led into a king's temple.

17 In place of your fathers sons came to be for you; you will appoint them rulers over all the earth.

18 They will remember your name in every generation and generation; because of this peoples will give thanks to you forever and for the age of the age.

Chapter 45

1 For the end; concerning the sons of Kore, a psalm concerning the hidden things.

2 Our God is refuge and power, a helper in the afflictions that found us exceedingly.

3 Because of this we will not fear when the earth is troubled and mountains are moved into the hearts of seas.

4 Their waters roared and were troubled; the mountains were troubled in his might. Interlude.

5 The river's rushes gladden God's city; the Most High sanctified his dwelling.

6 God is in its midst; it will not be shaken; God will help it toward morning.

7 Nations were troubled; kingdoms inclined; he gave his voice; the earth was shaken.

8 The Lord of powers is with us; our helper is the God of Iakob. Interlude.

9 Come, see the Lord's works, the wonders he placed upon the earth.

10 Removing wars as far as the ends of the earth, he will shatter a bow and break a weapon and burn shields in fire.

11 Be at rest and know that I am God; I will be exalted among the nations; I will be exalted on the earth.

12 The Lord of powers is with us; our helper is the God of Iakob.

Chapter 46

1 For the end; concerning the sons of Kore, a psalm.

2 All the nations, clap your hands; shout to God with a voice of exultation,

3 because the Lord Most High is fearsome, a great king over all the earth.

4 He subjected peoples to us and nations beneath our feet;

5 he chose for us his inheritance, the beauty of Iakob, which he loved. Interlude.

6 God ascended with a shout, the Lord with the sound of a trumpet.

7 Sing to our God, sing; sing to our king, sing,

8 because God is king of all the earth; sing with understanding.

9 God reigned over the nations; God sits upon his holy throne.

10 Rulers of peoples were gathered with the God of Abraam, because the mighty ones of the earth belong to God; they were greatly exalted.

Chapter 47

1 A psalm of a song for the sons of Kore; on the second day of the week.

2 Great is the Lord and greatly praiseworthy in the city of our God, his holy mountain,

3 taking root well for the rejoicing of all the earth. Mountains of Sion, the sides of the north, the city of the great king,

4 God is known in her citadels when he takes hold of her.

5 Because, behold, the kings were gathered; they came together;

6 they, seeing thus, marveled; they were troubled, they were shaken;

7 trembling took hold of them; there were birth pangs there, as of a woman giving birth.

8 With a violent wind you will shatter ships of Tharsis.

9 Just as we heard, so we saw in the city of the Lord of powers, in the city of our God; God founded her forever. Interlude.

10 We received your mercy, God, in the midst of your temple.

11 According to your name, God, so also is your praise to the ends of the earth; your right hand is full of righteousness.

12 Let Mount Sion rejoice; let the daughters of Ioudaia exult because of your judgments, Lord.

13 Circle Sion and encompass her; recount her towers;

14 Set your hearts upon her strength and examine her citadels, so that you may recount to another generation.

15 Because this is God, our God, forever and for the age of the age; he will shepherd us for the ages.

Chapter 48

1 For the end; for the sons of Kore, a psalm.

2 Hear these things, all the nations; give ear, all who inhabit the inhabited world,

3 both the earthborn and the sons of humans, rich and poor together.

4 My mouth will speak wisdom, and the meditation of my heart, understanding;

5 I will incline my ear to a parable; I will open my riddle with a psaltery.

6 Why am I afraid on an evil day? The lawlessness of my heel will surround me.

7 Those who trust in their strength and boast in the multitude of their wealth,

8 a brother is not redeemed; will a human redeem? He will not give God his propitiation

9 and the price of the redemption of his soul.

10 And he ceased forever and will live to the end, because he will not see destruction when he sees wise ones dying.

11 Together the foolish and the senseless will perish and will leave their wealth to strangers,

12 and their graves are their houses forever, their dwellings to generation and generation. They called their names upon their lands.

13 And a human, being in honor, did not understand; he was compared to the senseless beasts and became like them.

14 This way of theirs is a stumbling block to them, and after these things they will take pleasure in their mouth. Interlude.

15 Like sheep they were placed in Hades; death shepherds them. And the upright will rule over them in the morning, and their help will grow old in Hades away from their glory.

16 But God will redeem my soul from the hand of Hades when he takes me. Interlude.

17 Do not be afraid when a human becomes rich and when the glory of his house is multiplied,

18 because when he dies he will not take everything, nor will his glory descend with him.

19 Because his soul will be blessed in his life; he will acknowledge you when you do good to him.

20 He will enter as far as the generation of his fathers; forever he will not see light.

21 A human, being in honor, did not understand; he was compared to the senseless beasts and became like them.

Chapter 49

1 A psalm for Asaph. The God of gods, the Lord, spoke and called the earth from the rising of the sun and as far as its setting.

2 From Sion is the magnificence of his beauty; God will come visibly,

3 our God, and he will not keep silent. Fire will burn before him, and around him a very great storm.

4 He will summon heaven above and the earth to judge his people:

5 Gather to him his holy ones, those making his covenant upon sacrifices,

6 and the heavens will announce his righteousness, because God is judge. Interlude.

7 Hear, my people, and I will speak to you, Israel, and I testify to you; I am God, your God.

8 I will not reprove you for your sacrifices, and your whole burnt offerings are before me continually;

9 I will not receive calves from your house or he-goats from your flocks.

10 Because all the wild beasts of the forest are mine, beasts on the mountains and oxen;

11 I have known all the birds of heaven, and the beauty of the field is with me.

12 If I hunger, I will certainly not tell you; for the inhabited world is mine, and its fullness.

13 Surely I will not eat the flesh of bulls or drink the blood of goats?

14 Sacrifice to God a sacrifice of praise, and pay your vows to the Most High;

15 and call upon me on a day of affliction, and I will deliver you, and you will glorify me. Interlude.

16 But to the sinner God said: Why do you recount my ordinances and take up my covenant through your mouth?

17 But you hated discipline and cast my words behind you.

18 If you saw a thief, you ran together with him, and you placed your portion with adulterers;

19 your mouth abounded in evil, and your tongue wove deceit;

20 sitting, you spoke against your brother, and against the son of your mother you placed a stumbling block.

21 You did these things, and I kept silent; you supposed lawlessness, that I would be like you; I will reprove you and set it before your face.

22 Understand these things, then, you who forget God, lest he seize and there be no one delivering;

23 A sacrifice of praise will glorify me, and there is a way there by which I will show him the salvation of God.

Chapter 50

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid,

2 when Nathan the prophet came to him, when he went in to Bersabee.

3 Have mercy on me, God, according to your great mercy, and according to the multitude of your compassions blot out my lawless deed;

4 Wash me still more from my lawlessness, and cleanse me from my sin.

5 Because I know my lawlessness, and my sin is before me continually.

6 Against you alone I sinned and did what is evil before you, so that you may be justified in your words and prevail when you are judged.

7 For behold, in lawless deeds I was conceived, and in sins my mother conceived me.

8 For behold, you loved truth; the unrevealed and hidden things of your wisdom you made known to me.

9 You will sprinkle me with hyssop, and I will be cleansed; you will wash me, and I will be made whiter than snow.

10 You will make me hear exultation and gladness; humbled bones will exult.

11 Turn your face away from my sins, and blot out all my lawless deeds.

12 Create a clean heart in me, God, and renew an upright spirit in my inward parts.

13 Do not cast me away from your face, and do not take your holy spirit away from me.

14 Restore to me the exultation of your salvation, and support me with a ruling spirit.

15 I will teach lawless ones your ways, and impious ones will turn back to you.

16 Deliver me from bloods, God, the God of my salvation; my tongue will exult in your righteousness.

17 Lord, you will open my lips, and my mouth will announce your praise.

18 Because if you had wanted a sacrifice, I would have given it; you will not take pleasure in whole burnt offerings.

19 A sacrifice to God is a broken spirit; a broken and humbled heart God will not despise.

20 Do good to Sion, Lord, in your good pleasure, and let the walls of Ierousalem be built;

21 then you will take pleasure in a sacrifice of righteousness, an offering and whole burnt offerings; then they will offer calves upon your altar.

Chapter 51

1 For the end; of understanding, for Dauid,

2 when Doek the Idumaian came and announced to Saoul and said to him: Dauid came into the house of Abimelech.

3 Why do you boast in evil, mighty one, of lawlessness all day?

4 Your tongue devised injustice; like a sharpened razor you worked deceit.

5 You loved evil more than goodness, injustice more than speaking righteousness. Interlude.

6 You loved all words of drowning, a deceitful tongue.

7 For this reason God will pull you down to the end; may he pluck you out and remove you from your dwelling, and your root from the land of the living. Interlude.

8 And righteous ones will see and be afraid, and will laugh at him and say:

9 Behold, a human who did not make God his helper, but hoped in the multitude of his wealth and was strengthened in his vanity.

10 But I am like a fruitful olive tree in the house of God; I hoped in the mercy of God forever and for the age of the age.

11 I will acknowledge you forever, because you acted, and I will wait for your name, because it is good before your holy ones.

Chapter 52

1 For the end, concerning maeleth; of understanding, for Dauid.

2 A fool said in his heart: There is no God. They became corrupt and abominable in lawless deeds; there is no one doing good.

3 God leaned down from heaven upon the sons of humans to see whether there is anyone understanding or seeking out God.

4 All turned aside; together they became useless; there is no one doing good, there is not even one.

5 Will not all who work lawlessness know? Those eating my people as food of bread did not call upon God.

6 There they will fear a fear where there was no fear, because God scattered the bones of those pleasing humans; they were put to shame, because God despised them.

7 Who will give the salvation of Israel from Sion? When the Lord turns back the captivity of his people, Iakob will exult and Israel will rejoice.

Chapter 53

1 For the end, in hymns; of understanding, for Dauid,

2 when the Ziphaians came and said to Saoul: Behold, is not Dauid hidden among us?

3 God, save me by your name, and judge me by your strength.

4 God, hear my prayer; give ear to the words of my mouth.

5 Because strangers rose against me, and mighty ones sought my soul; they did not set God before them. Interlude.

6 For behold, God helps me, and the Lord is the supporter of my soul.

7 He will turn the evils back upon my enemies; in your truth destroy them.

8 Willingly I will sacrifice to you; I will acknowledge your name, Lord, because it is good;

9 because you delivered me from every affliction, and my eye looked upon my enemies.

Chapter 54

1 For the end, in hymns; of understanding, for Dauid.

2 Give ear, God, to my prayer, and do not overlook my supplication;

3 attend to me and hear me. I was grieved in my meditation and troubled

4 by the voice of an enemy and by the affliction of a sinner, because they turned lawlessness upon me and bore a grudge against me in wrath.

5 My heart was troubled within me, and dread of death fell upon me;

6 fear and trembling came upon me, and darkness covered me.

7 And I said: Who will give me wings like a dove, and I will fly and rest?

8 Behold, I went far away in flight and lodged in the wilderness. Interlude.

9 I awaited the one saving me from faintheartedness and storm.

10 Drown them, Lord, and divide their tongues, because I saw lawlessness and contradiction in the city.

11 Day and night it will circle her upon her walls; lawlessness and toil are in her midst, and injustice,

12 and interest and deceit did not cease from her squares.

13 Because if an enemy had reproached me, I would have endured it, and if the one hating me had spoken boastfully against me, I would have hidden from him.

14 But you, human of equal soul, my leader and my acquaintance,

15 who together with me made foods sweet, we walked in the house of God in concord;

16 let death come upon them, and let them descend alive into Hades, because evils are in their sojournings, in their midst.

17 But I cried out to God, and the Lord heard me.

18 At evening and morning and midday I will recount; I will report, and he will hear my voice.

19 He will redeem my soul in peace from those approaching me, because among many they were with me.

20 God will hear and humble them, the one existing before the ages. Interlude. For there is no exchange for them, and they did not fear God.

21 He stretched out his hand in repaying; they profaned his covenant.

22 They were divided by the wrath of his face, and his heart drew near; his words were softened more than oil, and they are missiles.

23 Cast your care upon the Lord, and he will sustain you; he will never give shaking to the righteous one.

24 But you, God, will bring them down into a pit of corruption; men of bloods and deceit will certainly not reach half their days. But I will hope in you, Lord.

Chapter 55

1 For the end, concerning the people removed far from the holy places; for Dauid, for an inscription on a pillar, when the foreigners seized him in Geth.

2 Have mercy on me, Lord, because a human trampled me; fighting all day, he afflicted me.

3 My enemies trampled me all day, because many are those fighting me from a height.

4 By day I will be afraid, but I will hope in you.

5 In God I will praise my words all day. In God I hoped; I will not be afraid. What will flesh do to me?

6 All day they abhorred my words; all their reasonings against me are for evil.

7 They will sojourn and hide; they will watch my heel, just as they waited for my soul.

8 For nothing you will save them; in wrath you will bring peoples down, God.

9 I declared my life to you; you placed my tears before you, as also in your promise.

10 My enemies will turn backward on whatever day I call upon you; behold, I knew that you are my God.

11 In God I will praise an utterance; in the Lord I will praise a word.

12 In God I hoped; I will not be afraid. What will a human do to me?

13 Within me, God, are the vows of praise that I will pay to you,

14 because you delivered my soul from death and my feet from slipping, to be pleasing before God in the light of the living.

Chapter 56

1 For the end; do not destroy; for Dauid, for an inscription on a pillar, when he fled from the face of Saoul into the cave.

2 Have mercy on me, God, have mercy on me, because my soul has trusted in you, and in the shadow of your wings I will hope until lawlessness passes away.

3 I will cry out to God Most High, the God who benefited me.

4 He sent forth from heaven and saved me; he gave those trampling me to reproach. Interlude. God sent forth his mercy and his truth

5 and delivered my soul from the midst of young lions. I lay down troubled; sons of humans, their teeth are a weapon and arrows, and their tongue a sharp sword.

6 Be exalted above the heavens, God, and your glory above all the earth.

7 They prepared a trap for my feet and bent down my soul; they dug a pit before my face and fell into it. Interlude.

8 My heart is ready, God, my heart is ready; I will sing and make music.

9 Awake, my glory; awake, psaltery and lyre; I will awake at dawn.

10 I will acknowledge you among peoples, Lord; I will sing to you among nations,

11 because your mercy was magnified as far as the heavens, and your truth as far as the clouds.

12 Be exalted above the heavens, God, and your glory above all the earth.

Chapter 57

1 For the end; do not destroy; for Dauid, for an inscription on a pillar.

2 Do you truly, then, speak righteousness? Do you judge upright things, sons of humans?

3 For indeed you work lawless deeds in your heart on the earth; your hands weave injustice.

4 Sinners were estranged from the womb; they strayed from the belly; they spoke lies.

5 Their fury is according to the likeness of the serpent, like a deaf asp stopping its ears,

6 which will not hear the voice of enchanters or a charm worked by a wise one.

7 God shattered their teeth in their mouth; the Lord crushed the molars of lions.

8 They will be brought to nothing like water passing through; he will draw his bow until they grow weak.

9 Like melted wax they will be taken away; fire fell upon them, and they did not see the sun.

10 Before your thorns understand the buckthorn, he will swallow you as though alive, as though in wrath.

11 A righteous one will rejoice when he sees vengeance upon impious ones; he will wash his hands in the blood of the sinner.

12 And a human will say: Indeed, then, there is fruit for the righteous one; indeed, there is God judging them on the earth.

Chapter 58

1 For the end; do not destroy; for Dauid, for an inscription on a pillar, when Saoul sent and watched his house to put him to death.

2 Deliver me from my enemies, God, and redeem me from those rising against me;

3 deliver me from those working lawlessness, and save me from men of bloods.

4 Because, behold, they hunted my soul; mighty ones attacked me. Neither my lawlessness nor my sin, Lord;

5 without lawlessness they ran and directed their course; awake to meet me and see.

6 And you, Lord, the God of powers, the God of Israel, attend to visiting all the nations; do not pity all those working lawlessness. Interlude.

7 They will return toward evening and hunger like a dog and circle a city.

8 Behold, they will utter with their mouth, and a sword is in their lips; because who heard?

9 And you, Lord, will laugh at them; you will despise all the nations.

10 My strength, I will watch toward you, because you, God, are my supporter.

11 My God, his mercy will go before me; God will show me among my enemies.

12 Do not kill them, lest they forget my people; scatter them by your strength and bring them down, Lord, my defender.

13 The sin of their mouth, the word of their lips, and let them be caught in their arrogance; and from curse and falsehood ends will be proclaimed

14 in wrath of an end, and they will certainly not exist; and they will know that God rules Iakob, the ends of the earth. Interlude.

15 They will return toward evening and hunger like a dog and circle a city.

16 They will be scattered to eat; but if they are not filled, they will also grumble.

17 But I will sing of your strength and exult in your mercy in the morning, because you became my supporter and a refuge on the day of my affliction.

18 My helper, I will sing to you, because you, God, are my supporter, my God, my mercy.

Chapter 59

1 For the end; for those who will yet be changed, for an inscription on a pillar, for Dauid, for teaching,

2 when he burned the Mesopotamia of Syria and Syria Soba, and Ioab returned and struck the ravine of salts, twelve thousand.

3 God, you rejected us and pulled us down; you were angry and pitied us.

4 You shook the earth and troubled it; heal its fractures, because it was shaken.

5 You showed your people hard things; you gave us wine of stupefaction to drink.

6 You gave those fearing you a signal to flee from the face of a bow. Interlude.

7 So that your beloved ones may be delivered, save with your right hand and hear me.

8 God spoke in his holy place: I will exult and divide Sikima, and I will measure out the valley of tents;

9 Galaad is mine, and Manasse is mine, and Ephraim is the strengthening of my head, Ioudas my king;

10 Moab is the cauldron of my hope; upon Idumaia I will extend my sandal; foreigners were subjected to me.

11 Who will lead me into a fortified city? Who will guide me as far as Idumaia?

12 Is it not you, God, who rejected us? And you will not go out, God, with our forces.

13 Give us help out of affliction; and a human's salvation is vain.

14 But in God we will do mighty deeds, and he will bring to nothing those afflicting us.

Chapter 60

1 For the end, in hymns; for Dauid.

2 Hear, God, my supplication; attend to my prayer.

3 From the ends of the earth I cried out to you when my heart grew weary; upon a rock you raised me,

4 you guided me, because you became my hope, a tower of strength from the face of an enemy.

5 I will sojourn in your dwelling for the ages; I will be sheltered in the shelter of your wings. Interlude.

6 Because you, God, heard my vows; you gave an inheritance to those fearing your name.

7 You will add days to the days of a king, his years as far as the days of generation and generation.

8 He will remain forever before God; who will seek out his mercy and truth?

9 Thus I will sing to your name for the age of the age, that I may pay my vows day by day.

Chapter 61

1 For the end, concerning Idithoun; a psalm for Dauid.

2 Will not my soul be subjected to God? For from him is my salvation;

3 for indeed he is my God and my savior, my supporter; I will certainly not be shaken further.

4 Until when do you attack a human? You all murder, as against a leaning wall and a fence thrust aside.

5 But they planned to thrust away my honor; they ran in falsehood; with their mouth they blessed, and with their heart they cursed. Interlude.

6 But be subjected to God, my soul, because from him is my endurance;

7 because he is my God and my savior, my supporter; I will certainly not be displaced.

8 Upon God depend my salvation and my glory; the God of my help, and my hope is upon God.

9 Hope in him, every assembly of a people; pour out your hearts before him; God is our helper. Interlude.

10 But vain are the sons of humans, false are the sons of humans in balances for doing injustice; they are from vanity together.

11 Do not hope in injustice, and do not long for plunder; if wealth flows, do not set your heart upon it.

12 Once God spoke; these two things I heard:

13 that strength belongs to God, and to you, Lord, belongs mercy, because you will repay each one according to his works.

Chapter 62

1 A psalm for Dauid when he was in the wilderness of Ioudaia.

2 God, my God, toward you I rise early; my soul thirsted for you. How manifold is my flesh's longing for you in a land deserted and untrodden and waterless?

3 Thus in the holy place I appeared to you, to see your strength and your glory.

4 Because your mercy is better than lives; my lips will praise you.

5 Thus I will bless you in my life; in your name I will lift my hands.

6 May my soul be filled as with fat and richness, and with lips of exultation my mouth will praise.

7 If I remembered you upon my bed, at dawn I meditated upon you;

8 because you became my helper, and in the shelter of your wings I will exult.

9 My soul clung behind you; your right hand took hold of me.

10 But they sought my soul in vain; they will enter the lowest parts of the earth;

11 they will be handed over to the hands of a sword; they will be portions of foxes.

12 But the king will rejoice in God; everyone swearing by him will be praised, because the mouth of those speaking unjust things was stopped.

Chapter 63

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid.

2 Hear, God, my voice when I supplicate; deliver my soul from fear of an enemy.

3 You sheltered me from a conspiracy of those doing evil, from a multitude of those working lawlessness,

4 who sharpened their tongues like a sword, drew their bow, a bitter thing,

5 to shoot down a blameless one in hidden places; suddenly they will shoot him down and will not be afraid.

6 They strengthened an evil word for themselves; they spoke of hiding traps; they said: Who will see them?

7 They searched out lawless deeds; they failed while searching with a search. A human will approach, and a deep heart,

8 and God will be exalted. Their blows became an arrow of infants,

9 and their tongues grew weak against them. All who saw them were troubled,

10 and every human was afraid. And they announced the works of God and understood his deeds.

11 A righteous one will rejoice in the Lord and hope in him, and all the upright in heart will be praised.

Chapter 64

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid, a song; of Ieremias and Iezekiel, from the account of the sojourning, when they were about to go out.

2 A hymn befits you, God, in Sion, and a vow will be paid to you in Ierousalem.

3 Hear my prayer; all flesh will come to you.

4 Words of lawless deeds overpowered us, and you will atone for our impieties.

5 Blessed is the one whom you chose and took to yourself; he will dwell in your courts. We will be filled with the good things of your house; your temple is holy, marvelous in righteousness.

6 Hear us, God our savior, the hope of all the ends of the earth and of those far away at sea,

7 preparing mountains by his strength, girded with might,

8 the one troubling the hollow of the sea, the sounds of its waves. The nations will be troubled,

9 and those inhabiting the ends will be afraid because of your signs; you will delight the departures of morning and evening.

10 You visited the earth and drenched it; you multiplied its enrichment; the river of God was filled with waters; you prepared their food, because thus is your preparation.

11 Drench its furrows; multiply its produce; in its drops it will rejoice as it sprouts.

12 You will bless the crown of the year of your goodness, and your plains will be filled with richness;

13 the beautiful places of the wilderness will grow fat, and the hills will gird themselves with exultation.

14 The rams of the sheep clothed themselves, and the valleys multiply grain; they will cry out, for indeed they will sing hymns.

Chapter 65

1 For the end; a song of a psalm; [of resurrection.] Shout to God, all the earth,

2 sing, then, to his name; give glory to his praise.

3 Say to God: How fearsome are your works; in the multitude of your strength your enemies will lie to you;

4 let all the earth bow to you and sing to you; let them sing to your name. Interlude.

5 Come and see the works of God; fearsome in counsels beyond the sons of humans,

6 the one turning the sea into dry land; in a river they will pass through on foot. There we will rejoice in him,

7 the one ruling by his might forever; his eyes look upon the nations; let those provoking bitterness not exalt themselves. Interlude.

8 Bless our God, nations, and make the voice of his praise heard,

9 the one who placed my soul into life and did not give my feet to shaking.

10 Because you tested us, God; you refined us by fire, as silver is refined by fire;

11 you brought us into the trap; you placed afflictions upon our back.

12 You mounted humans upon our heads; we passed through fire and water, and you brought us out into refreshment.

13 I will enter your house with whole burnt offerings; I will pay you my vows,

14 which my lips declared and my mouth spoke in my affliction;

15 whole burnt offerings full of marrow I will offer to you with incense and rams; I will prepare oxen with he-goats for you. Interlude.

16 Come, hear, all who fear God, and I will recount all that he did for my soul.

17 To him I cried out with my mouth and exalted beneath my tongue:

18 If I beheld injustice in my heart, let the Lord not hear.

19 For this reason God heard me; he attended to the voice of my supplication.

20 Blessed is God, who did not remove my prayer and his mercy from me.

Chapter 66

1 For the end, in hymns; a psalm of a song.

2 May God pity us and bless us; may he make his face shine upon us. Interlude.

3 That your way may be known on the earth, your salvation among all nations.

4 Let peoples acknowledge you, God; let all peoples acknowledge you.

5 Let nations rejoice and exult, because you will judge peoples in uprightness and guide nations on the earth. Interlude.

6 Let peoples acknowledge you, God; let all peoples acknowledge you.

7 The earth gave its fruit; may God, our God, bless us.

8 May God bless us, and let all the ends of the earth fear him.

Chapter 67

1 For the end; for Dauid, a psalm of a song.

2 Let God arise, and let his enemies be scattered, and let those hating him flee from his face.

3 As smoke fails, let them fail; as wax melts before the face of fire, so may sinners perish before the face of God.

4 And let the righteous rejoice; let them exult before God; let them delight in gladness.

5 Sing to God; sing to his name; make a road for the one riding upon the west; Lord is his name, and exult before him. They will be troubled before his face,

6 the father of orphans and judge of widows; God is in his holy place.

7 God settles solitary ones in a house, bringing out those bound in fetters with courage, likewise those provoking bitterness, those dwelling in graves.

8 God, when you went out before your people, when you passed through the wilderness, Interlude.

9 the earth shook, for indeed the heavens dripped before the face of God, this Sina, before the face of the God of Israel.

10 You will set apart a willing rain, God, for your inheritance, and it grew weak, but you restored it.

11 Your living creatures dwell in it; you prepared for the poor one in your goodness, God.

12 The Lord will give an utterance to those announcing good news with much power,

13 the king of the forces of the beloved, and for the beauty of the house to divide spoils.

14 If you lie down between the allotted portions, wings of a dove overlaid with silver, and her back with the greenish hue of gold. Interlude.

15 When the heavenly one distinguishes kings upon it, they will be made snowy in Selmon.

16 A mountain of God, a rich mountain, a curdled mountain, a rich mountain.

17 Why do you suppose, curdled mountains, the mountain in which God was pleased to dwell? For indeed the Lord will dwell to the end.

18 The chariot of God is ten-thousandfold, thousands of those flourishing; the Lord is among them, in Sina, in the holy place.

19 You ascended to a height; you took captivity captive; you received gifts among humans, for indeed disobedient ones, to dwell. The Lord God is blessed,

20 blessed is the Lord day by day; the God of our salvations will prosper our way. Interlude.

21 Our God is a God of saving, and to the Lord, the Lord, belong the exits of death.

22 But God will crush the heads of his enemies, the hairy crown of those walking in their transgressions.

23 The Lord said: From Basan I will turn back; I will turn back in the depths of the sea,

24 so that your foot may be dipped in blood, the tongue of your dogs from enemies, from him.

25 Your processions were seen, God, the processions of my God, the king in the holy place.

26 Rulers went ahead, followed by those making music, in the midst of young women playing tambourines.

27 In assemblies bless God, the Lord, from the springs of Israel.

28 There is Beniamin the younger in ecstasy, rulers of Iouda, their leaders, rulers of Zaboulon, rulers of Nephthali.

29 Command, God, your strength; strengthen, God, this which you accomplished for us.

30 From your temple at Ierousalem kings will bring gifts to you.

31 Rebuke the wild beasts of the reed; the assembly of bulls among the heifers of the peoples, so that those tested by silver may not be shut out; scatter nations that desire wars.

32 Ambassadors will come from Egypt; Ethiopia will hasten her hand to God.

33 Kingdoms of the earth, sing to God; sing to the Lord. Interlude.

34 Sing to God, the one riding upon the heaven of heaven toward the east; behold, he will give with his voice a voice of power.

35 Give glory to God; his magnificence is over Israel, and his strength is in the clouds.

36 Marvelous is God in his holy places; the God of Israel himself will give strength and strengthening to his people. Blessed is God.

Chapter 68

1 For the end, concerning those who will be changed; for Dauid.

2 Save me, God, because waters entered as far as my soul.

3 I became stuck in the mud of the deep, and there is no firm footing; I came into the depths of the sea, and a storm drowned me.

4 I grew weary crying out; my throat became hoarse; my eyes failed from hoping in my God.

5 Those hating me without cause were multiplied beyond the hairs of my head; my enemies, those pursuing me unjustly, grew strong; what I did not seize, then I repaid.

6 God, you knew my folly, and my transgressions were not hidden from you.

7 May those waiting for you not be put to shame because of me, Lord, Lord of powers; may those seeking you not be disgraced because of me, God of Israel,

8 because for your sake I endured reproach; disgrace covered my face.

9 I became estranged from my brothers and a stranger to the sons of my mother,

10 because zeal for your house devoured me, and the reproaches of those reproaching you fell upon me.

11 And I bent down my soul in fasting, and it became a reproach to me;

12 and I made sackcloth my clothing, and I became a parable to them.

13 Those sitting at the gate talked against me, and those drinking wine sang about me.

14 But I, with my prayer, am toward you, Lord; a time of good pleasure, God, in the multitude of your mercy; hear me in the truth of your salvation.

15 Save me from mud, so that I may not become stuck; may I be delivered from those hating me and from the depth of the waters;

16 let a storm of water not drown me, nor let the deep swallow me, nor let a well close its mouth over me.

17 Hear me, Lord, because your mercy is good; according to the multitude of your compassions look upon me.

18 Do not turn your face away from your servant, because I am afflicted; hear me quickly.

19 Attend to my soul and redeem it; because of my enemies deliver me.

20 For you know my reproach and my shame and my disgrace; all those afflicting me are before you.

21 My soul expected reproach and misery, and I waited for one grieving with me, and there was none, and for those comforting, and I found none.

22 And they gave gall for my food, and for my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.

23 Let their table before them become a trap and a repayment and a stumbling block;

24 let their eyes be darkened so as not to see, and bend their back continually;

25 pour out your wrath upon them, and may the fury of your wrath overtake them.

26 Let their homestead become deserted, and let there be no one dwelling in their dwellings;

27 because the one you struck, they pursued, and they added to the pain of your wounded ones.

28 Add lawlessness to their lawlessness, and let them not enter into your righteousness;

29 let them be blotted out of the book of the living, and let them not be written with righteous ones.

30 I am poor and in pain, and the salvation of your face, God, took hold of me.

31 I will praise the name of God with a song; I will magnify him with praise,

32 and it will please God more than a young calf bringing forth horns and hoofs.

33 Let poor ones see and rejoice; seek out God, and your soul will live, 34 because the Lord heard the needy and did not despise his fettered ones.

35 Let the heavens and the earth praise him, the sea and all things creeping in them.

36 Because God will save Sion, and the cities of Ioudaia will be built, and they will dwell there and inherit it;

37 and the seed of his slaves will possess it, and those loving his name will dwell in it.

Chapter 69

1 For the end; for Dauid, for remembrance,

2 for the Lord to save me. God, attend to my help.

3 May those seeking my soul be ashamed and disgraced; may those wishing me evils turn backward and be put to shame;

4 may those saying to me: Well done, well done, turn back immediately in shame.

5 Let all those seeking you exult and rejoice in you, and let those loving your salvation say continually: Let God be magnified.

6 But I am poor and needy; God, help me. You are my helper and my deliverer; Lord, do not delay.

Chapter 70

1 For Dauid; of the sons of Ionadab and of those first taken captive. God, in you I hoped; may I not be put to shame forever.

2 In your righteousness deliver me and rescue me; incline your ear toward me and save me.

3 Become for me a defending God and a strong place to save me, because you are my firmness and my refuge.

4 My God, deliver me from a sinner's hand, from the hand of one acting lawlessly and unjustly;

5 because you are my endurance, Lord; the Lord is my hope from my youth.

6 Upon you I was supported from the belly; from my mother's womb you are my shelterer; in you is my hymn continually.

7 I became like a portent to the many, and you are a mighty helper.

8 Let my mouth be filled with praise, so that I may sing of your glory, all day of your magnificence.

9 Do not cast me away at a time of old age; when my strength fails, do not abandon me.

10 Because my enemies spoke to me, and those watching my soul planned together,

11 saying: God abandoned him; pursue and overtake him, because there is no one delivering.

12 God, do not go far from me; my God, attend to my help.

13 Let those slandering my soul be ashamed and fail; let those seeking evils for me clothe themselves in shame and disgrace.

14 But I will hope continually and add to all your praise.

15 My mouth will declare your righteousness, all day your salvation, because I did not know writings.

16 I will enter in the might of the Lord; Lord, I will remember your righteousness alone.

17 You taught me, God, from my youth, and until now I will report your wonders.

18 And until old age and advanced years, God, do not abandon me, until I report your arm to every coming generation, your might and your righteousness.

19 God, as far as the highest places, the great things you did; God, who is like you?

20 How many afflictions, many and evil, you showed me, and turning back, you gave me life, and from the abysses of the earth you brought me up again.

21 You increased your greatness, and turning back, you comforted me [and from the abysses of the earth you brought me up again.]

22 For indeed I will acknowledge your truth to you with an instrument of music, God; I will sing to you with a lyre, Holy One of Israel.

23 My lips will exult when I sing to you, and my soul, which you redeemed.

24 And moreover my tongue will meditate upon your righteousness all day, when those seeking evils for me are ashamed and disgraced.

Chapter 71

1 For Salomon. God, give your judgment to the king and your righteousness to the king's son,

2 to judge your people in righteousness and your poor ones in judgment.

3 Let the mountains take up peace for your people, and the hills in righteousness.

4 He will judge the poor of the people and save the sons of the needy and humble a false accuser,

5 and he will remain with the sun and before the moon for generations of generations,

6 and he will descend like rain upon a fleece and like drops dripping upon the earth.

7 Righteousness will rise in his days, and a multitude of peace, until the moon is taken away.

8 And he will rule from sea to sea and from a river to the ends of the inhabited world.

9 Before him Ethiopians will fall down, and his enemies will lick dust;

10 kings of Tharsis and the islands will offer gifts; kings of Arabs and Saba will bring gifts;

11 and all kings will bow to him; all nations will serve him.

12 Because he delivered a poor one from the hand of a powerful one, and a needy one who had no helper;

13 he will spare a poor and needy one and save the souls of the needy;

14 from interest and from injustice he will redeem their souls, and their name is honored before him.

15 And he will live, and some of the gold of Arabia will be given to him, and they will pray concerning him continually; all day they will bless him.

16 There will be support in the land upon the tops of the mountains; his fruit will be exalted beyond Libanos, and they will blossom out of a city like grass of the earth.

17 Let his name be blessed for the ages; before the sun his name will remain; and all the tribes of the earth will be blessed in him; all nations will call him blessed.

18 Blessed is the Lord God, the God of Israel, who alone does wonders,

19 and blessed is the name of his glory forever and for the age of the age, and all the earth will be filled with his glory. May it be, may it be.

20 The hymns of Dauid the son of Iessai ended. – –

Chapter 72

1 A psalm for Asaph. How good God is to Israel, to the upright in heart.

2 But my feet were nearly shaken; my steps almost poured away.

3 Because I envied the lawless, seeing the peace of sinners,

4 because there is no refusal at their death, and firmness in their scourge;

5 they are not in the toils of humans, and with humans they will not be scourged.

6 For this reason arrogance seized them; they clothed themselves with their injustice and impiety.

7 Their injustice will come out as from fat; they passed into a disposition of heart;

8 they thought and spoke in wickedness; they spoke injustice on high;

9 they set their mouth toward heaven, and their tongue passed over the earth.

10 For this reason my people will return here, and full days will be found for them.

11 And they said: How did God know, and is there knowledge in the Most High?

12 Behold, these are sinners and prosper; forever they possessed wealth.

13 And I said: Then in vain I made my heart righteous and washed my hands among innocent ones;

14 and I became scourged all day, and my reproof was in the mornings.

15 If I said: I will recount thus, behold, I have broken faith with the generation of your sons.

16 And I undertook to know this; it is toil before me,

17 until I enter the sanctuary of God and understand their last things.

18 But because of their deceits you set things for them; you cast them down when they were exalted.

19 How they became a desolation suddenly; they failed, they perished because of their lawlessness.

20 Like a dream of one waking, Lord, in your city you will despise their image.

21 Because my heart was inflamed, and my kidneys were changed,

22 and I was brought to nothing and did not know; I became beastlike before you.

23 And I am continually with you; you grasped my right hand;

24 with your counsel you guided me, and with glory you took me to yourself.

25 For what do I have in heaven, and from you what did I desire upon the earth?

26 My heart and my flesh failed; God is the God of my heart and my portion forever.

27 Because, behold, those distancing themselves from you will perish; you destroyed everyone prostituting himself away from you.

28 But for me, to cling to God is good, to place my hope in the Lord, to declare all your praises in the gates of the daughter of Sion.

Chapter 73

1 Of understanding, for Asaph. Why did you reject us to the end, God; why was your fury angry against the sheep of your pasture?

2 Remember your assembly, which you acquired from the beginning; you redeemed the rod of your inheritance, this Mount Sion in which you dwelt.

3 Lift your hands against their arrogances to the end, all the evils the enemy worked in your holy places.

4 And those hating you boasted in the midst of your feast; they set their signs as signs and did not know.

5 As at the entrance above,

6 as in a forest of trees, with axes they cut out her doors; together with axe and chisel they broke her down.

7 They burned your sanctuary with fire; to the ground they profaned the dwelling of your name.

8 Their kinship together said in their heart: Come, and let us burn all the feasts of God from the earth.

9 We did not see our signs; there is no longer a prophet, and he will no longer know us.

10 Until when, God, will the enemy reproach; will the adversary provoke your name to the end?

11 Why do you turn away your hand and your right hand from the midst of your bosom to the end?

12 But God is our king before the age; he worked salvation in the midst of the earth.

13 You strengthened the sea by your power; you shattered the heads of the dragons upon the water.

14 You crushed the heads of the dragon; you gave him as food to the Ethiopian peoples.

15 You broke open springs and torrents; you dried up rivers of Etham.

16 The day is yours, and the night is yours; you established light and sun.

17 You made all the boundaries of the earth; summer and spring, you formed them.

18 Remember this: an enemy reproached the Lord, and a foolish people provoked your name.

19 Do not hand over to the wild beasts a soul acknowledging you; do not forget the souls of your needy ones to the end.

20 Look upon your covenant, because the darkened places of the earth were filled with houses of lawless deeds.

21 Let a humbled one not turn back ashamed; a poor and needy one will praise your name.

22 Arise, God; judge your case; remember your reproaches from a fool all day.

23 Do not forget the voice of your suppliants; the arrogance of those hating you went up to you continually.

Chapter 74

1 For the end; do not destroy; a psalm of a song for Asaph.

2 We will acknowledge you, God; we will acknowledge and call upon your name.

3 I will recount all your wonders when I receive a time; I will judge upright things.

4 The earth melted, and all those dwelling in it; I made its pillars firm. Interlude.

5 I said to those acting lawlessly: Do not act lawlessly; and to those sinning: Do not exalt a horn;

6 do not lift your horn on high; do not speak injustice against God.

7 Because neither from departures nor from the west nor from deserted mountains,

8 because God is judge; he humbles this one and exalts this one.

9 Because a cup is in the Lord's hand, of unmixed wine, full of a mixture, and he tipped from this into this; but its dregs were not emptied out; all the sinners of the earth will drink.

10 But I will exult forever; I will sing to the God of Iakob;

11 and I will break all the horns of sinners, and the horns of the righteous one will be exalted.

Chapter 75

1 For the end, in hymns; a psalm for Asaph, a song against the Assyrian.

2 God is known in Ioudaia; in Israel his name is great.

3 And his place came to be in peace, and his dwelling in Sion;

4 there he shattered the powers of bows, weapon and sword and war. Interlude.

5 You give light marvelously from everlasting mountains.

6 All those senseless in heart were troubled; they slept their sleep, and all the men of wealth found nothing with their hands.

7 At your rebuke, God of Iakob, those mounted on horses slumbered.

8 You are fearsome, and who will withstand you? From then is your wrath.

9 From heaven you made judgment heard; the earth was afraid and quiet

10 when God arose for judgment, to save all the meek of the earth. Interlude.

11 Because a human's thought will acknowledge you, and a remnant of thought will keep a feast for you.

12 Make vows and pay them to the Lord your God; all those around him will bring gifts

13 to the fearsome one who takes away spirits of rulers, fearsome among the kings of the earth.

Chapter 76

1 For the end, concerning Idithoun; for Asaph, a psalm.

2 With my voice I cried out to the Lord, with my voice to God, and he attended to me.

3 On the day of my affliction I sought out God, with my hands at night before him, and I was not deceived; my soul refused to be comforted.

4 I remembered God and rejoiced; I meditated, and my spirit grew fainthearted. Interlude.

5 My eyes anticipated watches; I was troubled and did not speak.

6 I considered ancient days, and I remembered everlasting years and meditated;

7 at night I meditated with my heart, and my spirit searched.

8 Surely the Lord will not reject for the ages and no longer continue to take pleasure?

9 Or will he cut off his mercy to the end, from generation to generation?

10 Or will God forget to pity, or will he restrain his compassions in his wrath? Interlude.

11 And I said: Now I began; this is the change of the right hand of the Most High.

12 I remembered the works of the Lord, because I will remember your wonders from the beginning,

13 and I will meditate on all your works, and on your practices I will ponder.

14 God, your way is in the holy place; what god is great like our God?

15 You are the God doing wonders; you made your strength known among the peoples;

16 with your arm you redeemed your people, the sons of Iakob and Ioseph. Interlude.

17 Waters saw you, God; waters saw you and were afraid, and abysses were troubled, a multitude of the sound of waters.

18 The clouds gave a voice, for indeed your arrows pass through;

19 the voice of your thunder is in the wheel; your lightnings shone upon the inhabited world; the earth was shaken and became trembling.

20 Your way is in the sea, and your paths in many waters, and your tracks will not be known.

21 You guided your people like sheep by the hand of Moyses and Aaron.

Chapter 77

1 Of understanding, for Asaph. Attend to my law, my people; incline your ear to the words of my mouth;

2 I will open my mouth in parables; I will utter riddles from the beginning.

3 All that we heard and knew, and our fathers recounted to us,

4 was not hidden from their children, to another generation, reporting the praises of the Lord and his mighty deeds and his wonders which he did.

5 And he raised up a testimony in Iakob and established a law in Israel, all that he commanded our fathers to make known to their sons,

6 so that another generation might know, sons who will be born, and they will arise and report them to their sons,

7 so that they may place their hope upon God and not forget the works of God, and they will seek out his commandments,

8 so that they may not become like their fathers, a crooked generation provoking bitterness, a generation that did not direct its heart, and its spirit was not faithful with God.

9 Sons of Ephraim, drawing and shooting with bows, turned back on a day of war.

10 They did not keep the covenant of God and did not wish to walk in his law,

11 and they forgot his benefits and his wonders which he showed them,

12 the wonders he did before their fathers in the land of Egypt, in the plain of Tanis.

13 He broke open a sea and led them through; he made waters stand like a wineskin,

14 and he guided them with a cloud by day and all night with illumination of fire.

15 He broke open a rock in a wilderness and gave them drink as in a great abyss,

16 and brought water out of a rock and brought waters down like rivers.

17 And they continued still to sin against him; they provoked the Most High to bitterness in a waterless place,

18 and they tested God in their hearts by asking foods for their souls,

19 and they spoke against God and said: Surely God cannot prepare a table in a wilderness?

20 Since he struck a rock and waters flowed and torrents flooded, can he also give bread or prepare a table for his people?

21 For this reason the Lord heard and deferred, and fire was kindled in Iakob, and wrath rose against Israel,

22 because they did not believe in God or hope in his salvation.

23 And he commanded clouds above and opened doors of heaven,

24 and rained manna upon them to eat, and gave them bread of heaven;

25 a human ate bread of angels; he sent them provisions to fullness.

26 He moved a south wind from heaven and brought a southwest wind by his might,

27 and rained flesh upon them like dust, and winged birds like sand of seas,

28 and they fell into the midst of their camp, around their dwellings,

29 and they ate and were greatly filled, and he brought their desire to them;

30 they were not deprived of their desire. While their food was still in their mouth,

31 the wrath of God also rose against them and killed among their fat ones and fettered the chosen ones of Israel.

32 In all these things they still sinned and did not believe in his wonders,

33 and their days failed in vanity, and their years with haste.

34 When he killed them, they sought him out and turned back and rose early toward God,

35 and remembered that God is their helper and God Most High is their redeemer.

36 And they deceived him with their mouth and lied to him with their tongue,

37 but their heart was not upright with him, nor were they faithful in his covenant.

38 But he is compassionate and will atone for their sins and will not destroy, and will multiply the turning away of his fury, and will not kindle all his wrath;

39 and he remembered that they are flesh, a spirit going and not returning.

40 How often did they provoke him to bitterness in the wilderness, anger him in a waterless land?

41 And they turned back and tested God and provoked the Holy One of Israel.

42 They did not remember his hand, the day on which he redeemed them from the hand of an afflicter,

43 how he established his signs in Egypt and his portents in the plain of Tanis;

44 and he turned their rivers and their rainwaters into blood, so that they might not drink;

45 he sent a dog-fly against them, and it devoured them, and a frog, and it destroyed them;

46 and he gave their fruit to rust and their labors to the locust;

47 he killed their vine with hail and their mulberry trees with frost;

48 and he handed their beasts over to hail and their possessions to fire;

49 he sent upon them the wrath of his fury, fury and wrath and affliction, a sending through evil angels;

50 he made a road for his wrath; he did not spare their souls from death, and he shut up their beasts to death,

51 and struck every firstborn in Egypt, the firstfruits of their labors in the dwellings of Cham.

52 And he moved his people like sheep and led them up like a flock in a wilderness,

53 and guided them in hope, and they were not afraid, and a sea covered their enemies.

54 And he brought them into the boundary of his sanctuary, this mountain which his right hand acquired,

55 and cast nations out from before their face and allotted them with a measuring cord of inheritance, and settled the tribes of Israel in their dwellings.

56 And they tested and provoked God Most High to bitterness, and did not keep his testimonies,

57 and turned away and broke faith, just as their fathers also did, and were turned into a crooked bow,

58 and angered him with their hills and provoked him to jealousy with their carved things.

59 God heard and overlooked and greatly despised Israel,

60 and rejected the tent of Selom, his dwelling where he dwelt among humans.

61 And he handed their strength over to captivity and their beauty into an enemy's hands,

62 and shut up his people to a sword and overlooked his inheritance.

63 Fire devoured their young men, and their virgins were not mourned;

64 their priests fell by a sword, and their widows will not be wept for.

65 And the Lord awoke like one sleeping, like a mighty one intoxicated with wine, 66 and struck his enemies backward; he gave them everlasting reproach.

67 And he rejected the dwelling of Ioseph and did not choose the tribe of Ephraim;

68 and he chose the tribe of Iouda, Mount Sion which he loved,

69 and built his sanctuary like that of one-horned beasts; in the earth he founded it forever.

70 And he chose Dauid his slave and took him up from the flocks of sheep;

71 from behind those giving birth he took him to shepherd Iakob his people and Israel his inheritance,

72 and he shepherded them in the innocence of his heart and guided them with the understandings of his hands.

Chapter 78

1 A psalm for Asaph. God, nations came into your inheritance; they defiled your holy temple; they made Ierousalem into a fruit-watch hut.

2 They made the corpses of your slaves food for the birds of heaven, the flesh of your holy ones for the wild beasts of the earth;

3 they poured out their blood like water around Ierousalem, and there was no one burying.

4 We became a reproach to our neighbors, a sneer and mockery to those around us.

5 Until when, Lord, will you be angry to the end; will your jealousy be kindled like fire?

6 Pour out your wrath upon nations that do not know you and upon kingdoms that did not call upon your name,

7 because they devoured Iakob and deserted his place.

8 Do not remember our ancient lawless deeds; let your compassions quickly anticipate us, because we became very poor.

9 Help us, God our savior; because of the glory of your name, Lord, deliver us and atone for our sins because of your name,

10 lest the nations say: Where is their God? And let the vengeance for the poured-out blood of your slaves be known among the nations before our eyes.

11 Let the groaning of those fettered enter before you; according to the greatness of your arm preserve the sons of those put to death.

12 Repay our neighbors sevenfold into their bosom their reproach with which they reproached you, Lord.

13 But we, your people and sheep of your pasture, will acknowledge you forever; to generation and generation we will declare your praise.

Chapter 79

1 For the end, concerning those who will be changed; a testimony for Asaph, a psalm concerning the Assyrian.

2 You who shepherd Israel, attend; you who guide Ioseph like sheep, you who sit upon the cheroubin, appear.

3 Before Ephraim and Beniamin and Manasse awaken your might and come to save us.

4 God, turn us back and make your face shine, and we will be saved.

5 Lord, God of powers, until when are you angry against the prayer of your slave,

6 will you feed us bread of tears and give us tears to drink in measure?

7 You made us a contradiction to our neighbors, and our enemies sneered at us.

8 Lord, God of powers, turn us back and make your face shine, and we will be saved. Interlude.

9 You removed a vine from Egypt; you cast out nations and planted it;

10 you made a road before it and planted its roots, and the earth was filled.

11 Its shadow covered mountains, and its climbing branches the cedars of God;

12 it extended its shoots as far as a sea, and its offshoots as far as a river.

13 Why did you pull down its fence, and all those passing along the road harvest it?

14 A boar from a forest ravaged it, and a solitary wild beast grazed it down.

15 God of powers, turn back, then; look from heaven and see and visit this vine,

16 and restore it, which your right hand planted, and upon a son of a human whom you strengthened for yourself.

17 Burned with fire and dug up; at the rebuke of your face they will perish.

18 Let your hand be upon a man of your right hand and upon a son of a human whom you strengthened for yourself;

19 and we will certainly not depart from you; you will give us life, and we will call upon your name.

20 Lord, God of powers, turn us back and make your face shine, and we will be saved.

Chapter 80

1 For the end, concerning the winepresses; for Asaph, a psalm.

2 Exult in God our helper; shout to the God of Iakob;

3 take up a psalm and give a tambourine, a delightful psaltery with a lyre;

4 blow a trumpet at the new moon, on the marked day of our feast;

5 because it is an ordinance for Israel and a judgment for the God of Iakob.

6 He established it as a testimony in Ioseph when he went out from the land of Egypt; he heard a tongue that he did not know;

7 he removed his back from burdens; his hands served in the basket.

8 In affliction you called upon me, and I delivered you; I heard you in the hidden place of a storm; I tested you at water of contradiction. Interlude.

9 Hear, my people, and I testify to you; Israel, if you hear me,

10 there will be no new god among you, nor will you bow to a foreign god;

11 for I am the Lord your God who brought you up from the land of Egypt; widen your mouth, and I will fill it.

12 And my people did not hear my voice, and Israel did not attend to me;

13 and I sent them away according to the practices of their hearts; they will walk in their practices.

14 If my people had heard me, if Israel had walked in my ways,

15 in no time I would have humbled their enemies and laid my hand upon those afflicting them.

16 The enemies of the Lord lied to him, and their time will be forever.

17 And he fed them from the fat of wheat and filled them with honey from a rock.

Chapter 81

1 A psalm for Asaph. God stood in an assembly of gods, and in the midst he judges gods:

2 Until when do you judge injustice and accept faces of sinners? Interlude.

3 Judge an orphan and a poor one; justify a humbled and needy one;

4 rescue a needy and poor one; deliver from a sinner's hand.

5 They did not know or understand; they walk in darkness; all the foundations of the earth will be shaken.

6 I said: You are gods and all sons of the Most High;

7 but you die like humans and fall like one of the rulers.

8 Arise, God; judge the earth, because you will inherit among all the nations.

Chapter 82

1 A song of a psalm for Asaph.

2 God, who will be likened to you? Do not be silent or grow calm, God;

3 because, behold, your enemies made a noise, and those hating you lifted a head;

4 against your people they cunningly devised a plan, and they counseled against your holy ones;

5 they said: Come, and let us destroy them from being a nation, and the name of Israel will certainly no longer be remembered.

6 Because they counseled together in concord; they made a covenant against you,

7 the dwellings of the Idumaians and the Ismaelites, Moab and the Agarenes,

8 Gebal and Ammon and Amalek and foreigners with those inhabiting Tyros;

9 for indeed Assour also joined them; they became a support to the sons of Lot. Interlude.

10 Do to them as to Madiam and Sisara, as Iabin at the torrent Kison;

11 they were destroyed in Aendor; they became like dung for the earth.

12 Make their rulers like Oreb and Zeb and Zebee and Salmana, all their rulers,

13 who said: Let us inherit the sanctuary of God for ourselves.

14 My God, make them like a wheel, like straw before the face of wind;

15 like fire which will burn through a forest, as though a flame might burn mountains,

16 thus you will pursue them with your storm and trouble them with your wrath.

17 Fill their faces with dishonor, and they will seek your name, Lord.

18 Let them be ashamed and troubled for the age of the age, and let them be disgraced and perish,

19 and let them know that your name is Lord; you alone are Most High over all the earth.

Chapter 83

1 For the end, concerning the winepresses; for the sons of Kore, a psalm.

2 How beloved are your dwellings, Lord of powers.

3 My soul longs and fails for the courts of the Lord; my heart and my flesh exulted in the living God.

4 For indeed a sparrow found itself a house, and a turtledove a nest for herself, where she will put her young, your altars, Lord of powers, my king and my God.

5 Blessed are those dwelling in your house; for the ages of the ages they will praise you. Interlude.

6 Blessed is a man whose support is from you, Lord; he arranged ascents in his heart

7 in the valley of weeping, to the place he established; for indeed the lawgiver will give blessings.

8 They will go from strength to strength; the God of gods will appear in Sion.

9 Lord, God of powers, hear my prayer; give ear, God of Iakob. Interlude.

10 Our defender, see, God, and look upon the face of your anointed one.

11 Because one day in your courts is better than thousands; I chose to be cast aside in the house of God rather than dwell in dwellings of sinners.

12 Because the Lord God loves mercy and truth; he will give grace and glory; the Lord will not deprive those walking in innocence of good things.

13 Lord of powers, blessed is the human hoping in you.

Chapter 84

1 For the end; for the sons of Kore, a psalm.

2 You took pleasure in your land, Lord; you turned back the captivity of Iakob;

3 you forgave the lawless deeds of your people; you covered all their sins. Interlude.

4 You stopped all your wrath; you turned away from the wrath of your fury.

5 Turn us back, God of our salvations, and turn your fury away from us.

6 Surely you will not be angry with us forever, or extend your wrath from generation to generation?

7 God, turning back, you will give us life, and your people will rejoice in you.

8 Show us your mercy, Lord, and may you give us your salvation.

9 I will hear what the Lord God will speak within me, because he will speak peace upon his people and upon his holy ones and upon those turning their heart toward him.

10 But his salvation is near those fearing him, that glory may dwell in our land.

11 Mercy and truth met; righteousness and peace kissed;

12 truth rose from the earth, and righteousness leaned down from heaven.

13 For indeed the Lord will give goodness, and our land will give its fruit;

14 righteousness will go before him and set his steps upon a way.

Chapter 85

1 A prayer for Dauid. Incline your ear, Lord, and hear me, because I am poor and needy.

2 Guard my soul, because I am holy; save your slave, my God, the one hoping in you.

3 Have mercy on me, Lord, because I will cry out to you all day.

4 Gladden the soul of your slave, because toward you, Lord, I lifted my soul.

5 Because you, Lord, are good and gentle and abundant in mercy to all those calling upon you.

6 Give ear, Lord, to my prayer, and attend to the voice of my supplication.

7 On the day of my affliction I cried out to you, because you heard me.

8 There is none like you among gods, Lord, and there is nothing according to your works.

9 All the nations that you made will come and bow before you, Lord, and glorify your name,

10 because you are great and do wonders; you alone are the great God.

11 Guide me, Lord, in your way, and I will walk in your truth; let my heart rejoice to fear your name.

12 I will acknowledge you, Lord my God, with my whole heart, and glorify your name forever,

13 because your mercy is great upon me, and you delivered my soul from the lowest Hades.

14 God, lawless ones rose against me, and an assembly of mighty ones sought my soul and did not set you before them.

15 And you, Lord God, are compassionate and merciful, patient and abundant in mercy and true.

16 Look upon me and have mercy on me; give your strength to your servant and save the son of your maidservant.

17 Make with me a sign for good, and let those hating me see and be ashamed, because you, Lord, helped me and comforted me.

Chapter 86

1 For the sons of Kore, a psalm of a song. His foundations are in the holy mountains;

2 the Lord loves the gates of Sion more than all the dwellings of Iakob.

3 Glorious things were spoken concerning you, city of God. Interlude.

4 I will remember Raab and Babylon to those knowing me; and behold, foreigners and Tyros and a people of Ethiopians, these were born there.

5 Mother Sion, a human will say, and a human was born in her, and the Most High himself founded her.

6 The Lord will recount in a register of peoples and rulers these who have been born in her. Interlude.

7 As of all rejoicing, the dwelling is in you.

Chapter 87

1 A song of a psalm for the sons of Kore; for the end, concerning maeleth, to respond; of understanding, for Aiman the Israelite.

2 Lord, God of my salvation, by day I cried out and by night before you;

3 let my prayer enter before you; incline your ear to my supplication, Lord.

4 Because my soul was filled with evils, and my life drew near to Hades;

5 I was counted with those descending into a pit; I became like a human without help, free among the dead,

6 like wounded ones cast away, sleeping in a grave, whom you remembered no longer, and they were thrust away from your hand.

7 They placed me in a lowest pit, in dark places and in a shadow of death.

8 Your fury rested upon me, and you brought all your billows upon me. Interlude.

9 You distanced my acquaintances from me; they made me an abomination to themselves; I was handed over and did not go out.

10 My eyes grew weak from poverty; I cried out to you, Lord, all day; I spread out my hands toward you:

11 Surely you will not do wonders for the dead? Or will physicians raise them, and they will acknowledge you?

12 Surely someone will not recount your mercy in a grave and your truth in destruction?

13 Surely your wonders will not be known in the darkness, and your righteousness in a forgotten land?

14 And I cried out to you, Lord, and in the morning my prayer will go before you.

15 Why, Lord, do you thrust away my soul, turn your face away from me?

16 I am poor and in toils from my youth, but having been exalted, I was humbled and utterly at a loss.

17 Your wraths passed over me, and your terrors greatly troubled me;

18 they circled me like water all day; they encompassed me together.

19 You distanced friend and neighbor from me, and my acquaintances from misery.

Chapter 88

1 Of understanding, for Aithan the Israelite.

2 Your mercies, Lord, I will sing forever; to generation and generation I will report your truth with my mouth,

3 because you said: Forever mercy will be built; in the heavens your truth will be prepared.

4 I made a covenant with my chosen ones; I swore to Dauid my slave:

5 Forever I will prepare your seed and build your throne to generation and generation. Interlude.

6 The heavens will acknowledge your wonders, Lord, and your truth in an assembly of holy ones.

7 Because who in clouds will be equal to the Lord, and who among sons of God will be likened to the Lord?

8 God is glorified in a council of holy ones, great and fearsome over all those around him.

9 Lord, God of powers, who is like you? You are mighty, Lord, and your truth is around you.

10 You rule the strength of the sea, and you calm the tossing of its waves.

11 You humbled a proud one like a wounded one, and with the arm of your strength you scattered your enemies.

12 The heavens are yours, and the earth is yours; you founded the inhabited world and its fullness.

13 You created the north and seas; Thabor and Ermon will exult in your name.

14 Yours is the arm with might; let your hand be strengthened; let your right hand be exalted.

15 Righteousness and judgment are the preparation of your throne; mercy and truth will go before your face.

16 Blessed is the people knowing a shout; Lord, they will walk in the light of your face, 17 and exult in your name all day, and be exalted in your righteousness.

18 Because you are the boast of their strength, and in your good pleasure our horn will be exalted.

19 Because support belongs to the Lord, and to the Holy One of Israel, our king.

20 Then you spoke in a vision to your holy ones and said: I placed help upon a mighty one; I exalted a chosen one from my people;

21 I found Dauid my slave; with my holy oil I anointed him.

22 For my hand will support him, and my arm will strengthen him;

23 an enemy will not gain advantage over him, and a son of lawlessness will not continue to harm him;

24 and I will cut down his enemies from before his face and rout those hating him.

25 And my truth and my mercy are with him, and in my name his horn will be exalted;

26 and I will place his hand in a sea and his right hand in rivers.

27 He will call upon me: You are my father, my God and supporter of my salvation;

28 and I will make him firstborn, high among the kings of the earth.

29 Forever I will keep my mercy for him, and my covenant is faithful to him;

30 and I will establish his seed for the age of the age, and his throne like the days of heaven.

31 If his sons abandon my law and do not walk in my judgments,

32 if they profane my ordinances and do not keep my commandments,

33 I will visit their lawless deeds with a rod and their sins with scourges,

34 but I will certainly not scatter my mercy away from him, nor will I act unjustly in my truth,

35 nor will I profane my covenant, and I will certainly not reject the things proceeding through my lips.

36 Once I swore in my holy place: If I lie to Dauid—

37 His seed will remain forever, and his throne like the sun before me,

38 and like the moon established forever; and the witness in heaven is faithful. Interlude.

39 But you rejected and despised; you put off your anointed one;

40 you overturned the covenant of your slave; you profaned his sanctuary to the ground.

41 You pulled down all his fences; you made his fortifications a terror;

42 all those traveling a road plundered him; he became a reproach to his neighbors.

43 You exalted the right hand of his enemies; you gladdened all his enemies;

44 you turned away the help of his sword and did not support him in the war.

45 You removed him from purification; you broke his throne down to the ground;

46 you shortened the days of his time; you poured shame upon him. Interlude.

47 Until when, Lord, will you turn away to the end; will your wrath be kindled like fire?

48 Remember what my existence is; for surely you did not create all the sons of humans in vain?

49 Who is a human who will live and not see death, who will deliver his soul from the hand of Hades? Interlude.

50 Where are your ancient mercies, Lord, which you swore to Dauid in your truth?

51 Remember, Lord, the reproach of your slaves, which I bore in my bosom, of many nations,

52 with which your enemies reproached, Lord, with which they reproached the exchange of your anointed one.

53 Blessed is the Lord forever. May it be, may it be. – –

Chapter 89

1 A prayer of Moyses, a human of God. Lord, you became a refuge for us in generation and generation;

2 before mountains came to be and the earth and inhabited world were formed, and from the age to the age, you are.

3 Do not turn a human back to humiliation; and you said: Turn back, sons of humans.

4 Because a thousand years in your eyes are like yesterday's day which passed, and a watch in the night.

5 Their things of no account will be years. In the morning may he pass away like green grass,

6 in the morning may he blossom and pass away, in the evening may he fall off, grow hard and dry.

7 Because we failed in your wrath and were troubled in your fury.

8 You placed our lawless deeds before you; our lifetime is in the illumination of your face.

9 Because all our days failed, and in your wrath we failed; they pondered our years like a spider.

10 The days of our years, in them are seventy years, but if in strength, eighty years, and most of them toil and pain; because gentleness came upon us, and we will be disciplined.

11 Who knows the strength of your wrath, and from fear of you, your fury?

12 Thus make known how to number your right hand, and those fettered in heart in wisdom.

13 Turn back, Lord; until when? And be comforted concerning your slaves.

14 We were filled in the morning with your mercy and exulted and rejoiced in all our days;

15 we rejoiced in return for the days in which you humbled us, the years in which we saw evils.

16 And look upon your slaves and your works, and guide their sons,

17 and let the splendor of the Lord our God be upon us, and direct the works of our hands upon us.

Chapter 90

1 Praise of a song for Dauid. The one dwelling in the help of the Most High will lodge in the shelter of the God of heaven.

2 He will say to the Lord: You are my supporter and my refuge, my God; I will hope in him,

3 because he will deliver me from a trap of hunters and from a troubling word.

4 With his back he will overshadow you, and beneath his wings you will hope; his truth will encircle you with a weapon.

5 You will not be afraid of a fear by night, of an arrow flying by day,

6 of a thing passing through in darkness, of calamity and a midday demon.

7 A thousand will fall from your side and ten thousand from your right, but it will not approach you;

8 but with your eyes you will perceive and see the repayment of sinners.

9 Because you, Lord, are my hope; you made the Most High your refuge.

10 Evils will not approach you, and a scourge will not approach your dwelling,

11 because he will command his angels concerning you, to guard you in all your ways;

12 upon hands they will lift you, lest you strike your foot against a stone;

13 upon an asp and a basilisk you will step, and you will trample a lion and a dragon.

14 Because he hoped in me, I will also deliver him; I will shelter him, because he knew my name.

15 He will call upon me, and I will hear him; I am with him in affliction, and I will deliver and glorify him.

16 I will fill him with length of days and show him my salvation.

Chapter 91

1 A psalm of a song, for the day of the sabbath.

2 It is good to acknowledge the Lord and sing to your name, Most High,

3 to announce your mercy in the morning and your truth by night,

4 with a ten-stringed psaltery, with a song on a lyre.

5 Because you gladdened me, Lord, with your deed, and in the works of your hands I will exult.

6 How your works were magnified, Lord; your reasonings became very deep.

7 A foolish man will not know, and a senseless one will not understand these things.

8 When sinners sprouted like grass, and all those working lawlessness leaned down, so that they might be destroyed for the age of the age.

9 But you are Most High forever, Lord;

10 because, behold, your enemies will perish, and all those working lawlessness will be scattered,

11 and my horn will be exalted like that of a one-horned beast, and my old age in rich oil,

12 and my eye looked upon my enemies, and my ear will hear among those rising against me, doing evil.

13 A righteous one will blossom like a palm; like the cedar in Libanos he will multiply.

14 Planted in the house of the Lord, they will blossom in the courts of our God;

15 they will still multiply in rich old age and will be flourishing,

16 to announce that the Lord my God is upright and there is no injustice in him.

Chapter 92

1 For the day before the sabbath, when the earth has been settled; praise of a song for Dauid. The Lord reigned; he clothed himself with magnificence; the Lord clothed himself with strength and girded himself; for indeed he made the inhabited world firm, which will not be shaken.

2 Your throne is ready from then; you are from the age.

3 The rivers lifted up, Lord; the rivers lifted up their voices;

4 from the voices of many waters the billows of the sea are marvelous; marvelous in the heights is the Lord.

5 Your testimonies were made very faithful; holiness befits your house, Lord, for length of days.

Chapter 93

1 A psalm for Dauid, on the fourth day of the week. The God of vengeances is the Lord; the God of vengeances spoke boldly.

2 Be exalted, you who judge the earth; repay a repayment to the arrogant.

3 Until when will sinners, Lord, until when will sinners boast,

4 utter and speak injustice; will all those working lawlessness speak?

5 They humbled your people, Lord, and harmed your inheritance;

6 they killed a widow and a sojourner and murdered orphans,

7 and said: The Lord will not see, nor will the God of Iakob understand.

8 Understand, then, foolish ones among the people, and, fools, at last be sensible.

9 Does not the one planting the ear hear, or does the one forming the eye not perceive?

10 Will not the one disciplining nations reprove, the one teaching a human knowledge?

11 The Lord knows the reasonings of humans, that they are vain.

12 Blessed is a human whom you discipline, Lord, and teach from your law,

13 to give him calm from evil days, until a pit is dug for the sinner.

14 Because the Lord will not reject his people and will not abandon his inheritance,

15 until righteousness returns to judgment, and all the upright in heart follow it. Interlude.

16 Who will arise for me against those doing evil, or who will stand with me against those working lawlessness?

17 If the Lord had not helped me, my soul would soon have sojourned in Hades.

18 If I said: My foot has been shaken, your mercy, Lord, helps me;

19 Lord, according to the multitude of my pains in my heart, your comforts loved my soul.

20 Surely a throne of lawlessness will not be joined to you, the one forming toil by ordinance?

21 They will hunt against a righteous one's soul and condemn innocent blood.

22 And the Lord became a refuge for me, and my God a helper of my hope;

23 and he will repay them their lawlessness, and according to their wickedness the Lord our God will make them vanish.

Chapter 94

1 Praise of a song for Dauid. Come, let us exult in the Lord; let us shout to God our savior;

2 let us come before his face with acknowledgment and shout to him with psalms.

3 Because the Lord is a great God and a great king over all the gods;

4 because in his hand are the ends of the earth, and the heights of the mountains are his;

5 because the sea is his, and he made it, and his hands formed the dry land.

6 Come, let us bow and fall before him and weep before the Lord who made us;

7 because he is our God, and we are a people of his pasture and sheep of his hand. Today, if you hear his voice,

8 do not harden your hearts as in the provocation to bitterness, on the day of testing in the wilderness,

9 where your fathers tested, tried and saw my works.

10 Forty years I was vexed with that generation and said: They always stray in heart, and they did not know my ways,

11 as I swore in my wrath: They shall not enter my rest.

Chapter 95

1 When the house was being built after the captivity; a song for Dauid. Sing a new song to the Lord; sing to the Lord, all the earth;

2 sing to the Lord; bless his name; announce his salvation as good news day by day;

3 announce his glory among the nations, his wonders among all the peoples.

4 Because the Lord is great and greatly praiseworthy; he is fearsome over all the gods;

5 because all the gods of the nations are demons, but the Lord made the heavens;

6 acknowledgment and beauty are before him, holiness and magnificence in his sanctuary.

7 Bring to the Lord, families of the nations; bring to the Lord glory and honor;

8 bring to the Lord glory for his name; take up sacrifices and enter his courts;

9 bow to the Lord in his holy court; let all the earth be shaken before his face.

10 Say among the nations: The Lord reigned; for indeed he established the inhabited world, which will not be shaken; he will judge peoples in uprightness.

11 Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth exult; let the sea and its fullness be shaken;

12 the plains and all the things in them will rejoice; then all the trees of the forest will exult

13 before the face of the Lord, because he comes, because he comes to judge the earth; he will judge the inhabited world in righteousness and peoples in his truth.

Chapter 96

1 For Dauid, when his land is being established. The Lord reigned; let the earth exult; let many islands rejoice.

2 Cloud and gloom are around him; righteousness and judgment are the establishment of his throne.

3 Fire will go before him and burn his enemies around him;

4 his lightnings shone upon the inhabited world; the earth saw and was shaken.

5 The mountains melted like wax before the face of the Lord, before the face of the Lord of all the earth.

6 The heavens announced his righteousness, and all the peoples saw his glory.

7 Let all those bowing to carved things, those boasting in their idols, be ashamed; bow to him, all his angels.

8 Sion heard and rejoiced, and the daughters of Ioudaia exulted because of your judgments, Lord;

9 because you are the Lord Most High over all the earth; you were greatly exalted above all the gods.

10 Those loving the Lord, hate evil; the Lord guards the souls of his holy ones; from the hand of sinners he will deliver them.

11 Light rose for the righteous one, and gladness for the upright in heart.

12 Rejoice in the Lord, righteous ones, and acknowledge the remembrance of his holiness.

Chapter 97

1 A psalm for Dauid. Sing a new song to the Lord, because the Lord did marvelous things; his right hand and his holy arm saved for him.

2 The Lord made his salvation known; before the nations he revealed his righteousness.

3 He remembered his mercy to Iakob and his truth to the house of Israel; all the ends of the earth saw the salvation of our God.

4 Shout to God, all the earth; sing and exult and make music;

5 sing to the Lord with a lyre, with a lyre and the voice of a psalm;

6 with beaten trumpets and the sound of a horn trumpet shout before the king, the Lord.

7 Let the sea and its fullness be shaken, the inhabited world and those dwelling in it;

8 rivers will clap a hand together; the mountains will exult,

9 because he comes to judge the earth; he will judge the inhabited world in righteousness and peoples in uprightness.

Chapter 98

1 A psalm for Dauid. The Lord reigned; let peoples be angry; the one sitting upon the cheroubin, let the earth be shaken.

2 The Lord is great in Sion and high over all the peoples;

3 let them acknowledge your great name, because it is fearsome and holy.

4 And a king's honor loves judgment; you prepared upright things; you worked judgment and righteousness in Iakob.

5 Exalt the Lord our God and bow to the footstool of his feet, because he is holy.

6 Moyses and Aaron among his priests, and Samouel among those calling upon his name; they called upon the Lord, and he heard them;

7 in a pillar of cloud he spoke to them; they kept his testimonies and the ordinances he gave them.

8 Lord our God, you heard them; God, you became gracious to them, and avenged all their practices.

9 Exalt the Lord our God and bow toward his holy mountain, because the Lord our God is holy.

Chapter 99

1 A psalm for acknowledgment. Shout to the Lord, all the earth;

2 serve the Lord in gladness; enter before him in exultation.

3 Know that the Lord, he is God; he made us, and not we, his people and sheep of his pasture.

4 Enter his gates with acknowledgment, his courts with hymns; acknowledge him; praise his name,

5 because the Lord is good, his mercy is forever, and his truth to generation and generation.

Chapter 100

1 For Dauid, a psalm. Mercy and judgment I will sing to you, Lord;

2 I will make music and understand in a blameless way; when will you come to me? I walked in the innocence of my heart in the midst of my house.

3 I did not set a lawless thing before my eyes; I hated those doing transgressions;

4 a crooked heart did not cling to me; when the evil one turned away from me, I did not know him.

5 The one secretly speaking against his neighbor, this one I pursued; one with an arrogant eye and an insatiable heart, with this one I did not eat.

6 My eyes were upon the faithful of the earth, that they might sit with me; one walking in a blameless way, this one ministered to me.

7 One practicing arrogance did not dwell in the midst of my house; one speaking unjust things did not prosper before my eyes.

8 In the mornings I killed all the sinners of the earth, to destroy from the city of the Lord all those working lawlessness.

Chapter 101

1 A prayer for the poor one when he grows weary and pours out his supplication before the Lord.

2 Hear my prayer, Lord, and let my cry come to you.

3 Do not turn your face away from me; on whatever day I am afflicted, incline your ear toward me; on whatever day I call upon you, hear me quickly.

4 Because my days failed like smoke, and my bones were roasted together like a roasting pan.

5 My heart was struck like grass and dried up, because I forgot to eat my bread.

6 From the voice of my groaning my bone clung to my flesh.

7 I was likened to a wilderness pelican; I became like a night raven on a house site;

8 I kept awake and became like a sparrow alone upon a roof.

9 All day my enemies reproached me, and those praising me swore against me.

10 Because I ate ashes like bread and mixed my drink with weeping,

11 before the face of your wrath and your fury, because, lifting me, you dashed me down.

12 My days declined like a shadow, and I dried up like grass.

13 But you, Lord, remain forever, and your remembrance to generation and generation.

14 You will arise and pity Sion, because it is time to pity her, because the time has come;

15 because your slaves took pleasure in her stones and will pity her dust.

16 And the nations will fear the name of the Lord, and all the kings of the earth your glory,

17 because the Lord will build Sion and appear in his glory.

18 He looked upon the prayer of the humble and did not despise their supplication.

19 Let this be written for another generation, and a people being created will praise the Lord,

20 because he leaned out from his holy height; the Lord looked from heaven upon the earth,

21 to hear the groaning of those fettered, to release the sons of those put to death,

22 to announce in Sion the name of the Lord and his praise in Ierousalem,

23 when peoples gather together, and kingdoms, to serve the Lord.

24 He answered him in the way of his strength: Announce to me the fewness of my days;

25 do not take me up halfway through my days; your years are in a generation of generations.

26 In the beginning you, Lord, founded the earth, and the heavens are works of your hands;

27 they will perish, but you will remain, and all will grow old like a garment, and like a covering you will change them, and they will be changed;

28 but you are the same, and your years will not fail.

29 The sons of your slaves will dwell, and their seed will be established forever.

Chapter 102

1 For Dauid. Bless the Lord, my soul, and, all things within me, his holy name;

2 bless the Lord, my soul, and do not forget all his repayments;

3 the one graciously forgiving all your lawless deeds, the one healing all your diseases;

4 the one redeeming your life from corruption, the one crowning you with mercy and compassions;

5 the one filling your desire with good things; your youth will be renewed like an eagle's.

6 The Lord does deeds of mercy and judgment for all those wronged.

7 He made his ways known to Moyses, his wishes to the sons of Israel.

8 Compassionate and merciful is the Lord, patient and abundant in mercy;

9 he will not be angry to the end or bear resentment forever;

10 he did not act toward us according to our sins or repay us according to our lawless deeds,

11 because according to the height of heaven from the earth the Lord strengthened his mercy upon those fearing him;

12 as far as the east is from the west, he distanced our lawless deeds from us.

13 Just as a father pities sons, the Lord pitied those fearing him,

14 because he knew our formation; remember that we are dust.

15 A human, his days are like grass; like a flower of the field, thus he will blossom;

16 because a wind passed through him, and he will not exist and will no longer recognize his place.

17 But the mercy of the Lord is from the age and to the age upon those fearing him, and his righteousness upon sons of sons, 18 for those keeping his covenant and remembering his commandments to do them.

19 The Lord prepared his throne in heaven, and his kingdom rules all things.

20 Bless the Lord, all his angels, mighty in strength, doing his word, to hear the voice of his words;

21 bless the Lord, all his powers, his ministers doing his will;

22 bless the Lord, all his works in every place of his dominion; bless the Lord, my soul.

Chapter 103

1 For Dauid. Bless the Lord, my soul. Lord my God, you were greatly magnified; you clothed yourself with acknowledgment and magnificence,

2 wrapping yourself in light like a garment, stretching out heaven like a hide;

3 the one roofing his upper chambers in waters, the one making clouds his mount, the one walking upon wings of winds;

4 the one making his angels spirits and his ministers burning fire.

5 He founded the earth upon its security; it will not be tilted for the age of the age.

6 An abyss, like a garment, is his covering; waters will stand upon the mountains;

7 at your rebuke they will flee; at the voice of your thunder they will be afraid.

8 Mountains rise and plains descend to the place you founded for them;

9 you placed a boundary which they will not pass, nor will they return to cover the earth.

10 The one sending out springs in ravines; waters will pass between the mountains;

11 they will give drink to all the wild beasts of the field; wild asses will receive for their thirst;

12 upon them the birds of heaven will dwell; from the midst of the rocks they will give a voice.

13 Watering mountains from his upper chambers; from the fruit of your works the earth will be filled.

14 Making grass sprout for the beasts and green plants for the service of humans, to bring bread out of the earth;

15 and wine gladdens a human's heart, to brighten a face with oil, and bread supports a human's heart.

16 The trees of the plain will be filled, the cedars of Libanos which he planted;

17 there sparrows will nest; the house of the heron leads them.

18 The high mountains are for the deer; a rock is a refuge for the rock rabbits.

19 He made a moon for seasons; the sun knew its setting.

20 You placed darkness, and night came to be; in it all the wild beasts of the forest will pass,

21 young lions roaring to seize and seek food for themselves from God.

22 The sun rose, and they gathered, and they will lie down in their enclosures;

23 a human will go out to his work and to his labor until evening.

24 How your works were magnified, Lord; you made all things in wisdom; the earth was filled with your creation.

25 This great and spacious sea, there are creeping things without number, small living creatures with great ones;

26 there ships pass, this dragon which you formed to play with him.

27 All expect you to give them food at the proper time.

28 When you give to them, they will gather; but when you open your hand, all things will be filled with goodness.

29 But when you turn away your face, they will be troubled; you will take away their spirit, and they will fail and return to their dust.

30 You will send forth your spirit, and they will be created, and you will renew the face of the earth.

31 Let the glory of the Lord be forever; the Lord will rejoice in his works;

32 the one looking upon the earth and making it tremble, the one touching the mountains, and they smoke.

33 I will sing to the Lord in my life; I will make music to my God as long as I exist;

34 may my discourse be sweet to him, but I will rejoice in the Lord.

35 May sinners fail from the earth, and lawless ones, so that they do not exist. Bless the Lord, my soul.

Chapter 104

1 Alleluia. Acknowledge the Lord and call upon his name; report his works among the nations;

2 sing to him and make music to him; recount all his wonders.

3 Be praised in his holy name; let the heart of those seeking the Lord rejoice;

4 seek the Lord and be strengthened; seek his face continually.

5 Remember his wonders which he did, his portents and the judgments of his mouth,

6 seed of Abraam, his slaves, sons of Iakob, his chosen ones.

7 He is the Lord our God; his judgments are in all the earth.

8 He remembered his covenant forever, the word he commanded for a thousand generations,

9 which he made with Abraam, and his oath to Isaak,

10 and he established it for Iakob as an ordinance and for Israel as an everlasting covenant,

11 saying: To you I will give the land of Chanaan, a measured portion of your inheritance.

12 When they were few in number, very few and sojourners in it,

13 and they passed from nation to nation, from a kingdom to another people;

14 he did not permit a human to wrong them, and reproved kings on their behalf:

15 Do not touch my anointed ones, and do not act wickedly against my prophets.

16 And he called a famine upon the land; he shattered every support of bread;
17 he sent a human before them; Ioseph was sold as a slave.
18 They humbled his feet in fetters; his soul passed through iron
19 until his word came; the utterance of the Lord refined him by fire.
20 A king sent and released him, a ruler of peoples, and let him go;
21 he made him lord of his house and ruler of all his possessions,
22 to discipline his rulers as himself and make his elders wise.
23 And Israel entered Egypt, and Iakob sojourned in the land of Cham;
24 and he increased his people greatly and strengthened them beyond their enemies.
25 He turned their heart to hate his people, to deal deceitfully with his slaves.
26 He sent forth Moyses his slave, Aaron whom he chose;
27 he placed in them the words of his signs and of his portents in the land of Cham.
28 He sent forth darkness and darkened, and they provoked his words to bitterness.
29 He turned their waters into blood and killed their fish.
30 Their land swarmed with frogs in the chambers of their kings.
31 He spoke, and a dog-fly came, and gnats in all their boundaries.
32 He made their rains hail, burning fire in their land,
33 and struck their vines and their fig trees and shattered every tree of their boundary.
34 He spoke, and a locust came, and a young locust without number,
35 and ate all the grass in their land and ate the fruit of their land.
36 And he struck every firstborn in their land, the firstfruits of all their labor,
37 and brought them out with silver and gold, and among their tribes there was no one weak.
38 Egypt rejoiced at their departure, because fear of them fell upon them.
39 He spread out a cloud as shelter for them, and fire to illuminate the night for them.
40 They asked, and a quail came, and he filled them with bread of heaven;
41 he broke open a rock, and waters flowed; rivers went through waterless places.
42 Because he remembered his holy word to Abraam his slave,
43 and brought out his people in exultation and his chosen ones in gladness.
44 And he gave them lands of nations, and they inherited labors of peoples,
45 so that they might keep his ordinances and seek out his law.

Chapter 105

1 Alleluia. Acknowledge the Lord, because he is good, because his mercy is forever.

2 Who will speak the mighty deeds of the Lord, make all his praises heard?

3 Blessed are those keeping judgment and doing righteousness at every time.

4 Remember us, Lord, in the good pleasure of your people; visit us with your salvation,

5 to see in the goodness of your chosen ones, to rejoice in the gladness of your nation, to be praised with your inheritance.

6 We sinned with our fathers; we acted lawlessly; we acted unjustly.

7 Our fathers in Egypt did not understand your wonders, did not remember the multitude of your mercy, and provoked bitterness as they went up in the Red Sea.

8 And he saved them because of his name, to make his might known;

9 and he rebuked the Red Sea, and it dried up, and he guided them in an abyss as in a wilderness;

10 and he saved them from the hand of those hating them and redeemed them from an enemy's hand;

11 and water covered those afflicting them; not one of them remained.

12 And they believed in his words and sang his praise.

13 They hastened, they forgot his works; they did not wait for his counsel;

14 and they desired a desire in the wilderness and tested God in a waterless place.

15 And he gave them their request and sent fullness into their souls.

16 And they angered Moyses in the camp, and Aaron, the holy one of the Lord;

17 the earth opened and swallowed Dathan and covered the assembly of Abiron;

18 and fire was kindled in their assembly; a flame burned sinners.

19 And they made a calf in Choreb and bowed to the carved thing;

20 and they exchanged their glory for a likeness of a calf eating grass.

21 They forgot God who saved them, who did great things in Egypt,

22 marvelous things in the land of Cham, fearsome things upon the Red Sea.

23 And he spoke of destroying them, had not Moyses his chosen one stood in the breach before him, to turn away his wrath so as not to destroy.

24 And they despised a desirable land; they did not believe his word;

25 and they grumbled in their dwellings; they did not hear the voice of the Lord.

26 And he lifted his hand against them, to cast them down in the wilderness,

27 and to cast their seed down among the nations and scatter them in the lands.

28 And they were initiated to Beelphegor and ate sacrifices of the dead;

29 and they provoked him with their practices, and the fall multiplied among them.

30 And Phinees stood and made atonement, and the breaking ceased;

31 and it was counted to him as righteousness, to generation and generation forever.

32 And they angered him at water of contradiction, and Moyses was harmed because of them,

33 because they provoked his spirit to bitterness, and he spoke distinctly with his lips.

34 They did not destroy the nations which the Lord told them,

35 and they mingled among the nations and learned their works;

36 and they served their carved things, and it became a stumbling block for them;

37 and they sacrificed their sons and their daughters to demons,

38 and poured out innocent blood, blood of their sons and daughters whom they sacrificed to the carved things of Chanaan, and the land was bloodied with murder in the bloods,

39 and defiled in their works, and they prostituted themselves in their practices.

40 And the Lord was angry with fury against his people and abhorred his inheritance;

41 and he handed them over into hands of nations, and those hating them ruled them;

42 and their enemies afflicted them, and they were humbled beneath their hands.

43 Often he delivered them, but they provoked him to bitterness with their counsel and were humbled in their lawless deeds.

44 And he saw when they were afflicted, when he heard their supplication;

45 and he remembered his covenant and relented according to the multitude of his mercy,

46 and gave them to compassions before all those who took them captive.

47 Save us, Lord our God, and gather us from the nations, to acknowledge your holy name, to boast in your praise.

48 Blessed is the Lord, the God of Israel, from the age and to the age. And all the people will say: May it be, may it be. – –

Chapter 106

1 Alleluia. Acknowledge the Lord, because he is good, because his mercy is forever;

2 let those redeemed by the Lord say it, whom he redeemed from an enemy's hand.

3 From the lands he gathered them, from east and west and north and sea.

4 They wandered in the wilderness, in a waterless place; they did not find a way to a city of habitation,

5 hungering and thirsting; their soul failed within them;

6 and they cried out to the Lord when they were afflicted, and he delivered them from their distresses,

7 and guided them into an upright way, to go to a city of habitation.

8 Let them acknowledge to the Lord his mercies and his wonders for the sons of humans,

9 because he filled an empty soul and filled a hungry soul with good things. –

10 Those sitting in darkness and a shadow of death, fettered in poverty and iron,

11 because they provoked the utterances of God to bitterness and provoked the counsel of the Most High,

12 and their heart was humbled in toils; they grew weak, and there was no one helping;

13 and they cried out to the Lord when they were afflicted, and he saved them from their distresses,

14 and brought them out of darkness and a shadow of death and broke open their bonds.

15 Let them acknowledge to the Lord his mercies and his wonders for the sons of humans,

16 because he shattered bronze gates and broke iron bars. –

17 He took hold of them out of the way of their lawlessness, for because of their lawless deeds they were humbled;

18 their soul abhorred every food, and they approached as far as the gates of death;

19 and they cried out to the Lord when they were afflicted, and he saved them from their distresses;

20 he sent his word and healed them and delivered them from their corruptions.

21 Let them acknowledge to the Lord his mercies and his wonders for the sons of humans,

22 and sacrifice a sacrifice of praise and declare his works in exultation. –

23 Those descending to the sea in ships, doing work in many waters,

24 they saw the works of the Lord and his wonders in the deep;

25 he spoke, and a wind of storm arose, and its waves were exalted;

26 they rise as far as the heavens and descend as far as the abysses; their soul melted in evils;

27 they were troubled, they were shaken like one drunk, and all their wisdom was swallowed;

28 and they cried out to the Lord when they were afflicted, and he brought them out of their distresses,

29 and commanded the storm, and it settled into a breeze, and its waves were silent;

30 and they rejoiced because they were quiet, and he guided them to a harbor of their desire.

31 Let them acknowledge to the Lord his mercies and his wonders for the sons of humans;

32 let them exalt him in an assembly of a people and praise him in a seat of elders. –

33 He made rivers into a wilderness and outlets of waters into thirst,

34 a fruitful land into brine, because of the evil of those dwelling in it.

35 He made a wilderness into lakes of waters and a waterless land into outlets of waters,

36 and settled hungry ones there, and they established a city of habitation,

37 and sowed fields and planted vineyards and made fruit of produce,

38 and he blessed them, and they were greatly multiplied, and he did not diminish their beasts.

39 And they became few and were harmed by affliction of evils and pain.

40 Contempt was poured out upon rulers, and he made them wander in an untrodden place and not a road.

41 And he helped a needy one out of poverty and made families like sheep.

42 Upright ones will see and rejoice, and all lawlessness will stop its mouth.

43 Who is wise and will keep these things, and they will understand the mercies of the Lord?

Chapter 107

1 A song of a psalm for Dauid.

2 My heart is ready, God, my heart is ready; I will sing and make music in my glory.

3 Awake, psaltery and lyre; I will awake at dawn.

4 I will acknowledge you among peoples, Lord, and sing to you among nations,

5 because your mercy is great above the heavens, and your truth as far as the clouds.

6 Be exalted above the heavens, God, and your glory above all the earth.

7 So that your beloved ones may be delivered, save with your right hand and hear me.

8 God spoke in his holy place: I will be exalted and divide Sikima, and measure out the valley of tents;

9 Galaad is mine, and Manasse is mine, and Ephraim is the support of my head, Ioudas my king;

10 Moab is the cauldron of my hope; upon Idumaia I will extend my sandal; foreigners were subjected to me.

11 Who will lead me into a fortified city? Who will guide me as far as Idumaia?

12 Is it not you, God, who rejected us? And you will not go out, God, with our forces.

13 Give us help out of affliction; and a human's salvation is vain.

14 In God we will do mighty deeds, and he will bring our enemies to nothing.

Chapter 108

1 For the end; for Dauid, a psalm. God, do not keep silent concerning my praise,

2 because a sinner's mouth and a deceitful one's mouth were opened against me; they spoke against me with a deceitful tongue,

3 and surrounded me with words of hatred and fought me without cause.

4 In return for loving me they slandered me, but I prayed;

5 and they placed evils against me in return for good things, and hatred in return for my love.

6 Set a sinner over him, and let a slanderer stand at his right;

7 when he is judged, may he go out condemned, and let his prayer become sin.

8 Let his days become few, and may another take his oversight;

9 let his sons become orphans and his wife a widow;

10 let his sons wander in displacement and beg; let them be cast out of their house sites.

11 Let a lender search out all that belongs to him; let strangers plunder his labors;

12 let there be no supporter for him, nor let there be one compassionate toward his orphans;

13 let his children come to destruction; in one generation let his name be blotted out.

14 May the lawlessness of his fathers be remembered before the Lord, and may the sin of his mother not be blotted out;

15 let them be before the Lord continually, and may their remembrance be destroyed from the earth,

16 because he did not remember to do mercy and pursued a human needy and poor and pierced in heart, to put him to death.

17 And he loved a curse, and it will come to him; and he did not desire a blessing, and it will be distanced from him.

18 And he clothed himself with a curse like a garment, and it entered like water into his inward parts and like oil into his bones;

19 let it become for him like a garment he wraps around himself, and like a belt he continually girds himself with.

20 This is the work from the Lord for those slandering me and those speaking evil things against my soul.

21 And you, Lord, Lord, do mercy with me because of your name, because your mercy is good.

22 Deliver me, because I am poor and needy, and my heart is troubled within me.

23 Like a shadow when it declines, I was taken away; I was shaken off like locusts.

24 My knees grew weak from fasting, and my flesh was changed because of oil.

25 And I became a reproach to them; they saw me, they shook their heads.

26 Help me, Lord my God; save me according to your mercy,

27 and let them know that this is your hand, and you, Lord, did it.

28 They will curse, and you will bless; let those rising against me be ashamed, but your slave will rejoice.

29 Let those slandering me clothe themselves in disgrace and wrap their shame around themselves like a double cloak.

30 I will greatly acknowledge the Lord with my mouth and praise him in the midst of many,

31 because he stood at the right of a needy one, to save from those pursuing my soul.

Chapter 109

1 For Dauid, a psalm. The Lord said to my lord: Sit at my right, until I make your enemies a footstool for your feet.

2 The Lord will send forth a rod of your strength from Sion, and rule in the midst of your enemies.

3 With you is rule on the day of your strength, in the splendors of the holy ones; from the womb before the morning star I begot you.

4 The Lord swore and will not relent: You are a priest forever according to the order of Melchisedek.

5 The Lord at your right crushed kings on the day of his wrath;

6 he will judge among the nations; he will fill with corpses; he will crush heads upon the land of many.

7 He will drink from a torrent on the way; for this reason he will exalt a head.

Chapter 110

1 Alleluia. I will acknowledge you, Lord, with my whole heart, in a council of upright ones and an assembly.

2 Great are the works of the Lord, sought out for all his wishes;

3 acknowledgment and magnificence are his work, and his righteousness remains for the age of the age.

4 He made a remembrance of his wonders; merciful and compassionate is the Lord;

5 he gave food to those fearing him; he will remember his covenant forever.

6 He announced the strength of his works to his people, to give them an inheritance of nations.

7 The works of his hands are truth and judgment; all his commandments are faithful,

8 supported for the age of the age, made in truth and uprightness.

9 He sent redemption to his people; he commanded his covenant forever; holy and fearsome is his name.

10 The beginning of wisdom is fear of the Lord; good understanding is for all those doing it. His praise remains for the age of the age.

Chapter 111

1 Alleluia. Blessed is a man fearing the Lord; he will greatly desire his commandments;

2 his seed will be mighty in the land; a generation of upright ones will be blessed;

3 glory and wealth are in his house, and his righteousness remains for the age of the age.

4 Light rose in darkness for the upright, merciful and compassionate and righteous.

5 Good is a man who pities and lends; he will manage his words with judgment;

6 because he will not be shaken forever; a righteous one will be in everlasting remembrance.

7 He will not be afraid of an evil report; his heart is ready to hope in the Lord.

8 His heart has been supported; he will certainly not be afraid, until he looks upon his enemies.

9 He scattered, he gave to the needy; his righteousness remains for the age of the age; his horn will be exalted in glory.

10 A sinner will see and be angry; he will gnash his teeth and melt; the desire of sinners will perish.

Chapter 112

1 Alleluia. Praise the Lord, servants; praise the name of the Lord;

2 may the name of the Lord be blessed from now and forever;

3 from the rising of the sun until its setting praise the name of the Lord.

4 The Lord is high over all the nations; his glory is above the heavens.

5 Who is like the Lord our God, who dwells in the heights

6 and looks upon the low things in heaven and on earth?

7 The one raising a poor one from the earth and lifting a needy one from dung,

8 to seat him with rulers, with rulers of his people;

9 the one settling a barren woman in a house as a rejoicing mother of children.

Chapter 113

1 Alleluia. At the departure of Israel from Egypt, of the house of Iakob from a barbarian people,

2 Ioudaia became his sanctuary, Israel his authority.

3 The sea saw and fled; Iordanes turned backward;

4 the mountains leaped like rams, and the hills like lambs of sheep.

5 What is with you, sea, that you fled, and with you, Iordanes, that you withdrew backward?

6 Mountains, that you leaped like rams, and hills like lambs of sheep?

7 Before the face of the Lord the earth was shaken, before the face of the God of Iakob,

8 who turned the rock into lakes of waters and the sheer rock into springs of waters.

9 Not to us, Lord, not to us, but to your name give glory, for your mercy and your truth,

10 lest the nations say: Where is their God?

11 But our God is in heaven above; in the heavens and on the earth he did all that he wished.

12 The idols of the nations are silver and gold, works of human hands;

13 they have a mouth and will not speak; they have eyes and will not see;

14 they have ears and will not hear; they have noses and will not smell;

15 they have hands and will not feel; they have feet and will not walk; they will not give a voice in their throat.

16 May those making them become like them, and all those trusting in them.

17 The house of Israel hoped in the Lord; he is their helper and their defender.

18 The house of Aaron hoped in the Lord; he is their helper and their defender.

19 Those fearing the Lord hoped in the Lord; he is their helper and their defender.

20 The Lord remembered us and blessed us; he blessed the house of Israel; he blessed the house of Aaron;

21 he blessed those fearing the Lord, the small with the great.

22 May the Lord add to you, to you and to your sons;

23 you are blessed by the Lord who made heaven and earth.

24 The heaven of heaven belongs to the Lord, but the earth he gave to the sons of humans.

25 The dead will not praise you, Lord, nor all those descending into Hades,

26 but we, the living, will bless the Lord from now and forever.

Chapter 114

1 Alleluia. I loved, because the Lord will hear the voice of my supplication,

2 because he inclined his ear to me, and in my days I will call upon him.

3 Birth pangs of death encompassed me; dangers of Hades found me; I found affliction and pain.

4 And I called upon the name of the Lord: O Lord, deliver my soul.

5 Merciful and righteous is the Lord, and our God has mercy.

6 The Lord guards the infants; I was humbled, and he saved me.

7 Turn back, my soul, to your rest, because the Lord benefited you,

8 because he delivered my soul from death, my eyes from tears and my feet from slipping.

9 I will be pleasing before the Lord in a land of the living.

Chapter 115

1 Alleluia. I believed, therefore I spoke; but I was greatly humbled.

2 I said in my ecstasy: Every human is a liar.

3 What will I repay to the Lord for all that he repaid to me?

4 I will take a cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord.

6 Honored before the Lord is the death of his holy ones.

7 O Lord, I am your slave, I am your slave and son of your maidservant. You broke open my bonds;

8 to you I will sacrifice a sacrifice of praise;

9 I will pay my vows to the Lord before all his people,

10 in the courts of the house of the Lord, in your midst, Ierousalem.

Chapter 116

1 Alleluia. Praise the Lord, all the nations; praise him, all the peoples,

2 because his mercy was strengthened upon us, and the truth of the Lord remains forever.

Chapter 117

1 Alleluia. Acknowledge the Lord, because he is good, because his mercy is forever.

2 Let the house of Israel say, then, that he is good, that his mercy is forever;

3 let the house of Aaron say, then, that he is good, that his mercy is forever;

4 let all those fearing the Lord say, then, that he is good, that his mercy is forever.

5 In affliction I called upon the Lord, and he heard me into spaciousness.

6 The Lord is a helper for me; I will not fear what a human will do to me.

7 The Lord is a helper for me, and I will look upon my enemies.

8 It is better to trust in the Lord than to trust in a human;

9 it is better to hope in the Lord than to hope in rulers.

10 All the nations surrounded me, and in the name of the Lord I warded them off;

11 surrounding, they surrounded me, and in the name of the Lord I warded them off;

12 they surrounded me like bees a honeycomb and were kindled like fire in thorns, and in the name of the Lord I warded them off.

13 Being pushed, I was overturned to fall, and the Lord supported me.

14 The Lord is my strength and my hymn, and he became salvation for me.

15 A voice of exultation and salvation in tents of righteous ones: The right hand of the Lord did a mighty deed;

16 the right hand of the Lord exalted me; the right hand of the Lord did a mighty deed.

17 I will not die, but live and recount the works of the Lord.

18 Disciplining, the Lord disciplined me, and did not hand me over to death.

19 Open gates of righteousness for me; entering them, I will acknowledge the Lord.

20 This is the gate of the Lord; righteous ones will enter it.

21 I will acknowledge you, because you heard me and became salvation for me.

22 A stone which the builders rejected, this became the head of a corner;

23 this came to be from the Lord, and it is marvelous in our eyes.

24 This is the day which the Lord made; let us exult and rejoice in it.

25 O Lord, save, then; O Lord, prosper, then.

26 Blessed is the one coming in the name of the Lord; we have blessed you from the house of the Lord.

27 The Lord is God and shone upon us; establish a feast with those covering with branches, as far as the horns of the altar.

28 You are my God, and I will acknowledge you; you are my God, and I will exalt you; I will acknowledge you, because you heard me and became salvation for me.

29 Acknowledge the Lord, because he is good, because his mercy is forever.

Chapter 118

1 Alleluia. 1. Alph. Blessed are the blameless in a way, those walking in the law of the Lord.

2 Blessed are those searching out his testimonies; with a whole heart they will seek him out.

3 For those working lawlessness did not walk in his ways.

4 You commanded that your commandments be kept diligently.

5 Would that my ways were directed to keep your ordinances.

6 Then I will certainly not be ashamed when I look upon all your commandments.

7 I will acknowledge you, Lord, in uprightness of heart, when I have learned the judgments of your righteousness.

8 I will keep your ordinances; do not abandon me utterly.

9 2. Beth. By what will the younger one set his way right? By keeping your words.

10 With my whole heart I sought you out; do not thrust me away from your commandments.

11 In my heart I hid your utterances, so that I might not sin against you.

12 You are blessed, Lord; teach me your ordinances.

13 With my lips I declared all the judgments of your mouth.

14 In the way of your testimonies I delighted as in all wealth.

15 I will ponder your commandments and perceive your ways.

16 I will meditate upon your ordinances; I will not forget your words.

17 3. Gimal. Repay your slave; I will live and keep your words.

18 Uncover my eyes, and I will perceive your wonders from your law.

19 I am a sojourner in the earth; do not hide your commandments from me.

20 My soul longed to desire your judgments at every time.

21 You rebuked arrogant ones; cursed are those turning aside from your commandments.

22 Remove reproach and contempt from me, because I sought out your testimonies.

23 For indeed rulers sat and spoke against me, but your slave pondered your ordinances.

24 For indeed your testimonies are my meditation, and your ordinances my counsels.

25 4. Delth. My soul clung to the ground; give me life according to your word.

26 I declared my ways, and you heard me; teach me your ordinances.

27 Make me understand the way of your ordinances, and I will ponder your wonders.

28 My soul dripped from weariness; confirm me in your words.

29 Remove a way of injustice from me, and have mercy on me with your law.

30 I chose a way of truth; I did not forget your judgments.

31 I clung to your testimonies; Lord, do not put me to shame.

32 I ran a way of your commandments when you widened my heart.

33 5. E. Instruct me by law, Lord, in the way of your ordinances, and I will seek it out continually.

34 Make me understand, and I will search out your law and keep it with my whole heart.

35 Guide me in a path of your commandments, because I desired it.

36 Incline my heart to your testimonies and not to greed.

37 Turn my eyes away so as not to see vanity; in your way give me life.

38 Establish your utterance for your slave, for fear of you.

39 Remove my reproach which I suspected; for your judgments are good.

40 Behold, I desired your commandments; in your righteousness give me life.

41 6. Ouau. And may your mercy come upon me, Lord, your salvation according to your utterance.

42 And I will answer those reproaching me with a word, because I hoped in your words.

43 And do not remove a word of truth from my mouth utterly, because I hoped in your judgments.

44 And I will keep your law continually, forever and for the age of the age.

45 And I walked in spaciousness, because I sought out your commandments.

46 And I spoke of your testimonies before kings and was not ashamed.

47 And I meditated upon your commandments which I loved greatly.

48 And I lifted my hands toward your commandments which I loved, and pondered your ordinances.

49 7. Zai. Remember your word to your slave, by which you made me hope.

50 This comforted me in my humiliation, because your utterance gave me life.

51 Arrogant ones acted lawlessly to an extreme, but I did not turn aside from your law.

52 I remembered your judgments from the age, Lord, and was comforted.

53 Despondency seized me because of sinners abandoning your law.

54 Your ordinances were songs for me in the place of my sojourning.

55 I remembered your name in the night, Lord, and kept your law.

56 This came to be for me, because I sought out your ordinances.

57 8. Eth. My portion, Lord; I said that I would keep your law.

58 I supplicated your face with my whole heart; have mercy on me according to your utterance.

59 I considered your ways and turned my feet back to your testimonies.

60 I was prepared and was not troubled to keep your commandments.

61 Cords of sinners entwined me, and I did not forget your law.

62 At midnight I rose to acknowledge you for the judgments of your righteousness.

63 I am a companion of all those fearing you and those keeping your commandments.

64 The earth is full of your mercy, Lord; teach me your ordinances.

65 9. Teth. You did goodness with your slave, Lord, according to your word.

66 Teach me goodness and discipline and knowledge, because I believed your commandments.

67 Before I was humbled I transgressed; for this reason I kept your utterance.

68 You are good, Lord, and in your goodness teach me your ordinances.

69 The injustice of arrogant ones was multiplied against me, but with my whole heart I will search out your commandments.

70 Their heart curdled like milk, but I meditated upon your law.

71 It is good for me that you humbled me, so that I might learn your ordinances.

72 The law of your mouth is good for me beyond thousands of gold and silver.

73 10. Ioth. Your hands made me and formed me; make me understand, and I will learn your commandments.

74 Those fearing you will see me and rejoice, because I hoped in your words.

75 I knew, Lord, that your judgments are righteousness, and in truth you humbled me.

76 Let your mercy, then, come to comfort me, according to your utterance to your slave.

77 Let your compassions come to me, and I will live, because your law is my meditation.

78 Let arrogant ones be ashamed, because unjustly they acted lawlessly against me; but I will ponder your commandments.

79 Let those fearing you and those knowing your testimonies turn back to me.

80 Let my heart become blameless in your ordinances, so that I may not be ashamed.

81 11. Chaph. My soul fails for your salvation, and I hoped in your word.

82 My eyes failed for your utterance, saying: When will you comfort me?

83 Because I became like a wineskin in frost; I did not forget your ordinances.

84 How many are the days of your slave? When will you make judgment for me against those pursuing me?

85 Lawless ones recounted idle talk to me, but not like your law, Lord.

86 All your commandments are truth; they pursued me unjustly; help me.

87 They nearly finished me in the earth, but I did not abandon your commandments.

88 According to your mercy give me life, and I will keep the testimonies of your mouth.

89 12. Labd. Forever, Lord, your word remains in heaven.

90 Your truth is to generation and generation; you founded the earth, and it remains.

91 By your ordinance the day remains, because all things are your slaves.

92 If your law were not my meditation, then I would have perished in my humiliation.

93 I will certainly never forget your ordinances, because in them you gave me life, Lord.

94 I am yours; save me, because I sought out your ordinances.

95 Sinners waited for me to destroy me; I understood your testimonies.

96 I saw an end of every completion; your commandment is very broad.

97 13. Mem. How I loved your law, Lord; all day it is my meditation.

98 Beyond my enemies you made me wise in your commandment, because it is mine forever.

99 Beyond all those teaching me I understood, because your testimonies are my meditation.

100 Beyond elders I understood, because I sought out your commandments.

101 From every evil way I restrained my feet, so that I might keep your words.

102 I did not turn aside from your judgments, because you instructed me by law.

103 How sweet your utterances are to my throat, beyond honey and honeycomb to my mouth.

104 From your commandments I understood; for this reason I hated every way of injustice. [Because you instructed me by law.]

105 14. Noun. Your word is a lamp for my feet and a light for my paths.

106 I have sworn and established that I would keep the judgments of your righteousness.

107 I was humbled to an extreme; Lord, give me life according to your word.

108 Take pleasure, then, Lord, in the willing offerings of my mouth, and teach me your judgments.

109 My soul is in my hands continually, and I did not forget your law.

110 Sinners placed a trap for me, and I did not stray from your commandments.

111 I inherited your testimonies forever, because they are the rejoicing of my heart.

112 I inclined my heart to do your ordinances forever, for recompense.

113 15. Samch. I hated lawless ones and loved your law.

114 You are my helper and my supporter; I hoped in your word.

115 Turn aside from me, those doing evil, and I will search out the commandments of my God.

116 Support me according to your utterance, and I will live, and do not put me to shame in my expectation.

117 Help me, and I will be saved and meditate upon your ordinances continually.

118 You despised all those departing from your ordinances, because their thought is unjust.

119 I counted all the sinners of the earth as transgressors; for this reason I loved your testimonies continually.

120 Nail down my flesh from fear of you; for I was afraid of your judgments.

121 16. Ain. I did judgment and righteousness; do not hand me over to those wronging me.

122 Receive your slave for good; let arrogant ones not falsely accuse me.

123 My eyes failed for your salvation and for the utterance of your righteousness.

124 Act with your slave according to your mercy, and teach me your ordinances.

125 I am your slave; make me understand, and I will know your testimonies.

126 It is time for the Lord to act; they scattered your law.

127 For this reason I loved your commandments beyond gold and topaz.

128 For this reason I was directed toward all your commandments; I hated every unjust way.

129 17. Phe. Marvelous are your testimonies; for this reason my soul searched them out.

130 The disclosure of your words will give light and make infants understand.

131 I opened my mouth and drew breath, because I longed for your commandments.

132 Look upon me and have mercy on me, according to the judgment for those loving your name.

133 Direct my steps according to your utterance, and let no lawlessness rule me.

134 Redeem me from false accusation of humans, and I will keep your commandments.

135 Make your face shine upon your slave and teach me your ordinances.

136 My eyes brought down streams of waters, since they did not keep your law.

137 18. Sade. You are righteous, Lord, and your judgment is upright.

138 You commanded your testimonies as righteousness and great truth.

139 The zeal of your house melted me away, because my enemies forgot your words.

140 Your utterance has been greatly refined by fire, and your slave loved it.

141 I am younger and despised; I did not forget your ordinances.

142 Your righteousness is righteousness forever, and your law is truth.

143 Affliction and distress found me; your commandments are my meditation.

144 Your testimonies are righteousness forever; make me understand, and I will live.

145 19. Koph. I cried out with my whole heart; hear me, Lord; I will seek out your ordinances.

146 I cried out to you; save me, and I will keep your testimonies.

147 I went before at an untimely hour and cried out; I hoped in your words.

148 My eyes went before toward dawn, to meditate upon your utterances.

149 Hear my voice, Lord, according to your mercy; according to your judgment give me life.

150 Those pursuing me with lawlessness drew near, but they were distanced from your law.

151 You are near, Lord, and all your commandments are truth.

152 From the beginning I knew from your testimonies that you founded them forever.

153 20. Res. See my humiliation and deliver me, because I did not forget your law.

154 Judge my judgment and redeem me; because of your word give me life.

155 Salvation is far from sinners, because they did not seek out your ordinances.

156 Your compassions are many, Lord; according to your judgment give me life.

157 Many are those pursuing me and pressing me hard; I did not turn aside from your testimonies.

158 I saw those breaking faith and melted away, because they did not keep your utterances.

159 See that I loved your commandments; Lord, in your mercy give me life.

160 The beginning of your words is truth, and all the judgments of your righteousness are forever.

161 21. Sen. Rulers pursued me without cause, and my heart was afraid of your words.

162 I will exult in your utterances like one finding many spoils.

163 I hated and abhorred injustice, but I loved your law.

164 Seven times in the day I praised you for the judgments of your righteousness.

165 Much peace belongs to those loving your law, and there is no stumbling block for them.

166 I expected your salvation, Lord, and loved your commandments.

167 My soul kept your testimonies and loved them greatly.

168 I kept your commandments and your testimonies, because all my ways are before you, Lord.

169 22. Thau. Let my supplication approach before you, Lord; according to your utterance make me understand.

170 May my petition enter before you; according to your utterance deliver me.

171 May my lips pour forth a hymn when you teach me your ordinances.

172 May my tongue utter your utterance, because all your commandments are righteousness.

173 Let your hand be to save me, because I chose your commandments.

174 I longed for your salvation, Lord, and your law is my meditation.

175 My soul will live and praise you, and your judgments will help me.

176 I strayed like a lost sheep; seek your slave, because I did not forget your commandments.

Chapter 119

1 A song of the ascents. To the Lord I cried out when I was afflicted, and he heard me.

2 Lord, deliver my soul from unjust lips and from a deceitful tongue.

3 What might be given to you, and what might be added to you against a deceitful tongue?

4 The sharpened arrows of the mighty one, with the wilderness coals.

5 Alas for me, because my sojourning was prolonged; I dwelt with the dwellings of Kedar.

6 My soul sojourned much.

7 With those hating peace I was peaceful; when I spoke to them, they fought me without cause.

Chapter 120

1 A song of the ascents. I lifted my eyes to the mountains. From where will my help come?

2 My help is from the Lord, who made heaven and earth.

3 Do not give your foot over to shaking, nor may he who guards you slumber.

4 Behold, he who guards Israel will neither slumber nor sleep.

5 The Lord will guard you; the Lord is your shelter at your right hand;

6 by day the sun will not burn you, nor the moon by night.

7 The Lord will guard you from every evil; he will guard your soul.

8 The Lord will guard your entrance and your exit from now and unto the age.

Chapter 121

1 A song of the ascents. I rejoiced at those who said to me, We shall go to the house of the Lord.

2 Our feet were standing in your courts, Ierousalem.

3 Ierousalem, being built as a city whose participation is together.

4 For there the tribes went up, tribes of the Lord, a testimony to Israel, to acknowledge the name of the Lord;

5 because there sat thrones for judgment, thrones over the house of Dauid.

6 Ask Ierousalem, then, for the things pertaining to peace, and prosperity for those who love you;

7 let there be peace, then, in your strength and prosperity in your towered fortresses.

8 For the sake of my brothers and my neighbors I was speaking peace, then, concerning you;

9 for the sake of the house of the Lord our God I sought good things for you.

Chapter 122

1 A song of the ascents. To you I lifted my eyes, to the one dwelling in heaven.

2 Behold, as the eyes of slaves are toward the hands of their masters, as the eyes of a maidservant are toward the hands of her mistress, so our eyes are toward the Lord our God, until he may have compassion on us.

3 Have mercy on us, Lord, have mercy on us, because we were greatly filled with contempt,

4 our soul was filled still more. Reproach to those who prosper, and contempt to the arrogant.

Chapter 123

1 A song of the ascents. If it had not been that the Lord was among us, let Israel say, then,

2 if it had not been that the Lord was among us when people rose up against us,

3 then they would have swallowed us alive when their wrath was kindled against us;

4 then the water drowned us; our soul passed through a torrent;

5 then our soul passed through the water that cannot be withstood.

6 Blessed is the Lord, who did not give us as prey to their teeth.

7 Our soul was delivered like a little bird from the snare of the hunters; the snare was shattered, and we were delivered.

8 Our help is in the name of the Lord, who made heaven and earth.

Chapter 124

1 A song of the ascents. Those who trust in the Lord are like Mount Sion; he who dwells in Ierousalem will not be shaken unto the age.

2 Mountains are around her, and the Lord is around his people from now and unto the age.

3 Because he will not leave the rod of sinners upon the lot of the righteous, so that the righteous may not stretch out their hands in lawlessness.

4 Do good, Lord, to the good and to those upright in heart;

5 but those who turn aside into crooked ways the Lord will lead away with those who work lawlessness. Peace upon Israel.

Chapter 125

1 A song of the ascents. When the Lord turned back the captivity of Sion, we became like those comforted.

2 Then our mouth was filled with joy, and our tongue with exultation. Then they will say among the nations, The Lord did great things in acting with them.

3 The Lord did great things in acting with us; we became glad.

4 Turn back our captivity, Lord, like torrents in the south.

5 Those who sow in tears will reap in exultation.

6 Going, they were going and weeping, carrying their seeds; but coming, they will come in exultation, carrying their sheaves.

Chapter 126

1 A song of the ascents; for Salomon. Unless the Lord builds a house, those who build it labored in vain; unless the Lord guards a city, the one guarding kept awake in vain.

2 It is in vain for you to rise early, to get up after sitting down, you who eat bread of pain, when he gives sleep to his beloved ones.

3 Behold, sons are the inheritance of the Lord, the reward of the fruit of the womb.

4 Like arrows in the hand of a mighty one, so are the sons of those shaken off.

5 Blessed is a person who will fill his desire from them; they will not be put to shame when they speak to their enemies in a gate.

Chapter 127

1 A song of the ascents. Blessed are all who fear the Lord, who walk in his ways.

2 You will eat the labors of your wrists; you are blessed, and it will be well with you.

3 Your wife is like a flourishing vine in the sides of your house; your sons are like newly planted olive trees around your table.

4 Behold, thus will a person who fears the Lord be blessed.

5 May the Lord bless you from Sion, and may you see the good things of Ierousalem all the days of your life;

6 and may you see sons of your sons. Peace upon Israel.

Chapter 128

1 A song of the ascents. Many times they made war on me from my youth, let Israel say, then,

2 many times they made war on me from my youth, for indeed they did not prevail against me.

3 On my back the sinners were working; they lengthened their lawlessness;

4 The righteous Lord cut apart the necks of sinners.

5 Let all who hate Sion be put to shame and turned backward.

6 Let them become like grass on housetops, which dried up before being pulled out;

7 with which the reaper did not fill his hand, nor the one gathering the sheaves his bosom,

8 and those passing by did not say, The blessing of the Lord upon you; we have blessed you in the name of the Lord.

Chapter 129

1 A song of the ascents. From the depths I cried to you, Lord;

2 Lord, hear my voice; let your ears become attentive to the voice of my supplication.

3 If you watch lawless deeds, Lord, Lord, who will stand?

4 Because with you is propitiation.

5 For the sake of your law I waited for you, Lord; my soul waited for your word.

6 My soul hoped in the Lord from the morning watch until night; from the morning watch let Israel hope in the Lord.

7 Because with the Lord is mercy, and with him is much redemption,

8 and he will redeem Israel from all his lawless deeds.

Chapter 130

1 A song of the ascents; for Dauid. Lord, my heart was not exalted, nor were my eyes lifted high, nor did I walk in great things or in marvelous things beyond me.

2 If I was not humble-minded, but raised my soul like the weaned child toward its mother, like a repayment upon my soul.

3 Let Israel hope in the Lord from now and unto the age.

Chapter 131

1 A song of the ascents. Remember, Lord, Dauid and all his meekness,

2 how he swore to the Lord, vowed to the God of Iakob,

3 I shall not enter the dwelling of my house, I shall not go up upon the bed of my bedding,

4 I shall not give sleep to my eyes and slumber to my eyelids and rest to my temples,

5 until I find a place for the Lord, a dwelling for the God of Iakob.

6 Behold, we heard of her in Ephratha; we found her in the plains of the woodland;

7 we shall enter his dwellings; we shall bow down toward the place where his feet stood.

8 Rise, Lord, into your rest, you and the ark of your sanctification;

9 your priests will clothe themselves with righteousness, and your holy ones will exult.

10 For the sake of Dauid your slave, do not turn away the face of your anointed one.

11 The Lord swore truth to Dauid, and he will certainly not annul it: From the fruit of your belly I shall set upon your throne;

12 if your sons keep my covenant and these testimonies of mine which I shall teach them, their sons also will sit upon your throne unto the age.

13 Because the Lord chose Sion, he selected her as a habitation for himself:

14 This is my rest unto an age of an age; here I shall dwell, because I selected her;

15 blessing, I shall bless her prey; I shall satisfy her poor with bread;

16 I shall clothe her priests with salvation, and her holy ones will exult with exultation;

17 there I shall cause a horn to spring up for Dauid; I prepared a lamp for my anointed one;

18 I shall clothe his enemies with shame, but upon him my sanctification will blossom.

Chapter 132

1 A song of the ascents; for Dauid. Behold, then, what is good or what is pleasant except brothers dwelling together?

2 Like ointment upon a head, which descends upon a beard, the beard of Aaron, which descends upon the edge of his garment;

3 like the dew of Aermon, which descends upon the mountains of Sion; because there the Lord commanded the blessing and life unto the age.

Chapter 133

1 A song of the ascents. Behold, then, bless the Lord, all you slaves of the Lord who stand in the house of the Lord, in the courts of the house of our God.

2 In the nights lift your hands toward the holy places and bless the Lord.

3 The Lord will bless you from Sion, he who made heaven and earth.

Chapter 134

1 Alleluia. Praise the name of the Lord; praise the Lord, slaves,

2 you who stand in the house of the Lord, in the courts of the house of our God.

3 Praise the Lord, because the Lord is good; sing to his name, because it is beautiful;

4 because the Lord chose Iakob for himself, Israel as his own possession.

5 Because I knew that the Lord is great, and our Lord is beyond all the gods;

6 all things that the Lord wished, he did in heaven and on earth, in the seas and in all the abysses;

7 bringing up clouds from the end of the earth, he made lightnings for rain; he who brings out winds from his treasuries.

8 He who struck the firstborn of Egypt, from human to beast;

9 he sent out signs and wonders in your midst, Egypt, upon Pharao and upon all his slaves.

10 He who struck many nations and killed mighty kings,

11 Seon king of the Amorrites and Og king of Basan and all the kingdoms of Chanaan,

12 and gave their land as an inheritance, an inheritance to Israel his people.

13 Lord, your name is unto the age; Lord, your memorial is unto generation and generation.

14 Because the Lord will judge his people, and concerning his slaves he will be comforted.

15 The idols of the nations are silver and gold, works of human hands;

16 they have a mouth and will not speak; they have eyes and will not see;

17 they have ears and will not listen; [they have noses and will not smell; they have hands and will not feel; they have feet and will not walk; they will not utter a sound in their throat;] for there is not even breath in their mouth.

18 May those who make them become like them, and all who trust in them.

19 House of Israel, bless the Lord; house of Aaron, bless the Lord;

20 house of Leui, bless the Lord; you who fear the Lord, bless the Lord.

21 Blessed is the Lord from Sion, he who dwells in Ierousalem.

Chapter 135

1 Alleluia. Acknowledge the Lord, because he is kind, because his mercy is unto the age;

2 acknowledge the God of gods, because his mercy is unto the age;

3 acknowledge the Lord of lords, because his mercy is unto the age;

4 him who alone does great marvelous things, because his mercy is unto the age;

5 him who made the heavens with understanding, because his mercy is unto the age;

6 him who established the earth upon the waters, because his mercy is unto the age;

7 him who alone made great lights, because his mercy is unto the age,

8 the sun for authority over the day, because his mercy is unto the age,

9 the moon and the stars for authority over the night, because his mercy is unto the age;

10 him who struck Egypt together with their firstborn, because his mercy is unto the age,

11 and brought Israel out from their midst, because his mercy is unto the age,

12 with a mighty hand and with a high arm, because his mercy is unto the age;

13 him who divided the Red Sea into divisions, because his mercy is unto the age,

14 and led Israel through its midst, because his mercy is unto the age,

15 and shook off Pharao and his force into the Red Sea, because his mercy is unto the age;

16 him who led his people through the wilderness, because his mercy is unto the age; him who brought out water from a sheer rock, because his mercy is unto the age;

17 him who struck great kings, because his mercy is unto the age,

18 and killed mighty kings, because his mercy is unto the age,

19 Seon king of the Amorrites, because his mercy is unto the age,

20 and Og king of Basan, because his mercy is unto the age,

21 and gave their land as an inheritance, because his mercy is unto the age,

22 an inheritance to Israel his slave, because his mercy is unto the age.

23 Because in our humiliation the Lord remembered us, because his mercy is unto the age,

24 and redeemed us from our enemies, because his mercy is unto the age;

25 he who gives food to all flesh, because his mercy is unto the age.

26 Acknowledge the God of heaven, because his mercy is unto the age; acknowledge the Lord of lords, because his mercy is unto the age.

Chapter 136

1 For Dauid. By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat and wept when we remembered Sion.

2 Upon the willows in her midst we hung our instruments;

3 because there those who took us captive asked us for words of songs, and those who led us away for a hymn: Sing to us from the songs of Sion.

4 How shall we sing the song of the Lord upon a foreign land?

5 If I forget you, Ierousalem, may my right hand be forgotten;

6 may my tongue cling to my throat if I do not remember you, if I do not set Ierousalem first at the beginning of my gladness.

7 Remember, Lord, the sons of Edom on the day of Ierousalem, those who said, Empty out, empty out, down to the foundation in her.

8 Wretched daughter of Babylon, blessed is he who will repay you your repayment which you repaid us;

9 blessed is he who will seize and dash your infants against the rock.

Chapter 137

1 For Dauid. I shall acknowledge you, Lord, with my whole heart, because you heard the words of my mouth, and before angels I shall sing to you.

2 I shall bow down toward your holy temple and acknowledge your name for your mercy and your truth, because you magnified your oracle above every name.

3 On whatever day I call upon you, hear me quickly; you will regard me greatly in my soul with strength.

4 Let all the kings of the earth acknowledge you, Lord, because they heard all the words of your mouth,

5 and let them sing in the ways of the Lord, because great is the glory of the Lord,

6 because the Lord is high and looks upon the lowly things, and knows the lofty things from afar.

7 If I walk in the midst of affliction, you will give me life; against the wrath of my enemies you stretched out your hand, and your right hand saved me.

8 The Lord will repay on my behalf. Lord, your mercy is unto the age; do not abandon the works of your hands.

Chapter 138

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid. Lord, you tested me and knew me;

2 you knew my sitting and my rising; you understood my reasonings from afar;

3 you traced out my path and my measuring cord, and foresaw all my ways.

4 Because there is no word on my tongue,

5 behold, Lord, you knew all things, the last and the ancient; you formed me and laid your hand upon me.

6 Your knowledge became marvelous beyond me; it became mighty; I certainly cannot attain to it.

7 Where shall I go from your spirit, and where shall I flee from your face?

8 If I go up into heaven, you are there; if I go down into Hades, you are present;

9 if I were to take up my wings at dawn and encamp at the ends of the sea,

10 for even there your hand will lead me, and your right hand will hold me.

11 And I said, Then darkness will trample me, and night is illumination in my delight;

12 because darkness will not be darkened from you, and night will be illuminated like day; as its darkness, so also its light.

13 Because you acquired my kidneys, Lord; you took hold of me from my mother's womb.

14 I shall acknowledge you, because I was fearfully made marvelous; marvelous are your works, and my soul knows exceedingly.

15 My bone, which you made in secret, was not hidden from you. And my substance is in the lowest parts of the earth;

16 your eyes saw my unworked substance, and in your book all will be written; by day they will be formed, and none among them.

17 But to me your friends were greatly honored, God; their beginnings became greatly mighty;

18 I shall count them, and they will be multiplied beyond sand; I awoke, and I am still with you.

19 If you kill sinners, God, men of bloods, turn aside from me.

20 Because you will speak for a reasoning; they will take your cities for vanity.

21 Did I not hate those who hate you, Lord, and was I not wasting away over your enemies?

22 I hated them with a complete hatred; they became enemies to me.

23 Test me, God, and know my heart; examine me and know my paths,

24 and see whether a way of lawlessness is in me, and lead me in an eternal way.

Chapter 139

1 For the end; a psalm for Dauid.

2 Rescue me, Lord, from an evil person; deliver me from an unjust man,

3 who reasoned out injustices in their heart; the whole day they were arraying wars;

4 they sharpened their tongue like a serpent's; venom of asps is under their lips. Interlude.

5 Guard me, Lord, from a sinner's hand; rescue me from unjust people, who reasoned out how to trip my steps;

6 arrogant ones hid a snare for me and stretched out cords, snares for my feet; beside a path they set a stumbling block for me. Interlude.

7 I said to the Lord, You are my God; listen, Lord, to the voice of my supplication.

8 Lord, Lord, strength of my salvation, you overshadowed my head on a day of war.

9 Do not hand me over, Lord, from my desire to a sinner; they reasoned against me; do not forsake me, lest they be exalted. Interlude.

10 The head of their encirclement, the toil of their lips will cover them.

11 Coals will fall upon them; you will cast them down in fire; in miseries they will certainly not stand.

12 A talkative man will not be set straight upon the earth; evils will hunt an unjust man into destruction.

13 I knew that the Lord will execute the judgment of the poor and the justice of the needy.

14 Indeed, the righteous will acknowledge your name, and the upright will dwell with your face.

Chapter 140

1 A psalm for Dauid. Lord, I cried to you; hear me; attend to the voice of my supplication when I cry to you.

2 Let my prayer be directed like incense before you, the lifting of my hands an evening sacrifice.

3 Set, Lord, a guard for my mouth and a door of enclosure around my lips.

4 Do not incline my heart to words of wickedness, to make excuses in sins with people who work lawlessness, and I shall certainly not join with their chosen ones.

5 A righteous one will discipline me with mercy and reprove me, but let a sinner's oil not fatten my head, because still my prayer also is in their good pleasures.

6 Their judges were swallowed up beside a rock; they will hear my words, because they became sweet.

7 Like a thickness of earth was torn apart upon the earth, our bones were scattered beside Hades.

8 Because toward you, Lord, Lord, are my eyes; in you I hoped; do not take away my soul.

9 Guard me from a snare which they set for me, and from the stumbling blocks of those who work lawlessness.

10 Sinners will fall in his net; I am alone until I pass by.

Chapter 141

1 Of understanding, for Dauid when he was in the cave; a prayer.

2 With my voice I cried to the Lord; with my voice I supplicated the Lord.

3 I shall pour out my supplication before him; I shall announce my affliction before him.

4 When my spirit failed from me, you also knew my paths; on this way in which I was walking they hid a snare for me.

5 I was observing toward the right and looking, because there was no one who recognized me; escape perished from me, and there is no one who seeks out my soul.

6 I cried to you, Lord; I said, You are my hope, my portion in the land of the living.

7 Attend to my supplication, because I was greatly humbled; deliver me from those who pursue me, because they became mightier than I.

8 Bring my soul out of prison to acknowledge your name, Lord; the righteous will wait for me until you repay me.

Chapter 142

1 A psalm for Dauid, when the son pursues him. Lord, hear my prayer; listen to my supplication in your truth; hear me in your righteousness;

2 and do not enter into judgment with your slave, because no one living will be justified before you.

3 Because the enemy pursued my soul, he humbled my life to the earth; he seated me in dark places like the dead of an age;

4 and my spirit grew despondent upon me; my heart was troubled within me.

5 I remembered ancient days and meditated on all your works; on the things made by your hands I was meditating.

6 I spread out my hands toward you; my soul is like a waterless land to you. Interlude.

7 Hear me quickly, Lord; my spirit failed; do not turn your face away from me, and I shall be made like those descending into a pit.

8 Make your mercy heard by me in the morning, because in you I hoped; make known to me, Lord, a way in which I shall walk, because to you I lifted my soul;

9 rescue me from my enemies, Lord, because to you I fled for refuge.

10 Teach me to do your will, because you are my God; your good spirit will lead me on level land.

11 For the sake of your name, Lord, you will give me life; in your righteousness you will bring my soul out of affliction;

12 and in your mercy you will utterly destroy my enemies and destroy all who afflict my soul; because I am your slave.

Chapter 143

1 For Dauid, against Goliad. Blessed is the Lord my God, who teaches my hands for battle array, my fingers for war;

2 my mercy and my refuge, my helper and my deliverer, my defender, and in him I hoped, he who subjects my people under me.

3 Lord, what is a human, that you became known to him, or a son of a human, that you reckon him?

4 A human was made like vanity; his days pass by like a shadow.

5 Lord, incline your heavens and descend; touch the mountains, and they will smoke;

6 flash a lightning, and you will scatter them; send out your arrows, and you will throw them into confusion.

7 Send out your hand from on high; rescue me and deliver me from many waters, from the hand of foreign sons,

8 whose mouth spoke vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of injustice.

9 God, I shall sing a new song to you; on a ten-stringed psaltery I shall sing to you,

10 who gives salvation to kings, who redeems Dauid his slave from an evil sword.

11 Deliver me and rescue me from the hand of foreign sons, whose mouth spoke vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of injustice.

12 Whose sons are like new plants grown strong in their youth, their daughters beautified, adorned all around like the likeness of a temple,

13 their storehouses full, pouring out from this into that, their sheep bearing many young, multiplying in their exits,

14 their oxen fat; there is no falling of a fence, nor a passage out, nor a cry in their squares.

15 They called blessed the people who have these things; blessed are the people whose God is the Lord.

Chapter 144

1 Praise for Dauid. I shall exalt you, my God, my king, and bless your name unto the age and unto the age of the age.

2 Every day I shall bless you and praise your name unto the age and unto the age of the age.

3 Great is the Lord and exceedingly praiseworthy, and there is no limit to his greatness.

4 Generation and generation will praise your works, and they will announce your power.

5 They will speak the magnificence of the glory of your holiness, and recount your marvelous things.

6 And they will tell the power of your fearful things, and recount your greatness.

7 They will pour forth a remembrance of the abundance of your kindness, and exult in your righteousness.

8 Compassionate and merciful is the Lord, long-suffering and abundant in mercy.

9 The Lord is kind to all, and his compassions are upon all his works.

10 Let all your works acknowledge you, Lord, and let your holy ones bless you.

11 They will tell the glory of your kingdom, and speak your might,

12 to make known to the sons of humans your might and the glory of the magnificence of your kingdom.

13 Your kingdom is a kingdom of all the ages, and your dominion is in every generation and generation.

13 a The Lord is faithful in his words, and holy in all his works.

14 The Lord supports all who fall and sets upright all who are cast down.

15 The eyes of all hope in you, and you give their food at a fitting time.

16 You open your hand and fill every living creature with good pleasure.

17 The Lord is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works.

18 The Lord is near to all who call upon him, to all who call upon him in truth.

19 He will do the will of those who fear him, and hear their supplication and save them.

20 The Lord guards all who love him, and will utterly destroy all the sinners.

21 My mouth will speak praise of the Lord, and let all flesh bless his holy name unto the age and unto the age of the age.

Chapter 145

1 Alleluia; of Aggaios and Zacharias. Praise the Lord, my soul.

2 I shall praise the Lord in my life; I shall sing to my God as long as I exist.

3 Do not trust in rulers and in sons of humans, in whom there is no salvation.

4 His spirit will go out, and he will return to his earth; on that day all their reasonings will perish.

5 Blessed is he whose helper is the God of Iakob, whose hope is in the Lord his God,

6 who made heaven and earth, the sea and all things in them, who guards truth unto the age,

7 who executes judgment for those wronged, who gives food to the hungry; the Lord releases those bound in fetters;

8 the Lord sets upright those cast down; the Lord makes the blind wise; the Lord loves the righteous;

9 the Lord guards the proselytes; he will take up orphan and widow, and will obliterate the way of sinners.

10 The Lord will reign unto the age, your God, Sion, unto generation and generation.

Chapter 146

1 Alleluia; of Aggaios and Zacharias. Praise the Lord, because a psalm is a good thing; may praise be made sweet to our God.

2 The Lord is building Ierousalem, and will gather together the dispersions of Israel,

3 he who heals those broken in heart and binds their fractures,

4 he who numbers multitudes of stars and calls names for all of them.

5 Great is our Lord, and great is his strength, and there is no number to his understanding.

6 The Lord takes up the meek, but humbles sinners to the earth.

7 Begin a song to the Lord with acknowledgment; sing to our God on a lyre,

8 to him who clothes heaven with clouds, who prepares rain for the earth, who causes grass to spring up on mountains [and green herbage for the service of humans,]

9 who gives the beasts their food, and the young of the ravens who call upon him.

10 He will not take pleasure in the might of the horse, nor does he delight in the shins of the man;

11 the Lord delights in those who fear him and in those who hope in his mercy.

Chapter 147

1 Alleluia; of Aggaios and Zacharias. Praise the Lord, Ierousalem; praise your God, Sion,

2 because he strengthened the bars of your gates; he blessed your sons within you;

3 he who makes your borders peace and fills you with fat of wheat;

4 he who sends his oracle to the earth; his word will run with speed,

5 the word of him who gives snow like wool, who sprinkles mist like ash,

6 who casts his ice like morsels; before the face of his cold, who will stand?

7 He will send his word and melt them; his wind will blow, and waters will flow.

8 He announces his word to Iakob, his ordinances and judgments to Israel.

9 He did not do thus to every nation, and he did not make his judgments clear to them.

Chapter 148

1 Alleluia; of Aggaios and Zacharias. Praise the Lord from the heavens; praise him in the highest places.

2 Praise him, all his angels; praise him, all his powers.

3 Praise him, sun and moon; praise him, all the stars and the light.

4 Praise him, heavens of the heavens, and the water above the heavens.

5 Let them praise the name of the Lord, because he spoke, and they came to be; he commanded, and they were created.

6 He established them unto the age and unto the age of the age; he set a command, and it will not pass away.

7 Praise the Lord from the earth, dragons and all abysses;

8 fire, hail, snow, ice, storm wind, which do his word;

9 mountains and all hills, fruit-bearing trees and all cedars;

10 wild beasts and all cattle, creeping things and winged birds;

11 kings of the earth and all peoples, rulers and all judges of the earth;

12 young men and virgins, old men with younger ones;

13 let them praise the name of the Lord, because the name of him alone was exalted; his acknowledgment is upon earth and heaven.

14 And he will exalt a horn of his people; a hymn for all his holy ones, for the sons of Israel, a people drawing near to him.

Chapter 149

1 Alleluia. Sing a new song to the Lord; his praise is in an assembly of holy ones.

2 Let Israel rejoice in him who made him, and let the sons of Sion exult in their king;

3 let them praise his name in a dance; on a tambourine and psaltery let them sing to him,

4 because the Lord delights in his people and will exalt the meek in salvation.

5 Holy ones will boast in glory and exult upon their beds;

6 the exaltations of God are in their throat, and two-edged swords in their hands,

7 to execute vengeance among the nations, reproofs among the peoples,

8 to bind their kings in fetters and their glorious ones in iron handcuffs,

9 to execute among them a written judgment; this glory is for all his holy ones.

Chapter 150

1 Alleluia. Praise God in his holy places; praise him in the firmament of his power;

2 praise him for his mighty deeds; praise him according to the abundance of his greatness.

3 Praise him with a trumpet's sound; praise him on a psaltery and lyre;

4 praise him with a tambourine and dance; praise him with strings and an instrument;

5 praise him with well-sounding cymbals; praise him with cymbals of a shout.

6 Let every breath praise the Lord. Alleluia.

Chapter 151

1 This psalm is written in his own hand, concerning Dauid, and outside the number; when he fought Goliad in single combat. I was small among my brothers and younger in my father's house; I was shepherding my father's sheep.

2 My hands made an instrument; my fingers fitted together a psaltery.

3 And who will announce to my Lord? He himself is Lord; he himself hears.

4 He himself sent out his angel and took me from my father's sheep, and anointed me with the oil of his anointing.

5 My brothers were beautiful and great, and the Lord did not delight in them.

6 I went out to meet the foreigner, and he cursed me by his idols;

7 but I, drawing the sword from him, beheaded him and removed reproach from the sons of Israel. – –

Odes

Chapter 1

1 t A song of Moyses in Exodus.

1 LET US SING to the Lord, for he has been gloriously glorified; horse and rider he threw into the sea.

2 He became a helper and shelterer to me for salvation; this is my God, and I shall glorify him, the God of my father, and I shall exalt him.

3 The Lord shatters wars; Lord is his name.

4 Pharao's chariots and his force he threw into the sea; chosen riders, officers of the third rank, he drowned in the Red Sea;

5 he covered them with the sea; they sank into the depth like a stone.

6 Your right hand, Lord, has been glorified in strength; your right hand, Lord, shattered enemies.

7 And by the abundance of your glory you shattered the adversaries; you sent out your wrath, and it devoured them like stubble.

8 And through the breath of your anger the water parted; the waters congealed like a wall; the waves congealed in the midst of the sea.

9 The enemy said, Pursuing, I shall overtake; I shall divide spoils; I shall fill my soul; I shall kill with my sword; my hand will rule.

10 You sent out your wind; the sea covered them; they sank like lead in violent water.

11 Who is like you among gods, Lord? Who is like you, glorified among holy ones, marvelous in glories, doing wonders?

12 You stretched out your right hand, and the earth swallowed them.

13 With your righteousness you led this people of yours whom you redeemed; with your strength you encouraged them toward your holy lodging.

14 Nations heard and were angered; pangs seized those dwelling in Phylistiim.

15 Then leaders of Edom hastened, and rulers of the Moabites; trembling seized them; all who dwell in Chanaan melted.

16 May fear and trembling fall upon them; by the greatness of your arm let them be turned to stone, until your people pass through, Lord, until this people of yours whom you acquired pass through.

17 Bring them in and plant them on a mountain of your inheritance, in your prepared dwelling which you made, Lord, a sanctuary, Lord, which your hands prepared.

18 The Lord reigns for the age and unto an age and still further.

19 Because Pharao's horse entered the sea with chariots and riders, and the Lord brought upon them the water of the sea; but the sons of Israel walked through dry land in the midst of the sea.

Chapter 2

1 t A song of Moyses in Deuteronomy.

1 ATTEND, heaven, and I shall speak, and let earth hear words from my mouth.

2 Let my utterance be awaited like rain, and let my words descend like dew, like a shower upon grass and like snowfall upon herbage.

3 Because I called the name of the Lord; give greatness to our God.

4 God, his works are true, and all his ways are judgment; a faithful God, and there is no injustice; righteous and holy is the Lord.

5 Blameworthy children sinned, not against him, a crooked and perverted generation.

6 Do you thus repay these things to the Lord, foolish and unwise people? Did not this one himself, your father, acquire you and make you and create you?

7 Remember days of an age; understand years of a generation of generations; ask your father, and he will announce to you, your elders, and they will tell you.

8 When the Most High was dividing nations, as he scattered sons of Adam, he set boundaries of nations according to the number of angels of God,

9 and his people Iakob became the Lord's portion, Israel the measured allotment of his inheritance.

10 He made him sufficient in the wilderness, in thirst of burning heat in a waterless place; he surrounded him and disciplined him and guarded him like the pupil of an eye,

11 like an eagle to shelter its nest, and he yearned over his nestlings; spreading his wings, he received them and took them up upon his back.

12 The Lord alone led them, and there was no foreign god with them.

13 He brought them up upon the strength of the earth; he fed them produce of fields; they sucked honey from rock and oil from solid rock,

14 butter of cattle and milk of sheep with fat of lambs and rams, offspring of bulls and goats, with fat of kidneys of wheat; and they drank blood of a grape as wine.

15 And Iakob ate and was filled, and the beloved one kicked away; he grew fat, grew thick, grew broad; and he forsook God who made him and departed from God his savior.

16 They provoked me over foreign things; with their abominations they embittered me;

17 they sacrificed to demons and not to God, to gods whom they did not know; new and recent ones have come whom their fathers did not know.

18 You forsook God who begot you, and forgot God who nourishes you.

19 And the Lord saw and grew jealous and was provoked because of the wrath of his sons and daughters,

20 and said, I shall turn my face away from them and show what will happen to them at the last; because it is a perverted generation, sons in whom there is no faith.

21 They made me jealous over what is no god; they angered me with their idols; and I shall make them jealous over what is no nation; over a nation without understanding I shall anger them.

22 Because a fire has been kindled from my anger, it will burn down to Hades below, devour earth and its produce, set ablaze foundations of mountains.

23 I shall gather evils upon them, and expend my arrows upon them.

24 Wasting away with hunger and the devouring of birds, and incurable backward convulsion; I shall send out upon them teeth of wild beasts, with the fury of things crawling upon earth.

25 Outside, a sword will bereave them, and from the chambers, fear; a young man with a virgin, a suckling with an established elder.

26 I said, I shall scatter them; I shall indeed put an end to their memorial among humans,

27 were it not for the wrath of enemies, so that they may not last long, and so that the adversaries may not attack together, lest they say, Our hand is high, and the Lord did not do all these things.

28 Because it is a nation that has lost counsel, and there is no knowledge among them.

29 They did not take thought to understand these things; let them receive them for the coming time.

30 How will one pursue a thousand, and two move tens of thousands, unless God sold them and the Lord handed them over?

31 For their gods are not like our God; but our enemies are senseless.

32 For their vine is from a vine of Sodoma, and their vine branch from Gomorra; their grape is a grape of gall, a cluster of bitterness for them;

33 their wine is the venom of dragons and the incurable venom of asps.

34 Behold, have not all these things been gathered with me and sealed in my treasuries?

35 On a day of vengeance I shall repay, at a time when their foot slips; because the day of their destruction is near, and things prepared for you are present.

36 Because the Lord will judge his people, and concerning his slaves he will be comforted; for he saw them enfeebled and failing under attack and slackened.

37 And the Lord said, Where are their gods, in whom they had trusted,

38 whose fat of their sacrifices you were eating and whose wine of their libations you were drinking? Let them rise and help you and become shelterers for you.

39 See, see that I am, and there is no god except me; I shall kill and make alive; I shall strike, and I shall heal; and there is no one who will rescue from my hands.

40 Because I shall lift my hand to heaven and swear by my right hand and say, I live unto the age,

41 because I shall sharpen my sword like lightning, and my hand will hold fast to judgment, and I shall repay justice to the enemies, and to those who hate me I shall repay;

42 I shall make my arrows drunk with blood, and my sword will devour flesh, from the blood of wounded ones and captivity, from the head of rulers of nations.

43 Rejoice, heavens, together with him, and let all the angels of God bow down to him; rejoice, nations, with his people, and let all sons of God strengthen themselves for him; because the blood of his sons is avenged, and he will avenge and repay justice to the enemies, and repay those who hate, and the Lord will cleanse the land of his people.

Chapter 3

1 t A prayer of Anna, mother of Samouel.

1 MY HEART WAS STRENGTHENED in the Lord; my horn was exalted in my God; my mouth was widened against my enemies; I rejoiced in your salvation.

2 Because there is no holy one like the Lord, and there is no righteous one like our God; there is no holy one except you.

3 Do not boast and do not speak lofty things, nor let grand speech come out of your mouth, because the Lord is a God of knowledge, and God prepares his practices.

4 The bow of mighty ones grew weak, and those who are weak girded themselves with strength;

5 those full of bread were diminished, and the hungry left the land; because a barren woman bore seven, and she who was abundant in children grew weak.

6 The Lord puts to death and brings to life, brings down to Hades and brings up;

7 the Lord makes poor and makes rich, humbles and lifts up.

8 He raises a needy one from earth and lifts a poor one from a dung heap, to seat him with rulers of a people, and assigns a throne of glory to them as an inheritance.

9 Giving a prayer to the one who prays, and he blessed the years of a righteous one; because a man is not mighty by strength,

10 the Lord will make his adversary weak; the Lord is holy. Let the wise one not boast in his wisdom, and let the mighty one not boast in his might, and let the rich one not boast in his riches, but let him who boasts boast only in this: to understand and know the Lord, and to do judgment and righteousness in the midst of the earth. The Lord went up into heavens and thundered; he himself will judge the ends of earth, being righteous, and gives strength to our kings, and will exalt the horn of his anointed one.

Chapter 4

1 t A prayer of Ionas.

1 I CRIED in my affliction to the Lord my God, and he heard my cry from the belly of Hades; you heard my voice.

2 You cast me into depths of the heart of the sea, and rivers surrounded me; all your billows and your waves passed over me.

3 And I said, I have been thrust away from your eyes; shall I again look toward your holy temple?

4 Water poured around me as far as my soul; the utmost abyss surrounded me; my head sank into clefts of mountains.

5 I descended into a land whose bars are eternal restraints, and let my life ascend from corruption, Lord my God.

6 When my soul failed from me, I remembered the Lord, and may my prayer come to you, into your holy temple.

7 Those who guard vain and false things forsook their mercy.

8 But I shall sacrifice to you with a voice of praise and acknowledgment; whatever I vowed, I shall repay you for my salvation, to the Lord.

Chapter 5

1 t A song of Esaias.

1 I SHALL SING, then, to the beloved one a song of the loved one for my vineyard; a vineyard came to be for the beloved one on a horn, in a fertile place,

2 and I put a fence around it and planted a vine in Sorek and built a tower in its midst and dug a wine-vat in it; and I waited for it to produce a grape, but it produced thorns.

3 And now, person of Iouda and those dwelling in Ierousalem, judge between me and my vineyard.

4 What shall I yet do to my vineyard that I did not do to it? Because I waited for it to produce a grape, but it produced thorns.

5 But now I shall announce to you what I shall do to my vineyard; I shall remove its fence, and it will be for plunder, and I shall tear down its wall, and it will be for trampling,

6 and I shall abandon my vineyard, and it will certainly not be pruned nor dug, and thorns will come up into it as into waste land, and I shall command the clouds not to rain rain upon it.

7 For the vineyard of the Lord Sabaoth is the house of Israel, and a person of Iouda a beloved new plant, and I waited for it to do judgment, but it did lawlessness, and not righteousness, but a cry.

8 Woe to those who join house to house and bring field near to field, so that they may take away their neighbor's property; will you dwell alone upon the earth?

9 For all these things were heard in the ears of the Lord Sabaoth.

Chapter 6

1 t A prayer of Esaias.

1 FROM NIGHT my spirit rises early toward you, God, because your commands are light upon the earth; learn righteousness, you who dwell upon the earth.

2 For the ungodly one has ceased; he will certainly not learn righteousness upon the earth; he will certainly not do truth; let the ungodly one be removed, so that he may not see the glory of the Lord.

3 Lord, your arm is high, and they did not know, but having known, let them be ashamed; zeal will seize an undisciplined people, and now fire will devour the adversaries.

4 Lord our God, give us peace; for you repaid all things to us.

5 Lord our God, acquire us; Lord, apart from you we know no other; we name your name.

6 But the dead will certainly not see life, nor will physicians certainly raise them; because of this you brought calamity and destroyed and removed every male of theirs.

7 Add evils to them, Lord; add evils to the glorious ones of the earth.

8 Lord, in affliction I remembered you; in small affliction your discipline is for us.

9 And as she who is in labor draws near to giving birth and cries out in her pang, so we became to your beloved one.

10 Because of your fear, Lord, we conceived in the womb and labored and gave birth; we made a spirit of your salvation upon the earth; we shall not fall, but those dwelling upon the earth will fall.

11 The dead will rise, and those in the tombs will be raised, and those in the earth will rejoice; for the dew from you is a healing for them, but the land of the ungodly will fall.

12 Go, my people, enter your chambers, shut your door, hide yourself for a little while, until the wrath of the Lord passes by.

Chapter 7

1 t A prayer of Ezekias.

1 I said, At the height of my days I shall go in the gates of Hades; I shall leave behind the remaining years.

2 I said, No longer shall I see the salvation of God upon the earth; I shall certainly not see a human among those dwelling.

3 I failed from my kindred; I left behind the rest of my life; it went out and departed from me like one who takes down a tent after pitching it; my spirit within me became like a web, with a weaving woman drawing near to cut it off.

4 On that day I was handed over until morning as to a lion; thus he shattered all my bones; for from day until night I was handed over.

5 Like a swallow, so I shall utter a sound, and like a dove, so I shall murmur; for my eyes failed from looking to the height of heaven toward the Lord,

6 who rescued me and removed from me the pain of my soul.

7 Lord, for concerning it an announcement was made to you, and you roused my breath, and being comforted, I lived;

8 for you chose my soul, so that it may not perish, and cast behind me all my sins.

9 For those in Hades will not praise you, nor will those who died bless you, nor will those in Hades hope in your mercy;

10 the living will bless you, as I also do. For from today I shall make children who will announce your righteousness, Lord of my salvation,

11 and I shall not cease blessing you with a psaltery all the days of my life before the house of God.

Chapter 8

1 t A prayer of Manasse.

1 LORD almighty, God of our fathers, of Abraam and Isaak and Iakob and of their righteous seed,

2 who made heaven and earth with all their adornment,

3 who fettered the sea by the word of your command, who shut the abyss and sealed it with your fearful and glorious name;

4 whom all things shudder at and tremble before the face of your power,

5 because the magnificence of your glory is unbearable, and the wrath of your threat against sinners cannot be withstood,

6 and the mercy of your promise is immeasurable and unsearchable,

7 because you are Lord Most High, compassionate, long-suffering and abundant in mercy, and repenting over the evils of humans;

8 you, therefore, Lord, God of the righteous, did not set repentance for the righteous, for Abraam and Isaak and Iakob, who have not sinned against you, but you set repentance for me the sinner,

9 because I sinned beyond the number of sand of the sea; my lawless deeds multiplied, Lord, multiplied, and I am not worthy to gaze and see the height of heaven because of the abundance of my injustices,

10 bent down by a great bond of iron, to lift my head on account of my sins, and there is no relief for me, because I provoked your anger and did evil before you, setting up abominations and multiplying offenses.

11 And now I bend the knee of my heart, begging for the kindness from you:

12 I have sinned, Lord, I have sinned, and I know my lawless deeds.

13 I ask, begging you, Release me, Lord, release me; do not destroy me together with my lawless deeds, nor, being angry unto the age, keep evils for me, nor condemn me in the lowest parts of the earth. Because you are, Lord, the God of those who repent,

14 and may you show your goodness in me; because, though I am unworthy, you will save me according to your abundant mercy,

15 and I shall praise you continually in the days of my life. Because all the power of the heavens hymns you, and yours is the glory unto the ages. Amen.

Chapter 9

1 t A prayer of Ambakoum.

1 LORD, I have heard your report and was afraid; I considered your works and was astonished. In the midst of two living creatures you will be known; when the years draw near you will be recognized; when the time is present you will be shown forth; when my soul is troubled, in wrath you will remember mercy.

2 God will come from Thaiman, and the Holy One from Mount Pharan, shaded and thickly wooded. Interlude. His excellence covered heavens, and the earth is full of his praise.

3 And his radiance will be like light, horns in his hands, and he set a mighty love of his strength.

4 A word will go before his face, and he will go out, his feet in sandals.

5 He stood, and the earth was shaken; he looked, and nations melted. The mountains were shattered by force; eternal hills melted.

6 I saw his eternal paths in place of toils; dwellings of Ethiopians will be terrified, and the tents of the land of Madiam.

7 Were you angered at rivers, Lord, or was your anger at rivers, or your onrush at the sea? Because you will mount your horses, and your riding is salvation.

8 Stretching, you will stretch your bow against scepters, says the Lord. Interlude. Earth will be broken open by rivers.

9 Peoples will see you and be in labor. Scattering waters of a passage; the abyss gave its voice; the height of its apparition was raised.

10 The sun and the moon stood in her station; your missiles will go into light, into the radiance of the lightning of your weapons.

11 With your threat you will diminish earth, and with anger you will bring down nations.

12 You went out for the salvation of your people, to save your anointed ones; you cast death upon heads of lawless ones; you raised bonds as far as the neck. Interlude.

13 You cut through heads of rulers in astonishment; they will be shaken in it; they will open their bridles like a poor one eating secretly.

14 And you drove your horses into the sea, troubling many waters.

15 I kept watch, and my belly was terrified at the voice of the prayer of my lips, and trembling entered my bones, and beneath me my condition was troubled. I shall rest on the day of my affliction, to go up to a people of my sojourning.

16 Because a fig tree will not bear fruit, and there will be no produce on the vines; the work of an olive tree will prove false, and the plains will not produce food; sheep failed from lack of food, and oxen do not exist at the mangers of their propitiation.

17 But I shall exult in the Lord; I shall rejoice in God my savior.

18 The Lord my God is my strength, and will set my feet for completion; upon the high places he brings me up, to conquer in his song.

Chapter 10

1 t A prayer of Azarias.

1 BLESSED are you, Lord, God of our fathers, and praiseworthy and glorified is your name unto the ages,

2 because you are righteous in all things you did to us, and all your works are true, and your ways upright, and all your judgments true,

3 and you executed judgments of truth in all things you brought upon us, and upon the holy city of our fathers, Ierousalem, because in truth and judgment you brought all these things because of our sins.

4 Because we sinned and acted lawlessly in departing from you, and sinned in all things, and did not hear your commandments,

5 nor kept them nor did as you commanded us, so that it may be well with us.

6 And all things you brought upon us, and all things you did to us, you did in true judgment,

7 and handed us over into hands of lawless enemies, most hateful apostates, and to a king unjust and most evil beyond all the earth.

8 And now it is not possible for us to open our mouth; shame and reproach came upon your slaves and those who revere you.

9 Do not, then, hand us over to the end, for the sake of your name, and do not scatter your covenant,

10 and do not remove your mercy from us, for the sake of Abraam who was loved by you, and for the sake of Isaak your slave and Israel your holy one,

11 to whom you spoke, saying that you would multiply their seed like the stars of heaven and like the sand by the lip of the sea.

12 Because, Master, we were made smaller than all the nations, and are lowly in all the earth today because of our sins,

13 and at this time there is no ruler and prophet and leader, nor a whole burnt offering nor sacrifice nor offering nor incense, no place to offer firstfruits before you and find mercy.

14 But with a broken soul and a spirit of humility may we be received, as with whole burnt offerings of rams and bulls and as with tens of thousands of fat lambs;

15 thus let our sacrifice be before you today, and let us follow after you completely, because there is no shame for those who trust in you.

16 And now we follow with a whole heart and fear you and seek your face; do not put us to shame,

17 but act with us according to your gentleness and according to the abundance of your mercy,

18 and rescue us according to your marvelous things and give glory to your name, Lord.

19 And may all who show evils to your slaves be abashed, and may they be put to shame from all power and might, and may their strength be shattered,

20 and let them know that you are Lord, the only God, and glorious over the whole inhabited world.

Chapter 11

1 t A hymn of the three children.

1 BLESSED are you, Lord, God of our fathers, and praiseworthy and exalted above all unto the ages, and blessed is the holy name of your glory, and praised above all and exalted above all unto the ages.

2 Blessed are you in the temple of your holy glory, and hymned above all and glorious above all unto the ages.

3 Blessed are you, who see abysses, seated upon cheroubin, and praised above all and exalted above all unto the ages.

4 Blessed are you upon the throne of your kingdom, and hymned above all and exalted above all unto the ages.

5 Blessed are you in the firmament of heaven, and hymned above all and glorious above all unto the ages.

6 Bless the Lord, all works of the Lord; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

7 Bless the Lord, angels of the Lord; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

8 Bless the Lord, heavens; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

9 Bless the Lord, all waters above the heavens; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

10 Bless the Lord, all powers of the Lord; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

11 Bless the Lord, sun and moon; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

12 Bless the Lord, stars of heaven; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

13 Bless the Lord, every shower and dew; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

14 Bless the Lord, all winds; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

15 Bless the Lord, fire and burning heat; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

16 Bless the Lord, cold and scorching heat; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

17 Bless the Lord, dews and snowfalls; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

18 Bless the Lord, frost and cold; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

19 Bless the Lord, hoarfrosts and snows; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

20 Bless the Lord, nights and days; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

21 Bless the Lord, light and darkness; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

22 Bless the Lord, lightnings and clouds; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

23 Let the earth bless the Lord; let it hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

24 Bless the Lord, mountains and hills; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

25 Bless the Lord, all things growing in the earth; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

26 Bless the Lord, springs; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

27 Bless the Lord, seas and rivers; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

28 Bless the Lord, sea monsters and all things moving in the waters; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

29 Bless the Lord, all birds of heaven; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

30 Bless the Lord, wild beasts and all cattle; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

31 Bless the Lord, sons of humans; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

32 Let Israel bless the Lord; let him hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

33 Bless the Lord, priests of the Lord; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

34 Bless the Lord, slaves of the Lord; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

35 Bless the Lord, spirits and souls of the righteous; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

36 Bless the Lord, holy ones and humble in heart; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

37 Bless the Lord, Ananias, Azarias, Misael; hymn and exalt him above all unto the ages.

Chapter 12

1 t A prayer of Maria the God-bearer.

1 MY SOUL MAGNIFIES the Lord,

2 and my spirit exulted in God my savior,

3 because he looked upon the lowliness of his female slave; for behold, from now all generations will call me blessed,

4 because the Mighty One did great things for me, and holy is his name,

5 and his mercy is unto generation and generation for those who fear him.

6 He did strength with his arm; he scattered the arrogant in the thought of their heart;

7 he brought down rulers from thrones and exalted the lowly;

8 he filled the hungry with good things and sent the rich away empty.

9 He took hold of Israel his servant, to remember mercy,

10 as he spoke to our fathers, to Abraam and to his seed unto an age.

Chapter 13

1 t A prayer of Zacharias.

1 BLESSED is the Lord, the God of Israel, because he visited and effected redemption for his people,

2 and raised a horn of salvation for us in the house of Dauid his servant,

3 as he spoke through the mouth of his holy prophets from an age,

4 salvation from our enemies and from the hand of all who hate us,

5 to do mercy with our fathers and remember his holy covenant,

6 an oath which he swore to Abraam our father,

7 to grant us, delivered from the hand of our enemies, fearlessly

8 to serve him in holiness and righteousness before him all our days.

9 And you also, child, will be called a prophet of the Most High; for you will go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways,

10 to give knowledge of salvation to his people in forgiveness of our sins,

11 through the bowels of mercy of our God, in which a rising from on high visited us,

12 to shine upon those sitting in darkness and the shadow of death, to direct our feet into a way of peace.

Chapter 14

1 t A prayer of Symeon.

1 NOW you release your slave, Master, according to your word, in peace,

2 because my eyes saw your salvation,

3 which you prepared before the face of all the peoples,

4 a light for revelation of nations and glory of your people Israel.

Chapter 15

1 t A morning hymn.

1 GLORY to God in the highest places,

2 and upon earth peace,

3 among humans good pleasure.

4 We praise you,

5 we bless you,

6 we bow down to you,

7 we glorify you,
8 we give thanks to you
9 because of your great glory,
10 Lord king,
11 heavenly one,
12 God, Father almighty,
13 Lord, only-begotten Son,
14 Jesus Christ,
15 and Holy Spirit.
16 Lord God,
17 the Lamb of God,
18 the Son of the Father,
19 who takes away the sins of the world,
20 have mercy on us;
21 who takes away the sins of the world,
22 receive our supplication;
23 who sits at the right hand of the Father,
24 have mercy on us.
25 Because you alone are holy,
26 you alone are Lord,
27 Jesus Christ,
28 unto the glory of God the Father. Amen.
29 Every day I shall bless you,
30 and praise your name unto the age
31 and unto the age of the age.
32 Deem us worthy, Lord, on this day also,
33 to be guarded without sin.
34 Blessed are you, Lord, God of our fathers,
35 and praiseworthy and glorified is your name unto the ages. Amen.
36 Blessed are you, Lord; teach me your ordinances;
37 blessed are you, Lord; teach me your ordinances;
38 blessed are you, Lord; teach me your ordinances.
39 Lord, you became a refuge for us in generation and generation.

40 I said, Lord, have mercy on me,
41 heal my soul, because I sinned against you.
42 Lord, to you I fled for refuge;
43 teach me to do your will, because you are my God;
44 because with you is a fountain of life,
45 in your light we shall see light;
46 extend your mercy to those who know you.

Proverbs

Chapter 1

1 Proverbs of Salomon, son of Dauid, who reigned in Israel,

2 to know wisdom and discipline, and to understand words of prudence,

3 and to receive turns of words, and to understand true righteousness and direct judgment,

4 so that he may give shrewdness to the innocent, and perception and thought to a young child;

5 for a wise one who hears these things will be wiser, and the understanding one will acquire guidance,

6 and will understand a parable and a dark saying, sayings of the wise and riddles.

7 The beginning of wisdom is fear of God, and understanding is good for all who practice it; reverence toward God is the beginning of perception, but the ungodly will despise wisdom and discipline.

8 Hear, son, your father's discipline, and do not thrust away your mother's ordinances;

9 for you will receive a crown of graces for your head and a golden collar around your neck.

10 Son, let ungodly men not lead you astray, nor consent if they exhort you, saying,

11 Come with us, share in blood, and let us hide a righteous man unjustly in the earth,

12 and let us swallow him alive like Hades, and remove his memory from the earth;

13 let us seize his costly possession, and fill our houses with spoils;

14 cast your lot among us, and let us all acquire a common purse, and let there be one pouch for us.

15 Do not walk on a way with them, but turn your foot aside from their paths;

16 for their feet run toward evil, and are swift to shed blood;

17 for nets are not unjustly spread for winged creatures.

18 For those who share in murder themselves store up evils for themselves, and the overthrow of lawless men is evil.

19 These are the ways of all who carry out lawless things; for by ungodliness they take away their own soul.

20 Wisdom is hymned at exits, and in squares she practices frank speech,

21 and on the tops of walls she is proclaimed, and at rulers' gates she sits beside them, and at city gates she confidently says,

22 As long as the innocent hold fast to righteousness, they will not be ashamed; but the foolish, being desirers of insolence, became ungodly and hated perception,

23 and became liable to reproofs. Behold, I shall send forth to you an utterance of my breath, and teach you my word.

24 Since I was calling and you did not obey, and I was extending words and you did not attend,

25 but you were rendering my counsels void, and disobeyed my reproofs,

26 therefore I also shall laugh at your destruction, and rejoice over you when ruin comes to you,

27 and when tumult reaches you suddenly, and overthrow is present like a storm, and when affliction and siege come to you, or when ruin comes to you.

28 For it will be when you call upon me, but I shall not hear you; evil ones will seek me and not find me.

29 For they hated wisdom, and did not choose the fear of the Lord, 30 nor wished to attend to my counsels, but were sneering at my reproofs.

31 Therefore they will eat the fruits of their own way, and be filled with their own ungodliness;

32 for in return for wronging infants they will be murdered, and examination will destroy the ungodly.

33 But the one who hears me will encamp in hope, and rest without fear from every evil.

Chapter 2

1 Son, if, receiving an utterance of my commandment, you hide it with yourself,

2 your ear will obey wisdom, and you will apply your heart to understanding, and apply it to admonition for your son.

3 For if you call upon wisdom and give your voice to understanding, and seek perception with a great voice,

4 and if you seek her like silver and search her out like treasures,

5 then you will understand fear of the Lord and find knowledge of God.

6 Because the Lord gives wisdom, and from his face come knowledge and understanding;

7 and he stores up salvation for those who act rightly; he will defend their journey,

8 to guard ways of ordinances, and he will preserve the way of those who revere him.

9 Then you will understand righteousness and judgment, and set straight all good tracks.

10 For if wisdom comes into your thought, and perception seems beautiful to your soul,

11 good counsel will guard you, and holy thought will keep you,

12 so that she may deliver you from an evil way and from a man who speaks nothing trustworthy.

13 O you who forsake straight ways to walk in ways of darkness,

14 who rejoice over evils and delight in evil perversity,

15 whose paths are crooked, and their tracks curved,

16 to make you far from a straight way and a stranger to righteous judgment.

17 Son, let evil counsel not overtake you, which leaves behind the teaching of youth and has forgotten a divine covenant;

18 for she set her house beside death, and her tracks beside Hades with the earthborn;

19 all who walk in her will not return, nor will they attain straight paths; for they are not overtaken by years of life.

20 For if they were walking good paths, they would have found smooth paths of righteousness.

21 The kind will be inhabitants of earth, and the innocent will remain in it, because the upright will encamp on earth, and the holy will remain in it;

22 ways of the ungodly will perish from earth, and the lawless will be thrust out of it.

Chapter 3

1 Son, do not forget my laws, and let your heart keep my words;

2 for they will add to you length of life and years of life and peace.

3 Let mercies and faithfulnesses not fail you, but fasten them upon your neck, and you will find grace;

4 and take thought for good things before the Lord and humans.

5 Be trusting in God with a whole heart, but do not be exalted over your own wisdom;

6 in all your ways make her known, so that she may cut your ways straight, [and your foot will certainly not stumble.]

7 Do not be prudent in your own estimation, but fear God and turn aside from every evil;

8 then there will be healing for your body and care for your bones.

9 Honor the Lord from your righteous labors, and offer firstfruits to him from your fruits of righteousness,

10 so that your storehouses may be filled with an abundance of grain, and your winepresses overflow with wine.

11 Son, do not make light of the Lord's discipline, nor grow faint when reproved by him;

12 for whom the Lord loves he disciplines, and he scourges every son whom he receives.

13 Blessed is a human who found wisdom, and a mortal who saw prudence;

14 for trading in her is better than treasures of gold and silver.

15 And she is more precious than costly stones; nothing evil will oppose her; she is well known to all who draw near to her, and everything precious is not worthy of her.

16 For length of life and years of life are in her right hand, and in her left hand riches and glory;

16 a From her mouth righteousness goes out, and she carries law and mercy upon her tongue.

17 Her ways are beautiful ways, and all her paths are in peace;

18 she is a tree of life to all who hold fast to her, and secure for those leaning upon her as upon the Lord.

19 God founded the earth by wisdom, and prepared heavens with prudence;

20 with perception abysses were broken open, and clouds flowed with dews.

21 Son, do not drift away, but keep my counsel and thought,

22 so that your soul may live, and grace be around your neck.

22 a And there will be healing for your flesh and care for your bones,

23 so that you may walk confidently in peace on all your ways, and your foot will certainly not stumble.

24 For if you sit, you will be fearless, and if you lie down, you will sleep pleasantly;

25 and you will not fear terror coming upon you, nor onrushes of ungodly ones coming upon you;

26 for the Lord will be upon all your ways, and will support your foot, so that you may not be shaken.

27 Do not withhold doing good to a needy one whenever your hand has the means to help;

28 do not say, Go away and return, and tomorrow I shall give, when you are able to do good; for you do not know what the coming day will bear.

29 Do not devise evils against your friend who sojourns and trusts in you.

30 Do not be hostile toward a human in vain, lest he do some evil to you.

31 Do not acquire reproaches of evil men, nor be jealous of their ways;

32 for every lawless one is unclean before the Lord, and he does not sit in council among the righteous.

33 God's curse is in houses of the ungodly, but dwellings of the righteous are blessed.

34 The Lord opposes the arrogant, but gives grace to the humble.

35 The wise will inherit glory, but the ungodly exalted dishonor.

Chapter 4

1 Hear, children, a father's discipline, and attend to know thought;

2 for I give you a good gift; do not forsake my law.

3 For I also became a son obedient to a father and loved before a mother's face,

4 who were saying and teaching me, Let our word be fixed in your heart;

5 guard commandments; do not forget nor overlook an utterance of my mouth,

6 nor forsake her, and she will hold fast to you; love her, and she will keep you;

8 fortify her, and she will exalt you; honor her, so that she may embrace you,

9 so that she may give your head a crown of graces, and defend you with a crown of delight.

10 Hear, son, and receive my words, and years of your life will be multiplied, so that there may be many ways of life for you;

11 for I teach you ways of wisdom, and set you on straight tracks.

12 For if you walk, your steps will not be confined; and if you run, you will not grow weary.

13 Take hold of my discipline; do not let go, but guard her for yourself for your life.

14 Do not enter ways of the ungodly, nor be jealous of ways of the lawless;

15 in whatever place they encamp, do not enter there, but turn aside from them and pass by.

16 For they will certainly not sleep unless they do evil; their sleep has been taken away, and they do not lie down;

17 for these feed on food of ungodliness, and become drunk with lawless wine.

18 But the ways of the righteous shine like light; they go forward and illuminate until the day comes fully right;

19 but the ways of the ungodly are dark; they do not know how they stumble.

20 Son, attend to my utterance, and apply your ear to my words,

21 so that your springs may not fail you; guard them in your heart;

22 for they are life to those who find them, and healing to all flesh.

23 With every guard keep your heart; for from these are exits of life.

24 Remove a crooked mouth from yourself, and thrust unjust lips far from you.

25 Let your eyes look straight, and let your eyelids incline toward righteous things.

26 Make straight tracks for your feet, and direct your ways.

27 Do not turn aside to the right or to the left, but turn your foot away from an evil way;

27 a For God knows the ways on the right, but those on the left are perverted;

28 and he himself will make your tracks straight, and lead your journeys forward in peace.

Chapter 5

1 Son, attend to my wisdom, and apply your ear to my words,

2 so that you may guard good thought; and I command you perception of my lips.

3 Do not attend to a worthless woman; for honey drips from a prostitute's lips, who for a time makes your throat smooth,

4 yet afterward you will find it more bitter than gall and sharpened more than a two-edged sword.

5 For the feet of folly bring those who use her down with death into Hades, and her footsteps are not firmly fixed;

6 for she does not enter ways of life, and her tracks are slippery and not well known.

7 Now therefore, son, hear me, and do not render my words void;

8 make your way far from her; do not draw near the doors of her houses,

9 so that you may not give away your life to others and your livelihood to the merciless,

10 so that strangers may not be filled with your strength, and your labors enter strangers' houses,

11 and you will regret it at the last, when the flesh of your body is worn away,

12 and say, How I hated discipline, and my heart turned aside from reproofs;

13 I was not hearing the voice of him who disciplined me, and was not applying my ear to him who taught me;

14 I came close to being in every evil in the midst of assembly and congregation.

15 Drink waters from your vessels and from your spring's wells.

16 Let the waters from your spring not overflow for you, but let your waters pass through your squares;

17 let them belong to you alone, and let no stranger share with you;

18 let your spring of water be your own, and rejoice together with the wife of your youth.

19 Let a deer of friendship and a foal of your graces consort with you, and let your own woman lead you and be with you at every time; for going about with her in her friendship, you will be greatly increased.

20 Do not be much with a foreign woman, nor be held in the embraces of one who is not your own;

21 for a man's ways are before God's eyes, and he observes all his tracks.

22 Lawless acts hunt a man, and each is bound tightly by cords of his own sins;

23 this one dies with the undisciplined, and from the abundance of his own livelihood he was cast out, and perished through folly.

Chapter 6

1 Son, if you become surety for your friend, you will hand your hand over to an enemy;

2 for a man's own lips are a strong snare, and he is caught by the lips of his own mouth.

3 Do, son, what I command you, and save yourself – for you have come into hands of evil ones through your friend – go without growing faint, and urge your friend also, for whom you became surety;

4 do not give sleep to your eyes, nor slumber with your eyelids,

5 so that you may be saved like a gazelle from nooses and like a bird from a snare.

6 Go to the ant, O sluggard, and seeing its ways, emulate it, and become wiser than it;

7 for though no cultivated field belongs to it, and it has no one compelling it, nor is under a master,

8 it prepares its food in summer, and makes abundant provision at harvest.

8 a Or go to the bee and learn how she is a worker, and how nobly she performs her work,

9 whose labors kings and private people take for health, and she is desired by all and held in esteem;

10 although weak in strength, having honored wisdom, she was advanced.

9 How long, sluggard, do you lie down? And when will you rise from sleep?

10 You sleep a little, and sit a little, and slumber a little, and embrace your chest with your hands a little;

11 then poverty comes upon you like an evil traveler, and need like a good runner.

11 a But if you are diligent, your harvest will come like a spring, and need will desert you like an evil runner.

12 A foolish and lawless man walks ways that are not good;

13 and he himself winks with an eye, signals with a foot, and teaches with gestures of fingers,

14 and with a perverted heart devises evils at every time; such a one sets up disturbances for a city.

15 Because of this his destruction comes suddenly, a breaking apart and incurable shattering.

16 Because he delights in all things the Lord hates, and is shattered through uncleanness of soul;

17 the eye of an insolent one, an unjust tongue, hands shedding a righteous one's blood,

18 and a heart devising evil reasonings, and feet hastening to do evil;

19 an unjust witness kindles lies, and sends disputes between brothers.

20 Son, guard your father's laws, and do not thrust away your mother's ordinances;

21 fasten them upon your soul continually, and hang them as a collar upon your neck.

22 Whenever you walk, bring her along, and let her be with you; and when you lie down, let her guard you, so that she may speak with you when you rise;

23 because a commandment of law is a lamp and light, and reproof and discipline are a way of life,

24 to preserve you from a married woman and from slander of a foreign tongue.

25 Let desire for beauty not conquer you, nor be hunted by your eyes, nor seized by her eyelids;

26 for a prostitute's price is as much as even one loaf, but a woman of men hunts precious souls.

27 Will someone bind fire in his bosom, yet not burn up his garments?

28 Or will someone walk upon coals of fire, yet not burn up his feet?

29 Thus the one who goes in to a married woman; he will not be acquitted, nor anyone who touches her.

30 It is not surprising if someone is caught stealing, for he steals to fill his soul when hungry;

31 but if he is caught, he will repay sevenfold, and giving all his possessions, will deliver himself.

32 But the adulterer, through lack of sense, procures destruction for his soul,

33 and bears pains and dishonors, and his reproach will not be erased unto the age.

34 For her husband's anger is full of jealousy; he will not spare on a day of judgment;

35 he will not exchange his enmity for any ransom, nor be reconciled by many gifts.

Chapter 7

1 Son, guard my words, and hide my commandments with yourself;

1 a Son, honor the Lord, and you will be strong, and apart from him fear no other.

2 Guard my commandments, and you will live, and my words like pupils of eyes;

3 put them around your fingers, and inscribe them upon the breadth of your heart.

4 Say that wisdom is your sister, and procure prudence as an acquaintance for yourself,

5 so that she may keep you from a foreign and evil woman, if she assails you with pleasing words.

6 For from a window of her house, peering out into the squares,

7 whatever young man among the foolish children she sees lacking sense,

8 passing by a corner in the passages of her houses,

9 and speaking in evening darkness, when the silence of night is gloomy,

10 the woman meets him, having a prostitute's appearance, who makes young men's hearts fly away.

11 And she is excited and prodigal, and her feet do not rest in a house;

12 for at one time she roams outside, and at another in squares she lies in wait beside every corner.

13 Then taking hold of him, she kissed him, and with a shameless face said to him,

14 I have a peace sacrifice; today I repay my vows;

15 because of this I came out to meet you; longing for your face, I have found you;

16 I have arranged my bed with bands, and spread it with double-sided coverings from Egypt;

17 I have sprinkled my couch with saffron, and my house with cinnamon;

18 come, and let us enjoy friendship until dawn; come here, and let us roll in love;

19 for my husband is not present in the house, but has gone on a long journey,

20 taking a bundle of silver in his hand; after many days he will return to his house.

21 And she led him astray with much conversation, and with nooses from her lips ran him aground.

22 And he followed her, made a fool, as an ox is led to slaughter, and as a dog to bonds,

23 or as a deer struck by an arrow in the liver, and he hastens like a bird into a snare, not knowing that he runs concerning his soul.

24 Now therefore, son, hear me, and attend to words of my mouth;

25 let your heart not incline to her ways;

26 for she has wounded and cast down many, and innumerable are those she has murdered;

27 her house is ways of Hades, leading down into the chambers of death.

Chapter 8

1 You will proclaim wisdom, so that prudence may obey you;

2 for she is upon the high summits, and has stood in the midst of the paths;

3 for she sits beside rulers' gates, and at entrances she is hymned:

4 You, O humans, I exhort, and send forth my voice to sons of humans;

5 understand shrewdness, innocent ones, and you undisciplined ones, put in a heart.

6 Hear me, for I shall speak noble things, and bring forth straight things from my lips;

7 because my throat will meditate truth, and lying lips are abhorred before me.

8 All the words of my mouth are with righteousness; nothing in them is crooked or twisted;

9 all are plain to those who understand, and straight to those who find knowledge.

10 Take discipline and not silver, and knowledge above tested gold, and choose perception instead of pure gold;

11 for wisdom is better than costly stones, and everything precious is not worthy of her.

12 I, wisdom, encamped in counsel, and I called upon knowledge and thought.

13 Fear of the Lord hates injustice, both insolence and arrogance and ways of evil ones; and I have hated perverted ways of evil ones.

14 Mine are counsel and security, mine prudence, and mine strength;

15 through me kings reign, and rulers write righteousness;

16 through me magnates are magnified, and tyrants through me hold power over earth.

17 I love those who love me, and those who seek me will find me.

18 Riches and glory belong to me, and possession of many things and righteousness;

19 it is better to reap fruit from me than gold and a precious stone, and my produce is better than choice silver.

20 I walk in ways of righteousness, and move about in the midst of paths of an ordinance,

21 so that I may apportion substance to those who love me, and fill their treasuries with good things.

21 a If I announce to you the things happening daily, I shall remember to number the things from an age.

22 The Lord created me as a beginning of his ways for his works;

23 before the age he founded me in the beginning,

24 before making the earth and before making the abysses, before the springs of waters came forth,

25 before mountains were established, and before all hills he begets me.

26 The Lord made regions and uninhabited places and inhabited extremities of the world under heaven.

27 When he was preparing heaven, I was present with him, and when he was setting apart his own throne upon winds.

28 When he was making the clouds above strong, and when he was setting secure springs of the world under heaven,

29 and was making the foundations of the earth strong,

30 I was beside him, fitting together; I was she in whom he delighted. And daily I was rejoicing before his face at every time,

31 when he was rejoicing, having completed the inhabited world, and was delighting in sons of humans.

32 Now therefore, son, hear me.

34 Blessed is a man who will hear me, and a human who will guard my ways, keeping awake at my doors daily, keeping the posts of my entrances;

35 for my exits are exits of life, and favor is prepared from the Lord.

36 But those who sin against me act ungodly toward their own souls, and those who hate me love death.

Chapter 9

1 Wisdom built a house for herself, and supported it with seven pillars;

2 she slaughtered her own sacrificial animals, mixed her own wine in a mixing bowl, and prepared her own table;

3 she sent out her own slaves, summoning with a loud proclamation to a mixing bowl, saying,

4 Whoever is foolish, let him turn aside to me; and to those lacking sense she said,

5 Come, eat of my bread, and drink wine which I mixed for you;

6 leave folly, and you will live, and seek prudence, so that you may live, and set understanding right with knowledge.

7 He who disciplines evil ones will receive dishonor for himself, and he who reproves the ungodly will blame himself.

8 Do not reprove evil ones, so that they may not hate you; reprove a wise one, and he will love you.

9 Give a wise one opportunity, and he will be wiser; make things known to a righteous one, and he will increase in receiving.

10 The beginning of wisdom is fear of the Lord, and counsel of holy ones is understanding;

10 a For knowing law belongs to good thought;

11 for in this manner you will live a long time, and years of your life will be added to you.

12 Son, if you become wise for yourself, you will be wise also for your neighbors; but if you turn out evil, you alone will draw up evils.

12 a He who leans upon lies will shepherd winds, and he himself will pursue flying birds;

13 for he forsook the ways of his own vineyard, and has strayed from the tracks of his own cultivated field;

14 and he passes through waterless wilderness and land laid out in thirsty places, and gathers fruitlessness with his hands.

13 A foolish and bold woman comes to lack a morsel, who does not know shame;

14 she sat at the doors of her own house upon a seat, conspicuously in squares,

15 calling to those passing by and going straight on their ways:

16 Whoever among you is most foolish, let him turn aside to me; and to those lacking prudence I exhort, saying,

17 Pleasantly partake of hidden bread and sweet water of theft.

18 But he does not know that earthborn ones perish beside her, and he meets with a ledge of Hades.

18 a But leap away; do not linger in the place, nor fix your eye toward her;

19 for thus you will cross foreign water and pass over a foreign river;

20 but abstain from foreign water, and do not drink from a foreign spring,

21 so that you may live a long time, and years of life be added to you. – –

Chapter 10

1 A wise son gladdens a father, but a foolish son is grief to his mother.

2 Treasures will not benefit lawless ones, but righteousness will deliver from death.

3 The Lord will not starve a righteous soul, but will overturn the life of the ungodly.

4 Poverty humbles a man, but hands of the valiant make rich.

4 a A disciplined son will be wise, and will use the foolish one as a servant.

5 An understanding son was preserved from burning heat, but a lawless son becomes wind-damaged at harvest.

6 The Lord's blessing is upon a righteous one's head, but untimely mourning will cover the mouth of the ungodly.

7 The memory of the righteous is with praises, but an ungodly one's name is extinguished.

8 One wise in heart will receive commandments, but one unrestrained in lips, speaking crookedly, will be tripped.

9 He who walks simply walks confidently, but he who perverts his ways will be known.

10 He who winks with eyes with deceit gathers griefs for men, but he who reproves with frankness makes peace.

11 A spring of life is in a righteous one's hand, but destruction will cover an ungodly one's mouth.

12 Hatred raises strife, but friendship covers all who are not contentious.

13 He who brings forth wisdom from lips strikes a man without heart with a rod.

14 The wise will hide perception, but a rash one's mouth draws near to shattering.

15 The possession of the rich is a fortified city, but poverty is the shattering of the ungodly.

16 Works of the righteous produce life, but fruits of the ungodly sins.

17 Discipline guards righteous ways of life, but discipline without reproof goes astray.

18 Righteous lips cover enmity, but those who bring forth abuse are most foolish.

19 From much speaking you will not escape sin, but sparing your lips, you will be understanding.

20 A righteous one's tongue is fire-tested silver, but an ungodly one's heart will fail.

21 Lips of the righteous know lofty things, but the foolish die in need.

22 The Lord's blessing is upon a righteous one's head; this makes rich, and grief in the heart will certainly not be added to it.

23 A foolish one does evils in laughter, but wisdom gives birth to prudence for a man.

24 An ungodly one is carried about in destruction, but a righteous one's desire is accepted.

25 When a storm passes by, an ungodly one vanishes, but a righteous one, turning aside, is saved unto the age.

26 As an unripe grape is harmful to teeth and smoke to eyes, so is lawlessness to those who use it.

27 Fear of the Lord adds days, but years of the ungodly will be diminished.

28 Gladness lingers for the righteous, but hope of the ungodly perishes.

29 Fear of the Lord is a holy one's stronghold, but shattering for those who work evils.

30 A righteous one will not give way unto the age, but the ungodly will not inhabit earth.

31 A righteous one's mouth drips wisdom, but an unjust one's tongue will be destroyed.

32 Lips of righteous men drip graces, but the mouth of the ungodly turns away.

Chapter 11

1 Deceitful scales are an abomination before the Lord, but a just weight is accepted by him.

2 Wherever insolence enters, there also is dishonor; but the mouth of the humble meditates wisdom.

3 A righteous one who died left regret, but destruction of the ungodly becomes ready and a cause of rejoicing.

5 Righteousness cuts blameless ways straight, but ungodliness falls into injustice.

6 Righteousness of upright men delivers them, but lawless ones are caught in their destruction.

7 When a righteous man dies, hope does not perish, but the boast of the ungodly perishes.

8 A righteous one escapes from a hunt, but the ungodly one is handed over in his place.

9 In the mouth of the ungodly is a snare for citizens, but perception of the righteous has a good way.

10 By good things of the righteous a city prospered,

11 but by mouths of the ungodly it was razed.

12 One lacking sense sneers at citizens, but a prudent man keeps quiet.

13 A double-tongued man reveals counsels in a council, but one faithful in breath hides matters.

14 Those who have no guidance fall like leaves, but salvation exists in much counsel.

15 An evil one does evil when he mingles with a righteous one, and hates the sound of security.

16 A gracious woman raises glory for a husband, but a woman who hates righteous things is a throne of dishonor. Sluggards come to lack riches, but the valiant are supported by riches.

17 A merciful man does good to his soul, but the merciless destroys his body.

18 An ungodly one does unjust works, but the seed of the righteous is a reward of truth.

19 A righteous son is born for life, but pursuit of an ungodly one is for death.

20 Perverted ways are an abomination to the Lord, but all blameless in their ways are acceptable to him.

21 He who puts hands into a hand unjustly will not be unpunished, but he who sows righteousness will receive a faithful reward.

22 As an earring in a pig's nose, so is beauty to an evil-minded woman.

23 Every desire of the righteous is good, but hope of the ungodly will perish.

24 There are those who sow their own things and make more, and there are also those who gather and are diminished.

25 Every blessed soul is simple, but an angry man is not seemly.

26 May he who holds grain back leave it to the nations, but blessing is upon the head of him who shares.

27 He who devises good things seeks good grace; but him who seeks out evils, they will overtake.

28 He who trusts in riches will fall, but he who takes hold of righteous ones will spring up.

29 He who does not go along with his own house will inherit wind, and a foolish one will serve a prudent one.

30 From the fruit of righteousness grows a tree of life, but souls of lawless ones are taken away untimely.

31 If the righteous one is scarcely saved, where will the ungodly and sinful one appear?

Chapter 12

1 He who loves discipline loves perception, but he who hates reproofs is foolish.

2 Better is he who found grace with the Lord, but a lawless man will be passed over in silence.

3 A human will not prosper from a lawless thing, but roots of the righteous will not be uprooted.

4 A valiant woman is a crown for her husband; but as a worm in wood, so an evildoing woman destroys a man.

5 Reasonings of the righteous are judgments, but the ungodly steer deceits.

6 Words of the ungodly are deceitful, but the mouth of the upright will deliver them.

7 Wherever he turns, an ungodly one vanishes, but houses of the righteous remain.

8 An understanding one's mouth is praised by a man, but the dull-hearted is sneered at.

9 Better is a man in dishonor serving himself than one putting honor around himself and needing bread.

10 A righteous one has compassion on souls of his beasts, but the bowels of the ungodly are merciless.

11 He who works his own land will be filled with bread, but those pursuing vain things lack sense.

11 a He who is pleased in pastimes of wine will leave dishonor in his own strongholds.

12 Desires of the ungodly are evil, but roots of the reverent are in strongholds.

13 Through sin of lips a sinner falls into snares, but a righteous one escapes from them.

13 a He who looks at smooth things will be shown mercy, but he who meets at gates will oppress souls.

14 From fruits of a mouth a man's soul will be filled with good things, and repayment of his lips will be given to him.

15 Ways of foolish ones are straight before them, but a wise one hears counsel.

16 A foolish one announces his wrath on the same day, but a shrewd one hides his own dishonor.

17 A righteous one announces displayed faithfulness, but the witness of unjust ones is deceitful.

18 There are those who, speaking, wound with a sword, but tongues of the wise heal.

19 True lips set testimony right, but a hasty witness has an unjust tongue.

20 Deceit is in the heart of one devising evils, but those wishing peace will rejoice.

21 Nothing unjust will please a righteous one, but the ungodly will be filled with evils.

22 Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord, but he who practices faithfulness is accepted by him.

23 An understanding man is a throne of perception, but the heart of foolish ones will meet curses.

24 The hand of chosen ones will rule easily, but deceitful ones will be for plunder.

25 A fearful word troubles a righteous man's heart, but a good announcement gladdens him.

26 A discerning righteous one will be his own friend, but judgments of the ungodly are ungentle. Evils will pursue those who sin, and the way of the ungodly will lead them astray.

27 A deceitful one will not attain prey, but a pure man is a precious possession.

28 In ways of righteousness is life, but ways of those bearing grudges lead to death.

Chapter 13

1 A shrewd son is obedient to a father, but a disobedient son is in destruction.

2 A good one will eat from fruits of righteousness, but souls of lawless ones will perish untimely.

3 He who guards his own mouth keeps his own soul, but one rash in lips will terrify himself.

4 Every idle one is in desires, but hands of the valiant are in diligence.

5 A righteous one hates an unjust word, but an ungodly one is ashamed and will have no frankness.

6 Righteousness guards the innocent, but sin makes the ungodly worthless.

7 There are those who make themselves rich, having nothing, and those who humble themselves amid much wealth.

8 A man's own wealth is the ransom of his soul, but a poor one does not endure a threat.

9 Light is for the righteous continually, but the light of the ungodly is extinguished.

9 a Deceitful souls wander in sins, but the righteous have compassion and show mercy.

10 An evil one does evils with insolence, but those discerning themselves are wise.

11 Substance hastily sought with lawlessness becomes less, but he who gathers for himself with reverence will be multiplied; a righteous one has compassion and lends.

12 Better is one who begins helping with heart than one who promises and leads into hope; for a good desire is a tree of life.

13 He who despises a matter will be despised by it, but he who fears a commandment is healthy.

13 a Nothing good will be for a deceitful son, but a wise household servant's deeds will prosper, and his way will be directed.

14 A wise one's law is a spring of life, but the senseless will die by a snare.

15 Good understanding gives grace, and knowing law belongs to good thought, but ways of despisers are in destruction.

16 Every shrewd one acts with knowledge, but a foolish one spread out his own evil.

17 A bold king will fall into evils, but a faithful messenger will deliver him.

18 Discipline takes away poverty and dishonor, but he who guards reproofs will be glorified.

19 Desires of the reverent sweeten a soul, but works of the ungodly are far from knowledge.

20 He who walks with wise ones will be wise, but he who walks with foolish ones will be known.

21 Evils will pursue sinners, but good things will overtake the righteous.

22 A good man will inherit sons of sons, but wealth of the ungodly is stored up for the righteous.

23 The righteous will spend many years in wealth, but the unjust will perish swiftly.

24 He who spares the staff hates his son, but he who loves disciplines diligently.

25 A righteous one, eating, fills his soul, but souls of the ungodly are needy.

Chapter 14

1 Wise women built houses, but the foolish woman razed them with her hands.

2 He who walks rightly fears the Lord, but he who is crooked in his ways will be dishonored.

3 From the mouth of foolish ones comes a staff of insolence, but lips of the wise guard them.

4 Where there are no oxen, mangers are clean; but where there is much produce, an ox's strength is evident.

5 A faithful witness does not lie, but an unjust witness kindles lies.

6 You will seek wisdom among evil ones and not find it, but perception is easy among the prudent.

7 All things are contrary to a foolish man, but wise lips are weapons of perception.

8 Wisdom of the shrewd will recognize their ways, but folly of foolish ones is in wandering.

9 Houses of lawless ones will owe cleansing, but houses of the righteous are accepted.

10 A man's heart is perceptive, his soul sorrowful; but when he rejoices, he does not mingle with insolence.

11 Houses of the ungodly will vanish, but tents of those acting rightly will stand.

12 There is a way which seems straight among humans, but its ends come to the bottom of Hades.

13 Grief does not mingle with gladnesses, but final joy comes to mourning.

14 The bold-hearted will be filled with his own ways, and a good man from his thoughts.

15 An innocent one believes every word, but a shrewd one comes to repentance.

16 A wise one, fearing, turned aside from evil, but a foolish one, trusting himself, mingles with a lawless one.

17 A quick-tempered one acts without counsel, but a prudent man bears many things.

18 Foolish ones will apportion evil, but the shrewd will take hold of perception.

19 Evil ones will slip before good ones, and the ungodly will attend at doors of the righteous.

20 Friends will hate poor friends, but friends of the rich are many.

21 He who dishonors needy ones sins, but he who shows mercy to the poor is blessed.

22 Those wandering devise evils, but good ones devise mercy and truth. Makers of evils do not know mercy and faithfulness, but mercies and faithfulnesses are with good makers.

23 In everyone taking care there is abundance, but the pleasure-loving and insensible will be in need.

24 A shrewd one is a crown of the wise, but the pastime of foolish ones is evil.

25 A faithful witness will deliver a soul from evils, but a deceitful one kindles lies.

26 In fear of the Lord is hope of strength, and for his children he leaves support.

27 A command of the Lord is a spring of life, and makes one turn aside from a snare of death.

28 In a numerous nation is a king's glory, but in a people's failing is a ruler's shattering.

29 A long-suffering man is abundant in prudence, but the faint-hearted is exceedingly foolish.

30 A mild-tempered man is a physician of hearts, but a perceptive heart is a moth of bones.

31 He who oppresses a needy one provokes him who made him, but he who honors him shows mercy to a poor one.

32 In his evil an ungodly one will be thrust away, but he who trusts in his own holiness is righteous.

33 Wisdom is in a man's good heart, but in a heart of foolish ones it is not discerned.

34 Righteousness exalts a nation, but sins diminish tribes.

35 An understanding attendant is accepted by a king, and through his own adaptability takes away dishonor.

Chapter 15

1 Wrath destroys even prudent ones, but a submissive answer turns away anger, and a grievous word raises wraths.

2 A tongue of wise ones knows good things, but a mouth of foolish ones will announce evils.

3 The Lord's eyes are in every place; they observe both evil and good ones.

4 Healing of a tongue is a tree of life, and he who preserves it will be filled with spirit.

5 A foolish one sneers at a father's discipline, but he who guards commandments is shrewder.

6 In abundant righteousness is much strength, but the ungodly will perish from earth, roots and all. In houses of the righteous is much strength, but fruits of the ungodly will perish.

7 Lips of the wise are bound to perception, but hearts of foolish ones are not secure.

8 Sacrifices of the ungodly are an abomination to the Lord, but prayers of those directing rightly are accepted by him.

9 Ways of an ungodly one are an abomination to the Lord, but he loves those pursuing righteousness.

10 An innocent one's discipline is recognized by those passing by, but those who hate reproofs die shamefully.

11 Hades and destruction are evident with the Lord; how not also hearts of humans?

12 An undisciplined one will not love those who reprove him, and will not converse with wise ones.

13 When a heart rejoices, a face flourishes, but when it is in griefs, it grows gloomy.

14 An upright heart seeks perception, but a mouth of the undisciplined will know evils.

15 All the time the eyes of evil ones await evils, but good ones rest continually.

16 Better is a small portion with fear of the Lord than great treasures with fearlessness.

17 Better is hospitality of vegetables with friendship and grace than a serving of calves with enmity.

18 An angry man prepares battles, but a long-suffering one calms even a coming one.

18 a A long-suffering man will extinguish disputes, but the ungodly one raises them more.

19 Ways of the idle are strewn with thorns, but those of the valiant are worn smooth.

20 A wise son gladdens a father, but a foolish son sneers at his mother.

21 Paths of a senseless one lack sense, but a prudent man walks directing rightly.

22 Those who do not honor councils postpone reasonings, but counsel remains in hearts of those deliberating.

23 The evil one will certainly not obey it, nor say anything timely and good for the community.

24 An understanding one's thoughts are ways of life, so that, turning aside from Hades, he may be saved.

25 The Lord tears down houses of insolent ones, but he established a widow's boundary.

26 An unjust reasoning is an abomination to the Lord, but utterances of the pure are noble.

27 The bribe-taker destroys himself, but he who hates taking gifts is saved.

27 a By mercies and faithfulnesses sins are cleansed away, and by fear of the Lord everyone turns aside from evil.

28 Hearts of the righteous meditate faithfulnesses, but a mouth of the ungodly answers evils.

28 a Ways of righteous humans are accepted by the Lord, and through them even enemies become friends.

29 God is far distant from the ungodly, but he hears prayers of the righteous.

29 a Better is a little receipt with righteousness than much produce with injustice.

30 Let a man's heart reason righteous things, so that his steps may be set right by God. An eye observing good things gladdens a heart, and a good report fattens bones.

32 He who thrusts discipline away hates himself, but he who keeps reproofs loves his soul.

33 Fear of God is discipline and wisdom, and a beginning of glory will answer her.

Chapter 16

2 2 All the works of the humble are manifest before God, but the ungodly will perish on an evil day.

5 Every high-hearted person is unclean before God, and one who has unjustly put hands into a hand will not be acquitted.

7 The beginning of a good way is to do righteous things, and they are more acceptable before God than sacrificing sacrifices.

8 The one seeking the Lord will find knowledge with righteousness, and those rightly seeking him will find peace.

9 All the works of the Lord are with righteousness, but the ungodly is kept for an evil day.

10 An oracle is on a king's lips, and in judgment his mouth will certainly not go astray.

11 The balance's inclination is righteousness with the Lord, and his works are righteous weights.

12 The one doing evil things is an abomination to a king, for a throne of rule is prepared with righteousness.

13 Righteous lips are acceptable to a king, and he loves upright words.

14 A king's wrath is a messenger of death, but a wise man will appease him.

15 In the light of life is a king's son, and those acceptable to him are like a late cloud.

16 Nests of wisdom are more desirable than gold, and nests of prudence are more desirable than silver.

17 Paths of life turn away from evil things, and ways of righteousness are length of life. The one receiving discipline will be amid good things, and the one keeping reproofs will be made wise. Whoever keeps his own ways preserves his own soul; and loving his life, he will spare his mouth.

18 Arrogance leads before shattering, and evil-mindedness before a fall.

19 Better is a gentle-tempered person with humility than one who divides spoils with arrogant people.

20 One understanding in matters is a finder of good things, and one trusting in God is blessed.

21 They call the wise and understanding worthless, but those sweet in speech will hear more.

22 Thought is a spring of life to those possessing it, but the discipline of senseless people is evil.

23 A wise person's heart will understand the things from his own mouth, and on his lips he will carry discernment.

24 Good words are honeycombs, and their sweetness is healing of a soul.

25 There are ways seeming to be upright to a man, yet their last things look toward the bottom of Hades.

26 A man in labors labors for himself and forces his own destruction, yet the crooked person carries destruction on his own mouth.

27 A senseless man digs evil things for himself, and on his own lips he stores up fire.

28 A crooked man sends evil things abroad and lights a torch of deceit for evil people and separates friends.

29 A lawless man tries friends and leads them away along ways that are not good.

30 Fixing his eyes, he reckons perverted things, and with his lips he determines all evil things; this person is a furnace of wickedness.

31 Old age is a crown of boasting, and it is found in ways of righteousness.

32 A long-tempered man is better than a strong one, and the one controlling anger is better than one taking a city.

33 Everything comes into the bosoms of the unjust, but all righteous things are from the Lord.

Chapter 17

1 Better is a morsel with pleasure in peace than a house full of many good things and unjust sacrifices with fighting.

2 An intelligent servant will rule senseless masters, and among brothers he will divide shares.

3 Just as silver and gold are tested in a furnace, so hearts are chosen before the Lord.

4 An evil person listens to the tongue of lawless people, but a righteous person does not attend to lying lips.

5 The one laughing at a poor person provokes the one who made him, and the one rejoicing over someone being destroyed will not be acquitted; but the one having compassion will receive mercy.

6 Children's children are a crown of old people, and their fathers are the boast of children.

6 a The whole world of possessions belongs to the faithful person, but not even an obol to the unfaithful.

7 Faithful lips will not suit a senseless person, nor lying lips a righteous person.

8 Discipline is a reward of graces to those using it, and wherever it turns, it will prosper.

9 Whoever hides wrongdoings seeks friendship; but whoever hates hiding them separates friends and kin.

10 A threat shatters a prudent person's heart, but a senseless person, having been whipped, does not perceive.

11 Every evil person raises disputes, but the Lord will send out a merciless messenger to him.

12 Anxiety will fall upon an intelligent man, but the senseless will reason about evil things.

13 Whoever repays evil things for good things, evil things will not be moved from his house.

14 The beginning of righteousness gives authority to words, but dissension and fighting precede want.

15 Whoever judges the unjust person righteous, but the righteous person unjust, is unclean and abominable before God.

16 Why did possessions belong to a senseless person? For one without a heart will not be able to acquire wisdom.

16 a Whoever makes his own house high seeks shattering; but the one turning crookedly away from learning will fall into evil things.

17 Let a friend belong to you at every time, and let brothers be useful in necessities; for this reason they are born.

18 A senseless man claps and rejoices over himself, as also the one guaranteeing his own friend with a guarantee.

19 A lover of sin rejoices in fights,

20 but the hard-hearted person does not encounter good things. A man changeable in tongue will fall into evil things,

21 and a senseless person's heart is pain to the one possessing it. A father is not gladdened over an undisciplined son, but a prudent son gladdens his mother.

22 A gladdened heart makes one be in good condition, but a sorrowful man's bones are dried up.

23 The ways of one unjustly receiving gifts in his bosom do not prosper, and an ungodly person turns aside ways of righteousness.

24 An understanding face belongs to a wise man, but the senseless person's eyes are at the ends of the earth.

25 A senseless son is anger to a father and pain to her who bore him.

26 To punish a righteous man is not good, nor is it holy to plot against righteous rulers.

27 Whoever refrains from uttering a harsh word is discerning; and a long-tempered man is prudent.

28 To an unintelligent person who has asked about wisdom, it will be reckoned as wisdom, and someone who has made himself mute will seem to be prudent.

Chapter 18

1 A man wishing to separate himself from friends seeks pretexts, and at every time he will be reproached.

2 One lacking sense has no need of wisdom; for he is rather led by senselessness.

3 When an ungodly person comes into a depth of evil things, he despises, and dishonor and reproach come upon him.

4 A word in a man's heart is deep water, and a river and a spring of life well up.

5 To admire an ungodly person's face is not good, nor is it holy to turn aside what is just in judgment.

6 A senseless person's lips lead him into evil things, and his rash mouth calls upon death.

7 A senseless person's mouth is shattering to him, and his lips are a trap to his soul.

8 Fear casts down the slothful, and the souls of effeminate men will hunger.

9 The one not healing himself in his works is brother to the one ruining himself.

10 The Lord's name is from greatness of strength, and righteous people, having run to it, are exalted.

11 A rich man's possessions are a fortified city, and its glory greatly overshadows.

12 Before shattering a man's heart is exalted, and before glory it is humbled.

13 Whoever answers a word before hearing, it is senselessness and reproach to him.

14 A prudent attendant soothes a man's temper; but who will bear a faint-hearted man?

15 A prudent person's heart acquires perception, and wise people's ears seek thought.

16 A person's gift makes room for him and seats him beside rulers.

17 A righteous person is his own accuser in his first speech; but when the opponent comes against him, he is reproved.

18 A lot stops disputes, and among rulers it determines.

19 A brother helped by a brother is like a fortified and high city, and he is strong like a founded palace.

20 From fruits of a mouth a man fills his belly, and from fruits of his lips he will be filled.

21 Death and life are in the hand of a tongue, and those controlling it will eat its fruits.

22 Whoever found a good wife found graces, and received cheerfulness from God.

22 a Whoever casts out a good wife casts out good things; but the one retaining an adulteress is senseless and ungodly.

Chapter 19

3 3 A man's senselessness ruins his ways, but he blames God in his heart.

4 Wealth adds many friends, but the poor person is left even by his existing friend.

5 A false witness will not be unpunished, and the one accusing unjustly will not escape.

6 Many attend upon kings' faces, but every evil person becomes a reproach to a man.

7 Everyone who hates a poor brother will also be far from friendship. Good thought will draw near to those knowing it, and a prudent man will find it. The one doing many evil things brings wickedness to completion; but whoever provokes words will not be saved.

8 The one acquiring prudence loves himself; but whoever keeps prudence will find good things.

9 A false witness will not be unpunished; but whoever kindles wickedness will be destroyed by it.

10 Luxury does not benefit a senseless person, nor if a servant begins to exercise power with arrogance.

11 A merciful man is long-tempered, and his boast comes upon lawless people.

12 A king's threat is like a lion's growling; but as dew on grass, so is his cheerfulness.

13 A senseless son is shame to a father, and vows from a courtesan's hire are not pure.

14 Fathers apportion a house and possessions to children, but a wife is joined to a man by God.

15 Cowardice holds an effeminate man, and an idle person's soul will hunger.

16 Whoever keeps a commandment preserves his own soul; but the one despising his own ways will perish.

17 The one showing mercy to a poor person lends to God, and according to his gift he will repay him.

18 Discipline your son, for thus he will be hopeful; but do not be lifted up toward arrogance in your soul.

19 An evil-minded man will suffer many penalties; but if he acts pestilently, he will also add his soul.

20 Hear, son, your father's discipline, so that you may become wise at your last things.

21 Many reasonings are in a man's heart, but the Lord's counsel remains forever.

22 Mercifulness is fruit for a man, and a righteous poor person is better than a rich liar.

23 Fear of the Lord is for life to a man, but the fearless person will lodge in places where knowledge is not visited.

24 The one unjustly hiding hands in his bosom will certainly not even bring them to his mouth.

25 When a pestilent person is whipped, a senseless person becomes shrewder; but if you reprove a prudent man, he will understand perception.

26 The one dishonoring a father and thrusting away his mother will be put to shame and will be reproached.

27 A son neglecting to keep a father's discipline will practice evil utterances.

28 The one guaranteeing a senseless child insults a righteous requirement, and the mouth of ungodly people swallows judgments.

29 Whips are prepared for the undisciplined, and punishments for the shoulders of senseless people.

Chapter 20

1 Wine is undisciplined and drunkenness arrogant, and everyone mingling with it will not be wise.

2 A king's threat does not differ from a lion's wrath, and the one provoking him sins against his own soul.

3 It is glory for a man to turn away from insults, but every senseless person becomes entangled in such things.

4 A slothful person being reproached is not ashamed, likewise also the one borrowing grain at harvest.

5 Counsel in a man's heart is deep water, but a prudent man will draw it out.

6 A person is a great thing, and a merciful man a precious thing, but to find a faithful man is a task.

7 Whoever conducts himself blameless in righteousness will leave his children blessed.

8 When a righteous king sits on a throne, every evil thing does not oppose him before his eyes.

9 Who will boast of having a pure heart? Or who will speak frankly of being clean from sins?

9 a The lamp of one speaking evil of a father or mother will be extinguished, and the pupils of his eyes will see darkness.

10 A portion eagerly pursued at the first will not be blessed at the last.

11 Do not say, I will punish the enemy; but wait for the Lord, so that he may help you.

10 A great and a small weight and double measures, both are unclean before the Lord.

11 And the one doing them will be fettered in his practices, a young man with a holy person, and his way is straight.

12 An ear hears and an eye sees; both are works of the Lord.

13 Do not love speaking against others, so that you may not be removed; open your eyes and be filled with breads.

23 A double weight is an abomination to the Lord, and a deceitful balance is not good before him.

24 A man's steps are directed by the Lord; but how could a mortal understand his ways?

25 It is a trap for a man hastily to consecrate something of his own; for after making a vow, repenting happens.

26 A wise king is a winnower of ungodly people, and he will bring a wheel upon them.

27 The breath of humans is a light of the Lord, who searches chambers of a belly.

28 Mercifulness and truth are a guard for a king, and they will surround his throne in righteousness.

29 Wisdom is an ornament to young men, and gray hairs the glory of elders.

30 Bruises and fractures encounter evil people, and blows reach chambers of a belly.

Chapter 21

1 As a rush of water, so a king's heart is in God's hand; wherever, willing, he nods, there he inclined it.

2 Every man appears righteous to himself, but the Lord directs hearts.

3 To do righteous things and speak truth are more pleasing before God than blood of sacrifices.

4 A lofty-minded person is bold-hearted toward arrogance, and the lamp of ungodly people is sin.

6 The one producing treasures with a lying tongue pursues vain things toward traps of death.

7 Destruction will lodge with ungodly people; for they do not wish to practice righteous things.

8 God sends crooked ways toward the crooked; for his works are pure and upright.

9 It is better to dwell on a corner in the open air than in plastered places with injustice and in a shared house.

10 An ungodly person's soul will receive mercy from none of the humans.

11 When an undisciplined person is punished, the innocent person becomes shrewder, and a wise person, understanding, will receive knowledge.

12 A righteous person understands the hearts of ungodly people and despises ungodly people amid evil things.

13 Whoever blocks his ears so as not to hear a weak person, he himself too will call, and there will be no one listening.

14 A secret gift overturns angers, but the one sparing gifts raises strong wrath.

15 It is the gladness of righteous people to execute judgment, but a holy person is unclean before evildoers.

16 A man wandering from a way of righteousness will rest in an assembly of giants.

17 A needy man loves gladness, loving wine and oil for wealth;

18 and a lawless person is a cleansing-offering for a righteous person.

19 It is better to dwell in a desert land than with a quarrelsome and talkative and irascible woman.

20 A desirable treasure will rest on a wise person's mouth, but senseless men swallow it.

21 A way of righteousness and mercifulness will find life and glory.

22 A wise person climbed fortified cities and pulled down the stronghold in which ungodly people had trusted.

23 Whoever guards his mouth and tongue preserves his soul from affliction.

24 A rash and self-willed and boastful person is called pestilent; but whoever bears a grudge is lawless.

25 Desires kill a slothful person; for his hands do not choose to do anything.

26 An ungodly person desires evil desires the whole day, but the righteous person shows mercy and compassion unsparingly.

27 Sacrifices of ungodly people are an abomination to the Lord; for they also offer them lawlessly.

28 A false witness will perish, but an obedient man, being guarded, will speak.

29 An ungodly man stands shamelessly with his face, but the upright person himself understands his ways.

30 There is no wisdom, there is no courage, there is no counsel against the ungodly person.

31 A horse is prepared for a day of war, but help is from the Lord.

Chapter 22

1 A good name is more desirable than much wealth, and good grace above silver and gold.

2 A rich person and a poor person met one another, and the Lord made both.

3 A shrewd person, seeing an evil person being severely punished, is himself disciplined, but the senseless passed by and were punished.

4 The offspring of wisdom are fear of the Lord and wealth and glory and life.

5 Thistles and traps are in crooked ways, but the one guarding his own soul will abstain from them.

7 Rich people will rule poor people, and servants will lend to their own masters.

8 The one sowing worthless things will reap evil things, and he will bring to completion the blow of his works.

8 a God blesses a cheerful man and giver, and he will bring to completion the vanity of his works.

9 The one showing mercy to a poor person will himself be nourished; for he gave of his own breads to the poor person.

9 a The one giving gifts obtains victory and honor, yet he takes away the soul of those possessing them.

10 Cast a pestilent person out of a council, and strife will go out together with him; for whenever he sits in a council, he dishonors everyone.

11 The Lord loves holy hearts, and all blameless people are acceptable to him; a king shepherds with lips.

12 And the Lord's eyes preserve perception, but a lawless person despises words.

13 A slothful person makes excuses and says, A lion is in the ways, and murderers in the broad streets.

14 A lawless person's mouth is a deep pit, and the one hated by the Lord will fall into it.

14 a Evil ways are before a man, and he does not love turning away from them; but one must turn away from a crooked and evil way.

15 Unintelligence is attached to a young person's heart, but a rod and discipline are far from him.

16 The one extorting from a needy person makes his own things many; but he gives to a rich person for less. – –

17 Bring your ear alongside wise people's words and hear my word, and apply your heart, so that you may know that they are good;

18 and if you put them into your heart, they will gladden you together on your lips,

19 so that your hope may be upon the Lord and he may make his way known to you.

20 And you too copy them for yourself threefold for counsel and knowledge upon the breadth of your heart.

21 I therefore teach you a true word and good knowledge to heed, to answer words of truth to those putting questions to you.

22 Do not oppress a needy person, for he is poor, and do not dishonor a weak person in gates;

23 for the Lord will judge his case, and you will deliver your soul safe from seizure.

24 Do not be a companion to a wrathful man, and do not lodge together with an irascible friend,

25 lest you learn his ways and take snares for your soul.

26 Do not give yourself as a guarantee out of shame before a face;

27 for if you have nothing from which to repay, they will take the bedding beneath your sides.

28 Do not move everlasting boundaries which your fathers set.

29 A perceptive man and keen in his works must stand before kings and not stand before sluggish men.

Chapter 23

1 If you sit to dine at a table of rulers, understand intelligently the things set before you

2 and put forth your hand, knowing that you must prepare such things;

3 but if you are more insatiable, do not desire his dishes, for these belong to a false life.

4 Do not stretch yourself alongside a rich person, being needy, but abstain in your thought;

5 if you fix your eye toward him, he will appear nowhere, for wings like an eagle's have been prepared for him, and he returns to the house of the one presiding over him.

6 Do not dine together with an envious man, nor desire his foods;

7 for in the way that someone might swallow a hair, so he eats and drinks.

8 Nor bring him in to you and eat your morsel with him; for he will vomit it out and ruin your good words.

9 Say nothing into a senseless person's ears, lest he sneer at your understanding words.

10 Do not shift everlasting boundaries, and do not enter into orphans' property;

11 for the Lord redeeming them is mighty and will judge their case with you.

12 Give your heart to discipline, and prepare your ears for words of perception.

13 Do not refrain from disciplining an infant, because if you strike him with a rod, he will certainly not die;

14 for you will strike him with a rod, but you will deliver his soul from death.

15 Son, if your heart becomes wise, you will gladden my heart also,

16 and your lips will spend time in words with my lips, if they are upright.

17 Let your heart not envy sinners, but be in fear of the Lord the whole day;

18 for if you keep them, you will have offspring, and your hope will not depart.

19 Hear, son, and become wise and direct the thoughts of your heart;

20 do not be a wine-drinker, nor stretch yourself to contributions and purchases of meats;

21 for every drunkard and frequenter of prostitutes will become poor, and every sleepy person will clothe himself in torn and ragged things.

22 Hear, son, the father who begot you, and do not despise your mother because she has grown old.

24 A righteous father nourishes well, and his soul is gladdened over a wise son;

25 let the father and mother be gladdened over you, and let her who bore you rejoice.

26 Give me, son, your heart, and let your eyes keep my ways;

27 for a stranger's house is a pierced jar, and a stranger's well is narrow;

28 for this one will quickly perish, and every lawless person will be consumed.

29 For whom is woe? For whom tumult? For whom judgment? For whom unpleasantness and chatter? For whom fractures for nothing? Whose eyes are livid?

30 Are they not those lingering among wines? Are they not those tracking where drinking parties take place?

31 Do not become drunk with wine, but associate with righteous humans and associate on walks; for if you give your eyes to the bowls and cups, afterward you will walk about more naked than a pestle,

32 and at the last he stretches out as though struck by a snake, and as though by a horned snake the venom is poured through him.

33 When your eyes see a strange woman, your mouth will then speak crooked things,

34 and you will lie down as in the heart of the sea and as a helmsman in much surging;

35 and you will say, They strike me, and I did not suffer, and they mocked me, but I did not know; when will dawn be, so that I may come and seek those with whom I will meet?

Chapter 24

1 Son, do not envy evil men, nor desire to be with them;

2 for their heart practices lies, and their lips speak troubles.

3 With wisdom a house is built, and with understanding it is set upright;

4 with perception chambers are filled with all precious and good wealth.

5 A wise person is better than a strong one, and a man having prudence than a great farm;

6 with guidance war takes place, and help with a deliberative heart.

7 Wisdom and good thought are in wise people's gates; wise people do not turn aside from the Lord's mouth,

8 but deliberate in councils. Death encounters the undisciplined,

9 and a senseless person dies in sins; and uncleanness will be polluted for a pestilent man

10 on an evil day and on a day of affliction, until it fails.

11 Deliver those being led to death and ransom those being killed; do not spare;

12 but if you say, I do not know this person, know that the Lord knows everyone's hearts, and the one fashioning breath for all himself knows everything, who repays each according to his works.

13 Eat honey, son, for a honeycomb is good, so that your throat may be sweetened;

14 thus you will perceive wisdom for your soul; for if you find it, your end will be good, and hope will not abandon you.

15 Do not bring an ungodly person to righteous people's pasture, nor be deceived by a belly's fullness;

16 for the righteous person will fall seven times and rise, but ungodly people will become weak amid evil things.

17 If your enemy falls, do not rejoice over him, and at his stumbling do not be lifted up;

18 because the Lord will see, and it will not please him, and he will turn his wrath away from him.

19 Do not rejoice over evildoers, nor envy sinners;

20 for there will certainly not be offspring of evil people, and the lamp of ungodly people will be extinguished.

21 Fear God, son, and a king, and disobey neither of them;

22 for suddenly they will punish the ungodly, and who will know the punishments of both?

22 a A son keeping a word will be outside destruction, and receiving, he received it.

23 Let no lie from a tongue be spoken to a king, and no lie will certainly come out from his tongue.

24 A king's tongue is a sword and not fleshy, and whoever is handed over will be shattered;

25 for if his wrath is sharpened, it consumes humans together with sinews

26 and devours humans' bones and burns them together like a flame, so that they are uneatable for young eagles. – –

Chapter 30

1 Fear my words, son, and having received them, repent; these things the man says to those trusting God, and I cease;

2 for I am the most senseless of all humans, and humans' prudence is not in me;

3 God has taught me wisdom, and I have known knowledge of holy things.

4 Who went up into heaven and came down? Who gathered winds in a bosom? Who wrapped water in a garment? Who held all the ends of the earth? What is his name, or what is the name of his children, so that you may know?

5 All God's words have been tried by fire, and he himself shields those revering him;

6 do not add to his words, so that he may not reprove you and you become false.

7 I ask two things from you; do not take grace away from me before I die;

8 make a vain and false word far from me, and do not give me wealth and poverty, but appoint for me necessary and sufficient things,

9 so that, filled, I may not become false and say, Who sees me? Or, made needy, steal and swear the name of God.

10 Do not hand a servant into a master's hands, lest he curse you and you disappear.

11 An evil offspring curses a father, but does not bless the mother;

12 an evil offspring judges itself righteous, but did not wash away its discharge;

13 an evil offspring has lofty eyes, and is lifted up in its eyelids;

14 an evil offspring has swords as teeth and knives as molars, so as to consume and devour the humble from the earth and their needy from among humans. – –

23 And these things I say to you wise people to recognize: to respect a face in judgment is not good;

24 the one saying of the ungodly person, He is righteous, will be accursed among peoples and hated among nations;

25 but those reproving will appear better, and a good blessing will come upon them;

26 and lips answering good words will kiss.

27 Prepare your works for going out and make ready for the field and go behind me, and you will rebuild your house.

28 Do not be a false witness against your fellow citizen, nor widen with your lips;

29 do not say, In the way he treated me I will treat him, and I will punish him for the things in which he wronged me.

30 A senseless man is like a farm, and a human lacking sense like a vineyard;

31 if you leave him, he will become waste and wholly overgrown with grass and becomes abandoned, and his stone fences are demolished.

32 Afterward I repented; I looked to choose discipline.

33 I doze a little, and sleep a little, and embrace my breast with hands a little;

34 but if you do this, your poverty will come walking ahead, and your want like a good runner. – –

15 The leech had three daughters loved with love, and these three did not fill her, and the fourth was not content to say, Sufficient;

16 Hades and a woman's love and Tartarus and earth not filled with water and water and fire will certainly not say, It suffices.

17 An eye laughing at a father and dishonoring a mother's old age, may ravens from the ravines cut it out, and may young eagles devour it.

18 And there are three things impossible for me to understand, and the fourth I do not recognize;

19 tracks of an eagle flying and ways of a snake on a rock and paths of a ship crossing the sea and ways of a man in youth.

20 Such is the way of an adulterous woman who, whenever she acts, having washed herself, says she has done nothing improper.

21 Through three things the earth is shaken, and the fourth it cannot bear;

22 if a servant becomes king, and a senseless person is filled with foods,

23 and if a maidservant casts out her own mistress, and if a hated woman obtains a good man.

24 And there are four smallest things on the earth, and these are wiser than the wise;

25 the ants, which have no strength and prepare food in summer;

26 and the rock-rabbits, a nation not strong, which made their own houses in rocks;

27 the locust is without a king and marches out orderly from one command;

28 and a lizard, supporting itself with hands and being easily caught, dwells in a king's strongholds.

29 And there are three things that proceed well, and the fourth that walks well;

30 a lion's cub stronger than beasts, which does not turn away nor cower before a beast,

31 and a cock walking among females, spirited, and a he-goat leading a goat herd, and a king addressing an assembly among a nation.

32 If you give yourself up to gladness and stretch out your hand with fighting, you will be dishonored.

33 Milk milk, and there will be butter; but if you squeeze nostrils, blood will come out; and if you draw out words, judgments and fights will come out. – –

Chapter 31

1 My words have been spoken by God, an oracle of a king whom his mother disciplined.

2 What, child, will you keep? What? Utterances of God; firstborn, I speak to you, son; what, child of my belly? What, child of my vows?

3 Do not give your wealth to women, and your mind and life to later regret.

4 Do everything with counsel, drink wine with counsel; rulers are wrathful, and let them not drink wine,

5 so that, having drunk, they may not forget wisdom and certainly be unable to judge weak people rightly.

6 Give drunkenness to those in griefs and wine to drink to those in pains,

7 so that they may forget poverty and remember troubles no longer.

8 Open your mouth with God's word and judge everyone soundly;

9 open your mouth and judge righteously, and distinguish a needy and weak person. – –

Chapter 25

1 These are the unseparated disciplines of Salomon, which the friends of Ezekias the king of Ioudaia copied out.

2 God's glory hides a word, but a king's glory honors matters.

3 Heaven is high and earth deep, and a king's heart unsearchable.

4 Beat unapproved silver, and it will all be purified clean;

5 kill ungodly people from a king's presence, and his throne will be set right in righteousness.

6 Do not boast before a king, nor stand in rulers' places;

7 for it is better for you to be told, Come up to me, than for him to humble you in a ruler's presence. Say what your eyes saw.

8 Do not rush into a fight quickly, so that you may not regret it at the last. Whenever your friend reproaches you,

9 withdraw backward; do not despise,

10 lest the friend reproach you, and your fight and enmity will not depart, but will be equal to death for you.

10 a Grace and friendship set free; keep them for yourself, so that you may not become reproached, but guard your ways conciliatorily.

11 A golden apple in a little necklace of sardius, so is speaking a word.

12 A costly sardius has been bound into a golden earring, a wise word into a readily hearing ear.

13 Just as an outflow of snow at harvest in heat benefits, so a faithful messenger benefits those sending him; for he benefits the souls of those using him.

14 Like winds and clouds and most conspicuous rains, so are those boasting over a false gift.

15 In long-temperedness is prosperity for kings, and a soft tongue shatters bones.

16 Having found honey, eat what is sufficient, lest, filled, you vomit it out.

17 Bring your foot to your own friend rarely, lest, filled with you, he hate you.

18 A club and a sword and a pointed arrow, so also is the man testifying a false testimony against his friend.

19 An evil person's tooth and a lawless person's foot will perish on an evil day.

20 Just as vinegar is disadvantageous to a wound, so a suffering befalling a body grieves a heart.

20 a Just as a moth harms a garment and a worm wood, so a man's grief harms a heart.

21 If your enemy hungers, feed him; if he thirsts, give him drink;

22 for doing this you will heap coals of fire on his head, and the Lord will repay you good things.

23 A north wind raises clouds, and a shameless face provokes a tongue.

24 It is better to dwell on a corner of a roof than with an abusive woman in a shared house.

25 Just as cold water is pleasant to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a land far away.

26 As if someone were to block a spring and ruin an outflow of water, so it is unseemly for a righteous person to have fallen before an ungodly person.

27 To eat much honey is not good, but one must honor glorious words.

28 Like a city with its walls cast down and unwalled, so is a man who does anything without counsel.

Chapter 26

1 Like dew at harvest and like rain in summer, so honor is not for a senseless person.

2 Just as birds and sparrows fly, so a vain curse will come upon no one.

3 Like a whip for a horse and a goad for a donkey, so is a rod for a lawless nation.

4 Do not answer a senseless person in relation to his senselessness, so that you may not become like him;

5 but answer a senseless person according to his senselessness, so that he may not appear wise to himself.

6 The one sending a word through a senseless messenger will drink reproach from his own feet.

7 Take away the walking of legs and a proverb from the mouth of senseless people.

8 Whoever binds a stone in a sling is like the one giving glory to a senseless person.

9 Thorns grow in a drunkard's hand, and slavery in the hand of senseless people.

10 All flesh of senseless people is greatly storm-tossed; for their bewilderment is shattered.

11 Just as a dog, whenever it comes upon its own vomit and becomes hated, so is a senseless person who by his own wickedness has returned to his own sin.

11 a There is shame bringing sin, and there is shame that is glory and grace.

12 I saw a man who thought himself wise, yet a senseless person had more hope than he.

13 A slothful person being sent on a way says, A lion is in the ways.

14 Just as a door turns on its hinge, so a slothful person on his bed.

15 A slothful person, having hidden his hand in his bosom, will not be able to bring it to his mouth.

16 A slothful person appears to himself wiser than the one bringing back a message in fullness.

17 Like the one holding a dog's tail, so is the one presiding over a stranger's case.

18 Just as those healing put words before humans, and the first one encountering the word will be tripped,

19 so are all those ambushing their own friends, but whenever they are detected, they say, I did it playing.

20 Among many pieces of wood a fire flourishes, but where there is no double-minded person, a fight is quiet.

21 A hearth for coals and wood for fire, and an abusive man for the disturbance of a fight.

22 Words of rogues are soft, but these strike into chambers of the inward parts.

23 Silver given with deceit must be considered like a potsherd. Smooth lips cover a sorrowful heart.

24 An enemy lamenting assents to everything with lips, but in his heart he devises deceits;

25 if the enemy begs you with a loud voice, do not be persuaded; for seven evils are in his soul.

26 The one hiding enmity establishes deceit, but one readily known in councils reveals his own sins.

27 The one digging a pit for his neighbor will fall into it, and the one rolling a stone rolls it upon himself.

28 A lying tongue hates truth, and an unrestrained mouth makes disorders.

Chapter 27

1 Do not boast of the things for tomorrow; for you do not know what the coming day will bear.

2 Let the neighbor praise you and not your mouth, a stranger and not your lips.

3 A stone is heavy and sand hard to bear, but a senseless person's anger is heavier than both.

4 Wrath is merciless and anger sharp, but jealousy withstands no one.

5 Revealed reproofs are better than hidden friendship.

6 A friend's wounds are more trustworthy than an enemy's willing kisses.

7 A soul being in fullness mocks honeycombs, but to a needy soul even bitter things appear sweet.

8 Just as when a bird flies down out of its own nest, so a human is enslaved whenever he is estranged from his own places.

9 A heart is delighted by ointments and wines and incenses, but a soul is torn apart by misfortunes.

10 Do not abandon your friend or an ancestral friend, and do not enter your brother's house when unfortunate; a friend nearby is better than a brother dwelling far away.

11 Become wise, son, so that my heart may be gladdened, and turn reproachful words away from yourself.

12 A shrewd person hid himself when evil things were coming, but senseless people, having come upon them, will pay a penalty.

13 Take away his garment, for he passed by; whoever ruins others' things is arrogant.

14 Whoever blesses a friend early with a loud voice will seem to differ in nothing from one cursing.

15 Drops cast a human out of his house on a winter day, likewise also an abusive woman out of his own house.

16 The north wind is a harsh wind, but by name it is called favorable.

17 Iron sharpens iron, and a man provokes a companion's face.

18 Whoever plants a fig tree will eat its fruits; but whoever guards his own master will be honored.

19 Just as faces are not alike to faces, so neither are humans' hearts.

20 Hades and destruction are not filled, likewise also humans' eyes are insatiable.

20 a One fixing an eye is an abomination to the Lord, and the undisciplined are unrestrained in tongue.

21 Burning is a test for silver and gold, but a man is tested through the mouth of those praising him.

21 a A lawless person's heart seeks out evil things, but an upright heart seeks out knowledge.

22 If you were to whip a senseless person in the midst of a council, dishonoring him, you would certainly not remove his senselessness.

23 You will knowingly recognize the souls of your flock and apply your heart to your herds;

24 because dominion and strength are not forever for a man, nor does he hand them down from generation to generation.

25 Attend to the green things in the plain, and you will cut grass, and gather mountain fodder,

26 so that you may have sheep for clothing; honor a plain, so that you may have lambs.

27 Son, from me you have strong utterances for your life and for the life of your attendants.

Chapter 28

1 An ungodly person flees with no one pursuing, but a righteous person has confidence like a lion.

2 Through ungodly people's sins judgments are raised, but a shrewd man will extinguish them.

3 One courageous in ungodliness extorts from poor people. Like a violent and unprofitable rain,

4 so those abandoning the law praise ungodliness, but those loving the law put a wall around themselves.

5 Evil men will not understand judgment, but those seeking the Lord will understand in everything.

6 A poor person walking in truth is better than a false rich person.

7 An understanding son keeps law; but whoever shepherds dissipation dishonors a father.

8 The one multiplying his wealth with interest and excesses gathers it for the one showing mercy to poor people.

9 The one turning aside his ear so as not to hear law has himself also made his prayer abominable.

10 Whoever leads upright people astray in an evil way will himself fall into corruption; but the lawless will pass through good things and will not enter into them.

11 A rich man is wise to himself, but an intelligent needy person will condemn him.

12 Through the help of righteous people much glory arises, but in ungodly people's places humans are caught.

13 The one covering his own ungodliness will not prosper, but the one explaining reproofs will be loved.

14 Blessed is a man who cowers before everything through reverence, but the one hard in heart will fall into evil things.

15 A hungry lion and a thirsty wolf is the one who, being poor, tyrannizes over an impoverished nation.

16 A king lacking revenues is a great extortioner, but the one hating injustice will live a long time.

17 The one guaranteeing a man under a charge of murder will be a fugitive and not in safety.

17 a Discipline a son, and he will love you and give ornament to your soul; you shall certainly not listen to a lawless nation.

18 The one walking righteously has been helped, but the one walking in crooked ways will be entangled.

19 The one working his own land will be filled with breads, but the one pursuing leisure will be filled with poverty.

20 A trustworthy man will be greatly blessed, but the evil person will not be unpunished.

21 Whoever does not respect righteous people's faces is not good; such a person will sell a man for a morsel of bread.

22 An envious man hastens to become rich and does not know that a merciful person will rule him.

23 The one reproving a human's ways will have graces more than the one flattering with a tongue.

24 Whoever rejects a father or mother and thinks he is not sinning, this person is a partner of an ungodly man.

25 An insatiable man judges at random; but whoever has trusted in the Lord will be under care.

26 Whoever has trusted in a rash heart, such a person is senseless; but whoever walks in wisdom will be saved.

27 Whoever gives to poor people will not lack; but whoever turns away his eye will be in much difficulty.

28 In ungodly people's places righteous people groan, but in those people's destruction righteous people will multiply.

Chapter 29

1 A reproving man is better than a stiff-necked man; for when he suddenly burns, there is no healing.

2 When righteous people are praised, peoples will be gladdened, but when ungodly people rule, men groan.

3 The father of a man loving wisdom is gladdened; but whoever shepherds prostitutes will destroy wealth.

4 A righteous king raises up a country, but a lawless man demolishes it.

5 Whoever prepares a net against his own friend's face puts it around his own feet.

6 For a sinning man there is a great trap, but a righteous person will be in joy and gladness.

7 A righteous person knows how to judge for the impoverished, but the ungodly person will not understand knowledge, and a discerning mind does not belong to a poor person.

8 Pestilent men burned a city, but wise people turned away anger.

9 A wise man judges nations, but a worthless man, being angry, is laughed at and does not cower.

10 Men sharing in blood will hate a holy person, but the upright will seek out his soul.

11 A senseless person brings out his whole wrath, but a wise person stores it portion by portion.

12 When a king listens to an unjust word, all those under him are lawless.

13 When a lender and debtor come together with one another, the Lord makes a visitation of both.

14 When a king judges poor people in truth, his throne will be established for a testimony.

15 Blows and reproofs give wisdom, but a wandering child shames his parents.

16 When ungodly people are many, sins become many, but righteous people become greatly afraid when those people fall.

17 Discipline your son, and he will give you rest and give ornament to your soul.

18 There will certainly not be an interpreter for a lawless nation, but the one keeping the law is blessed.

19 A harsh servant will not be disciplined by words; for even if he understands, yet he will not listen.

20 If you see a man quick in words, know that a senseless person has more hope than he.

21 Whoever lives lavishly from childhood will be a servant, and at the last will be pained over himself.

22 A wrathful man digs strife, and an irascible man dug out sins.

23 Arrogance humbles a man, but the Lord supports the humble-minded with glory.

24 Whoever shares with a thief hates his own soul; but if, when an oath has been put forth, they hear and do not report,

25 having feared and been ashamed before humans, they were tripped; but the one trusting in the Lord will be gladdened. Ungodliness gives a man a fall; but whoever has trusted in the Master will be saved.

26 Many attend upon leaders' faces, but what is just for a man comes from the Lord.

27 An unjust man is an abomination to righteous people, but a directing way is an abomination to a lawless person. – –

10 Who will find a courageous woman? And such a woman is more precious than costly stones.

11 Her husband's heart has confidence in her; such a woman will not lack good spoils;

12 for she produces good things for her husband all her life.

13 Winding wool and flax, she made it useful with her hands.

14 She became like a ship trading from afar, and she gathers livelihood.

15 And she rises from nights and gave foods to the household and tasks to the maidservants.

16 Having considered a farm, she bought it, and from fruits of her hands she planted a property.

17 Having strongly girded her loins, she braced her arms for work.

18 She tasted that working is good, and her lamp is not extinguished the whole night.

19 She stretches her forearms toward beneficial things, and braces her hands upon a spindle.

20 And she opened her hands to a needy person, and stretched out a wrist to a poor person.

21 Her husband does not worry about those in the house whenever he lingers somewhere; for all those with her are clothed.

22 She made double cloaks for her husband, and garments for herself from fine linen and purple.

23 And her husband becomes conspicuous in gates whenever he sits in council with the elder inhabitants of the land.

24 She made linen cloths and sold them, and girdles to the Chanaanites.

25 She opened her mouth attentively and lawfully and appointed order for her tongue.

26 She clothed herself in strength and comeliness and was gladdened in last days.

27 The dwellings of her houses are sheltered, and she did not eat idle foods.

28 And she opens her mouth wisely and according to law, and her mercifulness raised up her children, and they became rich, and her husband praised her:

29 Many daughters acquired wealth, many did mighty things, but you lie above and surpassed all.

30 Pleasing qualities are false and a woman's beauty vain; for an understanding woman is blessed, and let her praise fear of the Lord.

31 Give her from fruits of her hands, and let her husband be praised in gates.

Ecclesiastes

Chapter 1

1 Utterances of the Ecclesiast, son of Dauid, king of Israel in Ierousalem.

2 Vanity of vanities, said the Ecclesiast, vanity of vanities, everything is vanity.

3 What surplus is there for the human in all his toil in which he toils under the sun?

4 A generation goes and a generation comes, and the earth has stood forever.

5 And the sun rises and the sun sets and draws toward its place;

6 rising there, it goes toward the south and circles toward the north; circling it circles, the wind goes, and the wind returns upon its circuits.

7 All the torrents go into the sea, and the sea will not be filled; to the place where the torrents go, there they return to go.

8 All words are wearisome; a man will not be able to speak, and an eye will not be filled with seeing, and an ear will not be filled from hearing.

9 What has happened? The same is what will happen; and what has been done? The same is what will be done; and there is nothing fresh under the sun.

10 Whoever will speak and say, See, this is new, it has already happened in the ages that came before us.

11 There is no remembrance of the first, and indeed of the last who have come there will be no remembrance of them among those who will come at the last.

12 I, the Ecclesiast, became king over Israel in Ierousalem;

13 and I gave my heart to seek out and to examine in wisdom concerning all the things happening under heaven; because God gave an evil distraction to the sons of the human to be distracted in it.

14 I saw all the works done under the sun, and behold, everything is vanity and choice of spirit.

15 What has been perverted will not be able to be set in order, and a deficiency will not be able to be numbered.

16 I spoke in my heart, saying, I, behold, was magnified and added wisdom above all who came before me in Ierousalem, and my heart saw much, wisdom and knowledge.

17 And I gave my heart to know wisdom and knowledge; I knew parables and understanding, that indeed this too is choice of spirit;

18 because in abundance of wisdom is abundance of knowledge, and the one adding knowledge will add pain.

Chapter 2

1 I said in my heart, Come now, I will test you in gladness, and see in good; and behold, indeed this too is vanity.

2 To laughter I said, Derangement, and to gladness, Why do you do this?

3 I examined in my heart drawing my flesh into wine – and my heart guided in wisdom – and taking hold of senselessness, until I see what is the good for the sons of the human which they will do under the sun for the number of days of their life.

4 I enlarged my work, I built houses for myself, I planted vineyards for myself,

5 I made gardens and parks for myself and planted in them every fruit tree;

6 I made pools of waters for myself to water from them a wood sprouting trees;

7 I acquired male slaves and female slaves, and homeborn slaves came to belong to me, and indeed much possession of cattle and flock came to belong to me above all who came before me in Ierousalem;

8 I gathered for myself also silver and gold and abundances of kings and of countries; I made for myself male singers and female singers and delights of the sons of the human, a male wine-pourer and female wine-pourers;

9 and I was magnified and increased beyond all who came before me in Ierousalem; and indeed my wisdom stood with me.

10 And everything that my eyes asked, I did not withhold from them; I did not prevent my heart from any gladness, because my heart was gladdened in all my toil, and this became my portion from all my toil.

11 And I looked upon all my works which my hands did, and upon toil in which I toiled to do them, and behold, everything is vanity and choice of spirit, and there is no surplus under the sun.

12 And I looked to see wisdom and derangement and senselessness; because who is the human who will come after the counsel, all the things that made it?

13 And I saw that wisdom has a surplus above senselessness, as the surplus of light above darkness;

14 the wise person's eyes are in his head, and the senseless person walks in darkness. And indeed I knew that one occurrence will occur to them all.

15 And I said in my heart, As the occurrence of the senseless person, indeed it will occur to me also, and why did I become wise? I then spoke excessively in my heart, because a senseless person speaks from excess, that indeed this too is vanity.

16 Because there is no remembrance of the wise person with the senseless person forever, inasmuch as already in the coming days everything was forgotten; and how will the wise person die with the senseless person?

17 And I hated life, because the work done under the sun is evil upon me, because everything is vanity and choice of spirit.

18 And I hated all my toil which I toil under the sun, because I leave it to the human coming after me;

19 and who knows whether he will be wise or senseless? And he exercises authority over all my toil in which I toiled and in which I acted wisely under the sun. Indeed this too is vanity.

20 And I turned to renounce in my heart all the toil in which I toiled under the sun,

21 because there is a human whose toil is in wisdom and in knowledge and in courage, and to a human who did not toil in it he will give his portion. Indeed this too is vanity and great evil.

22 Because what comes to the human in all his toil and in the choice of his heart in which he himself toils under the sun?

23 Because all his days are of pains, and his distraction of wrath, and indeed at night his heart does not sleep. Indeed this too is vanity.

24 There is no good in a human; what he will eat and what he will drink and what he will show his soul is good in his toil. Indeed this too I saw, that it is from God's hand;

25 because who will eat and who will spare apart from him?

26 Because to the human good before his face he gave wisdom and knowledge and gladness; and to the sinner he gave distraction to add and to gather to give to the good person before God's face; because indeed this too is vanity and choice of spirit.

Chapter 3

1 For everything there is a time, and a season for every matter under heaven.

2 A season to give birth and a season to die, a season to plant and a season to pull out what has been planted,

3 a season to kill and a season to heal, a season to pull down and a season to build,

4 a season to weep and a season to laugh, a season to mourn and a season to dance,

5 a season to cast stones and a season to gather stones, a season to embrace and a season to be far from an embrace,

6 a season to seek and a season to lose, a season to keep and a season to cast out,

7 a season to tear and a season to sew, a season to be silent and a season to speak,

8 a season to love and a season to hate, a season of war and a season of peace.

9 What surplus has the one doing in the things in which he himself toils?

10 I saw the distraction which God gave to the sons of the human to be distracted in it.

11 He made everything good in its season, and indeed he gave eternity in their heart, so that the human may not find the work which God did, from beginning and until end.

12 I knew that there is no good in them except to be gladdened and to do good in his life;

13 and indeed every human who will eat and drink and see good in all his toil, it is God's gift.

14 I knew that everything, as much as God did, will be forever; there is no adding to it and there is no taking away from it, and God did it so that they may fear before his face.

15 What happened already is, and as much as is to happen has already happened, and God will seek the one being pursued.

16 And still I saw under the sun a place of judgment, there the ungodly person, and a place of the righteous person, there the ungodly person.

17 I said in my heart, God will judge the righteous person and the ungodly person, because there is a season for every matter and over every work.

18 There I said in my heart concerning the speech of the sons of the human, that God will distinguish them, and to show that they are beasts, indeed to themselves.

19 Because the occurrence of the sons of the human and the occurrence of the beast are one occurrence for them; as the death of this one, so the death of that one, and one spirit for all; and what surplus had the human beyond the beast? Nothing, because everything is vanity.

20 Everything goes to one place; everything came from dust, and everything returns to dust;

21 and who knows the spirit of the sons of the human, whether it ascends above, and the spirit of the beast, whether it descends below into earth?

22 And I saw that there is no good except that the human will be gladdened in his works, because that is his portion; because who will lead him to see what may happen after him?

Chapter 4

1 And I turned and saw all the oppressions happening under the sun; and behold, the tear of those being oppressed, and they have no comforter, and strength is from the hand of those oppressing them, and they have no comforter.

2 And I praised the dead who had already died above the living, as many as themselves live until now;

3 and better than these two is whoever has not yet come to be, who did not see the evil work done under the sun.

4 And I saw all toil and all prowess of the work, that it is a man's envy from his companion; indeed this too is vanity and choice of spirit.

5 The senseless person folded his hands and ate his flesh.

6 A handful of rest is better than two handfuls of toil and choice of spirit.

7 And I turned and saw vanity under the sun.

8 There is one, and there is no second, and indeed he has neither son nor brother; and there is no end to all his toil, and indeed his eye is not filled with wealth. And for whom do I toil and deprive my soul of goodness? Indeed this too is vanity and an evil distraction.

9 The two are better than the one, who have a good reward in their toil;

10 because if they fall, the one will raise his partner, and woe to him who is one, whenever he falls and there is no second to raise him.

11 And indeed if two sleep, there is also warmth for them; and how may the one be warmed?

12 And if the one is overpowered, the two will stand against him, and the threefold cord will not quickly be torn apart.

13 A needy and wise child is better than an older and senseless king who did not know how to attend any longer;

14 because from a house of prisoners he will come out to reign, because indeed in his kingdom he was born needy.

15 I saw all the living walking under the sun with the second young man who will stand in his place,

16 there is no end to all the people, to all, as many as came before them; and indeed the last will not be gladdened in him; because indeed this too is vanity and choice of spirit.

17 Guard your foot whenever you go into God's house, and be near to hearing; your sacrifice is above a gift of senseless people, because they do not know how to do evil.

Chapter 5

1 Do not hasten with your mouth, and let your heart not hurry to bring forth a word before God's face; because God is in heaven and you upon earth, therefore let your words be few.

2 Because a dream comes in abundance of distraction, and a senseless person's voice in abundance of words.

3 Whenever you vow a vow to God, do not delay repaying it; because there is no pleasure in senseless people; repay whatever you vow.

4 It is better for you not to vow than for you to vow and not repay.

5 Do not give your mouth to make your flesh sin, and do not say before God's face that it is ignorance, so that God may not be angered at your voice and destroy the works of your hands.

6 Because in abundance of dreams are also vanities and many words; because fear God.

7 If you see oppression of a needy person and seizure of judgment and righteousness in a country, do not marvel at the matter; because a high one above a high one is to watch, and high ones over them.

8 And the surplus of land is in everything, a king of the cultivated field.

9 One loving silver will not be filled with silver; and who loved produce in their abundance? Indeed this too is vanity.

10 In abundance of goodness those eating it were multiplied; and what prowess has the one possessing it except to see with his eyes?

11 A slave's sleep is sweet, whether he eats little or much; and for the one filled with becoming rich there is nothing allowing him to sleep.

12 There is a sickness which I saw under the sun, wealth being kept by its possessor to his harm,

13 and that wealth will perish in an evil distraction, and he begot a son, and there is nothing in his hand.

14 As he came out naked from his mother's womb, he will return to go as he comes, and he will take nothing in his toil to go in his hand.

15 Indeed this too is an evil sickness; for just as he came, so also he will go away, and what surplus has he in that he toils for wind?

16 And indeed all his days are in darkness and mourning and much wrath and sickness and anger.

17 Behold what I saw as good, what is fine: to eat and to drink and to see goodness in all his toil in which he may toil under the sun for the number of days of his life which God gave him; because that is his portion.

18 And indeed every human to whom God gave wealth and possessions and empowered him to eat from it and to take his share and to be gladdened in his toil, this is God's gift.

19 Because he will not much remember the days of his life; because God distracts him in gladness of his heart.

Chapter 6

1 There is an evil which I saw under the sun, and it is great upon the human;

2 a man to whom God will give wealth and possessions and glory, and he is not lacking for his soul in any of the things he will desire, and God will not empower him to eat from it, because a strange man will eat it; this is vanity and an evil sickness.

3 If a man begets a hundred and will live many years, and however many the days of his years will be, and his soul will not be filled with goodness, and indeed no burial came to him, I said, The miscarriage is better than he,

4 because it came in vanity and goes in darkness, and in darkness its name will be covered,

5 and indeed it did not see the sun and did not know; there is rest for this one beyond that one.

6 And if he lived courses of a thousand years and did not see goodness, does not everything go to one place?

7 All the human's toil is for his mouth, and indeed the soul will not be filled.

8 Because what surplus has the wise person above the senseless person? Because the needy person knows how to walk before life.

9 A sight of eyes is better than what goes in the soul. Indeed this too is vanity and choice of spirit.

10 If anything happened, its name has already been called, and it was known what a human is, and he will not be able to contend in judgment with the one stronger than he;

11 because there are many words multiplying vanity. What surplus has the human?

12 Because who knows what is good for the human in life, for the number of days of the life of his vanity? And he made them in a shadow; because who will tell the human what will be after him under the sun?

Chapter 7

1 A good name is better than good oil, and a day of death than the day of his birth.

2 It is better to go into a house of mourning than to go into a house of drinking, inasmuch as this is the end of every human, and the living person will put it into his heart.

3 Wrath is better than laughter, because in badness of face a heart will be made good.

4 Wise people's heart is in a house of mourning, and senseless people's heart in a house of gladness.

5 To hear a wise person's rebuke is better than a man hearing a song of senseless people;

6 because as the sound of thorns under a cauldron, so is the laughter of senseless people; indeed this too is vanity.

7 Because oppression deranges a wise person and destroys the heart of his vigor.

8 The last of words is better than its beginning; a long-tempered person is better than one lofty in spirit.

9 Do not hasten in your spirit to be wrathful, because wrath will rest in senseless people's bosom.

10 Do not say, What happened, that the former days were better than these? Because you did not ask about this in wisdom.

11 Wisdom is good with an inheritance, and a surplus for those beholding the sun;

12 because wisdom in its shadow is like the shadow of silver, and a surplus of the knowledge of wisdom will give life to its possessor.

13 See God's works; because who will be able to set in order the one whom God may pervert?

14 On a day of goodness live in good, and on a day of evil see; indeed God made this in accord with that concerning speech, so that the human may find nothing after him.

15 I saw everything in the days of my vanity; there is a righteous person perishing in his righteousness, and there is an ungodly person remaining in his wickedness.

16 Do not become greatly righteous and do not act excessively wise, lest you be astounded.

17 Do not act greatly ungodly and do not become harsh, so that you may not die when it is not your season.

18 It is good for you to hold fast to this, and indeed do not release your hand from that, because the one fearing God will come out of everything.

19 Wisdom will help the wise person above ten persons exercising authority who are in the city;

20 because there is no righteous human on the earth who will do good and will not sin.

21 And indeed do not set your heart upon all the words they will speak, so that you may not hear your slave cursing you,

22 because very often he will act wickedly against you and on many occasions harm your heart, as indeed you too cursed others.

23 I tested all these things in wisdom; I said, I will be made wise,

24 and it went far from me beyond what it was, and a deep depth, who will find it?

25 I circled, and my heart, to know and to examine and seek wisdom and reckoning and to know an ungodly person's senselessness and harshness and derangement.

26 And I find more bitter than death the woman who is snares, and her heart nets, her hands bonds; the good person before God's face will be rescued from her, and a sinner will be caught in her.

27 See, this I found, said the Ecclesiast, one by one to find a reasoning,

28 which my soul still sought and I did not find; one human from a thousand I found, and a woman among all these I did not find.

29 Only see, this I found, that God made the human upright, and they sought many reasonings.

Chapter 8

1 Who knows wise people? And who knows the solution of an utterance? A human's wisdom will illuminate his face, and one shameless in his face will be hated.

2 Keep a king's mouth, and concerning a word of an oath of God do not hasten;

3 you will go from his face; do not stand in an evil word; because everything that he may wish he will do,

4 as a king exercising authority speaks, and who will say to him, What will you do?

5 The one keeping a commandment will not know an evil utterance, and a wise person's heart knows a season of judgment;

6 because for every matter there is a season and judgment, because the human's knowledge is great upon him;

7 because he does not know what will be, because who will tell him how it will be?

8 There is no human exercising authority over spirit to restrain the spirit; and there is no authority on the day of death, and there is no discharge in war, and ungodliness will not preserve its possessor.

9 And all this I saw and gave my heart to every work that has been done under the sun, all the things in which the human exercised authority over a human to harm him;

10 and then I saw ungodly people brought into tombs, and they went from a holy place and were praised in the city because they did thus. Indeed this too is vanity.

11 Because contradiction does not arise quickly from those doing evil; therefore the heart of the sons of the human was fully assured in them to do evil.

12 The one who sinned did evil from then and from length of time for him; because indeed I know that it will be good for those fearing God, so that they may fear before his face;

13 and it will not be good for the ungodly person, and he will not lengthen days in a shadow, who does not fear before God's face.

14 There is vanity which has been done upon earth, that there are righteous people to whom it comes as the work of ungodly people, and there are ungodly people to whom it comes as the work of righteous people; I said that indeed this too is vanity.

15 And I praised gladness, because there is no good for the human under the sun except to eat and to drink and to be gladdened, and it will accompany him in his toil for the days of his life, as many as God gave him under the sun.

16 When I gave my heart to know wisdom and to see the distraction that has been made upon the earth, because indeed by day and by night he does not see sleep in his eyes,

17 and I saw all God's works, that a human will not be able to find the work done under the sun; however much the human may toil to seek, he will not find; and indeed however much the wise person may say that he knows, he will not be able to find.

Chapter 9

1 Because I put all this into my heart, and my heart saw all this, that the righteous and the wise and their labors are in God's hand, and indeed the human does not know either love or hatred; everything is before their face,

2 vanity in everything. One occurrence for the righteous person and the ungodly person, for the good and the evil and the clean and the unclean and the one sacrificing and the one not sacrificing; as the good person, so the sinner; as the one swearing, so the one fearing the oath.

3 This is evil in everything done under the sun, that there is one occurrence for all; and indeed the heart of the sons of the human was filled with evil, and derangement is in their heart in their life, and after them, toward the dead.

4 Because who is the one sharing with all the living? There is hope, because the living dog is itself better than the dead lion.

5 Because the living will know that they will die, and the dead do not know anything; and they have no reward any longer, because their remembrance was forgotten;

6 and indeed their love and their hatred and their jealousy have already perished, and they have no portion any longer forever in everything done under the sun.

7 Come, eat your bread in gladness and drink your wine with a good heart, because God has already approved your works.

8 At every season let your garments be white, and let oil upon your head not be lacking.

9 See life with a woman whom you loved all the days of the life of your vanity given to you under the sun, all the days of your vanity, because that is your portion in your life and in your toil in which you toil under the sun.

10 Everything, as much as your hand may find to do, do according to your power, because there is no work and reasoning and knowledge and wisdom in Hades, where you are going.

11 I turned and saw under the sun that the race is not for the swift, and war not for the powerful, and indeed bread not for the wise, and indeed wealth not for the understanding, and indeed grace not for those knowing, because a season and an encounter will occur to them all.

12 Because indeed the human did not know his season; as the fish caught in an evil casting-net and as birds caught in a trap, like them the sons of the human are trapped at an evil season whenever it falls upon them suddenly.

13 Indeed this too I saw as wisdom under the sun, and it is great to me;

14 a small city and few men in it, and a great king may come against it and encircle it and build great siegeworks against it;

15 and he may find in it a needy wise man, and he himself will preserve the city in his wisdom; and no human remembered that needy man.

16 And I said, Wisdom is better than power; and the needy person's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard.

17 Words of wise people in rest are heard above the cry of those exercising authority in senselessnesses.

18 Wisdom is better than implements of war, and one sinner will destroy much goodness.

Chapter 10

1 Flies that kill will rot a preparation of fragrant oil; a little wisdom is precious above glory of great senselessness.

2 A wise person's heart is toward his right, and a senseless person's heart toward his left;

3 and indeed on a way whenever a senseless person walks, his heart will lack, and everything he will reckon is senselessness.

4 If the spirit of the one exercising authority rises against you, do not leave your place, because healing will stop great sins.

5 There is an evil which I saw under the sun, like an involuntary thing which came from the face of the one exercising authority;

6 the senseless person was set in great heights, and rich people will sit in a low place;

7 I saw slaves on horses and rulers walking like slaves upon the earth.

8 The one digging a pit will fall into it, and the one pulling down a fence, a snake will bite him;

9 one removing stones will be distressed by them, one splitting wood will be endangered by it.

10 If the iron falls out, and he himself disturbed its face, he will also strengthen forces, and wisdom is the courageous person's surplus.

11 If the snake bites without whispering, there is also no surplus for the one chanting a charm.

12 Words of a wise person's mouth are grace, and a senseless person's lips will drown him;

13 the beginning of his mouth's words is senselessness, and the last of his mouth evil derangement;

14 and the senseless person multiplies words. The human did not know what happened, and what will be after him, who will tell him?

15 The toil of senseless people will weary them, one who did not know how to go to a city.

16 Woe to you, city, whose king is younger and whose rulers eat in the morning;

17 blessed are you, land, whose king is a son of free people and whose rulers will eat at a season in strength and will not be ashamed.

18 Through slothfulnesses the framework will be lowered, and through idleness of hands the house will drip.

19 For laughter they make bread, and wine gladdens the living, and everything will heed silver.

20 And indeed in your consciousness do not curse a king, and in chambers of your bedrooms do not curse a rich person; because a bird of heaven will carry away the voice, and the one having wings will report a word.

Chapter 11

1 Send your bread upon the face of the water, because in abundance of days you will find it;

2 give a portion to the seven and indeed to the eight, because you do not know what evil will be upon the earth.

3 If the clouds are filled with rain, they pour out upon the earth; and if a tree falls in the south and if in the north, in the place where the tree will fall, there it will be.

4 One watching wind will not sow, and one looking among the clouds will not reap,

5 when he does not know what the way of the spirit is. As bones in the womb of her who carries a child, so you will not know God's works, as much as he will do, everything.

6 In the morning sow your seed, and toward evening let your hand not cease, because you do not know which will succeed, whether this or that, and whether the two together are good.

7 And light is sweet, and it is good for the eyes to see the sun;

8 because even if the human will live many years, in all of them he will be gladdened and will remember the days of darkness, because they will be many; everything coming is vanity.

9 Be gladdened, young man, in your youth, and let your heart make you glad in the days of your youth, and walk in ways of your heart and in the sight of your eyes, and know that for all these things God will bring you into judgment.

10 And remove wrath from your heart and turn evil away from your flesh, because youth and unintelligence are vanity.

Chapter 12

1 And remember the one who created you in the days of your youth, before the days of evil come and years arrive in which you will say, I have no pleasure in them;

2 before the sun and the light and the moon and the stars are darkened, and the clouds return after the rain;

3 on a day when guards of the house may be shaken and men of strength bent, and the women grinding ceased, because they became few, and the women looking through the openings will grow dark;

4 and they will close doors in the marketplace in the weakness of the voice of the woman grinding, and he will rise at the voice of the sparrow, and all the daughters of song will be lowered;

5 and indeed they will see from a height, and terrors are on the way; and the almond may blossom, and the locust grow fat, and the caper be scattered, because the human went to the house of his eternity, and the mourners circled in the marketplace;

6 before a silver cord is overturned, and a golden flower ornament crushed, and a water jar shattered at the spring, and the wheel run together upon the pit,

7 and the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit return to God who gave it.

8 Vanity of vanities, said the Ecclesiast, everything is vanity.

9 And furthermore, because the Ecclesiast became wise, he still taught the people knowledge, and an ear will trace out an orderly arrangement of parables.

10 The Ecclesiast sought much to find words of pleasure and what has been written of uprightness, words of truth.

11 Words of wise people are like the ox-goads and like planted nails, which from the collections were given from one shepherd, and a surplus from them.

12 My son, guard yourself against making many books; there is no end, and much study is weariness of flesh.

13 The end of a word, the whole is heard: Fear God and keep his commandments, because this is the whole human.

14 Because God will bring every work into judgment, in everything overlooked, whether good or evil.

Song of Solomon

Chapter 1

1 Song of songs, which belongs to Salomon.

2 Let him kiss me with kisses of his mouth, because your breasts are better than wine,

3 and the fragrance of your ointments above all the spices; your name is ointment poured out. Therefore young women loved you,

4 they drew you; after you we will run into the fragrance of your ointments. The king brought me into his chamber. Let us exult and be gladdened in you; we will love your breasts above wine; uprightness loved you.

5 I am black and beautiful, daughters of Ierousalem, like tents of Kedar, like tent curtains of Salomon.

6 Do not look at me because I am blackened, because the sun looked upon me; sons of my mother fought against me, they set me as a keeper in vineyards; my own vineyard I did not keep.

7 Tell me, you whom my soul loved, where you shepherd, where you bed down at midday, lest I become like a veiled woman beside your companions' herds.

8 If you do not know yourself, beautiful one among women, go out on the heels of the flocks and shepherd your young she-goats beside the shepherds' tents.

9 To my mare among Pharao's chariots I likened you, my neighbor.

10 How were your cheeks made beautiful like turtledoves, your neck like little necklaces?

11 We will make likenesses of gold for you with dots of silver.

12 While the king was at his reclining, my nard gave its fragrance.

13 My kinsman is a bundle of myrrh to me; he will lodge between my breasts;

14 my kinsman is a cluster of henna to me in vineyards of Engaddi.

15 Behold, you are beautiful, my neighbor, behold, you are beautiful; your eyes are doves.

16 Behold, you are beautiful, my kinsman, and indeed lovely; moreover our bed is shaded,

17 the beams of our houses are cedars, our paneled ceilings cypresses.

Chapter 2

1 I am a flower of the plain, a lily of the valleys.

2 Like a lily in the midst of thorns, so is my neighbor among the daughters.

3 Like an apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my kinsman among the sons; in his shade I desired and sat, and his fruit is sweet in my throat.

4 Bring me into a house of wine; set love over me.

5 Support me with mulberries, heap apples around me, because I am wounded with love.

6 His left hand is under my head, and his right hand will embrace me.

7 I adjured you, daughters of Ierousalem, by the powers and by the strengths of the field, not to awaken and rouse love until it wishes.

8 The voice of my kinsman; behold, he comes leaping upon the mountains, bounding upon the hills.

9 My kinsman is like the gazelle or a fawn of deer upon the mountains of Baithel. Behold, he stands behind our wall, peering through the windows, looking out through the lattices.

10 My kinsman answers and says to me, Rise, come, my neighbor, my beautiful one, my dove,

11 because behold, winter passed, the rain departed, it went away,

12 the flowers appeared on the earth, the season of pruning has arrived, the voice of the turtledove was heard in our land,

13 the fig tree brought forth its unripe figs, the vines blossom, they gave fragrance. Rise, come, my neighbor, my beautiful one, my dove,

14 and come, my dove in the shelter of the rock adjoining the outer wall; show me your appearance and make me hear your voice, because your voice is pleasant and your appearance lovely.

15 Catch for us little foxes destroying vineyards, and our vines blossom.

16 My kinsman belongs to me, and I to him, the one shepherding among the lilies,

17 until the day breathes through and the shadows move. Turn, be like the gazelle or a fawn of deer, my kinsman, upon mountains of hollows.

Chapter 3

1 Upon my bed at nights I sought him whom my soul loved; I sought him and did not find him, I called him and he did not listen to me.

2 I will rise now and circle in the city, in the marketplaces and in the broad streets, and seek him whom my soul loved; I sought him and did not find him.

3 The watchmen circling in the city found me: Did you see him whom my soul loved?

4 It was a little while after I passed from them until I found him whom my soul loved; I held him and will not let him go until I brought him into my mother's house and into the chamber of her who conceived me.

5 I adjured you, daughters of Ierousalem, by the powers and by the strengths of the field, not to awaken and rouse love until it wishes.

6 Who is this woman ascending from the wilderness like stems of smoke, perfumed with myrrh and frankincense from all a perfumer's powders?

7 Behold, Salomon's bed, sixty mighty men around it from Israel's mighty men,

8 all holding a sword, taught war, each man with his sword upon his thigh because of terror at nights.

9 King Salomon made himself a litter from trees of Lebanon,

10 he made its pillars silver and its reclining place golden, its mounting place purple, its inside paved with stones, love from daughters of Ierousalem.

11 Go out and look upon King Salomon in the crown with which his mother crowned him on the day of his wedding and on the day of gladness of his heart.

Chapter 4

1 Behold, you are beautiful, my neighbor, behold, you are beautiful. Your eyes are doves outside your silence. Your hair is like herds of goats which were revealed from Galaad.

2 Your teeth are like herds of shorn sheep which ascended from the washing, all bearing twins, and there is none childless among them.

3 Your lips are like the scarlet cord, and your speech is lovely. Your cheek is like the rind of the pomegranate outside your silence.

4 Your neck is like Dauid's tower built for thalpioth; a thousand shields hang upon it, all the mighty men's missiles.

5 Your two breasts are like two twin fawns of a gazelle grazing among lilies.

6 Until the day breathes through and the shadows move, I will go to the mountain of myrrh and to the hill of Lebanon.

7 You are wholly beautiful, my neighbor, and there is no blemish in you.

8 Come from Lebanon, bride, come from Lebanon; you will come and pass through from the beginning of faith, from the summit of Sanir and Hermon, from lions' dens, from leopards' mountains.

9 You heartened us, my sister, bride, you heartened us with one of your eyes, with one ornament of your neck.

10 How were your breasts made beautiful, my sister, bride, how were your breasts made more beautiful than wine? And the fragrance of your garments is above all the spices.

11 Your lips drip a honeycomb, bride, honey and milk are under your tongue, and the fragrance of your garments is like the fragrance of Lebanon.

12 My sister, bride, is a locked garden, a locked garden, a sealed spring;

13 your shoots are a park of pomegranates with fruit of fruit trees, henna with nards,

14 nard and saffron, reed and cinnamon with all the trees of Lebanon, myrrh, aloth, with all the foremost ointments,

15 a spring of gardens, a well of living water rushing from Lebanon.

16 Awake, north, and come, south, blow through my garden, and let my spices flow; let my kinsman descend into his garden and eat the fruit of his fruit trees.

Chapter 5

1 I entered my garden, my sister, bride, I harvested my myrrh with my spices, I ate my bread with my honey, I drank my wine with my milk; eat, neighbors, and drink and become drunk, brothers,

2 I sleep, and my heart is awake. The voice of my kinsman, he knocks upon the door: Open to me, my sister, my neighbor, my dove, my perfect one, because my head was filled with dew and my locks with drops of night.

3 I took off my tunic; how should I put it on? I washed my feet; how will I soil them?

4 My kinsman sent his hand from the opening, and my belly was stirred over him.

5 I rose to open to my kinsman; my hands dripped myrrh, my fingers abundant myrrh upon the handles of the bolt.

6 I opened to my kinsman; my kinsman passed by; my soul went out at his word; I sought him and did not find him, I called him and he did not listen to me.

7 The guards circling in the city found me, they struck me, they wounded me; the guards of the walls took my veil away from me.

8 I adjured you, daughters of Ierousalem, by the powers and by the strengths of the field, if you find my kinsman, what should you tell him? That I am wounded with love.

9 What is your kinsman beyond a kinsman, beautiful one among women, what is your kinsman beyond a kinsman, that you adjured us thus?

10 My kinsman is white and red, chosen out from myriads;

11 his head is gold and phaz, his locks fir trees, black as a raven,

12 his eyes like doves upon fullnesses of waters, washed in milk, sitting upon fullnesses of waters,

13 his cheeks like bowls of spice growing perfuming substances, his lips lilies dripping abundant myrrh,

14 his hands golden carved works filled with tharsis, his belly an ivory box upon sapphire stone,

15 his legs marble pillars founded upon golden bases, his appearance like Lebanon, choice as cedars,

16 his throat sweetnesses, and he is wholly desire; this is my kinsman and this my neighbor, daughters of Ierousalem.

Chapter 6

1 Where did your kinsman go, beautiful one among women? Where did your kinsman look away? And we will seek him with you.

2 My kinsman descended into his garden, to bowls of spice, to shepherd in gardens and gather lilies;

3 I belong to my kinsman, and my kinsman to me, the one shepherding among the lilies.

4 You are beautiful, my neighbor, like good pleasure, lovely like Ierousalem, a terror like women drawn up in order.

5 Turn your eyes away from before me, because they gave me wings. Your hair is like herds of goats which appeared from Galaad.

6 Your teeth are like herds of shorn sheep which ascended from the washing, all bearing twins, and there is none childless among them.

7 Your lips are like the scarlet cord, and your speech is lovely. Your cheek is like the rind of the pomegranate outside your silence.

8 There are sixty queens and eighty concubines and young women who have no number.

9 My dove, my perfect one, is one; she is the one for her mother, she is chosen for her who bore her. Daughters saw her and will call her blessed, queens and concubines, and will praise her.

10 Who is this woman looking out like dawn, beautiful like the moon, choice like the sun, a terror like women drawn up in order?

11 I descended into a walnut garden to look among the torrent's produce, to see whether the vine blossomed, the pomegranates flowered; there I will give you my breasts.

12 My soul did not know; chariots of Aminadab set me.

Chapter 7

1 Return, return, Soulamite, return, return, and we will look upon you. What will you look upon in the Soulamite? She comes like dances of the camps.

2 How were your steps made lovely in sandals, daughter of Nadab? The curves of your thighs are like little necklaces, a work of an artisan's hands;

3 your navel is a carved mixing bowl not lacking mixed wine; your belly is a heap of grain fenced with lilies;

4 your two breasts are like two twin fawns of a gazelle;

5 your neck is like an ivory tower; your eyes like pools in Esebon at the gates of a daughter of many; your nose like a tower of Lebanon watching the face of Damascus;

6 your head upon you is like Carmel, and the braid of your head like purple, a king bound in galleries.

7 How were you made lovely and how were you made pleasant, love, in your delights?

8 This stature of yours was likened to the palm tree, and your breasts to the clusters.

9 I said, I will ascend the palm tree, I will hold its heights, and now your breasts will be like clusters of the vine, and the fragrance of your nose like apples

10 and your throat like the good wine going to my kinsman in uprightness, sufficing for my lips and teeth.

11 I belong to my kinsman, and his turning is toward me.

12 Come, my kinsman, let us go out into a field, let us lodge in villages;

13 let us rise early for vineyards, let us see whether the vine blossomed, the blossom blossomed, the pomegranates blossomed; there I will give you my breasts.

14 The mandrakes gave fragrance, and at our doors are all fruits of fruit trees, new alongside old, my kinsman, I kept them for you.

Chapter 8

1 Who might give you as my kinsman, nursing at my mother's breasts? Finding you outside, I will kiss you, and indeed they will not despise me.

2 I will take you along, I will bring you into my mother's house and into the chamber of her who conceived me; I will give you drink from the perfumed wine, from the juice of my pomegranates.

3 His left hand is under my head, and his right hand will embrace me.

4 I adjured you, daughters of Ierousalem, by the powers and by the strengths of the field, why should you awaken and why should you rouse love until it wishes?

5 Who is this woman ascending, whitened, leaning upon her kinsman? Under an apple tree I roused you; there your mother travailed with you, there she who bore you travailed with you.

6 Set me as a seal upon your heart, as a seal upon your arm; because love is mighty as death, jealousy harsh as Hades; its wings are wings of fire, its flames;

7 Much water will not be able to extinguish love, and rivers will not flood it; if a man gives his whole livelihood in love, they will despise him with contempt.

8 We have a little sister, and she has no breasts; what should we do for our sister on a day when she may be spoken of?

9 If she is a wall, let us build silver battlements upon her; and if she is a door, let us outline a cedar plank upon her.

10 I am a wall, and my breasts like towers; I was in his eyes like one finding peace.

11 Salomon had a vineyard in Beelamon; he gave his vineyard to the keepers; each man will bring a thousand of silver for its fruit.

12 My vineyard, my own, is before me; the thousand are for you, Salomon, and the two hundred for those keeping its fruit.

13 You who sit in gardens, companions attend to your voice; make me hear.

14 Flee, my kinsman, and be like the gazelle or the fawn of the deer upon mountains of spices.

Job

Chapter 1

1 There was a certain human in the country of Ausitis whose name was Iob, and that human was true, blameless, righteous, God-revering, abstaining from every evil matter.

2 And seven sons and three daughters came to belong to him.

3 And his livestock were seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred pairs of oxen, five hundred grazing female donkeys, and he had very much service and great works upon the earth; and that human was noble among those from the sun's risings.

4 And his sons, going together to one another, made a drinking feast each day, taking along together also their three sisters to eat and drink with them.

5 And whenever the days of the drinking feast were completed, Iob sent and purified them, rising in the morning, and offered sacrifices for them according to their number and one calf for sin for their souls; for Iob said, Lest my sons in their thought conceived evil things toward God. Thus therefore Iob did all the days.

6 And when this day came, behold, God's angels came to stand before the Lord, and the devil came with them.

7 And the Lord said to the devil, From where have you come? And answering the Lord, the devil said, Having gone around the earth and walked about what is under heaven, I am here.

8 And the Lord said to him, Did you attend in your thought to my servant Iob, because there is no human like him among those upon the earth, blameless, true, God-revering, abstaining from every evil matter?

9 And the devil answered and said before the Lord, Does Iob revere God for nothing?

10 Did you not fence around his outside and the inside of his house and the outside of everything belonging to him round about? You blessed the works of his hands and made his livestock many upon the earth.

11 But send forth your hand and touch everything he has; surely he will bless you to your face.

12 Then the Lord said to the devil, Behold, everything belonging to him I give into your hand, but do not touch him. And the devil went out from the Lord.

13 And it was on this day that Iob's sons and his daughters were drinking wine in the house of their older brother.

14 And behold, a messenger came to Iob and said to him, The pairs of oxen were plowing, and the female donkeys grazing beside them;

15 and the captors came and took them captive and killed the servants with swords; but I alone, having been saved, came to tell you.

16 While this one was still speaking, another messenger came and said to Iob, Fire fell from heaven and burned the sheep and likewise devoured the shepherds; and I alone, having been saved, came to tell you.

17 While this one was still speaking, another messenger came and said to Iob, The horsemen made three bands against us and encircled the camels and took them captive and killed the servants with swords; but I alone was saved and came to tell you.

18 While this one was still speaking, another messenger comes, saying to Iob, While your sons and your daughters were eating and drinking at their older brother's,

19 suddenly a great wind came from the wilderness and touched the four corners of the house, and the house fell upon your children, and they died; but I alone was saved and came to tell you.

20 Thus Iob rose and tore his garments and sheared the hair of his head and fell to the ground and worshiped and said,

21 I myself came out naked from my mother's belly, and naked I will also go away there; the Lord gave, the Lord took away; as it seemed good to the Lord, so it also happened; may the Lord's name be blessed.

22 In all these things that had happened to him, Iob sinned in nothing before the Lord and did not give senselessness to God.

Chapter 2

1 And it happened on this day that God's angels came to stand before the Lord, and the devil came in their midst to stand before the Lord.

2 And the Lord said to the devil, From where do you come? Then the devil said before the Lord, Having passed through what is under heaven and walked about the whole of it, I am here.

3 And the Lord said to the devil, Did you therefore attend to my attendant Iob, because there is no human like him among those upon the earth, innocent, true, blameless, God-revering, abstaining from every evil? And he still holds to innocence; but you said to destroy his possessions for nothing.

4 And taking it up, the devil said to the Lord, Skin for skin; everything belonging to a human he will pay out for his soul;

5 nevertheless, send forth your hand and touch his bones and his flesh; surely he will bless you to your face.

6 And the Lord said to the devil, Behold, I hand him over to you; only preserve his soul.

7 And the devil went out from the Lord and struck Iob with an evil sore from feet to head.

8 And he took a potsherd to scrape the discharge, and sat upon the dung heap outside the city.

9 And when much time had passed, his wife said to him, Until when will you endure, saying, 9a Behold, I wait a little time still, expecting the hope of my salvation? 9b For behold, your memorial has vanished from the earth, sons and daughters, birth pangs and pains of my belly, for whom I labored in vain with toils. 9c And you yourself sit in the putrefaction of worms, spending the night in the open air; 9d and I am a wanderer and servant, going around from place to place and house to house, waiting for the sun, when it will set, so that I may rest from the toils and pains which now constrain me. 9e But say some utterance to the Lord and die.

10 But looking at her, he said to her, You spoke like one of the senseless women; if we received good things from the Lord's hand, shall we not bear evil things? In all these things that had happened to him, Iob sinned in nothing with his lips before God.

11 And his three friends, having heard all the evil things that came upon him, came to him, each from his own country, Eliphas the king of the Thaimans, Baldad the tyrant of the Sauchites, Sophar the king of the Minaites, and they came to him with one accord to comfort and visit him.

12 And seeing him from far away, they did not recognize him, and shouting with a loud voice they wept, each tearing his own robe and sprinkling earth upon themselves.

13 They sat beside him seven days and seven nights, and none of them spoke; for they saw that the blow was terrible and very great.

Chapter 3

1 After this Iob opened his mouth

2 and cursed his day, saying,

3 May the day perish on which I was born, and the night in which they said, Behold, a male.

4 May that day be darkness, and may the Lord not seek it out from above, nor brightness come into it;

5 and may darkness and a shadow of death take it, may gloom come upon it.

6 May that day and night be cursed, may darkness carry it away; may it not be among days of a year, nor be numbered among days of months;

7 but may that night be pain, and may neither gladness nor joy come upon it;

8 but may the one cursing that day curse it, the one about to subdue the great sea creature.

9 May the stars of that night be darkened, may it wait and not come into illumination and not see the morning star rising,

10 because it did not shut the gates of my mother's womb; for it would have removed trouble from my eyes.

11 For why did I not die in the belly, but came out from the womb and did not immediately perish?

12 And why did knees meet me? And why did I nurse at breasts?

13 Now, having lain down, I would have been quiet, and having slept, I would have rested

14 with kings, counselors of earth, who exulted over swords,

15 or with rulers whose gold was much, who filled their houses with silver,

16 or like a miscarriage coming out from a mother's womb, or like infants who did not see light.

17 There ungodly people burned out a fury of anger, there those exhausted in body rested;

18 and with one accord the everlasting ones did not hear a tax collector's voice;

19 small and great are there, and an attendant not fearing his master.

20 For why has light been given to those in bitterness, and life to souls in pains?

21 Who yearn for death and do not obtain it, digging it out like treasures,

22 and became exceedingly glad if they should attain it.

23 Death is a rest for a man, for God shut in against him;

24 for before my foods a groan comes to me, and I weep, constrained by fear;

25 for the fear which I pondered came to me, and what I had feared met me.

26 Neither was I at peace nor was I quiet nor did I rest, but anger came to me.

Chapter 4

1 And taking it up, Eliphas the Thaimanite says,

2 Has it not often been spoken to you in weariness? And who will bear the strength of your utterances?

3 For if you admonished many and encouraged a weak person's hands

4 and raised up weak people with utterances and put confidence around powerless knees,

5 but now trouble comes upon you and touched you, and you were agitated.

6 Is not your fear in senselessness, and your hope and the innocence of your way?

7 Remember therefore who, being clean, perished, or when true people perished root and all.

8 In the way I saw those plowing improper things, those sowing them will reap pains for themselves.

9 From the Lord's command they will perish, and from the breath of his anger they will vanish.

10 A lion's might and a lioness's voice and dragons' exultation were extinguished;

11 the ant-lion perished through not having food, and lions' cubs left one another.

12 And if any true utterance had occurred in your words, none of these evils would have met you. Will my ear not receive extraordinary things from him?

13 And fears and a nocturnal sound, fear falling upon humans,

14 and shuddering met me and trembling and greatly shook my bones,

15 and a spirit came upon my face, and my hair and flesh bristled.

16 I stood up and did not recognize; I saw, and there was no form before my eyes, but I heard only a breeze and a voice:

17 For what? Will a mortal be clean before the Lord, or a man blameless from his works?

18 If he does not trust his servants, and conceived something crooked against his angels,

19 and those dwelling in clay houses, from whom we ourselves also are of the same clay, he struck them in the manner of a moth;

20 and from morning until evening they are no longer; through not being able to help themselves they perished;

21 for he blew upon them and they were dried up, they perished through not having wisdom.

Chapter 5

1 And call, if anyone will listen to you, or if you will see any of the holy angels.

2 For anger also kills a senseless person, and jealousy puts an erring person to death.

3 And I have seen senseless people putting down a root, but immediately their dwelling was devoured.

4 May their sons be far from salvation, and may they be crushed at inferior people's doors, and there will be no rescuer;

5 for what they gathered, righteous people will eat, but they themselves will not be rescued from evils; may their strength be siphoned out.

6 For weariness will certainly not come out from the earth, nor will trouble sprout from mountains;

7 but a human is born for weariness, and a vulture's young fly in the heights.

8 Nevertheless I will beseech the Lord, and I will call upon the Lord, the Master of all,

9 the one doing great and untraceable things, glorious and extraordinary things which have no number;

10 the one giving rain upon the earth, sending water upon what is under heaven;

11 the one making lowly people high and rousing those who have perished;

12 altering shrewd people's counsels, and their hands will certainly not do what is true.

13 The one catching wise people in prudence, and he confounded the counsel of those with many intrigues;

14 by day darkness will meet them, and at midday may they grope as at night.

15 And may they perish in war, but may a powerless person come out from a ruler's hand;

16 and may a powerless person have hope, but may an unjust person's mouth be blocked.

17 And blessed is a human whom the Lord reproved; and do not refuse an admonition of the Almighty.

18 For he himself makes one suffer and restores again; he struck, and his hands healed.

19 Six times he will rescue you from necessities, and at the seventh evil will certainly not touch you.

20 In famine he will deliver you from death, and in war he will release you from the hand of iron.

21 He will hide you from the scourge of a tongue, and you will certainly not fear coming evils.

22 You will laugh at unjust and lawless people, and you will certainly not fear wild beasts;

23 for wild beasts will be at peace with you.

24 Then you will know that your house will be at peace, and the dwelling of your tent will certainly not fail.

25 And you will know that your seed is much, and your children will be like all the vegetation of the field.

26 And you will come into a tomb like ripe grain harvested in season or like a heap of a threshing floor gathered in at its time.

27 Behold, these things we traced out thus, these are what we have heard; but know for yourself whether you did anything.

Chapter 6

1 And taking it up, Iob says,

2 For if someone weighing would weigh my anger, and lift my pains in a balance together,

3 it will indeed be heavier than sand of the seashore; but as it seems, my utterances are worthless.

4 For the Lord's arrows are in my body, whose fury drinks up my blood; whenever I begin to speak, they prick me.

5 For what? Will a wild donkey cry out for nothing, except seeking foods? And will an ox burst into sound at a manger, having its foods?

6 Will bread be eaten without salt? And is there taste in empty utterances?

7 For my soul cannot cease; for I see my foods as a stench, like a lion's smell.

8 For if he would grant it, and my request would come, and the Lord would grant my hope.

9 Having begun, let the Lord wound me, but let him not destroy me utterly.

10 And may my city be a tomb, upon whose walls I leaped; I will certainly not spare it; for I did not falsify my God's holy utterances.

11 For what is my strength, that I endure? Or what is my time, that my soul holds out?

12 Is my strength the strength of stones? Or is my flesh bronze?

13 Had I not trusted in him? But help is absent from me.

14 Mercy disowned me, and the Lord's visitation overlooked me.

15 Those nearest me did not look upon me; like a failing torrent or like a wave they passed me by;

16 those who respected me now have fallen upon me like snow or frozen ice;

17 as, having melted when heat came, it was not recognized as what it was,

18 so I too was abandoned by all, and I perished and became homeless.

19 See the ways of the Thaimans, the paths of the Sabans, you who discern;

20 and those trusting in cities and possessions will owe shame.

21 And moreover you too came upon me mercilessly, so that, seeing my wound, you feared.

22 For what? Did I ask you for anything, or do I need the strength from you

23 to save me from enemies or deliver me from rulers' hands?

24 Teach me, and I will be silent; if I have erred in anything, tell me.

25 But as it seems, a true person's utterances are worthless, for I do not ask strength from you;

26 nor will your reproof stop me with utterances, for neither will I bear a sound of an utterance from you.

27 Only that you fall upon an orphan, and leap upon your friend.

28 But now, looking into your faces, I will not lie.

29 Sit now, and let there be nothing unjust, and again come together with the righteous person.

30 For there is nothing unjust in my tongue; or does my throat not practice understanding?

Chapter 7

1 Is not a human's life upon the earth a trial, and his life like that of a day laborer?

2 Or like an attendant fearing his master and obtaining shade, or like a hired worker awaiting his wages.

3 Thus I too endured empty months, and nights of pains have been given to me.

4 If I lie down, I say, When is day? And whenever I rise, again, When is evening? And I become full of pains from evening until morning.

5 And my body is befouled in the putrefaction of worms, and I dissolve clods of earth, scraping them from the discharge.

6 And my life is lighter than speech, and has perished in empty hope.

7 Remember therefore that my life is breath, and my eye will no longer return to see good.

8 An eye of one seeing me will not look upon me; your eyes are upon me, and I am no longer,

9 like a cloud cleared away from heaven. For if a human descends into Hades, he will certainly not ascend any longer,

10 nor will he certainly return again to his own house, nor will his place recognize him any longer.

11 Therefore neither will I spare my mouth; I will speak, being in necessity, I will open the bitterness of my soul, being constrained.

12 Am I a sea or a dragon, that you assigned a guard over me?

13 I said that my bed will comfort me, and I will bring up a word privately to myself on my couch;

14 you terrify me with dreams and appall me with visions.

15 You will release my soul from my spirit, and my bones from death.

16 For I will not live forever to be long-tempered; depart from me, for my life is empty.

17 For what is a human, that you magnified him, or that you attend your mind to him

18 or make a visitation of him until morning, and judge him for rest?

19 Until when do you not leave me, nor release me until I swallow my saliva in pain?

20 If I sinned, what can I do to you, you who know humans' mind? Why did you set me as your opponent, and I am a burden upon you?

21 And why did you not make a forgetting of my lawlessness and a cleansing of my sin? But now I will go away into earth, and when you rise early, I am no longer.

Chapter 8

1 And taking it up, Baldad the Sauchite says,

2 Until when will you speak these things? The breath of your mouth is wordy.

3 Will the Lord act unjustly when judging, or will the one who made everything disturb what is just?

4 If your sons sinned before him, he sent them away into the hand of their lawlessness.

5 But rise early toward the Lord Almighty, beseeching.

6 If you are clean and true, he will listen to your petition, and restore for you a dwelling of righteousness;

7 therefore your first things will be few, but your last things untold.

8 For ask a former generation, and trace out according to fathers' lineage;

9 for we are of yesterday and do not know, for our life upon the earth is a shadow.

10 Will these not teach you and report and bring forth utterances from a heart?

11 Does papyrus flourish without water, or will a rush grow high without drink?

12 While still upon a root and certainly not harvested, before drinking, does not all vegetation dry up?

13 Thus therefore will be the last things of all those forgetting the Lord; for an ungodly person's hope will perish.

14 For his house will be uninhabited, and his tent will turn out to be a spider's web.

15 If he props up his house, it will certainly not stand; and when he takes hold, it will certainly not endure;

16 for he is moist under the sun, and from his rottenness his shoot will come out.

17 He lies upon a gathering of stones, and will live in the midst of pebbles.

18 If it swallows, the place will deny him; you have not seen such things.

19 Because such is an ungodly person's overthrow, and from earth he will cause another to sprout.

20 For the Lord will certainly not reject the innocent person, but he will not receive any gift of an ungodly person.

21 And he will fill true people's mouth with laughter, and their lips with confession;

22 but their enemies will clothe themselves with shame, and an ungodly person's dwelling will not exist.

Chapter 9

1 And taking it up, Iob says,

2 In truth I know that it is thus; for how will a mortal be righteous before the Lord?

3 For if he wishes to contend in judgment with him, he will certainly not listen to him, so that he may not contradict one word of his out of a thousand.

4 For he is wise in thought, both mighty and great; who, becoming hard before him, endured?

5 The one making mountains old, and they do not know, the one overturning them in anger;

6 the one shaking what is under heaven from foundations, and its pillars are shaken;

7 the one speaking to the sun, and it does not rise, and he seals up the stars;

8 the one stretching heaven alone and walking upon sea as upon ground;

9 the one making the Pleiad and the Evening Star and Arcturus and chambers of the south;

10 the one doing great and untraceable things, glorious and extraordinary things which have no number.

11 If he passes over me, I will certainly not see; and if he passes me by, neither thus did I know.

12 If he takes away, who will turn him back? Or who will say to him, What did you do?

13 For he himself has turned away anger; by him the sea creatures under heaven were bent.

14 And if he listens to me, surely he will distinguish my utterances.

15 For even if I am righteous, he will not listen to me; I will beseech his judgment;

16 and if I call and he listens, I do not believe that he has heard me.

17 Will he crush me with gloom? And he has made my fractures many for nothing.

18 For he does not allow me to breathe, and filled me with bitterness.

19 For indeed he prevails in strength; who therefore will resist his judgment?

20 For if I am righteous, my mouth will act ungodly; and if I am blameless, I will turn out crooked.

21 For whether I acted ungodly, I do not know in my soul, except that my life is taken away.

22 Therefore I said, Anger destroys a great man and a ruler,

23 because worthless people are in an extraordinary death, but righteous people are laughed at;

24 for they have been handed into an ungodly person's hands. He covers the faces of its judges; but if not he, who is it?

25 And my life is lighter than a runner; they ran away and did not see.

26 And is there a track of a way for ships, or for an eagle flying, seeking food?

27 For if I speak, I will forget while speaking; bending down in face, I will groan.

28 I am shaken in all my limbs, for I know that you will not leave me innocent.

29 And since I am ungodly, why did I not die?

30 For if I wash myself with snow and purify myself with clean hands,

31 you dipped me sufficiently in filth, and my robe abhorred me.

32 For you are not a human like me with whom I will contend in judgment, so that we may come with one accord into judgment.

33 Would that there were our mediator, both reproving and hearing between both;

34 let him remove the rod from me, and let his fear not whirl me about,

35 and I will certainly not fear, but will speak; for I am not conscious thus.

Chapter 10

1 Weary in my soul, groaning, I will release my utterances upon him; I will speak, constrained by bitterness of my soul,

2 and say to the Lord, Do not teach me to act ungodly; and why did you judge me thus?

3 Is it good for you if I act unjustly, that I disown works of your hands, but you attended to ungodly people's counsel?

4 Do you look as a mortal sees, or will you look as a human sees?

5 Is your life human, or your years a man's?

6 Because you sought out my lawlessness and traced out my sins.

7 For you know that I did not act ungodly; but who is the one rescuing from your hands?

8 Your hands fashioned me and made me; after these things, changing, you struck me.

9 Remember that you fashioned me as clay, and you turn me back into earth again.

10 Did you not milk me like milk, and curdle me like cheese?

11 You clothed me in skin and flesh, and threaded me with bones and sinews.

12 And you placed life and mercy with me, and your visitation guarded my spirit.

13 Having these things in yourself, I know that you can do everything, and nothing is impossible for you.

14 For if I sin, you guard me, and you have not made me innocent from lawlessness.

15 For if I am ungodly, woe to me; and if I am righteous, I cannot lift my head, for I am full of dishonor.

16 For I am hunted like a lion for slaughter, and changing again you terribly destroy me,

17 renewing my examination against me; and you treated me with great anger, and brought trials upon me.

18 Why therefore did you bring me out from a belly, and I did not die, and an eye did not see me, 19 and I became as though not existing? For why was I not carried from womb to tomb?

20 Is not the time of my life little? Allow me to rest a little

21 before I go where I will not return, into a dark and gloomy land,

22 into a land of everlasting darkness, where there is no brightness nor seeing of mortals' life.

Chapter 11

1 And taking it up, Sophar the Minaite says,

2 The one saying many things will also hear in reply; or does the fluent speaker also think he is righteous? Blessed is one born of a woman, short-lived.

3 Do not become abundant in utterances, for there is no one contending in judgment with you.

4 For do not say, I am clean in works and blameless before him.

5 But how might the Lord speak to you? And he will open his lips with you.

6 Then he will report to you the power of wisdom, because he will be double the things with you; and then you will know that things worthy of what you have sinned befell you from the Lord.

7 Will you find a track of the Lord, or did you reach the last things which the Almighty made?

8 Heaven is high, and what will you do? And what do you know deeper than the things in Hades?

9 Or longer than the measure of earth or the breadth of sea?

10 And if he overturns everything, who will say to him, What did you do?

11 For he himself knows lawless people's works, and seeing improper things he will not overlook them.

12 But a human vainly swims in words, and a mortal born of a woman is like a wilderness donkey.

13 For if you made your heart clean, and turn your hands upward toward him,

14 if anything lawless is in your hands, make it far from you, and let injustice not lodge in your dwelling.

15 For thus your face will shine like clean water, and you will put off filth and certainly not fear;

16 and you will forget weariness like a wave that passed, and will not be frightened;

17 and your prayer is like the morning star, and from midday life will rise for you;

18 and you will be confident because you have hope, and from anxiety and concern peace will appear for you.

19 For you will be quiet, and there will be no one warring against you; and many, having changed, will beseech you.

20 But salvation will abandon them; for their hope is destruction, and ungodly people's eyes will melt.

Chapter 12

1 And taking it up, Iob says,

2 Then you are humans; surely wisdom will die with you.

3 Indeed I too have a heart like you.

4 For a righteous and blameless man became a mockery;

5 for at an appointed time he had been prepared to fall under others, and his houses to be ravaged by lawless people.

6 Nevertheless let no one, being evil, trust that he will be innocent, as many as provoke the Lord, as though there will not also be an examination of them.

7 But now ask quadrupeds if they may tell you, and birds of heaven if they may report to you;

8 and relate to earth if it may tell you, and the fish of the sea will explain to you.

9 Who did not know among all these things that the Lord's hand did these things?

10 Is not the soul of all the living and the spirit of every human in his hand?

11 For an ear distinguishes utterances, and a throat tastes foods.

12 In much time is wisdom, and in much life understanding.

13 With him are wisdom and power, to him belong counsel and understanding.

14 If he casts down, who will build? If he closes against humans, who will open?

15 If he restrains the water, he will dry the earth; but if he releases it, he destroyed it, overturning it.

16 With him are dominion and strength, to him belong knowledge and understanding.

17 Leading counselors captive, and he confounded judges of earth.

18 Seating kings upon thrones, and he bound their loins with a belt.

19 Sending priests away captive, and he overturned rulers of earth.

20 Changing faithful people's lips, and he knew elders' understanding.

21 Pouring dishonor upon rulers, and he healed lowly people.

22 Uncovering deep things from darkness, and he brought a shadow of death into light.

23 Leading nations astray and destroying them, laying nations low and guiding them.

24 Changing the hearts of rulers of earth, and he led them astray on a way which they did not know;

25 may they grope in darkness and not light, and may they be led astray like the drunkard.

Chapter 13

1 Behold, my eye has seen these things and my ear has heard;

2 and I know as much as you also know, and I am not less understanding than you.

3 Nevertheless I will speak to the Lord, and I will argue before him if he wishes.

4 But you are unjust physicians and all healers of evils.

5 May you be silent, and it will turn out as wisdom for you.

6 Hear the argument of my mouth, and attend to the judgment of my lips.

7 Do you not speak before the Lord, and utter deceit before him?

8 Will you shrink back? But become judges yourselves.

9 It is indeed good if he traces you out; for if, doing everything, you will be added to him,

10 he will reprove you no less; and if you also secretly admire faces,

11 will not his terrors whirl you about, and fear from him fall upon you?

12 And your exultation will turn out like ashes, and the body clay.

13 Be silent, so that I may speak and rest from wrath,

14 taking up my flesh with my teeth, and I will put my soul in my hand.

15 If the ruler subdues me, since he has also begun, surely I will speak and argue before him;

16 and this will turn out as salvation for me, for deceit will not enter before him.

17 Hear, hear my utterances; for I will report while you hear.

18 Behold, I am near my judgment, I know that I will appear righteous.

19 For who is the one who will contend in judgment with me? Because now I will be silent and fail.

20 And you will grant me two things; then I will not hide from your face;

21 keep your hand away from me, and let your fear not appall me.

22 Then you will call and I will listen to you; or you will speak and I will give you an answer.

23 How many are my sins and my lawless deeds? Teach me what they are.

24 Why do you hide from me, and regard me as opposed to you?

25 Will you be wary as of a leaf moved by wind, or are you opposed to me as to grass carried by a breeze?

26 Because you wrote evil things against me, and put sins of youth around me,

27 and put my foot in a restraint, and guarded all my works, and reached the roots of my feet;

28 which grows old like a wineskin or like a moth-eaten garment.

Chapter 14

1 For a mortal born of a woman is short-lived and full of anger,

2 or like a flower that blossomed he fell away, and fled like a shadow and will certainly not stand.

3 Did you not also take account of this one and make him enter into judgment before you?

4 For who will be clean from filth? But no one.

5 Even if his life upon the earth is one day, and his months are numbered with you, you set a time, and he will certainly not exceed it.

6 Depart from him, so that he may be quiet and be pleased with life like the hired worker.

7 For a tree has hope; for if it is cut down, it will blossom again, and its shoot will certainly not fail;

8 for if its root grows old in earth and its stem dies in rock,

9 from the fragrance of water it will blossom, and make a harvest like a newly planted tree.

10 But a man, having died, went away, and a mortal, having fallen, is no longer.

11 For in time a sea dwindles, and a river, having become desolate, dried up;

12 but a human, having lain down, will certainly not rise until heaven is no longer stitched together; and they will not be awakened from their sleep.

13 For would that you guarded me in Hades, and hid me until your anger ceases, and appoint me a time in which you may make remembrance of me.

14 For if a human dies, he will live, having completed days of his life; I will endure until I come to be again.

15 Then you will call and I will listen to you, and do not reject the works of your hands.

16 And you numbered my practices, and none of my sins will certainly pass you by;

17 and you sealed my lawless deeds in a purse, and marked whether I transgressed anything unwillingly.

18 And yet a falling mountain will fall apart, and a rock will be worn away from its place;

19 waters smoothed stones, and waters flooded the flat places of the earth's mound; and you destroyed a human's endurance.

20 You thrust him utterly, and he went away; you set your face upon him and sent him away;

21 and when his sons become many, he does not know, and if they become few, he does not understand;

22 except his flesh suffered, and his soul mourned.

Chapter 15

1 And taking it up, Eliphas the Thaimanite says,

2 Will a wise person give an answer of understanding of spirit, and filled trouble of a belly,

3 arguing with utterances with which one ought not, with words in which there is no benefit?

4 Did you not also reject fear, and complete such utterances before the Lord?

5 You are guilty by your mouth's utterances, nor did you distinguish rulers' utterances;

6 may your own mouth reprove you and not I, and your lips will testify against you.

7 For what? Did you become the first of humans? Or were you fixed before dunes?

8 Have you heard the Lord's ordinance, and did wisdom reach you?

9 For what do you know that we do not know? Or what do you understand that we do not also?

10 Indeed both an elder and an ancient one are among us, weightier in days than your father.

11 You have been whipped little for what you have sinned; you have spoken greatly beyond measure.

12 What did your heart dare, or what did your eyes bring on,

13 that you burst into wrath before the Lord, and brought such utterances out from your mouth?

14 For who is a mortal that he will be blameless, or how will one born of a woman be righteous?

15 If he does not trust holy ones, and heaven is not clean before him.

16 But leave aside one abhorred and unclean, a man drinking injustices like a drink.

17 And I will report to you; hear me; what indeed I have seen I will report to you,

18 what wise people will say, and they did not hide their fathers;

19 to them alone the earth was given, and no foreigner came upon them.

20 An ungodly person's whole life is in concern, and numbered years given to a ruler,

21 and his fear in his ears; whenever he thinks he is already at peace, his overthrow will come.

22 Let him not trust that he will turn back from darkness; for he has already been appointed into the hands of iron,

23 and has been assigned as food for vultures; and he knows in himself that he remains for a fall. And a dark day will whirl him about,

24 and necessity and affliction will hold him like a general falling in the front rank.

25 Because he has raised hands before the Lord, and acted stiff-necked before the Lord Almighty,

26 and ran against him with arrogance in the thickness of the back of his shield,

27 because he covered his face in his fat and made a covering upon his thighs.

28 And may he lodge in deserted cities, and enter uninhabited houses; and what those people prepared, others will carry away.

29 Neither will he certainly be made rich, nor will his possessions certainly remain; he will certainly not cast a shadow upon the earth,

30 nor will he escape darkness; may wind wither his shoot, and may his flower fall away.

31 Let him not trust that he will endure, for empty things will turn out for him;

32 his cutting will be destroyed before its time, and his shoot will certainly not grow thick;

33 and may he be harvested like an unripe grape before its time, and fall away like an olive's flower.

34 For an ungodly person's testimony is death, and fire will burn bribe-takers' houses.

35 And in the womb he will conceive pains, and empty things will turn out for him, and his belly will bear deceit.

Chapter 16

1 And taking it up, Iob says,

2 I have heard many such things; all are comforters of evils.

3 For what? Is there an order to utterances of wind? Or what will trouble you, that you answer?

4 I too will speak like you, if indeed your soul were in place of mine; then I will leap upon you with utterances, and shake my head against you;

5 and may there be strength in my mouth, and I will not spare movement of lips.

6 For if I speak, I will not suffer the wound; and if I also keep silent, how much less will I be wounded?

7 But now he has made me exhausted, foolish, rotten,

8 and you seized me; it became a testimony; and my falsehood rose within me, it answered against my face.

9 Having used anger, he cast me down, he gnashed his teeth against me, arrows of his raiders fell upon me.

10 With points of eyes he leaped upon me, with a sharp thing he struck me on the cheek, and with one accord they rushed upon me.

11 For the Lord handed me into an unjust person's hands, and cast me upon ungodly people;

12 while I was at peace he scattered me, taking me by the hair he tore it out, he set me like a target.

13 They encircled me with spears, throwing at my kidneys, not sparing, they poured my gall upon the earth;

14 they cast me down, fall upon fall, they ran toward me, being powerful.

15 I sewed sackcloth upon my hide, and my might was extinguished in earth.

16 My belly has been burned from weeping, and upon my eyelids is a shadow.

17 And nothing unjust was in my hands, and my prayer is clean.

18 Earth, do not cover over the blood of my flesh, nor let there be a place for my cry.

19 And now behold, my witness is in heavens, and the one knowing with me in the highest places.

20 May my petition reach the Lord, and may my eye drip before him.

21 And may there be an argument for a man before the Lord, and a son of a human for his neighbor.

22 And numbered years have come, and I will go on a way on which I will not return.

Chapter 17

1 I perish, carried by a wind, and need burial and do not obtain it.

2 I implore, being weary, and having done what?

3 And strangers stole my possessions. Who is this one? Let him be bound to my hand.

4 Because you hid their heart from prudence, therefore you will certainly not exalt them.

5 He will report evils to the portion, and my eyes melted over sons.

6 And you made me a byword among nations, and I turned out a laughingstock for them;

7 for my eyes have been hardened from anger, I have been greatly besieged by all.

8 Amazement held true people at this; and may a righteous person rise against a lawless person;

9 and may a faithful person hold his own way, and one clean in hands take up confidence.

10 Nevertheless all of you press on, and come now; for I find no truth among you.

11 My days passed in a stench, and the joints of my heart were torn.

12 They made night into day, light near from the face of darkness.

13 For if I endure, Hades is my house, and in gloom my bedding has been spread.

14 I called upon death to be my father, and rottenness my mother and sister.

15 Where therefore is my hope any longer? Will I see my good things?

16 Will they descend with me into Hades, or will we descend with one accord upon a mound?

Chapter 18

1 And taking it up, Baldad the Sauchite says,

2 Until when will you not cease? Hold back, so that we ourselves also may speak.

3 Why have we been silent like quadrupeds before you?

4 Anger has treated you. For what? If you die, is what is under heaven uninhabited? Or will mountains be overturned from foundations?

5 And ungodly people's light will be extinguished, and their flame will not come forth;

6 his light is darkness in a dwelling, and the lamp over him will be extinguished.

7 May the least people hunt his possessions, and may his counsel trip him.

8 And his foot has been cast into a trap; may he be entangled in a net.

9 And may traps come upon him; it will make thirsty ones prevail against him.

10 His cord has been hidden in the earth, and his capture upon paths.

11 May pains destroy him round about, and may many come around his feet in severe famine.

12 And an extraordinary fall has been prepared for him.

13 May the branches of his feet be devoured, and death will devour his beautiful things.

14 And may healing be torn out from his dwelling, and may necessity hold him by a royal charge.

15 It will dwell in his tent in his night, his comely things will be strewn with sulfur.

16 Below, his roots will be dried, and above, his harvest will fall down.

17 May his memorial perish from earth, and a name belongs to him upon the face outside.

18 May he thrust him from light into darkness.

19 He will not be known among his people, nor his house saved in what is under heaven, but others will live in his things.

20 The last groaned over him, and amazement held the first.

21 These are unjust people's houses, and this the place of those not knowing the Lord.

Chapter 19

1 And taking it up, Iob says,

2 Until when will you make my soul weary and pull me down with words?

3 Know only that the Lord made me thus; you speak against me, not respecting me you press upon me.

4 Yes indeed, in truth I erred, and error lodges with me,

4 a to speak an utterance which one ought not, and my utterances wander and are not in season.

5 But leave aside that you magnify yourselves over me, and leap upon me with reproach.

6 Know therefore that it is the Lord who disturbed me, and he raised his stronghold against me.

7 Behold, I laugh at reproach and will not speak; I will cry out, and judgment is nowhere.

8 I have been built around on all sides and will certainly not pass through, he set darkness before my face.

9 And he stripped glory from me, and took a crown away from my head.

10 He tore me apart round about, and I went away; and he cut out my hope like a tree.

11 And he treated me terribly with anger, and regarded me like an enemy.

12 And his trials came with one accord upon me on my ways, ambushers encircled me.

13 And my brothers departed from me, they knew strangers rather than me; and my friends have become merciless.

14 Those nearest me did not acknowledge me, and those knowing my name forgot me.

15 Neighbors of the house and my maidservants, I was a foreigner before them.

16 I called my attendant, and he did not listen; and my mouth was beseeching.

17 And I implored my wife, and called upon sons of my concubines, flattering;

18 but they rejected me forever; whenever I rise, they speak against me.

19 And those knowing me abhorred me; those whom I had loved rose against me.

20 My flesh rotted in my skin, and my bones are held in teeth.

21 Have mercy on me, have mercy on me, friends; for it is the Lord's hand that touched me.

22 And why do you pursue me like the Lord also, and are not filled from my flesh?

23 For who might grant that my utterances be written, and set in a book forever, 24 with an iron stylus and lead, or engraved in rocks?

25 For I know that the one about to release me upon earth is everlasting.

26 May he raise my skin which endures these things; for these things were accomplished for me by the Lord,

27 which I know with myself, which my eye has seen and not another; and everything has been accomplished for me in my bosom.

28 And if you also will say, What will we say before him? And we will find a root of a word in him;

29 be wary now, you too, of a covering; for wrath will come upon lawless people, and then they will know where their material is.

Chapter 20

1 And taking it up, Sophar the Minaite says,

2 I did not suppose you would contradict these things thus, and you do not understand more than I also.

3 I will hear discipline of my shame, and a spirit from understanding answers me.

4 Did you not know these things from of old, from when a human was set upon the earth?

5 For ungodly people's gladness is an extraordinary fall, and lawless people's joy destruction,

6 if his gifts ascend into heaven and his sacrifice touches clouds.

7 For whenever he thinks he has already been established, then he will perish utterly; and those seeing him will say, Where is he?

8 Like a dream flown away he will certainly not be found, and he flew like a nocturnal apparition.

9 An eye looked upon him and will not do so again, and his place will no longer perceive him.

10 May inferior people destroy his sons, and may his hands kindle pains.

11 His bones were filled with his youth, and it will lie with him upon a mound.

12 If wickedness is sweetened in his mouth, he will hide it under his tongue;

13 he will not spare it and will not abandon it and will hold it in the midst of his throat.

14 And he will certainly not be able to help himself; an asp's gall is in his belly.

15 Wealth gathered unjustly will be vomited out; an angel will draw it out from his house.

16 And may he suck dragons' fury, and may a snake's tongue kill him.

17 May he not see milking of grazing herds, nor pastures of honey and butter.

18 For empty and vain things he labored for wealth, from which he will not taste, like something astringent, unchewable, unswallowable.

19 For he crushed many powerless people's houses, and seized a dwelling and did not establish it.

20 There is no salvation for him in possessions, in his desire he will not be saved.

21 There is no remnant of his foods; therefore his good things will not blossom.

22 And whenever he thinks he has already been filled, he will be afflicted, and every necessity will come upon him.

23 If somehow he might fill his belly, may he send upon him a fury of anger, may he rain pains upon him;

24 and he will certainly not be saved from the hand of iron, may a bronze bow wound him;

25 and may an arrow pass through his body, and may lightnings walk in his dwellings; fears are upon him.

26 And may all darkness remain for him; an unkindled fire will devour him, and may a stranger harm his house.

27 And may heaven uncover his lawless deeds, and earth rise against him.

28 May destruction drag his house utterly away, may a day of anger come upon him.

29 This is the portion of an ungodly human from the Lord, and the estate of possessions belonging to him from the overseer.

Chapter 21

1 And taking it up, Iob says,

2 Hear, hear my words, so that this comfort from you may not be mine.

3 Bear me, and I will speak, then you will not laugh at me.

4 For what? Is my argument against a human? Or why will I not be wrathful?

5 Look at me and marvel, putting a hand upon a cheek.

6 For if I remember, I am agitated, and pains hold my flesh.

7 Why do ungodly people live, and have grown old even in wealth?

8 Their seed is according to their soul, and their children before their eyes.

9 Their houses flourish, and fear is nowhere, and there is no scourge from the Lord upon them.

10 Their cow did not give birth prematurely, and their pregnant one was preserved and did not miscarry.

11 And they remain like everlasting sheep, and their children play,

12 taking up a psaltery and lyre, and they are gladdened by a sound of a psalm.

13 And they completed their life amid good things, and slept in the rest of Hades.

14 And he says to the Lord, Depart from me, I do not wish to know your ways;

15 what is the Sufficient One, that we will serve him? And what benefit, that we will meet him?

16 For their good things were in their hands, and he does not look upon ungodly people's works.

17 Nevertheless ungodly people's lamp also will be extinguished, and their overthrow will come upon them, and birth pangs will hold them from anger.

18 And they will be like chaff before wind, or like dust which a tempest took away.

19 May his possessions abandon sons; he will repay him and he will know.

20 May his eyes see his own slaughter, and may he not be preserved from the Lord;

21 because what pleasure has he in his house after him? And the numbers of his months were divided.

22 Is it not the Lord who teaches understanding and knowledge? And he himself will distinguish murders.

23 This one will die in the dominion of his simplicity, and wholly enjoying himself and flourishing;

24 and his inward parts full of fat, and his marrow is poured out.

25 But that one dies through bitterness of soul, having eaten nothing good.

26 And with one accord they lie upon earth, and rottenness covered them.

27 So I know you, that you press upon me with daring;

28 because you will say, Where is a ruler's house? And where is the shelter of ungodly people's tents?

29 Ask those passing along a way, and you will not disown their signs;

30 because the evil person is spared for a day of destruction, they will be led away for a day of his anger.

31 Who will report his way to his face? And he himself did it, who will repay him?

32 And he himself was carried into tombs and kept vigil upon a coffin.

33 Pebbles of a torrent were sweetened for him, and after him every human will go away, and before him innumerable ones.

34 And how do you comfort me with empty things? And my ceasing from you is nothing.

Chapter 22

1 And taking it up, Eliphas the Thaimanite says,

2 Is it not the Lord who teaches understanding and knowledge?

3 For what does the Lord care if you were blameless in works? Or what benefit, that you make your way simple?

4 Will he, taking account of you, reprove you and enter into judgment together with you?

5 Is not your wickedness much, and are not your sins innumerable?

6 And you took pledges from your brothers for nothing, and took away naked people's clothing;

7 nor did you give thirsty people water to drink, but deprived hungry people of a morsel;

8 and you admired certain people's face, and settled those upon the earth;

9 and you sent widows away empty, and harmed orphans.

10 Therefore traps encircled you, and an extraordinary war agitated you;

11 light turned into darkness for you, and water covered you as you lay down.

12 Does not the one dwelling in the heights look upon things, and he humbled those carried by arrogance?

13 And you said, What did the Strong One know? Will he judge through gloom?

14 Clouds are his hiding place, and he will not be seen, and he will pass through the circle of heaven.

15 Will you keep an everlasting path which unjust men trod,

16 who were seized before their time? Their foundations are a flowing river,

17 those saying, What will the Lord do to us? Or what will the Almighty bring upon us?

18 But he filled their houses with good things, and ungodly people's counsel is far from him.

19 Righteous people saw and laughed, and a blameless person sneered.

20 Unless their substance vanished, and fire will devour their remnant.

21 Become firm now, if you endure; then your fruit will be amid good things.

22 And receive a declaration from his mouth and take up his utterances in your heart.

23 And if you turn and humble yourself before the Lord, you made injustice far from your dwelling.

24 You will place upon a mound in rock, and like rock torrents of Ophir.

25 Therefore the Almighty will be your helper against enemies, and will render you clean like silver tried by fire.

26 Then you will speak frankly before the Lord, looking up into heaven cheerfully;

27 and when you pray to him, he will listen to you, and grant you to repay the vows;

28 and he will restore for you a dwelling of righteousness, and upon your ways there will be brightness.

29 Because he humbled him, and you will say, He acted proudly, and he will save one downcast in eyes;

30 he will deliver an innocent person, and be preserved through your clean hands.

Chapter 23

1 And taking it up, Iob says,

2 And indeed I know that the argument is out of my hand, and his hand has become heavy upon my groaning.

3 And who therefore might know that I would find him and come to the end?

4 And may I speak my own judgment, and fill my mouth with arguments;

5 and may I know utterances which he will say to me, and perceive what he will report to me.

6 And if he will come upon me with much strength, then he will not treat me with a threat;

7 for truth and argument are from him, and may he bring my judgment out to the end.

8 For I will go to the first things and am no longer; and what do I know of the last things?

9 When he worked on the left, I did not grasp him; he will cover the right, and I will not see.

10 For he already knows my way, and he tested me like gold.

11 And I will go out in his commandments; for I kept his ways and will certainly not turn aside

12 from his commandments, and I will certainly not pass beyond, and in my bosom I hid his utterances.

13 And if he himself also judged thus, who is the one who contradicted him? For what he himself wished, he also did.

15 Therefore I am agitated at him; and being admonished, I was concerned about him.

15 a At this may I be agitated before his face; I will consider and be frightened by him.

16 And the Lord softened my heart, and the Almighty agitated me.

17 For I did not know that darkness would come upon me, and gloom covered before my face.

Chapter 24

1 And why did hours escape the Lord's notice,

2 and ungodly people crossed a boundary, seizing a flock with a shepherd?

3 They led away orphans' beast of burden, and took a widow's ox as a pledge.

4 They turned powerless people aside from a righteous way, the meek of earth hid with one accord.

5 And they went out like donkeys in a field, going forth upon their own business beyond me; bread was sweetened for him for younger ones.

6 They harvested a field not theirs before its time; and powerless people worked ungodly people's vineyards without wages and without food.

7 They made many naked people lie down without garments, and took away the clothing of their soul.

8 They are wet from drops of mountains; through not having shelter they embraced a rock.

9 They seized an orphan from a breast, and humbled a fallen person.

10 And they unjustly made naked people lie down, and took a morsel away from hungry people.

11 In narrow places they unjustly ambushed, and did not know a righteous way.

12 Those who were being cast out from a city and their own houses, and infants' soul groaned greatly, but why has he himself not made a visitation of these things?

13 While they were upon earth, they did not recognize, and did not know a way of righteousness, nor walk its paths.

14 And knowing their works, he handed them over into darkness, and at night he will be like a thief.

15 And an adulterer's eye watched for darkness, saying, An eye will not perceive me, and he made a hiding of his face.

16 He dug through houses in darkness; by day they sealed themselves, they did not recognize light;

17 because with one accord the morning is a shadow of death for them, because he will recognize disturbances of a shadow of death.

18 He is light upon the face of water; may their portion upon earth be cursed.

19 And may their plants upon earth appear dry; for they seized orphans' armful.

20 Then his sin was remembered, and like a mist of dew he became invisible; and may what he did be repaid to him, and may every unjust person be shattered like incurable wood.

21 For he did not treat a barren woman well and did not show mercy to a woman,

22 and with wrath he overturned powerless people. Therefore when he rises, he will certainly not trust in his own life;

23 having become weak, let him not hope to be made healthy, but he will fall by sickness.

24 For his elevation harmed many; and he withered like mallow in heat or like an ear of grain falling by itself from a stalk.

25 But if not, who is the one saying I speak falsely and will make my utterances nothing?

Chapter 25

1 And taking it up, Baldad the Sauchite says,

2 For what prelude or fear is from him, the one making the whole in the highest place?

3 For might anyone suppose there is delay for raiders? And upon whom will an ambush from him not come?

4 For how will a mortal be righteous before the Lord? Or who born of a woman might purify himself?

5 If he commands the moon, and it does not shine; and stars are not clean before him.

6 But leave aside a human, rottenness, and a son of a human, a worm.

Chapter 26

1 And taking it up, Iob says,

2 To whom do you attach yourself, or whom are you about to help? Is it not one whose strength is much and whose arm is mighty?

3 Whom have you advised? Is it not one who has all wisdom? Or whom will you follow? Is it not one who has greatest power?

4 To whom did you report utterances? And whose breath is that which came out from you?

5 Will giants be brought to birth beneath water and its neighbors?

6 Hades is naked before him, and destruction has no covering.

7 Stretching north upon nothing, hanging earth upon nothing;

8 binding water in his clouds, and a cloud was not torn beneath it;

9 the one holding the face of a throne, spreading his cloud upon it.

10 He circled a command upon the face of water until the completion of light with darkness.

11 Heaven's pillars spread out and were confounded by his rebuke.

12 With strength he quieted the sea, and with knowledge wounded the sea creature;

13 and heaven's bolts fear him, and by command he put an apostate dragon to death.

14 Behold, these are parts of his way, and we will hear but a drop of a word in him; and who knows the might of his thunder whenever he will do it?

Chapter 27

1 And Iob, adding still, said in the prelude,

2 The Lord lives, who has judged me thus, and the Almighty who embittered my soul,

3 surely while my breath is still within, and a divine spirit remaining in my nostrils,

4 my lips will not speak lawless things, nor will my soul practice unjust things.

5 May it not be mine to declare you righteous until I die; for I will not put away my innocence.

6 And holding fast to righteousness, I will certainly not let it go; for I am not conscious of having done improper things.

7 Nevertheless may my enemies be like ungodly people's overthrow, and those rising against me like lawless people's destruction.

8 For what hope has an ungodly person that he holds on? Trusting in the Lord, will he indeed be saved?

9 Will the Lord listen to his petition? Or when necessity comes upon him,

10 does he have any frankness before him? Or when he calls upon him, will he listen to him?

11 But now I will report to you what is in the Lord's hand; what is with the Almighty, I will not falsify.

12 Behold now, you all know that you heap empty things upon empty things.

13 This is an ungodly human's portion from the Lord, and rulers' estate will come upon them from the Almighty.

14 And if his sons become many, they will be for slaughter; and if they also become men, they will beg;

15 and his survivors will die in death, and no one will show mercy to their widows.

16 If he gathers silver like earth, and prepares gold like clay,

17 righteous people will acquire all these things, and true people will hold his possessions.

18 And his house turned out like moths and like a spider's web.

19 A rich person lay down and will not do so again; he opened his eyes and is not.

20 Pains met him like water, and at night gloom took him away;

21 a burning wind will take him up and he will go away, and it will winnow him from his place.

22 And it will cast upon him and will not spare; from its hand he will flee in flight;

23 it will clap its hands over him and hiss him out of his place.

Chapter 28

1 For silver has a place from which it comes, and gold a place from which it is refined.

2 For iron comes from earth, and copper is quarried like stone.

3 He set an order for darkness, and he himself examines every limit precisely: stone, darkness, and shadow of death,

4 a cutting of a torrent from dust; but those who forget a righteous way became weak among mortals.

5 Earth—from it bread will come forth; beneath it, it was turned as though by fire.

6 Its stones are a place of sapphire, and its mound has gold.

7 A path—a bird has not known it, and a vulture's eye has not looked upon it;

8 sons of arrogant ones have not trodden it; a lion has not passed upon it.

9 He stretched out his hand upon sheer rock, and overturned mountains from their roots;

10 and he broke through the eddies of rivers, and my eye saw every precious thing;

11 and he uncovered the depths of rivers, and showed his own power into light.

12 But from where was wisdom found? And what is the place of knowledge?

13 A mortal does not know its way, nor will it ever be found among humans.

14 13 The abyss said, It is not in me; and the sea said, It is not with me.

15 He will not give a thing shut away for it, and silver will not be weighed as its exchange;

16 and it will not be weighed together with gold of Ophir, with precious onyx and sapphire;

17 gold and glass will not be equaled to it, nor golden vessels as its exchange;

18 lofty things and gabis will not be mentioned, and draw wisdom beyond the innermost things;

19 topaz of Ethiopia will not be equaled to it; with pure gold it will not be weighed together.

20 But from where was wisdom found? And what is the place of understanding?

21 It has escaped every human's notice, and was hidden from the birds of heaven;

22 destruction and death said, But we have heard its fame.

23 God established its way well, and he himself knows its place;

24 for he himself surveys everything beneath heaven, knowing all the things in the earth which he made,

25 the weight of winds and measures of water;

26 when he made thus, he numbered rain and a way for voices in a shaking;

27 then he saw it and explained it; having prepared it, he traced it out.

28 And he said to a human, Behold, reverence for God is wisdom, and abstaining from evils is knowledge.

Chapter 29

1 And Iob, adding yet again, said in his prelude,

2 Who would place me according to a month before the days in which God guarded me?

3 As when his lamp shone above my head, when by his light I walked in darkness;

4 when I was weighty in ways, when God made an inspection of my house;

5 when I was very flourishing, and my children were around me;

6 when my ways flowed with butter, and my mountains flowed with milk;

7 when I went out early in the city, and my seat was set in the squares.

8 Young men, seeing me, hid themselves, and all the old men stood;

9 and the great ceased speaking, placing a finger upon their mouth.

10 And those who heard pronounced me blessed, and their tongue stuck to their throat;

11 because an ear heard and pronounced me blessed, and an eye, seeing me, turned aside.

12 For I rescued a poor man from a ruler's hand, and helped an orphan who had no helper;

13 may a perishing man's blessing come upon me, and a widow's mouth blessed me.

14 And I had put on righteousness, and clothed myself with judgment as with a double cloak.

15 I was an eye of the blind, and a foot of the lame.

16 I was a father of the powerless, and a case which I did not know I traced out;

17 and I crushed the molars of the unjust, and tore plunder from between their teeth.

18 And I said, My age will grow old; like the trunk of a palm I will live a long time;

19 my root has opened out upon water, and dew will lodge in my harvest;

20 my glory is fresh with me, and my bow will go in his hand.

21 Hearing me, they attended, and were silent at my counsel;

22 and they added nothing to my word, and became overjoyed whenever I spoke to them;

23 as thirsty earth awaiting the rain, so these awaited my speech.

24 If I laugh toward them, they will certainly not believe, and the light of my face did not fall away;

25 I chose their way and sat as ruler, and encamped like a king among men wearing a single belt, in the manner of one comforting sufferers.

Chapter 30

1 But now they laughed at me; the least now admonish me in turn, whose fathers I despised, whom I did not consider worthy of the dogs of my flocks.

2 And indeed, the strength of their hands—what is it to me? Completion perished upon them,

3 barren in want and famine; those fleeing a waterless land yesterday, distress and misery,

4 those breaking off saltwort upon a sounding place, whose food was saltwort, dishonored and despised, lacking every good thing, who also chewed roots of trees from great famine.

5 Thieves rose against me,

6 whose houses were holes in rocks;

7 among well-sounding places they will shout; those who lived beneath wild brushwood,

8 sons of senseless and dishonored men, a name and fame extinguished from earth.

9 But now I am their lyre, and they have me as a tale;

10 and they abhorred me, standing far away, and did not spare spittle from my face.

11 For, opening his quiver, he afflicted me, and they sent away the bridle of my face.

12 On the right of a shoot they rose, stretched out their foot, and made ways against me, paths of their destruction.

13 My paths were worn away, for he stripped off my robe;

14 with his missiles he speared me; he has treated me as he wishes; I am drenched in pains.

15 And my pains return; my hope departed like wind, and my salvation like a cloud.

16 And now my soul will be poured out upon me, and days of pains hold me;

17 and by night my bones have been burned together, and my sinews have been loosened.

18 With great strength he seized my robe; like the collar of my tunic he enclosed me.

19 And you have considered me equal to clay; in earth and ashes is my portion;

20 and I have cried to you, and you do not hear me; they stood and observed me;

21 and you assailed me mercilessly; with a mighty hand you scourged me;

22 and you placed me in pains and cast me away from salvation.

23 For I know that death will wear me away; for earth is a house for every mortal.

24 For if only I could subdue myself, or at least ask another, and he will do this for me.

25 But I wept over every powerless person, and groaned on seeing a man in necessities.

26 But I, looking for good things—behold, days of evils met me instead.

27 My belly boiled over and will not be silent; days of poverty came before me.

28 I have walked groaning without a muzzle, and have stood in an assembly crying out.

29 I have become a brother of sirens, and a companion of sparrows.

30 And my skin has become greatly darkened, and my bones from burning heat.

31 And my lyre turned to suffering, and my psalm to weeping for me.

Chapter 31

1 I made a covenant with my eyes, and I will not give attention to a virgin.

2 And what did God apportion from above, and what is the inheritance of the Sufficient One from the highest places?

3 Is it not destruction for the unjust, and estrangement for those doing lawlessness?

4 Will he himself not see my way and count all my steps?

5 But if I had walked with jesters, and if my foot also hastened into deceit,

6 then may he weigh me in a righteous balance; and the Lord knows my innocence.

7 If my foot turned aside from the way, and if my heart also followed my eye, and if with my hands I also touched gifts,

8 then may I sow and others eat, and may I become rootless upon earth.

9 If my heart followed another man's wife, if I also became one lying in wait at her doors,

10 then may my wife also please another, and may my little children be humbled;

11 for defiling a man's wife is an unrestrainable fury of anger;

12 for it is a fire burning upon all parts, and wherever it comes, it destroyed from the roots.

13 And if I also despised the case of my attendant or maidservant when they were in judgment with me,

14 for what will I do if the Lord makes an examination of me? And if also an inspection, what answer will I make?

15 Were they not also brought into being as I was in a womb? And we have been brought into being in the same belly.

16 And the powerless did not fail to obtain a need which they ever had, and I did not waste away a widow's eye.

17 And if I also ate my morsel alone, and did not share with an orphan;

18 because from my youth I reared as a father, and from my mother's womb I guided;

19 and if I also overlooked a naked man perishing, and did not clothe him,

20 and if the powerless did not bless me, and their shoulders were warmed from the shearing of my lambs,

21 if I raised a hand against an orphan, trusting that much help was available to me,

22 then may my shoulder depart from the collarbone, and may my arm be crushed from my elbow.

23 For fear of the Lord held me fast, and before his taking hold I will not endure.

24 If I appointed gold as my strength, and if I also trusted in a costly stone,

25 and if I also rejoiced when much wealth came to me, and if I also placed my hand upon uncountable things,

26 do I not indeed see the shining sun failing, and the moon waning? For it is not in their power.

27 And if my heart was deceived secretly, and if I also placed my hand upon my mouth and kissed it,

28 then may this also be reckoned to me as the greatest lawlessness, because I lied before the Lord Most High.

29 And if I also became joyful at my enemies' fall, and my heart said, Well done,

30 then may my ear hear my curse, and then may I be talked about by my people as one afflicted.

31 And if my maidservants also often said, Who would grant us to be filled with his flesh?—since I was very kind;

32 and a stranger did not lodge outside, and my door stood open to everyone coming.

33 And if, sinning unwillingly, I also hid my sin,

34 for I did not shrink from the multitude's great crowd so as not to declare it before them; and if I also let a powerless man go out my door with an empty bosom,

35 who would grant me someone hearing me? And if I had not feared the Lord's hand, a written bond which I held against someone,

36 placing it upon my shoulders as a crown, I would read it,

37 and if I did not tear it up and return it, taking nothing from a debtor,

38 if the earth ever groaned against me, and if its furrows also wept with one accord,

39 and if I also ate its strength alone without payment, and if I also cast out the soul of the earth's owner and grieved him,

40 then may nettle come forth for me instead of wheat, and bramble instead of barley. And Iob ceased with words.

Chapter 32

1 And his three friends also ceased opposing Iob further; for Iob was righteous before them.

2 And Elious, the son of Barachiel, the Bouzite, of the kindred of Ram, of the land of Ausitis, became angry; and he became exceedingly angry with Iob because he declared himself righteous before the Lord;

3 and against the three friends he also became exceedingly angry because they were unable to answer Iob with opposing arguments, and determined him to be ungodly.

4 And Elious waited to give Iob an answer, because they are older than he in days.

5 And Elious saw that there is no answer in the mouth of the three men, and his anger grew furious.

6 And Elious, the son of Barachiel, the Bouzite, taking up the discourse, said, I am indeed younger in time, and you are older; therefore I kept quiet, afraid to announce my own knowledge to you;

7 and I said that time is what speaks, and in many years they know wisdom.

8 But there is a spirit in mortals, and it is the Almighty's breath which teaches;

9 those of many years are not wise, nor do the aged know judgment.

10 Therefore I said, Hear me, and I will announce to you what I know;

11 give ear to my words; for I will speak while you hear, until you examine words.

12 And I will attend as far as you, and behold, there was no one reproving Iob, answering his words, from among you,

13 so that you may not say, We found wisdom by adding to the Lord;

14 and you permitted a human to speak such words. –

15 They were terrified; they answered no further; they made words old from themselves.

16 I waited, for they did not speak; because they stood, they did not answer.

17 And Elious, taking up the discourse, says,

18 I will speak again; for I am full of words, for the spirit of the belly is destroying me;

19 and my belly is like a wineskin of new wine, boiling, tied up, or like a smith's bellows, burst.

20 I will speak, so that I may rest, opening my lips;

21 for I will certainly not be ashamed before a human, nor indeed will I show deference to a mortal;

22 for I do not know how to admire a face; otherwise, moths will eat me too.

Chapter 33

1 Nevertheless, hear my words, Iob, and give ear to my speech;

2 for behold, I opened my mouth, and my tongue spoke.

3 My heart is pure in words, and the understanding of my lips is pure in thought.

4 A divine spirit is what made me, and the Almighty's breath is what teaches me.

5 If you can, give me an answer to these things; wait, stand against me, and I against you.

6 You have been formed from clay as I also have; from the same thing we have been formed.

7 Fear of me will not whirl you about, nor will my hand be heavy upon you.

8 Yet you spoke in my ears; I have heard the voice of your words;

9 because you say, I am pure, not having sinned, and I am blameless, for I did not act lawlessly;

10 but he found blame against me, and has considered me as an adversary;

11 and he placed my foot in wood, and watched all my ways.

12 For how do you say, I am righteous, and he has not heard me? For the one above mortals is everlasting.

13 And you say, Why has he not heard every word of my case?

14 For in the Lord's speaking once, and in the second time, a dream,

15 or in a nocturnal meditation, as when dreadful fear falls upon humans during slumbers upon a bed;

16 then he uncovers humans' mind; in such forms of fear he frightened them greatly,

17 to turn a human away from injustice, and he rescued his body from a fall.

18 And he spared his soul from death, and from his falling in war.

19 And again he reproved him with sickness upon a bed, and the multitude of his bones grew numb,

20 and he will certainly not be able to receive any edible food, and his soul will desire eating,

21 until his flesh rots and he shows his bones bare;

22 and his soul drew near to death, and his life is in Hades.

23 If there are a thousand death-bearing angels, one of them will certainly not wound him; if he understands in his heart to turn to the Lord, and declares to a human his own blame, and shows his folly,

24 he will hold fast to preventing his falling into death, and will renew his body like plaster upon a wall, and will fill his bones with marrow;

25 and he will soften his flesh like an infant's, and will restore him, grown to manhood, among humans.

26 And having prayed to the Lord, it will also be acceptable to him, and he will enter with a pure face, with confession; and he will render righteousness to humans.

27 Then at that time the human himself will blame himself, saying, What things I was accomplishing, and he did not examine me in a manner worthy of the things in which I sinned.

28 Save my soul from coming into corruption, and my life will see light.

29 Behold, the strong one works all these things three ways with a man.

30 But he rescued my soul from death, so that my life may praise him in light.

31 Give ear, Iob, and hear me; be silent, and I myself will speak.

32 If there are words, answer me; speak, for I want you to be justified.

33 If not, you hear me; be silent, and I will teach you wisdom.

Chapter 34

1 And Elious, taking up the discourse, says,

2 Hear me, wise ones; knowledgeable ones, give ear to what is good;

3 because an ear tests words, and a throat tastes food.

4 Let us choose judgment for ourselves; let us know among ourselves what is good.

5 Because Iob has said, I am righteous; the Lord removed my judgment,

6 and lied in my judgment; my arrow is violent, without injustice.

7 What man is like Iob, drinking derision like water,

8 not having sinned or acted ungodly, or shared a way with those doing lawless things, to walk with the ungodly?

9 For do not say that there will be no inspection of a man; and there is an inspection for him from the Lord.

10 Therefore, understanding ones in heart, hear me: May it not be mine to act ungodly before the Lord, and to disturb what is righteous before the Almighty;

11 but he repays a human according as each of them does, and in a man's path he will find him.

12 And do you think the Lord will do improper things? Or will the Almighty disturb judgment?

13 He who made the earth; and who is the one making what is beneath heaven and all the things within it?

14 For if he wished to hold fast and to retain the spirit with himself,

15 all flesh will die together, and every mortal will depart into earth, from which he also was formed.

16 And if he does not admonish, hear these things; give ear to a voice of words.

17 See for yourself the one hating lawless things, and the one destroying the wicked, being everlastingly righteous.

18 Ungodly is the one saying to a king, You act lawlessly; Most ungodly one, to the rulers;

19 who was not ashamed before an honored one's face, nor knows how to assign honor to the great so that their faces may be admired.

20 And their crying out and begging a man will turn out empty for them; for they acted unlawfully while the powerless were being turned aside.

21 For he himself is an observer of humans' works, and none of what they do has escaped his notice,

22 nor will there be a place for those doing lawless things to hide;

23 because he will not place upon a man any further; for the Lord surveys all,

24 the one comprehending untraceable things, glorious and extraordinary, of which there is no number;

25 the one knowing their works, and he will turn night, and they will be humbled.

26 And he extinguished the ungodly, and they are visible before him,

27 because they turned aside from God's law, and did not recognize his ordinances,

28 so as to bring upon him a needy man's cry, and he will hear a cry of the poor.

29 And he himself will provide quiet, and who will condemn? And he will hide a face, and who will see him? Both against a nation and against a human together, 30 making a hypocritical human king because of a people's difficulty.

31 Because the one saying to the strong one, I have taken; I will not take a pledge;

32 apart from myself I will see; you show me; if I worked injustice, I will certainly not add to it.

33 Will he repay it from you? Because you will reject, because you will choose, and not I; and what you have known, speak.

34 Therefore understanding ones in heart will say these things, and a wise man has heard my word.

35 But Iob did not speak with understanding, and his words were not with knowledge.

36 Nevertheless, learn, Iob; do not give an answering reply any further, like the senseless,

37 so that we may not add to our sins; and lawlessness will be reckoned upon us, as we speak many words against the Lord.

Chapter 35

1 And Elious, taking up the discourse, says,

2 What is this you considered in judgment? Who are you, that you said, I am righteous before the Lord?

3 Or will you say, What will I do, having sinned?

4 I will give an answer to you and to your three friends.

5 Look up into heaven and see, and observe clouds, how high they are above you.

6 If you sinned, what will you do? And if you also acted lawlessly in many things, what can you do?

7 But since, then, you are righteous, what will you give him? Or what will he receive from your hand?

8 Your ungodliness is for a man like you, and your righteousness for a son of man.

9 Slandered by a multitude, they will cry out; they will shout because of the arm of many.

10 And he did not say, Where is God who made me, who appoints night watches, 11 who distinguishes me from earth's quadrupeds, and from heaven's birds?

12 There they will cry out, and he will certainly not hear, also because of the insolence of wicked ones.

13 For the Lord does not wish to see improper things; for the Almighty himself is an observer

14 of those accomplishing lawless things, and will save me. And be judged before him, if you can praise him as he is.

15 And now, because there is no one inspecting his anger, and he did not know greatly in a transgression;

16 and Iob opens his mouth vainly; in ignorance he weighs down words.

Chapter 36

1 And Elious, adding still further, says,

2 Wait for me a little longer, so that I may teach you; for there is still speech in me.

3 Taking up my knowledge from afar, and by my works I will speak righteous things,

4 in truth, and not unjust words; you understand unjustly.

5 And know that the Lord will certainly not reject the innocent. Mighty in strength of heart,

6 he will certainly not give life to an ungodly man, and will give judgment for the poor.

7 He will not take his eyes away from a righteous man; and with kings upon a throne, and he will seat them for strife, and they will be exalted.

8 And if, bound in fetters, they are held fast in cords of poverty,

9 he will also announce to them their works and their transgressions, because they will be strong.

10 But he will hear the righteous man; and he said that they will turn from injustice.

11 If they hear and serve, they will finish their days in good things, and their years in comeliness.

12 But he does not save the ungodly, because they do not wish to know the Lord, and because, being admonished, they were disobedient.

13 And hypocrites in heart will appoint wrath; they will not shout, because he bound them.

14 Therefore may their soul die in youth, and their life be wounded by angels,

15 in return for their afflicting a weak and powerless man; and he will set forth judgment for the meek.

16 And furthermore he deceived you out of an enemy's mouth; an abyss, a pouring down beneath it; and your table came down full of fatness.

17 And judgment will not be lacking from the righteous,

18 and wrath will be upon the ungodly because of the ungodliness of gifts which they received for injustices.

19 Let not the mind willingly turn you aside from the supplication of powerless ones in necessity, and all those strengthening strength.

20 Do not draw out the night for peoples to go up in their place;

21 but guard yourself lest you do improper things; for this you chose out of poverty.

22 Behold, the strong one will strengthen in his strength; for who is a ruler like him?

23 And who is the one examining his works? Or who is the one saying, He did unjust things?

24 Remember that his works are great, of which men began;

25 every human saw in himself, as many mortals as are wounded.

26 Behold, the strong one is great, and we will not know; the number of his years is also limitless.

27 And drops of rain are numbered by him, and will be poured forth as rain into a cloud;

28 old things will flow, and he overshadowed clouds upon unspeakably many mortals.

28 a He set a season for cattle, and they know the order of a resting place.

29 At all these things, does your thought not stand astonished, nor does your heart depart from your body? And if he understands extensions of a cloud, the evenness of his tent,

30 behold, he stretches edo upon him, and covered the roots of the sea.

31 For by them he will judge peoples; he will give food to the strong.

32 Upon hands he covered light, and gave a command concerning it at its meeting;

33 he will announce concerning it to his friend; possession, also concerning injustice.

Chapter 37

1 And at this my heart was troubled, and flowed away from its place.

2 Hear a report in the anger of the Lord's wrath, and a meditation will come forth from his mouth.

3 Beneath all heaven is his rule, and his light is upon the wings of the earth.

4 Behind him a voice will shout; he will thunder with the voice of his insolence, and will not exchange them, because he will hear his voice.

5 The strong one will thunder wondrous things with his voice; for he did great things which we did not know,

6 commanding snow, Be upon the earth; and a storm of rain, and a storm of rains of his dominion.

7 In the hand of every human he seals up, so that every human may know his own weakness.

8 And beasts entered beneath a shelter, and rested upon a bed.

9 Whirlwinds come from chambers, and cold from extremities.

10 And from the strong one's breath he will give frost, and steers the water however he wishes;

11 and a cloud molds a chosen thing; a cloud will scatter his light.

12 And he himself will turn circuits about in theeboulatho for their works; all things, whatever he commands them, these have been appointed by him upon the earth,

13 whether for discipline, whether for his earth, whether for mercy he will find him.

14 Give ear to these things, Iob; stand, consider the Lord's power.

15 We know that God established his works, making light out of darkness.

16 And he knows a distinction of clouds, and the extraordinary falls of wicked ones.

17 And your robe is warm; and there is quiet upon the earth.

18 You will make firm with him for old things, strong as the appearance of a casting.

19 Why? Teach me what we will say to him; and let us cease saying many things.

20 Has a book or a scribe stood beside me, so that, standing, I may silence a human?

21 And the light is not visible to all; it shines afar in the old things, like that from him upon clouds.

22 From the north, clouds gleaming with gold; upon these are the Almighty's great glory and honor.

23 And we do not find another like him in strength; the one judging righteous things—do you not think he hears?

24 Therefore humans will fear him, and the wise in heart will also fear him.

Chapter 38

1 And after Elious ceased his speech, the Lord said to Iob through a tempest and clouds,

2 Who is this who hides counsel from me, and holds words in his heart, and thinks to hide them from me?

3 Gird your loin like a man, and I will ask you, and you answer me.

4 Where were you when I founded the earth? And tell me, if you know understanding.

5 Who set its measures, if you know? Or who is the one bringing a cord upon it?

6 Upon what have its rings been fixed? And who is the one laying a cornerstone upon it?

7 When stars came into being, all my angels praised me with a great voice.

8 And I fenced in the sea with gates, when it raged, coming forth from its mother's belly;

9 and I appointed a cloud as its clothing, and swaddled it in mist;

10 and I appointed boundaries for it, placing bars and gates around it;

11 and I said to it, Until this point you will come, and will not pass beyond, but in yourself your waves will be crushed.

12 Have I appointed morning brightness in your time, and did the dawn-bringer see its own order, 13 to seize the wings of earth, to shake the ungodly out of it?

14 Did you take earth, mold clay into a living being, and place him upon earth able to speak?

15 And did you remove the light from the ungodly, and crush the arm of the arrogant?

16 And did you come upon a spring of the sea, and walk in the tracks of an abyss?

17 And are the gates of death opened to you in fear, and did the gatekeepers of Hades cower on seeing you?

18 And have you considered the breadth of what is beneath heaven? Tell me, then, how great it is.

19 And in what land does light lodge, and what is the place of darkness?

20 Would you lead me into their boundaries? And do you also know their paths?

21 I know, then, that you have been born at that time, and the number of your years is great.

22 And you came upon treasuries of snow, and have seen treasuries of hail.

23 And it is laid away for you for a time of enemies, for a day of war and battle.

24 And from where does frost come forth, or a south wind disperse into what is beneath heaven?

25 And who prepared a flow for violent rain, and a way for uproars,

26 to rain upon a land where there is no man, a wilderness where no human exists in it,

27 to satisfy an untrodden and uninhabited place, and to make a sprouting of grass grow forth?

28 Who is rain's father? And who is the one who has begotten lumps of dew?

29 And from whose womb does ice come forth? And who has begotten frost in heaven,

30 which descends like flowing water? And who froze the face of an abyss?

31 And did you understand the bond of the Pleiad, and open Orion's barrier?

32 Will you open mazouroth in its time, and lead the evening star by its hair—these things?

33 And do you know heaven's turnings, or the things happening together beneath heaven?

34 And will you call a cloud with a voice, and will it obey you with a trembling of violent water?

35 And will you send thunderbolts, and will they go? And will they say to you, What is it?

36 And who gave women wisdom of weaving, or knowledge of embroidery?

37 And who is the one numbering clouds with wisdom, and inclined heaven to earth?

38 And dust has been poured out like earth, and I have glued it together like a cube to a stone.

39 And will you hunt food for lions, and fill the souls of dragons?

40 For they have been afraid in their beds, and sit in woods lying in wait.

41 And who prepared food for a raven? For its young have cried to the Lord, wandering, seeking food.

Chapter 39

1 Have you known the time of birth of rock goat-stags, and watched the birth-pains of deer?

2 And did you count their months fulfilled for birth, and release their birth-pains?

3 And did you rear their little ones outside fear? Will you send away their birth-pains?

4 They will break away their children; they will multiply in offspring, will go forth, and will certainly not return to them.

5 And who is the one letting a wild ass go free, and who loosened its bonds?

6 And I appointed its dwelling a wilderness, and its habitations a salt land;

7 laughing at a city's great crowd, and not hearing a tax collector's blame,

8 it will survey mountains as its pasture, and seeks after every green thing.

9 And will a unicorn wish to serve you, or sleep at your manger?

10 And will you bind its yoke with straps, or will it draw your furrows in a plain?

11 And have you trusted in it because its strength is great, and will you leave your works to it?

12 And will you believe that it will return the seed to you, and bring in your threshing floor?

13 A wing of rejoicing ones, neelasa, if it takes together asida and nessa;

14 because she will leave her eggs upon earth, and will warm them upon dust,

15 and forgot that a foot will scatter them and beasts of a field will trample them;

16 she hardened herself against her children as though they were not hers; she toiled in vain without fear;

17 because God kept wisdom silent for her, and did not give her a share in understanding.

18 At a time she will lift high on high; she will laugh at a horse and its rider.

19 Did you clothe a horse with power, and clothe its neck with fear?

20 And did you clothe it with full armor, and the glory of its breast with daring?

21 Digging up in a plain, it exults, and goes forth into a plain in strength;

22 meeting a missile, it laughs, and will certainly not turn away from iron;

23 upon it a bow and sword exult,

24 and in anger it will obliterate the earth, and will certainly not believe until a trumpet signals;

25 and when a trumpet signals, it says, Well done; and from afar it smells war, with leaping and shouting.

26 And by your knowledge has a hawk stood, spreading its wings, motionless, looking down upon the things toward the south?

27 And at your command does an eagle rise high, and a vulture, seated upon its nest, lodge

28 upon a prominence of rock and a hidden place?

29 Being there, it seeks food; from afar its eyes watch;

30 and its young are drenched in blood, and wherever dead ones are, they are found immediately.

Chapter 40

1 And the Lord God answered Iob and said,

2 Will he turn aside judgment with the Sufficient One? Will one reproving God answer it?

3 And Iob, taking up the discourse, says to the Lord,

4 Why am I still being judged, being admonished and reproving the Lord, hearing such things, being nothing? And what answer should I give to these things? I will place a hand upon my mouth;

5 I have spoken once, and at the second time I will not add.

6 And the Lord, taking up the discourse again, said to Iob from the cloud,

7 No, but gird your loin like a man, and I will ask you, and you answer me;

8 do not reject my judgment. And do you think I have spoken to you otherwise than so that you may be shown righteous?

9 Do you have an arm against the Lord, or do you thunder with a voice like him?

10 Take up, then, loftiness and power, and clothe yourself with glory and honor;

11 and send angels in anger, and humble every insolent one,

12 and extinguish an arrogant one, and rot the ungodly immediately,

13 and hide them in earth outside together, and fill their faces with dishonor;

14 then I will acknowledge that your right hand can save. –

15 But indeed, behold, beasts beside you; it eats grass like oxen.

16 Behold, indeed, its strength is upon its loin, and its power upon the navel of its belly;

17 it set up a tail like a cypress, and its sinews have been interwoven;

18 its ribs are bronze ribs, and its spine is cast iron.

19 This is the beginning of the Lord's formation, made to be played with by his angels.

20 And coming upon a sheer mountain, it made joy for quadrupeds in Tartarus;

21 it sleeps beneath trees of every sort, beside papyrus and reed and flowering rush;

22 and great trees with shoots, and branches of chaste tree, are shaded in it.

23 If a flood occurs, it will certainly not perceive it; it has trusted that the Iordan will strike against its mouth.

24 In its eye will he receive it, and, ensnaring it, pierce a nose? –

25 And will you lead a dragon with a hook, and place a halter around its nose?

26 Will you bind a ring in its nostril, and pierce its lip with a bracelet?

27 And will it speak to you with entreaty, with supplication softly?

28 And will it make a covenant with you, and will you take it as an everlasting slave?

29 And will you play with it like a bird, or bind it like a little sparrow for a child?

30 And do nations feed upon it, and do races of Phoenicians divide it?

31 And every floating vessel, gathered together—they will certainly not carry one skin of its tail, nor its head in fishermen's boats.

32 And will you lay a hand upon it, remembering the war occurring in its body? And let it happen no longer.

Chapter 41

1 Have you not seen it, nor marveled at the things spoken?

2 Have you not been afraid because it has been prepared for me? For who is the one standing against me?

3 Or who will stand against me and endure, if everything beneath heaven is mine?

4 I will not be silent because of it, and it will pity its equal as regards a word of power.

5 Who will uncover the face of its clothing? And who would enter into the fold of its breastplate?

6 Who will open the gates of its face? Around its teeth is fear.

7 Its inward parts are bronze shields, and its bond is like an emery stone;

8 one sticks to another, and breath will certainly not pass through it;

9 a man will stick to his brother; they are held together and will certainly not be pulled apart.

10 In its sneezing brightness shines, and its eyes are the appearance of the dawn-bringer.

11 Burning torches come forth from its mouth, and hearths of fire are hurled about;

12 from its nostrils comes smoke of a furnace burning with a fire of coals;

13 its soul is coals, and a flame comes forth from its mouth.

14 And power lodges in its neck; destruction runs before it.

15 And the flesh of its body has been glued together; he pours upon it; it will not be shaken.

16 Its heart has been fixed like a stone, and stands like an unhammered anvil.

17 And when it turns, there is fear for quadruped beasts leaping upon earth.

18 If lances meet it, they will certainly do nothing, a raised spear and breastplate;

19 for it has considered iron straw, and copper like rotten wood;

20 a bronze bow will certainly not wound it; it has considered a stone-thrower grass;

21 hammers were reckoned as stubble, and it laughs at the shaking of a fire-bearer.

22 Its bedding is sharp spits, and all the gold of the sea beneath it is like unspeakably much clay.

23 It makes the abyss boil like a bronze pot, and has considered the sea like an ointment vessel,

24 and the Tartarus of the abyss like a captive; it reckoned the abyss a walking place.

25 There is nothing upon earth like it, made to be played with by my angels;

26 it sees every lofty thing, and it is king of all those in the waters.

Chapter 42

1 And Iob, taking up the discourse, says to the Lord,

2 I know that you can do all things, and nothing is impossible for you.

3 For who is the one hiding counsel from you? And, sparing words, does he think to hide it from you too? And who will announce to me what I did not know, great and wondrous things which I did not understand?

4 And hear me, Lord, so that I too may speak; and I will ask you, and you teach me.

5 Indeed, formerly I heard you by an ear's hearing, but now my eye has seen you;

6 therefore I despised myself and melted away, and have considered myself earth and ashes.

7 And it happened after the Lord spoke all these words to Iob, the Lord said to Eliphas the Thaimanite, You sinned, and your two friends; for you did not speak anything true before me, as my attendant Iob did.

8 But now take seven calves and seven rams, and go to my attendant Iob, and he will make a burnt offering for you; and Iob my attendant will pray for you, for surely I will accept his face; for if not for him, I would have destroyed you; for you did not speak what is true against my attendant Iob. –

9 And Eliphas the Thaimanite and Baldad the Sauchite and Sophar the Minaite went and did as the Lord commanded them, and he released their sin for them through Iob.

10 And the Lord increased Iob; and when he also prayed for his friends, he forgave them their sin; and the Lord gave double whatever Iob had before, for a doubling.

11 And all his brothers and his sisters heard all the things that had happened to him, and came to him, and all who knew him from the first; and eating and drinking with him, they comforted him, and marveled at all the things which the Lord brought upon him; and each gave him one ewe-lamb and an unstamped golden tetradrachm.

12 And the Lord blessed Iob's latter things more than the former; and his cattle were fourteen thousand sheep, six thousand camels, a thousand yokes of oxen, a thousand grazing female asses.

13 And seven sons and three daughters are born to him;

14 and he called the first Day, the second Cassia, and the third Amaltheia's Horn;

15 and none better than Iob's daughters were found, compared with them, beneath heaven; and their father gave them an inheritance among their brothers.

16 And Iob lived a hundred seventy years after the stroke, and in all lived two hundred forty-eight years; and Iob saw his sons and his sons' sons, a fourth generation;

17 and Iob died, old and full of days.

17 a And it has been written that he will rise again with those whom the Lord raises. – –

18 This man is interpreted from the Syriac book as dwelling in the land of Ausitis, upon the boundaries of Idoumaia and Arabia, and his name previously was Iobab;

19 and taking an Arabian wife, he begets a son, whose name is Ennon; and he himself was a son of his father Zare, of the sons of Esau, and of his mother Bosorra, so that he was fifth from Abraam.

18 And these are the kings who reigned in Edom, which land he himself also ruled: first Balak the son of Beor, and the name of his city was Dennaba; and after Balak, Iobab, who is called Iob; and after this man, Asom, who was a ruler from the land of Thaimanitis; and after this man, Adad son of Barad, who cut down Madiam in the plain of Moab, and the name of his city was Getthaim.

19 And the friends who came to him: Eliphas, of the sons of Esau, king of the Thaimans; Baldad, the tyrant of the Sauchaians; Sophar, the king of the Minaians.

Wisdom of Solomon

Chapter 1

1 Love righteousness, you who judge the earth; think concerning the Lord in goodness, and seek him in simplicity of heart.

2 Because he is found by those who do not test him, and appears to those who do not disbelieve him.

3 For crooked reasonings separate from God, and power, when tested, reproves the senseless.

4 Because wisdom will not enter a soul devising evil, nor dwell in a body indebted to sin.

5 For a holy spirit of discipline will flee deceit, and depart from reasonings without understanding, and will be reproved when injustice comes upon it.

6 For wisdom is a spirit loving humans, and will not acquit a blasphemer of his lips; because God is a witness of his kidneys, and a true overseer of his heart, and a hearer of his tongue.

7 Because the Lord's spirit has filled the inhabited world, and that which holds all things together has knowledge of a voice.

8 Therefore no one uttering unjust things will escape notice, nor will justice, reproving, pass him by.

9 For there will be an examination into an ungodly man's counsels, and a hearing of his words will come to the Lord for reproof of his lawless deeds;

10 because an ear of jealousy listens to all things, and a murmur of grumblings is not hidden.

11 Therefore guard yourselves against unprofitable grumbling, and spare your tongue from speaking against others; because a secret utterance will not go empty, and a mouth telling lies destroys a soul.

12 Do not pursue death in the wandering of your life, nor draw destruction upon yourselves by the works of your hands;

13 because God did not make death, nor delights in the destruction of the living.

14 For he created all things to exist, and the world's origins are salutary, and there is no poison of destruction in them, nor a kingdom of Hades upon earth.

15 For righteousness is immortal.

16 But the ungodly summoned him with their hands and words; considering him a friend, they melted away, and made an agreement with him, because they are worthy to be of his portion.

Chapter 2

1 For they said among themselves, reasoning incorrectly, Our life is short and sorrowful, and there is no healing at a human's death, and no one who returned from Hades was known.

2 Because we came into being by chance, and after this we will be as though we had not existed; because the breath in our nostrils is smoke, and reason a spark in the movement of our heart,

3 which, when extinguished, the body will become ash, and the spirit will be dispersed like loose air.

4 And our name will be forgotten in time, and no one will remember our works; and our life will pass away like traces of a cloud, and will be scattered like mist, chased by rays of the sun and weighed down by its heat.

5 For our time is a shadow's passing, and there is no returning of our end, because it was sealed, and no one turns back.

6 Come, then, and let us enjoy the good things that exist, and use creation eagerly as in youth;

7 let us be filled with costly wine and perfumes, and let no flower of spring pass us by;

8 let us crown ourselves with rosebuds before they wither;

9 let none of us be without a share of our arrogance; everywhere let us leave tokens of gladness, because this is our portion and this our lot.

10 Let us oppress a needy righteous man, let us not spare a widow, nor show deference to an old man's gray hair of many years;

11 and let our strength be a law of righteousness, for what is weak is proved useless.

12 Let us lie in wait for the righteous man, because he is inconvenient to us, and opposes our works, and reproaches us with sins against law, and charges us with sins against our discipline;

13 he professes to have knowledge of God, and calls himself a servant of the Lord;

14 he became for us a reproof of our thoughts; he is burdensome to us even when seen,

15 because his life is unlike the others', and his paths are different;

16 we were reckoned counterfeit by him, and he abstains from our ways as from impurities; he pronounces the last things of the righteous blessed, and boasts of God as father.

17 Let us see if his words are true, and test the things at his outcome;

18 for if the righteous man is a son of God, he will help him, and rescue him from the hand of those opposing him.

19 With insult and torture let us examine him, so that we may know his gentleness, and test his endurance of evil;

20 let us condemn him to a shameful death, for there will be an inspection of him according to his words.

21 These things they reasoned, and were led astray; for their wickedness blinded them,

22 and they did not know God's mysteries, nor hope for a wage of holiness, nor discern an honor of blameless souls.

23 Because God created the human for incorruptibility, and made him an image of his own eternity;

24 but through the devil's envy death entered the world, and those who are of his portion experience it.

Chapter 3

1 But the souls of the righteous are in God's hand, and torture will certainly not touch them.

2 They seemed in the eyes of the senseless to have died, and their departure was reckoned affliction,

3 and their journey from us, ruin; but they are in peace.

4 For even if they are punished in humans' sight, their hope is full of immortality;

5 and disciplined in a few things, they will be benefited in great things, because God tested them and found them worthy of himself;

6 like gold in a crucible he tested them, and like a whole burnt offering of sacrifice he accepted them.

7 And in the time of their inspection they will shine forth, and like sparks in stubble they will run through;

8 they will judge nations and rule peoples, and the Lord will reign over them for the ages.

9 Those who have trusted in him will understand truth, and those faithful in love will remain with him; because grace and mercy are for his chosen ones.

10 But the ungodly will have punishment according as they reasoned, those who neglected the righteous man and departed from the Lord;

11 for the one despising wisdom and discipline is miserable, and their hope is empty, and their labors unprofitable, and their works useless;

12 their wives are senseless, and their children wicked; their offspring is accursed.

13 Because blessed is the barren woman who is undefiled, who did not know a bed in transgression; she will have fruit in the inspection of souls,

14 and the eunuch who did not work a lawless deed with his hand, nor think wicked things against the Lord; for a choice grace of faith will be given him, and a more pleasing lot in the Lord's temple.

15 For the fruit of good toils is glorious, and the root of prudence unfailing.

16 But adulterers' children will be unfulfilled, and seed from an unlawful bed will be obliterated.

17 For even if they become long-lived, they will be reckoned as nothing, and their old age dishonored at the last;

18 and if they die swiftly, they will have no hope, nor consolation in a day of discernment;

19 for the ends of an unjust generation are harsh.

Chapter 4

1 Better is childlessness with virtue; for immortality is in its remembrance, because it is known both with God and with humans.

2 And when present they imitate it, and long for it when departed; and in the age it proceeds in procession wearing a crown, having won the contest of undefiled prizes.

3 But a prolific multitude of the ungodly will not be useful, and from illegitimate shoots it will not give a root into depth, nor establish a secure foundation;

4 for even if it flourishes in branches for a time, being insecurely established, it will be shaken by wind, and uprooted by the force of winds.

5 Unfulfilled branches will be broken off, and their fruit is useless, unripe for eating, and suitable for nothing;

6 for children born from lawless sleeps are witnesses of wickedness against parents in their examination.

7 But a righteous man, if he dies early, will be in rest;

8 for honored old age is not that of many years, nor has it been measured by a number of years,

9 but prudence is gray hair for humans, and a spotless life is an age of old age.

10 Becoming well-pleasing to God, he was loved, and living among sinners, he was transferred;

11 he was snatched away, lest wickedness change his understanding, or deceit deceive his soul;

12 for the fascination of baseness obscures good things, and the wandering of desire alters an innocent mind.

13 Perfected in a little time, he fulfilled long times;

14 for his soul was pleasing to the Lord; therefore he hastened out of the midst of wickedness; but the peoples, seeing and not understanding, nor placing such a thing upon their thought,

15 that grace and mercy are among his chosen ones, and inspection among his holy ones.

16 And a righteous man who has died will condemn the living ungodly, and youth swiftly completed, an unjust man's old age of many years;

17 for they will see a wise man's end, and will not understand what the Lord planned concerning him, and for what he secured him.

18 They will see and despise; but the Lord will laugh at them,

19 and after this they will become a dishonored corpse, and an insult among the dead throughout an age, because he will dash them headlong, speechless, and shake them from foundations, and they will be laid waste to the last, and will be in pain, and their remembrance will perish.

20 They will come timid in a reckoning of their sins, and their lawless deeds will reprove them from opposite them.

Chapter 5

1 Then the righteous man will stand with great boldness before the face of those who afflicted him, and those rejecting his toils.

2 Seeing him, they will be troubled with dreadful fear, and will be astonished at the unexpectedness of his salvation;

3 they will say among themselves, repenting, and through anguish of spirit they will groan, and will say,

4 This was he whom we, the senseless, once held for laughter and for a proverb of reproach; we reckoned his life madness and his end dishonored.

5 How was he numbered among sons of God, and is his lot among holy ones?

6 Then we were led astray from a way of truth, and the light of righteousness did not shine upon us, and the sun did not rise for us;

7 we were filled with paths of lawlessness and destruction, and traversed untrodden wildernesses, but did not recognize the Lord's way.

8 What did arrogance benefit us? And what has wealth with boastfulness contributed to us?

9 All those things passed like a shadow and like a message running past;

10 like a ship passing through billowing water, of which, when it has crossed, it is not possible to find a trace, nor a track of its keel in waves;

11 or as, when a bird flies through air, no proof of a journey is found, but light wind, lashed by the beating of wings and split by the force of the whirring of moving wings, was traversed, and after this no sign of passage was found in it;

12 or as, when an arrow was shot at a target, the air, cut, immediately returned into itself, so that its passage was unknown;

13 so we too, having been born, ceased, and had no sign of virtue to show, but were wholly consumed in our wickedness.

14 Because an ungodly man's hope is like chaff carried by wind, and like fine frost chased by a tempest, and like smoke it was dispersed by wind, and like the remembrance of a guest of one day it passed away.

15 But the righteous live for the age, and their wage is in the Lord, and care for them is with the Most High.

16 Therefore they will receive the kingdom of comeliness and the diadem of beauty from the Lord's hand, because with his right hand he will shelter them, and with his arm defend them.

17 He will take his zeal as full armor, and arm creation for repelling enemies;

18 he will put on righteousness as a breastplate, and place unhypocritical judgment as a helmet;

19 he will take holiness as an unconquerable shield,

20 and sharpen severe anger into a sword, and the world will wage war together with him against the deranged.

21 Well-aimed missiles of lightning will go forth, and from the clouds, as from a well-curved bow, they will leap toward a target,

22 and hailstones full of wrath will be hurled from a stone-thrower; water of the sea will be indignant against them, and rivers will flood harshly;

23 a wind of power will stand against them, and like a tempest will winnow them out; and lawlessness will lay all the earth waste, and evildoing will overturn rulers' thrones.

Chapter 6

1 Hear, then, kings, and understand; learn, judges of the ends of earth;

2 give ear, you who rule a multitude and have exulted over crowds of nations;

3 because rule was given you from the Lord, and dominion from the Most High, who will examine your works and search out your counsels;

4 because, being servants of his kingdom, you did not judge rightly, nor guard law, nor walk according to God's counsel.

5 Terribly and swiftly he will come upon you, because severe judgment occurs among those in high places.

6 For the least is pardonable through mercy, but the mighty will be examined mightily;

7 for the Master of all will not shrink before a face, nor defer to greatness, because he himself made small and great, and alike provides for all,

8 but a strong investigation comes upon the strong.

9 To you, then, O tyrants, are my words, so that you may learn wisdom and not fall aside;

10 for those who have guarded holy things holily will be made holy, and those taught them will find a defense.

11 Desire, then, my words; long for them, and you will be disciplined.

12 Wisdom is radiant and unfading, and is easily beheld by those loving her, and found by those seeking her;

13 she anticipates those desiring her, to be known beforehand.

14 The one rising early for her will not labor; for he will find her seated beside his gates.

15 For thinking concerning her is perfection of prudence, and the one keeping watch because of her will swiftly be without care;

16 because she herself goes about seeking those worthy of her, and appears to them favorably in their paths, and meets them in every thought.

17 For her beginning is the truest desire for discipline, and care for discipline is love,

18 and love is keeping her laws, and attention to laws is confirmation of incorruptibility,

19 and incorruptibility makes one near God;

20 therefore desire for wisdom leads up to a kingdom.

21 If, then, you delight in thrones and scepters, tyrants of peoples, honor wisdom, so that you may reign for the age.

22 And what wisdom is, and how she came into being, I will announce, and will not hide mysteries from you, but will trace her from the beginning of her origin, and place the knowledge of her in the open, and will certainly not pass truth by.

23 Nor indeed will I journey with wasting envy, because this will not share in wisdom.

24 And a multitude of wise ones is salvation of a world, and a prudent king stability of a people.

25 Therefore be disciplined by my words, and you will be benefited.

Chapter 7

1 Indeed I too am a mortal human, equal to all, and a descendant of the earth-born first-formed man; and in a mother's belly I was sculpted as flesh,

2 congealed in blood in a time of ten months, from a man's seed and pleasure accompanying sleep.

3 And I too, having come into being, drew the common air, and fell upon the earth sharing like experiences, crying as my first voice, the same as all alike;

4 I was reared in swaddling clothes and cares.

5 For none of the kings had another beginning of birth,

6 but the entrance into life is one for all, and the departure equal.

7 Therefore I prayed, and prudence was given me; I called upon him, and a spirit of wisdom came to me.

8 I preferred her to scepters and thrones, and considered wealth nothing in comparison with her;

9 nor did I liken a priceless stone to her, because all gold in her sight is a little sand, and silver will be reckoned as clay before her;

10 above health and beauty of form I loved her, and chose to have her instead of light, because the brightness from her is unsleeping.

11 And all good things came to me together with her, and uncountable wealth in her hands;

12 and I rejoiced over all, because wisdom leads them, but I did not know that she was their mother.

13 And without deceit I learned, and without envy I share; I do not hide her wealth;

14 for she is an unfailing treasure for humans, which those acquiring prepared friendship with God, being commended through the gifts from discipline.

15 And may God grant me to speak according to judgment, and think worthily of the things given, because he himself is both wisdom's guide and the corrector of the wise.

16 For in his hand are both we and our words, and all prudence and knowledge of crafts.

17 For he himself gave me unlying knowledge of things existing, to know the world's constitution and the working of elements,

18 the beginning and end and middle of times, changes of turnings and alterations of seasons,

19 cycles of a year and positions of stars,

20 natures of living beings and tempers of beasts, forces of spirits and reasonings of humans, differences of plants and powers of roots,

21 and whatever things are hidden and manifest I knew; for wisdom, the craftswoman of all, taught me.

22 For in her is a spirit intelligent, holy, only-begotten, of many parts, fine, easily moving, clear, undefiled, plain, unharmed, loving good, sharp,

23 unhindered, beneficent, loving humans, firm, secure, without care, all-powerful, overseeing all, and passing through all intelligent, pure, finest spirits.

24 For wisdom is more mobile than every movement, and penetrates and passes through all things because of her purity;

25 for she is a vapor of God's power, and a pure outflow of the Almighty's glory; therefore nothing defiled falls into her.

26 For she is a radiance of everlasting light, and a spotless mirror of God's working, and an image of his goodness.

27 And being one, she can do all things, and remaining in herself, renews all things, and passing into holy souls generation by generation, makes friends of God and prophets;

28 for God loves nothing except the one dwelling together with wisdom.

29 For she is more comely than the sun, and above every position of stars. Compared with light, she is found prior;

30 for night succeeds this, but wickedness does not prevail over wisdom.

Chapter 8

1 And she extends strongly from end to end, and administers all things kindly.

2 Her I loved and sought out from my youth, and sought to take as a bride for myself, and became a lover of her beauty.

3 She glorifies noble birth, having life together with God, and the Master of all loved her;

4 for she is an initiate in God's knowledge, and a chooser of his works.

5 And if wealth is a desirable possession in life, what is richer than wisdom, who works all things?

6 And if prudence works, who of the things existing is more a craftswoman than she?

7 And if someone loves righteousness, her toils are virtues; for she teaches self-control and prudence, righteousness and courage, than which nothing is more useful in life for humans.

8 And if someone also longs for much experience, she knows ancient things and conjectures future things, understands turns of words and solutions of riddles, foreknows signs and wonders, and outcomes of seasons and times.

9 Therefore I decided to take her to live together, knowing that she will be for me a counselor of good things, and an exhortation in cares and sorrow.

10 Through her I will have glory among crowds, and honor with elders, being young;

11 I will be found sharp in judgment, and admired in rulers' sight;

12 when I am silent, they will wait for me, and when I utter, they will attend, and when I speak at greater length, they will place a hand upon their mouth.

13 Through her I will have immortality, and leave an everlasting remembrance to those after me.

14 I will administer peoples, and nations will be subjected to me;

15 terrible tyrants, hearing, will fear me; among a multitude I will appear good, and in war courageous.

16 Entering my house, I will rest beside her; for her company has no bitterness, nor living together with her pain, but gladness and joy.

17 Reasoning these things in myself, and considering in my heart that there is immortality in kinship with wisdom,

18 and good delight in friendship with her, and unfailing wealth in the toils of her hands, and prudence in training together in her company, and good fame in sharing her words, I went about seeking how I might take her to myself.

19 And I was a child of good nature, and obtained a good soul,

20 or rather, being good, I came into an undefiled body.

21 And knowing that I will not otherwise possess her unless God gives her—and this too was of prudence, to know whose the grace is—I petitioned the Lord and begged him, and said from my whole heart,

Chapter 9

1 God of fathers and Lord of mercy, who made all things by your word,

2 and by your wisdom made a human, so that he may master the creatures brought into being by you,

3 and govern the world in holiness and righteousness, and judge judgment in uprightness of soul,

4 give me wisdom, seated beside your thrones, and do not reject me from your servants.

5 Because I am your slave and a son of your maidservant, a weak and short-lived human, and deficient in understanding of judgment and laws;

6 for even if someone is perfect among sons of humans, with wisdom from you absent he will be reckoned as nothing.

7 You chose me as king of your people and judge of your sons and daughters;

8 you said to build a temple on your holy mountain, and an altar in the city of your dwelling, an imitation of a holy tent which you prepared beforehand from the beginning.

9 And with you is wisdom, who knows your works and was present when you were making the world, and understands what is pleasing in your eyes and what is upright in your commandments.

10 Send her out from holy heavens, and from your throne of glory send her, so that, present together with me, she may labor, and I may know what is well-pleasing with you.

11 For she knows all things and understands, and will guide me with self-control in my actions, and guard me in her glory;

12 and my works will be acceptable, and I will judge your people righteously, and be worthy of my father's thrones.

13 For what human will know God's counsel? Or who will consider what the Lord wills?

14 For mortals' reasonings are timid, and our thoughts insecure;

15 for a corruptible body weighs down a soul, and the earthy tent burdens a mind of many cares.

16 And with difficulty we conjecture things upon earth, and find the things at hand with toil; but who traced the things in heavens?

17 And who knew your counsel, unless you gave wisdom and sent your holy spirit from the highest places?

18 And thus the paths of those upon earth were made straight, and humans were taught the things pleasing to you, and were saved by wisdom.

Chapter 10

1 She guarded the first-formed father of the world, created alone, and delivered him from his own transgression,

2 and gave him strength to rule all things.

3 But an unjust man, departing from her in his anger, perished together with brother-murdering furies.

4 Because of him, when earth was being flooded, wisdom saved it again, piloting the righteous man through cheap wood.

5 She also, when nations in agreement of wickedness were confused, knew the righteous man, and kept him blameless before God, and guarded him strong against compassion for a child.

6 She rescued a righteous man when the ungodly were being destroyed, fleeing the descending fire of the Five Cities,

7 of which a smoking waste still stands as witness of the wickedness, and plants bearing fruit in unfulfilled seasons, and a standing pillar of salt as a memorial of a disbelieving soul.

8 For, passing wisdom by, they were not only harmed by not knowing good things, but also left life a memorial of their senselessness, so that they could not even escape notice in the things in which they stumbled.

9 But wisdom rescued those serving her from toils.

10 She guided a righteous man, a fugitive from a brother's anger, in straight paths; she showed him God's kingdom, and gave him knowledge of holy things; she prospered him in hardships, and multiplied his toils;

11 in the greed of those overpowering him, she stood beside him and made him rich;

12 she guarded him from enemies, and secured him from those lying in wait; and she awarded him a strong contest, so that he might know that piety is mightier than everything.

13 She did not abandon a righteous man who was sold, but rescued him from sin;

14 she went down with him into a pit, and did not leave him in bonds, until she brought him scepters of kingship, and authority over those tyrannizing him; and she showed those blaming him false, and gave him everlasting glory.

15 She rescued a holy people and a blameless seed from a nation of oppressors;

16 she entered a soul of the Lord's attendant, and opposed fearsome kings with wonders and signs.

17 She rendered to holy ones a wage of their labors, guided them in a wondrous way, and became for them a shelter by day, and a flame of stars by night.

18 She brought them across a red sea, and led them through much water;

19 but she flooded their enemies, and cast them up from the depth of an abyss.

20 Therefore righteous ones plundered ungodly ones, and sang hymns to your holy name, Lord, and praised with one accord your hand fighting for them;

21 because wisdom opened the mouth of the mute, and made infants' tongues clear.

Chapter 11

1 She prospered their works in a holy prophet's hand.

2 They traversed an uninhabited wilderness, and pitched tents in untrodden places;

3 they stood against opponents in war, and repelled enemies.

4 They thirsted and called upon you, and water was given them from a sheer rock, and a healing of thirst from a hard stone.

5 For through the things by which their enemies were punished, through these they themselves, being in want, were benefited.

6 Instead of a spring of an ever-flowing river troubled with gore-filled blood,

7 for reproof of a decree murdering infants, you gave them abundant water unexpectedly,

8 showing through the thirst then how you punished the adversaries.

9 For when they were tested, though disciplined in mercy, they knew how ungodly men, judged with anger, were tortured;

10 for these you tested as a father admonishing, but those you examined as a severe king condemning.

11 And absent and present alike they were worn away;

12 for a double sorrow seized them, and a groaning from memories of things past;

13 for when they heard that through their own punishments the others were benefited, they perceived the Lord.

14 For him whom long ago they rejected with mockery, cast out in exposure, at the end of the outcomes they marveled at, having thirsted unlike the righteous.

15 And in return for the uncomprehending reasonings of their injustice, in which, led astray, they worshiped irrational creeping things and cheap beasts, you sent upon them a multitude of irrational living beings for vengeance,

16 so that they might know that by the things through which someone sins, by these he is punished.

17 For your all-powerful hand, which also created the world from formless matter, was not at a loss to send upon them a multitude of bears, or bold lions,

18 or newly-created unknown beasts full of wrath, either blowing a fire-breathing breath, or winnowing a roar of smoke, or flashing dreadful sparks from their eyes,

19 of which not only the harm could destroy them altogether, but also the sight, frightening them greatly, destroy them utterly.

20 And even without these they could fall by one breath, pursued by justice and winnowed by the spirit of your power; but you arranged all things by measure and number and weight.

21 For to be greatly strong is present with you always, and who will stand against the might of your arm?

22 Because the whole world before you is like a tipping of scales, and like a morning drop of dew that descended upon earth.

23 But you have mercy on all, because you can do all things, and overlook humans' sins for repentance.

24 For you love all things existing, and abhor nothing of what you made; for neither would you have made something while hating it.

25 And how would anything have remained if you had not willed, or what was not called by you have been preserved?

26 But you spare all things, because they are yours, Master who loves souls;

Chapter 12

1 for your incorruptible spirit is in all things.

2 Therefore you reprove those falling aside little by little, and, reminding them of the things in which they sin, admonish them, so that, freed from wickedness, they may believe in you, Lord.

3 For also the former inhabitants of your holy land,

4 hating them for doing most hateful things, works of sorceries and unholy rites,

5 and merciless murders of children, and a feast eating entrails of human flesh and blood, initiates from the midst of a ritual band,

6 and parents, murderers of helpless souls, you wished to destroy through our fathers' hands,

7 so that the land most honored of all with you might receive a worthy colony of God's servants.

8 But you spared even these as humans, and sent wasps as forerunners of your army, so that they might destroy them little by little.

9 Not being unable to give the ungodly into the hands of the righteous in battle, or to wipe them out at once with dreadful beasts or a severe word,

10 but judging little by little, you gave a place of repentance, not being ignorant that their origin is wicked, and their wickedness innate, and that their reasoning will certainly not be changed for the age.

11 For it was a seed accursed from the beginning, nor did you give immunity for the things in which they sinned through being wary of anyone.

12 For who will say, What did you do? Or who will stand against your judgment? And who will accuse you concerning nations that have perished, which you made? Or who will come to confront you as an avenger against unjust humans?

13 For neither is there a god except you, who cares for all, so that you should show that you did not judge unjustly,

14 nor will a king or tyrant be able to look you in the face concerning those whom you punished.

15 But being righteous, you govern all things righteously, considering it foreign to your power to condemn the one who ought not to be punished.

16 For your strength is the beginning of righteousness, and your mastering all things makes you spare all things.

17 For you display strength when disbelieved concerning perfection of power, and among those who know, you expose boldness;

18 but you, mastering strength, judge in gentleness, and administer us with much sparing; for the ability is present with you whenever you will.

19 And you taught your people through such works that the righteous man must love humans, and made your sons hopeful, because you give repentance for sins.

20 For if you punished enemies of your servants and those owing death with such attention and indulgence, giving times and a place through which they might be freed from wickedness,

21 with how much exactness did you judge your sons, to whose fathers you gave oaths and agreements of good promises?

22 Therefore, disciplining us, you scourge our enemies ten-thousandfold, so that, judging, we may consider your goodness, and being judged, expect mercy.

23 Therefore also those who lived unjustly in life's senselessness you tortured through their own abominations;

24 for they wandered farther than the ways of error, supposing as gods even the dishonored things among shameful living beings, deceived like senseless infants.

25 Therefore, as to unreasoning children, you sent judgment for mockery.

26 But those not admonished by games of rebuke will experience judgment worthy of God.

27 For at the things through which they themselves, suffering, were indignant, at these, whom they considered gods, being punished by them, seeing him whom long ago they denied knowing, they recognized a true God; therefore also the end of condemnation came upon them.

Chapter 13

1 For all humans were vain by nature, in whom ignorance of God was present, and from the good things seen they were not strong enough to know the one who is, nor, attending to the works, recognized the craftsman,

2 but considered either fire or wind or swift air or a circle of stars or violent water or heaven's luminaries as gods, governors of the world.

3 If, delighting in their beauty, they supposed these gods, let them know how much better than these the Master is, for the originator of beauty created them;

4 but if astonished at power and working, let them understand from them how much mightier the one making them is;

5 for from the greatness and beauty of creatures, their originator is beheld proportionately.

6 But nevertheless upon these there is little blame, for perhaps they themselves also wander while seeking God and wishing to find him;

7 for, moving among his works, they search out, and are persuaded by the sight, because the things seen are beautiful.

8 But again, neither are they pardonable;

9 for if they were strong enough to know so much that they could conjecture the world, how did they not find the Master of these things more swiftly?

10 But miserable are they, and their hopes among the dead, who called works of human hands gods, gold and silver, a work of skill, and likenesses of living beings, or a useless stone, a work of an ancient hand.

11 And if also some woodcutting craftsman, sawing out an easily moved tree, skillfully scraped all its bark around, and, crafting it comely, made a useful vessel for life's service,

12 and, consuming the scraps of the work for preparing food, was filled,

13 but taking the scrap from them useful for nothing, crooked wood grown together with knots, carved it in the care of his leisure, and shaped it with skill of understanding, likened it to a human's image,

14 or made it like some cheap living being, smearing it with red ocher and reddening its color with pigment, and smearing every stain in it,

15 and making for it a dwelling worthy of it, placed it in a wall, securing it with iron.

16 So that it might not fall, then, he provided for it beforehand, knowing that it is unable to help itself; for it is indeed an image, and has need of help.

17 But praying concerning his possessions and marriages and children, he is not ashamed to speak to the soulless thing, and concerning health he calls upon the weak thing,

18 and concerning life asks the dead thing, and concerning assistance supplicates the most inexperienced thing, and concerning a journey, that which cannot even use a step,

19 and concerning gain and work and success of hands, he asks vigor of the thing most inactive with its hands.

Chapter 14

1 Again, someone preparing a voyage, and about to traverse wild waves, calls upon wood more rotten than the boat carrying him.

2 For desire for gains devised that, and wisdom, the craftswoman, made it;

3 but your providence, Father, pilots it, because you gave a way even in sea, and a secure path in waves,

4 showing that you can save from everything, so that someone may embark even without skill.

5 And you wish the works of your wisdom not to be idle; therefore humans entrust souls even to the smallest wood, and passing through a surge on a raft, were saved.

6 For also in the beginning, when arrogant giants were perishing, the world's hope, taking refuge upon a raft, left the world a seed of birth, piloted by your hand.

7 For blessed is wood through which righteousness comes;

8 but the handmade thing is accursed, both it and the one making it, because the one was working, and the corruptible thing was named a god.

9 For equally hateful to God are both the one acting ungodly and his ungodliness;

10 for what was done will also be punished together with the doer.

11 Therefore there will also be an inspection upon idols of nations, because in God's creation they became an abomination, and stumbling blocks for humans' souls, and a snare for feet of the senseless.

12 For the devising of idols is a beginning of fornication, and their invention corruption of life.

13 For neither did they exist from the beginning, nor will they be for the age;

14 for through humans' vainglory they entered the world, and therefore their swift end was devised.

15 For a father worn away by untimely grief, making an image of a child swiftly taken away, honored the formerly dead human now as a god, and handed down mysteries and rites to those under his hand;

16 then, strengthened with time, the ungodly custom was guarded as law.

17 And by tyrants' commands carved things were worshiped; those whom humans could not honor in sight because they dwelt far away, reproducing their appearance from afar, they made a visible image of the honored king, so that through their zeal they might flatter the absent one as present.

18 And the craftsman's ambition urged even those ignorant toward intensified worship;

19 for he, perhaps wishing to please a ruler, forced the likeness toward greater beauty by his skill;

20 and the multitude, drawn by the charm of the workmanship, reckoned the human honored a little before now an object of reverence.

21 And this became an ambush for life, because humans, enslaved either to misfortune or tyranny, placed the incommunicable name upon stones and wood.

22 Then it was not enough to wander concerning the knowledge of God, but also, living in a great war of ignorance, they call such great evils peace.

23 For conducting either child-murdering rites or secret mysteries or frenzied revels of strange customs,

24 they no longer guard either lives or marriages pure, and one either kills another by ambushing, or pains him by adultery.

25 And blood and murder, theft and deceit, corruption, unfaithfulness, disturbance, perjury hold all things mingled together,

26 tumult of good things, forgetfulness of grace, defilement of souls, alteration of birth, disorder of marriages, adultery and licentiousness.

27 For the worship of nameless idols is a beginning and cause and end of every evil;

28 for either rejoicing, they have gone mad, or prophesy false things, or live unjustly, or swear falsely readily;

29 for trusting in soulless idols, having sworn evilly, they do not expect to be harmed.

30 But justice will pursue them for both things, because they thought evilly concerning God, attending to idols, and swore unjustly in deceit, despising holiness;

31 for it is not the power of those by whom they swear, but the justice of sinners, that always pursues the transgression of the unjust.

Chapter 15

1 But you, our God, are kind and true, long-suffering, and administering all things in mercy.

2 For even if we sin, we are yours, knowing your might; but we will not sin, knowing that we have been reckoned to you.

3 For understanding you is whole righteousness, and knowing your might a root of immortality.

4 For neither did humans' evil-devising invention lead us astray, nor the fruitless toil of shadow-painters, a form stained with varied colors,

5 the sight of which comes to the senseless as desire, and he longs for the breathless form of a dead image.

6 Lovers of evils and worthy of such hopes are both those making them and those longing for them and those revering them.

7 For also a potter, pressing soft earth, laboriously molds each thing for our service; but from the same clay he molded both vessels serving clean works and the opposite ones, all alike; and of these, what the use of each of either sort is, the clay-worker is judge.

8 And laboring evilly, he molds a vain god from the same clay, he who, coming into being from earth a little before, after a little goes to that from which he was taken, having been required to pay the debt of his soul.

9 But his care is not that he is about to die, nor that he has a life ending shortly, but he contends with gold-workers and silver-casters, and imitates bronze-molders, and considers it glory that he molds counterfeit things.

10 His heart is ashes, and his hope cheaper than earth, and his life more dishonored than clay,

11 because he did not know the one molding him, and the one breathing into him a working soul, and breathing in a life-giving spirit,

12 but they reckoned our life to be a game, and living a profitable festival, for he says one must gain from wherever, even from evil.

13 For this man, beyond all, knows that he sins, making easily broken vessels and carved things from earthy matter.

14 And all the enemies of your people, who oppressed it, are most senseless and more wretched than an infant's soul,

15 because they reckoned even all the nations' idols gods, which have neither use of eyes for seeing, nor nostrils for drawing air, nor ears to hear, nor fingers of hands for feeling, and their feet are idle for stepping.

16 For a human made them, and one who has borrowed the spirit molded them; for no human is strong enough to mold a god like himself;

17 but being mortal, he works a dead thing with lawless hands; for he is better than his objects of reverence, in that he indeed lived, but those never. –

18 And they revere the most hateful living beings; for compared in folly, they are worse than the others;

19 nor do they happen to be beautiful enough to be desired, as in the appearance of living beings, but they have also escaped God's praise and his blessing.

Chapter 16

1 Therefore through like things they were punished worthily, and through a multitude of beasts were tortured.

2 Instead of which punishment, benefiting your people, you prepared for the desire of appetite a strange taste as food, a quail,

3 so that those, desiring food, through the hideousness of the things sent upon them, might turn away even necessary appetite, but these, becoming needy for a little time, might share even in a strange taste.

4 For it was necessary that unavoidable want come upon those tyrannizing, but that these only be shown how their enemies were tortured.

5 For also when a dreadful fury of beasts came upon them, and they were being destroyed by bites of crooked serpents, your anger did not remain to the end;

6 but for admonition they were troubled for a little time, having a token of salvation for remembrance of the commandment of your law;

7 for the one turning was saved not through what was beheld, but through you, the Savior of all.

8 And by this too you persuaded our enemies that you are the one rescuing from every evil;

9 for bites of locusts and flies killed those, and no healing was found for their soul, because they were worthy to be punished by such things;

10 but not even teeth of venomous dragons overcame your sons, for your mercy came against them and healed them.

11 For they were stung for a reminder of your oracles, and were swiftly saved, so that, falling into deep forgetfulness, they might not become withdrawn from your beneficence.

12 For neither herb nor poultice healed them, but your word, Lord, which heals all.

13 For you have authority over life and death, and bring down into gates of Hades, and bring up;

14 and a human indeed kills by his wickedness, but does not turn back a spirit that has gone out, nor release a soul taken away.

15 But to flee your hand is impossible;

16 for ungodly men, denying knowing you, were scourged in the strength of your arm, pursued by strange rains and hails and unavoidable showers, and consumed by fire.

17 For the most unexpected thing—in water which extinguishes all, the fire worked more, for the world fights for the righteous;

18 for at one time a flame was tamed, so that it might not burn up the living beings sent against the ungodly, but that they themselves, seeing, might know that they are driven by God's judgment;

19 and at another time, even amid water, it burns beyond fire's power, so that it may destroy an unjust land's produce.

20 Instead of these things, you fed your people angels' food, and provided them ready bread from heaven without toil, capable of every pleasure and suited to every taste;

21 for your substance manifested your sweetness toward children, and, serving the desire of the one taking it, it was transformed into whatever someone wished.

22 And snow and ice endured fire and were not melted, so that they might know that fire destroyed the enemies' fruits, burning in the hail and flashing in the rains;

23 but this again, so that righteous ones might be nourished, has forgotten even its own power.

24 For creation, serving you who made it, is intensified for punishment against the unjust, and relaxed for beneficence on behalf of those who have trusted in you.

25 Therefore also then, being altered into all things, it served your all-nourishing gift according to the will of those needing it,

26 so that your sons, whom you loved, Lord, might learn that it is not the origins of fruits that nourish a human, but your word preserves those believing you.

27 For that which was not destroyed by fire, simply being warmed by a short ray of sun, melted,

28 so that it might be known that one must anticipate the sun for thanksgiving to you, and petition you toward the rising of light;

29 for an ungrateful man's hope will melt like wintry frost, and flow like useless water.

Chapter 17

1 For your judgments are great and difficult to recount; therefore undisciplined souls were led astray.

2 For lawless men, supposing they could oppress a holy nation, lay as prisoners of darkness and captives of a long night, shut beneath roofs, fugitives from everlasting providence.

3 For, thinking to escape notice in secret sins beneath a lightless covering of forgetfulness, they were scattered, terribly astonished, and disturbed by apparitions.

4 For neither did the recess holding them guard them without fear, but sounds disturbing them resounded around them, and gloomy phantoms with unsmiling faces appeared.

5 And no force of fire prevailed to illuminate, nor did bright flames of stars endure to light that gloomy night.

6 But only a spontaneous blaze full of fear shone through for them, and, greatly terrified, they considered the things seen worse than that sight not beheld.

7 And mockeries of magical skill lay low, and an insulting exposure of boastfulness concerning prudence;

8 for those promising to drive away terrors and disturbances of a sick soul, these were sick with a laughable apprehension.

9 For even if nothing disturbing frightened them, scared away by beasts passing and creeping things hissing, they perished trembling, refusing even to look upon the air, which can be fled from nowhere.

10 For wickedness, condemned by its own witness, is a timid thing, and, held fast by conscience, has always taken on harsh things;

11 for fear is nothing except a betrayal of the helps from reasoning,

12 and expectation, being weaker within, reckons ignorance greater than the cause providing the torture.

13 But those, sleeping the same sleep through the truly powerless night which also came from the recesses of powerless Hades,

14 were at one time driven by marvels of phantoms, and at another paralyzed by betrayal of the soul; for sudden and unexpected fear was poured upon them.

15 Then thus, whoever indeed was there, falling down, was guarded, shut in the prison without iron;

16 for whether someone was a farmer or shepherd or worker of labors in solitude, overtaken, he endured the necessity difficult to escape, for all were bound with one chain of darkness;

17 whether a hissing wind, or a melodious sound of birds about luxuriant branches, or the rhythm of water going violently, or a harsh crash of rocks hurled down,

18 or an unseen running of leaping living beings, or a voice of roaring, harshest beasts, or an echo reflected from a hollow of mountains, frightening them greatly, paralyzed them.

19 For the whole world was lit by radiant light, and held fast by unhindered works;

20 but upon those alone a heavy night was spread, an image of the darkness about to receive them, and to themselves they were heavier than darkness.

Chapter 18

1 But for your holy ones there was greatest light; hearing their voice but not seeing their form, they pronounced them blessed because those too had not suffered,

2 and because, previously wronged, they do not harm, they gave thanks, and begged favor for the difference.

3 Instead of these things, you provided a pillar burning with fire, a guide of an unknown journey, and a harmless sun of an honorable sojourn abroad.

4 For those were worthy to be deprived of light and imprisoned in darkness, who guarded your sons shut in, through whom the incorruptible light of law was about to be given to the world.

5 And when they planned to kill the infants of the holy ones, and one child was exposed and saved, for reproof you took away their multitude of children, and destroyed them together in violent water.

6 That night was foreknown by our fathers, so that, knowing securely the oaths which they trusted, they might be encouraged.

7 Salvation of righteous ones, and destruction of enemies, was awaited by your people;

8 for by that with which you punished the adversaries, by this you glorified us, calling us to yourself.

9 For in secret holy children of good men sacrificed, and in agreement established the law of divinity, that the holy ones would share alike in the same good things and dangers, already singing beforehand the fathers' praises.

10 And the discordant shout of enemies echoed back, and a pitiable voice of lamented children was carried abroad;

11 and with like justice a slave was punished together with a master, and a commoner suffered the same things as a king,

12 and all together, under one name of death, had uncountable dead; for neither were the living sufficient for burying, since at one tipping their more honored offspring had been destroyed.

13 For disbelieving all things because of the sorceries, at the destruction of the firstborn they acknowledged the people to be God's son.

14 For while quiet silence encompassed all things, and night in its own swiftness was at its middle,

15 your all-powerful word leaped from heavens, from royal thrones, a severe warrior, into the midst of the doomed land, carrying your unhypocritical command as a sharp sword,

16 and, standing, filled all things with death, and indeed touched heaven, but stood upon earth.

17 Then immediately visions of dreadful dreams disturbed them, and unexpected fears came upon them,

18 and one here, another there, flung half-dead, disclosed the cause through which they were dying;

19 for the dreams troubling them indicated this beforehand, so that they might not perish ignorant of that through which they suffer evilly.

20 And an experience of death touched even the righteous, and a breaking of a multitude occurred in a wilderness. But the anger did not remain for long;

21 for a blameless man, hastening, fought for them, bringing the weapon of his own service, prayer and propitiation of incense; he stood against the wrath, and placed an end to the misfortune, showing that he is your attendant;

22 and he overcame the anger not by bodily strength, not by the working of weapons, but by a word subjected the punisher, reminding him of fathers' oaths and covenants.

23 For when dead men had already fallen in heaps upon one another, standing between, he cut off the anger, and severed the way toward the living.

24 For upon a robe reaching the feet was the whole world, and fathers' glories upon a carving of stones in four rows, and your majesty upon the diadem of his head.

25 To these the destroyer yielded, and these he feared; for the experience of the anger alone was sufficient.

Chapter 19

1 But upon the ungodly merciless wrath came to the end; for he also foreknew their future things,

2 that they themselves, permitting departure and sending them forth eagerly, would pursue them, having changed their minds.

3 For still holding their griefs in their hands, and lamenting at graves of the dead, they drew upon themselves another reasoning of folly, and those whom, supplicating, they expelled, these they pursued as fugitives.

4 For deserving necessity drew them to this end, and cast in forgetfulness of the things that had happened, so that they might further complete the punishment lacking to the tortures,

5 and your people might experience an unexpected journey, but those find a strange death.

6 For the whole creation in its own kind was again shaped anew, serving your commands, so that your servants might be guarded unharmed.

7 The cloud overshadowing the camp, and an emergence of dry land from previously existing water was beheld, an unhindered way from a red sea, and a grass-bearing plain from a violent surge;

8 through which those sheltered by your hand passed as an entire nation, beholding wondrous marvels.

9 For like horses they grazed, and like lambs leaped about, praising you, Lord, who rescued them.

10 For they still remembered the things in their sojourn, how instead of the birth of living beings the earth brought forth a gnat, and instead of aquatic beings the river belched forth a multitude of frogs.

11 And later they also saw a new birth of birds, when, led on by desire, they asked for foods of luxury;

12 for as consolation a quail came up for them from sea.

13 And the punishments came upon sinners not without the preceding proofs in the violence of thunderbolts; for they suffered righteously for their own wickednesses, for they also practiced harsher hatred of strangers.

14 For the former did not receive the unknown ones present; but these enslaved strangers who were benefactors.

15 And not only this, but indeed there will be some inspection of them, since they received the outsiders hatefully;

16 but those receiving with festivities the ones who had already shared the same rights afflicted them with dreadful toils.

17 And they were also struck with blindness, like those at the righteous man's doors, when, clothed in gaping darkness, each sought the passage of his own doors.

18 For the elements, being retuned through one another, as notes in a psaltery change the name of the rhythm, always remaining in sound, which it is possible to conjecture precisely from the sight of the things that have happened;

19 for land beings were changed into aquatic beings, and swimming beings went upon earth;

20 fire prevailed in water with its own power, and water forgot its extinguishing nature;

21 conversely, flames did not wither the flesh of easily destroyed living beings walking among them, nor the meltable, ice-like, easily melted kind of ambrosial food.

22 For in all things, Lord, you magnified your people, and glorified them, and did not overlook them, standing beside them in every time and place.

Sirach

Chapter 0

1 Many and great things having been given to us through the law and the prophets

2 and the others who have followed in their manner,

3 for which it is necessary to praise Israel for discipline and wisdom,

4 and since it is necessary that not only the readers themselves become knowledgeable,

5 but also that those loving learning be able to be useful to those outside,

6 both speaking and writing,

7 my grandfather Iesous, having given himself more fully

8 to the reading of the law

9 and of the prophets

10 and of the other ancestral books,

11 and having acquired sufficient proficiency in these,

12 was led himself also to write something of the things pertaining to discipline and wisdom,

13 so that those loving learning, becoming engaged in these things also,

14 might advance much more through lawful living.

15 Therefore you have been exhorted

16 with goodwill and attention

17 to do the reading,

18 and to have forgiveness

19 for the things in which we may seem,

20 in some of the expressions labored over in the translation, to be unable;

21 for they do not have equal force,

22 the things themselves said in Hebrew in themselves, and when transferred into another tongue;

23 and not only these things,

24 but also the law itself and the prophecies

25 and the rest of the books

26 have no small difference when said in themselves.

27 For in the thirty-eighth year under King Euergetes,

28 having arrived in Egypt and spent time there,

29 finding a likeness of no little discipline,

30 I considered it most necessary myself also to bring some zeal and diligence to translate this book,

31 bringing much wakefulness and knowledge

32 in the interval of time,

33 in order, having brought the book to an end, to publish it,

34 and for those in the sojourn wishing to love learning,

35 preparing their characters beforehand,

36 to live lawfully.

Chapter 1

1 All wisdom is from the Lord, and is with him for the age.

2 Who will count the sand of seas and drops of rain and days of an age?

3 Who will trace heaven's height and earth's breadth and an abyss and wisdom?

4 Wisdom has been created prior to all things, and understanding of prudence from an age.

6 To whom was wisdom's root revealed? And who knew her skillful deeds?

8 One is wise, exceedingly fearsome, seated upon his throne.

9 The Lord himself created her, and saw and counted her, and poured her out upon all his works,

10 with all flesh according to his giving, and supplied her to those loving him.

11 Fear of the Lord is glory and boasting and gladness and a crown of exultation.

12 Fear of the Lord will delight a heart, and give gladness and joy and length of days.

13 For the one fearing the Lord it will be well at the last, and on the day of his end he will be blessed.

14 A beginning of wisdom is fearing the Lord, and with faithful ones she was created together for them in a womb.

15 Among humans she nested an everlasting foundation, and with their seed she will be entrusted.

16 Fullness of wisdom is fearing the Lord, and she makes them drunk from her fruits;

17 she will fill their whole house with desirable things, and the storehouses with her produce.

18 A crown of wisdom is fear of the Lord, making peace and health of healing flourish.

19 And he saw and counted her; he showered knowledge and understanding of comprehension, and raised the glory of those holding her.

20 A root of wisdom is fearing the Lord, and her branches are length of days.

22 Unjust wrath will not be able to be justified; for the tipping of his wrath is a fall for him.

23 A long-suffering man will hold fast until a time, and afterward gladness will spring up for him;

24 until a time he will hide his words, and lips of many will recount his understanding.

25 In treasures of wisdom are parables of knowledge, but reverence for God is an abomination to a sinner.

26 Desiring wisdom, preserve commandments, and the Lord will supply her to you.

27 For wisdom and discipline are fear of the Lord, and his good pleasure is faith and meekness.

28 Do not disobey fear of the Lord, and do not approach him with a double heart.

29 Do not act hypocritically in humans' mouths, and attend to your lips.

30 Do not exalt yourself, so that you may not fall and bring dishonor upon your soul; and the Lord will uncover your hidden things, and cast you down in the midst of an assembly, because you did not approach in fear of the Lord, and your heart is full of deceit.

Chapter 2

1 Child, if you approach to serve the Lord, prepare your soul for testing;

2 make your heart straight, and endure, and do not hasten in a time of affliction;

3 cling to him, and do not depart, so that you may be increased at your last things.

4 Receive everything which may be brought upon you, and be long-suffering in changes of your humiliation;

5 because gold is tested in fire, and acceptable humans in a furnace of humiliation.

6 Believe him, and he will help you; make your ways straight, and hope in him.

7 You who fear the Lord, await his mercy, and do not turn aside, so that you may not fall.

8 You who fear the Lord, believe him, and your wage will certainly not fail.

9 You who fear the Lord, hope for good things and for gladness of an age and mercy.

10 Look into ancient generations and see; who trusted in the Lord and was put to shame? Or who remained in his fear and was abandoned? Or who called upon him, and he overlooked him?

11 Because the Lord is compassionate and merciful, and forgives sins and saves in a time of affliction.

12 Woe to timid hearts and slack hands and a sinner stepping upon two paths.

13 Woe to a slack heart, because it does not believe; therefore it will not be sheltered.

14 Woe to you who have lost endurance; and what will you do when the Lord inspects?

15 Those fearing the Lord will not disobey his words, and those loving him will keep his ways.

16 Those fearing the Lord will seek his good pleasure, and those loving him will be filled with the law.

17 Those fearing the Lord will prepare their hearts, and humble their souls before him.

18 We will fall into the Lord's hands, and not into humans' hands; for as his majesty is, so also is his mercy.

Chapter 3

1 Hear me, the father, children, and do thus, so that you may be saved;

2 for the Lord glorified a father over children, and confirmed a mother's judgment over sons.

3 The one honoring a father makes atonement for sins,

4 and the one glorifying his mother is like the one storing treasure.

5 The one honoring a father will be gladdened by children, and will be heard on the day of his prayer.

6 The one glorifying a father will have long days, and the one hearing the Lord will give his mother rest;

7 and he will serve those who begot him as masters.

8 In deed and word honor your father, so that a blessing from him may come upon you;

9 for a father's blessing establishes children's houses, but a mother's curse uproots foundations.

10 Do not be glorified in your father's dishonor, for a father's dishonor is no glory for you;

11 for a human's glory comes from his father's honor, and a mother in disrepute is a reproach to children.

12 Child, help your father in old age, and do not grieve him in his life;

13 and even if he fails in understanding, have forgiveness, and do not dishonor him in all your strength.

14 For mercy toward a father will not be forgotten, and will be built up for you instead of sins.

15 In the day of your affliction you will be remembered; as fair weather upon frost, so your sins will be dissolved.

16 The one abandoning a father is like a blasphemer, and the one angering his mother has been accursed by the Lord.

17 Child, conduct your works in meekness, and you will be loved by an acceptable human.

18 As great as you are, so much humble yourself, and before the Lord you will find grace;

20 because the Lord's dominion is great, and he is glorified by the humble.

21 Do not seek things harder than you, and do not examine things stronger than you;

22 what was commanded you, consider these things, for you have no need of hidden things.

23 Do not meddle in things beyond your works; for things greater than humans' understanding were shown you.

24 For their supposition led many astray, and an evil suspicion made their thoughts slip.

26 A hard heart will be afflicted at the last, and the one loving danger will perish in it.

27 A hard heart will be burdened with toils, and the sinner will add sin upon sins.

28 For an arrogant man's affliction there is no healing; for a plant of wickedness has taken root in him.

29 An understanding man's heart will consider a parable, and a hearer's ear is a wise man's desire.

30 Water will extinguish a flaming fire, and almsgiving will make atonement for sins.

31 The one repaying favors remembers for the things after these, and in the time of his fall will find support.

Chapter 4

1 Child, do not deprive the poor man's life, and do not delay needy eyes.

2 Do not grieve a hungry soul, and do not anger a man in his want.

3 Do not further trouble an angered heart, and do not delay a gift to one needing it.

4 Do not refuse an afflicted suppliant, and do not turn your face away from a poor man.

5 Do not turn an eye away from one begging, and do not give a human a place to curse you;

6 for when he curses you in bitterness of his soul, the one who made him will hear his entreaty.

7 Make yourself beloved by an assembly, and humble your head before a great man.

8 Incline your ear to a poor man, and answer him peaceable things in meekness.

9 Deliver one wronged from the hand of one wronging, and do not lose heart when you judge.

10 Become like a father to orphans, and in place of a husband to their mother; and you will be like a son of the Most High, and he will love you more than your mother.

11 Wisdom raised her sons, and takes hold of those seeking her.

12 The one loving her loves life, and those rising early for her will be filled with gladness.

13 The one holding her will inherit glory, and where he enters, the Lord blesses.

14 Those serving her will minister to a holy one, and the Lord loves those loving her.

15 The one obeying her will judge nations, and the one attending to her will dwell confidently.

16 If he trusts, he will inherit her, and his generations will be in possession;

17 because at first she will walk with him crookedly, bring fear and timidity upon him, and torment him with her discipline, until she trusts his soul, and will test him with her ordinances;

18 and again she will return straight toward him, and gladden him, and reveal her hidden things to him.

19 If he wanders away, she will abandon him, and deliver him into the hands of his fall.

20 Keep a time, and guard yourself from evil, and do not be ashamed concerning your soul;

21 for there is shame bringing sin, and there is shame which is glory and grace.

22 Do not accept a face against your soul, and do not show deference to your fall.

23 Do not withhold a word in a time of need;

24 for in a word wisdom will be known, and discipline in an utterance of a tongue.

25 Do not contradict the truth, and be ashamed concerning your lack of discipline.

26 Do not be ashamed to confess your sins, and do not force a river's flow.

27 And do not lay yourself beneath a foolish human, and do not accept a ruler's face.

28 Struggle for the truth until death, and the Lord God will fight for you.

29 Do not become bold in your tongue, and sluggish and slack in your works.

30 Do not be like a lion in your house, and creating terrors among your household servants.

31 Let your hand not be stretched out for receiving, and drawn in when repaying.

Chapter 5

1 Do not rely upon your wealth, and do not say, It is sufficient for me.

2 Do not follow your soul and your strength to walk in your heart's desires;

3 and do not say, Who will rule me? For the Lord, avenging, will avenge.

4 Do not say, I sinned, and what happened to me? For the Lord is long-suffering.

5 Concerning atonement, do not become fearless to add sin upon sins;

6 and do not say, His compassion is great; he will make atonement for the multitude of my sins; for mercy and anger are with him, and his wrath will rest upon sinners.

7 Do not wait to turn to the Lord, and do not postpone from day to day; for suddenly the Lord's anger will come forth, and in a time of vengeance you will perish.

8 Do not rely upon unjust wealth; for it will benefit you nothing in a day of affliction.

9 Do not winnow in every wind, and do not walk in every path; thus is the double-tongued sinner.

10 Be established in your understanding, and let your word be one.

11 Become swift in your hearing, and utter an answer in long-suffering.

12 If you have understanding, answer your neighbor; but if not, let your hand be upon your mouth.

13 Glory and dishonor are in speech, and a human's tongue is a fall for him.

14 Do not be called a whisperer, and do not lie in wait with your tongue; for shame is upon the thief, and evil condemnation upon the double-tongued.

15 In great and in small do not be ignorant, and instead of a friend do not become an enemy; for an evil name will inherit shame and reproach; thus is the double-tongued sinner.

Chapter 6

1 And instead of a friend do not become an enemy; for an evil name will inherit shame and reproach; thus is the double-tongued sinner.

2 Do not exalt yourself in your soul's counsel, so that your soul may not be torn apart like a bull;

3 you will devour your leaves and destroy your fruits, and leave yourself like a dry tree.

4 An evil soul will destroy the one acquiring it, and make him a delight of enemies.

5 A sweet throat will multiply its friends, and a well-speaking tongue will multiply friendly greetings.

6 Let those at peace with you be many, but your counselors one out of a thousand.

7 If you acquire a friend, acquire him in testing, and do not trust him swiftly.

8 For there is a friend in his own time, and he will certainly not remain in the day of your affliction.

9 And there is a friend changing into enmity, and he will reveal a quarrel for your reproach.

10 And there is a friend sharing tables, and he will certainly not remain in the day of your affliction;

11 and in your good things he will be like you, and speak boldly to your household servants;

12 if you are humbled, he will be against you, and hide from your face.

13 Separate yourself from your enemies, and be attentive concerning your friends.

14 A faithful friend is a strong shelter, and the one finding him found a treasure.

15 There is no exchange for a faithful friend, and no weight of his beauty.

16 A faithful friend is a medicine of life, and those fearing the Lord will find him.

17 The one fearing the Lord will make his friendship straight, because according to himself, so also is his neighbor.

18 Child, from your youth choose discipline, and until gray hairs you will find wisdom.

19 Like the one plowing and the one sowing, approach her, and await her good fruits; for in her work you will labor a little, and swiftly eat of her produce.

20 How exceedingly harsh she is to the undisciplined, and a fainthearted man will not remain in her;

21 like a strong testing stone she will be upon him, and he will not delay to cast her away.

22 For wisdom is according to her name, and is not manifest to many.

23 Hear, child, and receive my judgment, and do not refuse my counsel;

24 and bring your feet into her fetters, and your neck into her collar;

25 put your shoulder beneath her and carry her, and do not be vexed with her bonds;

26 with all your soul approach her, and with your whole power keep her ways;

27 trace and seek, and she will be known to you, and having taken hold, do not let her go;

28 for at the last you will find her rest, and she will turn into gladness for you;

29 and the fetters will be for you a shelter of strength, and her collars a robe of glory.

30 For a golden adornment is upon her, and her bonds are hyacinth-colored thread;

31 you will put her on as a robe of glory, and place a crown of exultation upon yourself.

32 If you will, child, you will be disciplined, and if you give your soul, you will be skillful;

33 if you love hearing, you will receive, and if you incline your ear, you will be wise.

34 Stand among a multitude of elders; and who is wise? Cling to him.

35 Wish to hear every divine account, and let no proverbs of understanding escape you.

36 If you see an understanding man, rise early to him, and let your foot wear away the steps of his doors.

37 Consider the Lord's ordinances, and meditate in his commandments continually; he himself will establish your heart, and the desire of wisdom will be given you.

Chapter 7

1 Do not do evils, and evil will certainly not overtake you;

2 depart from injustice, and it will turn away from you.

3 Son, do not sow upon furrows of injustice, and you will certainly not reap them sevenfold.

4 Do not seek leadership from the Lord, nor a seat of glory from a king.

5 Do not justify yourself before the Lord, and do not display wisdom before a king.

6 Do not seek to become a judge, lest you be unable to remove injustices, lest you become wary before a ruler's face, and place a stumbling block in your uprightness.

7 Do not sin against a city's multitude, and do not cast yourself down in a crowd.

8 Do not bind sin twice; for even in the one you will not be innocent.

9 Do not say, He will look upon the multitude of my gifts, and when I offer to God Most High, he will accept.

10 Do not lose heart in your prayer, and do not overlook doing almsgiving.

11 Do not laugh at a human who is in bitterness of his soul; for there is one who humbles and raises.

12 Do not plow a lie against your brother, nor do the like to a friend.

13 Do not wish to lie any lie; for persistence in it is not for good.

14 Do not chatter in a multitude of elders, and do not repeat a word in your prayer.

15 Do not hate laborious work and farming, created by the Most High.

16 Do not number yourself among a multitude of sinners; remember that anger will not delay.

17 Humble your soul exceedingly, because vengeance upon an ungodly man is fire and a worm.

18 Do not exchange a friend for gain, nor a true brother for gold of Souphir.

19 Do not miss a wise and good wife; for her grace is above gold.

20 Do not afflict a household servant working in truth, nor a hired man giving his soul;

21 let your soul love an understanding household servant; do not deprive him of freedom.

22 Do you have cattle? Inspect them; and if they are useful to you, let them remain with you.

23 Do you have children? Discipline them, and bend their neck from youth.

24 Do you have daughters? Attend to their body, and do not make your face cheerful toward them.

25 Give a daughter in marriage, and you will have completed a great work, and give her to an understanding man.

26 Do you have a wife according to your soul? Do not cast her out; and do not entrust yourself to one hated.

27 With your whole heart glorify your father, and do not forget your mother's birth-pains;

28 remember that through them you were born, and what will you repay them as they did for you?

29 With your whole soul revere the Lord, and admire his priests.

30 With your whole power love the one who made you, and do not abandon his ministers.

31 Fear the Lord and glorify a priest, and give him the portion, as you have been commanded, firstfruit and that concerning transgression, and a gift of shoulders, and a sacrifice of sanctification, and firstfruit of holy things.

32 And stretch out your hand to a poor man, so that your blessing may be perfected.

33 Let the grace of a gift be before every living one, and do not withhold grace upon a dead one.

34 Do not fail those weeping, and mourn with those mourning.

35 Do not hesitate to inspect a sick human; for from such things you will be loved.

36 In all your words remember your last things, and you will not sin for the age.

Chapter 8

1 Do not battle with a powerful human, lest you fall into his hands.

2 Do not quarrel with a rich human, lest he oppose your weight; for gold destroyed many and turned aside kings' hearts.

3 Do not battle with a talkative human, and do not heap wood upon his fire.

4 Do not jest with an undisciplined man, so that your ancestors may not be dishonored.

5 Do not reproach a human turning away from sin; remember that we all are under penalties.

6 Do not dishonor a human in his old age; for some of us too grow old.

7 Do not rejoice over a dead one; remember that we all die.

8 Do not overlook an account of wise ones, and move among their proverbs; because from them you will learn discipline, and to minister to great men.

9 Do not miss an account of elders, for they too learned from their fathers; because from them you will learn understanding, and to give an answer in a time of need.

10 Do not kindle a sinner's coals, lest you be burned in the fire of his flame.

11 Do not rise up before an insolent man's face, so that he may not sit as an ambush for your mouth.

12 Do not lend to a human stronger than you; and if you lend, become as one who has lost it.

13 Do not stand surety beyond your power; and if you stand surety, consider yourself as one who will repay.

14 Do not litigate with a judge; for according to his opinion they will judge for him.

15 Do not walk on a way with a reckless man, so that he may not become burdensome against you; for he himself will do according to his will, and you will perish together with his senselessness.

16 Do not make a quarrel with a wrathful man, and do not traverse the wilderness with him; because blood is as nothing in his eyes, and where there is no help, he will cast you down.

17 Do not take counsel with a fool; for he will not be able to keep a word.

18 Do not do a hidden thing before a stranger; for you do not know what he will bring forth.

19 Do not disclose your heart to every human, and let him not render you favor.

Chapter 9

1 Do not be jealous of the wife of your bosom, nor teach evil discipline against yourself.

2 Do not give your soul to a woman for her to step upon your strength.

3 Do not meet a woman prostituting herself, lest you fall into her snares.

4 Do not linger with a woman playing music, lest you be caught in her attempts.

5 Do not observe a virgin closely, lest you stumble in her penalties.

6 Do not give your soul to prostitutes, so that you may not destroy your inheritance.

7 Do not look around in streets of a city, and do not wander in its deserted places.

8 Turn an eye away from a beautiful woman, and do not observe another's beauty closely; many were led astray by a woman's beauty, and from this affection is kindled like fire.

9 Do not sit at all with a married woman, and do not feast together with her over wine, lest your soul incline toward her, and in your spirit you slip into destruction.

10 Do not abandon an old friend, for a recent one is not equal to him; new wine is a new friend; if it grows old, you will drink it with gladness.

11 Do not envy a sinner's glory; for you do not know what his downfall will be.

12 Do not delight in the good fortune of the ungodly; remember that until Hades they will certainly not be justified.

13 Keep far away from a human who has authority to murder, and you will certainly not suspect fear of death; and even if you approach, do not transgress, so that he may not take away your life; recognize that you cross amid snares, and walk upon a city's battlements.

14 According to your strength, appraise those near you, and take counsel with wise ones.

15 Let your reasoning be with understanding ones, and all your account in the Most High's law.

16 Let righteous men be your fellow diners, and let your boasting be in fear of the Lord.

17 A work will be praised in craftsmen's hands, and a people's leader is wise in his word.

18 A talkative man is fearsome in his city, and the rash in his word will be hated.

Chapter 10

1 A wise judge will discipline his people, and an understanding man's leadership will be ordered.

2 According to the people's judge, so also are his ministers, and according to the city's leader, all its inhabitants.

3 An undisciplined king will destroy his people, and a city will be inhabited in rulers' understanding.

4 The earth's authority is in the Lord's hand, and he will raise the useful one over it at a time.

5 A man's prosperity is in the Lord's hand, and upon a scribe's face he will place his glory.

6 Do not be wrathful with your neighbor for every wrong, and do nothing in works of insolence.

7 Arrogance is hateful before the Lord and humans, and injustice is offensive to both.

8 A kingdom is transferred from nation to nation through injustices and insults and wealth.

9 Why are earth and ashes arrogant? Because in life I cast out his inward parts.

10 A long sickness, a physician mocks; and a king today, and tomorrow he will die.

11 For when a human dies, he will inherit creeping things and beasts and worms.

12 A beginning of human arrogance is departing from the Lord, and his heart departed from the one making him.

13 Because a beginning of arrogance is sin, and the one holding it will shower an abomination; therefore the Lord made the afflictions extraordinary, and overturned them to the end.

14 The Lord took down rulers' thrones, and seated meek ones in their place;

15 the Lord plucked out nations' roots, and planted humble ones in their place;

16 the Lord overturned nations' lands, and destroyed them to earth's foundations;

17 he removed from them and destroyed them, and caused their memorial to cease from earth.

18 Arrogance has not been created for humans, nor anger of wrath for women's offspring.

19 What seed is honored? A human's seed. What seed is honored? Those fearing the Lord. What seed is dishonored? A human's seed. What seed is dishonored? Those transgressing commandments.

20 Among brothers their leader is honored, and those fearing the Lord in his eyes.

22 Rich and glorious and poor—their boasting is fear of the Lord.

23 It is not righteous to dishonor an understanding poor man, and it is not fitting to glorify a sinful man.

24 A great man and judge and ruler will be glorified, and none of them is greater than the one fearing the Lord.

25 Free men will minister to a wise household servant, and a knowledgeable man will not grumble.

26 Do not display wisdom in doing your work, and do not be glorified in a time of your distress.

27 Better is one working and abounding in all things than one walking about glorified and lacking bread.

28 Child, in meekness glorify your soul, and give it honor according to its worth.

29 Who will justify the one sinning against his soul? And who will glorify the one dishonoring his life?

30 A poor man is glorified through his knowledge, and a rich man is glorified through his wealth.

31 The one glorified in poverty, how much more in wealth? And the one without glory in wealth, how much more in poverty?

Chapter 11

1 A humble man's wisdom will raise his head, and seat him among great men.

2 Do not praise a man in his beauty, and do not abhor a human in his appearance.

3 A bee is small among flying things, and its fruit is first among sweet things.

4 Do not boast in clothing of garments, and do not exalt yourself in a day of glory; because the Lord's works are wondrous, and his works hidden from humans.

5 Many tyrants sat upon ground, but the unsuspected one wore a diadem.

6 Many rulers were exceedingly dishonored, and glorious ones were delivered into others' hands.

7 Before you examine, do not blame; understand first, and then rebuke.

8 Before hearing, do not answer, and do not interrupt amid words.

9 Do not quarrel concerning a matter of which you have no need, and do not sit together in sinners' judgment.

10 Child, let your actions not be concerning many things; if you multiply them, you will not be acquitted; and if you pursue, you will certainly not overtake; and you will certainly not escape by running away.

11 There is one laboring and toiling and hastening, and so much more he is lacking.

12 There is a sluggish man needing help, lacking strength and abounding in poverty; and the Lord's eyes looked upon him for good things, and he raised him from his humiliation, 13 and raised his head, and many marveled at him.

14 Good things and evils, life and death, poverty and wealth are from the Lord.

17 The Lord's gift remains with the pious, and his good pleasure will prosper for the age.

18 There is one becoming rich from his attention and tightness, and this is the portion of his wage;

19 when he says, I found rest, and now I will eat of my good things, and he does not know what time will pass, and he will leave them to others and die.

20 Stand in your covenant and occupy yourself with it, and grow old in your work.

21 Do not marvel at a sinner's works, but believe the Lord and remain in your toil; because it is easy in the Lord's eyes to make a needy man rich swiftly, suddenly.

22 The Lord's blessing is in a pious man's wage, and in a swift hour he makes his blessing flourish.

23 Do not say, What is my need, and what will my good things be from now?

24 Do not say, I have sufficient things, and what harm will I suffer from now?

25 In a day of good things there is forgetfulness of evils, and in a day of evils he will not remember good things;

26 because it is easy before the Lord on a day of an end to repay a human according to his ways.

27 Affliction of an hour makes forgetfulness of luxury, and at a human's completion is a revelation of his works.

28 Before an end pronounce no one blessed, and a man will be known in his children.

29 Do not bring every human into your house; for the deceitful man's ambushes are many.

30 A hunting partridge in a basket—thus is an arrogant man's heart, and like the spy he watches a fall;

31 for turning good things into evils, he lies in wait, and upon choice things will place blame.

32 From a spark of fire a bed of coals multiplies, and a sinful human lies in wait for blood.

33 Be attentive concerning an evildoer, for he devises wicked things, lest he give you blame for the age.

34 House a stranger, and he will twist you in disturbances, and estrange you from your own things.

Chapter 12

1 If you do good, know to whom you do it, and there will be gratitude for your good things.

2 Do good to a pious man, and you will find repayment, and if not from him, then from the Most High.

3 There will be no good things for the one persisting in evils, and for the one not granting almsgiving.

4 Give to the pious man, and do not help the sinner.

5 Do good to a humble man, and do not give to an ungodly man; hinder his bread, and do not give him, so that by it he may not rule you; for you will find double evils in all good things which you may do for him.

6 Because the Most High also hated sinners, and will repay vengeance to the ungodly.

7 Give to the good man, and do not help the sinner.

8 A friend will not be avenged in good things, and an enemy will not be hidden in evils.

9 In a man's good things his enemies are in sorrow, and in his evils even the friend will separate himself.

10 Do not trust your enemy for the age; for as bronze rusts, so is his wickedness;

11 and if he is humbled and walks bent down, set your soul on guard, and guard yourself from him, and you will be to him like one polishing a mirror, and know that he has not rusted away to the end.

12 Do not stand him beside yourself, lest, overturning you, he stand in your place; do not seat him at your right, lest he seek your seat, and at the last you recognize my words, and be pierced at my utterances.

13 Who will have mercy on an enchanter bitten by a serpent, and all those approaching beasts?

14 Thus also on the one approaching a sinful man, and mingling in his sins.

15 For an hour he will remain with you, and if you turn aside, he will certainly not endure.

16 And with his lips the enemy will sweeten, and in his heart plan to overturn you into a pit; with his eyes the enemy will weep, and if he finds a time, he will not be filled with blood.

17 If evils meet you, you will find him there before you, and as though helping, he will trip your heel;

18 he will shake his head and clap his hands, and whisper many things, and alter his face.

Chapter 13

1 The one touching pitch will be defiled, and the one sharing with an arrogant man will be made like him.

2 Do not lift a weight beyond you, and do not share with one stronger and richer than you. What will an earthen pot share with a cauldron? This will strike against it, and this will be crushed.

3 A rich man did wrong, and he himself further threatened; a poor man has been wronged, and he himself will further entreat.

4 If you are useful, he works with you; and if you lack, he will leave you.

5 If you have, he will live with you and empty you, and he himself will not toil.

6 He has had need of you, and will lead you astray and smile upon you and give you hope; he will speak good things to you, and say, What is your need?

7 And he will shame you with his foods, until he empties you twice or thrice, and at the last mock you; after these things he will see you and leave you, and shake his head at you.

8 Be attentive lest you be led astray, and do not be humbled in your senselessness.

9 When a ruler calls you, become one withdrawing, and so much more he will call you;

10 do not thrust yourself in, lest you be rejected, and do not stand far away, so that you may not be forgotten.

11 Do not insist on speaking with him as an equal, and do not trust his many words; for from much speech he will test you, and as though smiling he will examine you.

12 Merciless is the one not keeping words, and he will certainly not spare concerning affliction and bonds.

13 Keep watch and attend exceedingly, because you walk with your fall.

15 Every living being loves what is like it, and every human his neighbor;

16 all flesh gathers according to kind, and a man will cling to his like.

17 What will a wolf share with a lamb? Thus is a sinner toward a pious man.

18 What peace has a hyena with a dog? And what peace has a rich man with a needy man?

19 Wild asses in a wilderness are lions' prey; thus poor men are rich men's pastures.

20 Humility is an abomination to an arrogant man; thus a poor man is an abomination to a rich man.

21 A rich man shaken is supported by friends, but a humble man fallen is further rejected by friends.

22 When a rich man stumbled, many were helpers; he spoke forbidden things, and they justified him. A humble man stumbled, and they further rebuked him; he uttered understanding, and no place was given him.

23 A rich man spoke, and all were silent, and raised his word to the clouds. A poor man spoke, and they said, Who is this? And if he stumbles, they will further overturn him.

24 Wealth is good in which there is no sin, and poverty is evil in an ungodly man's mouth.

25 A human's heart alters his face, whether for good things or for evils.

26 A trace of a heart in good things is a cheerful face, and finding parables is reasonings with toils.

Chapter 14

1 Blessed is a man who did not slip with his mouth, and was not pierced by sorrow of sins;

2 blessed is he whom his soul did not condemn, and who did not fall from his hope.

3 Wealth is not good for a petty man, and for an envious human, why wealth?

4 The one gathering at his soul's expense gathers for others, and others will live luxuriously in his good things.

5 The one evil to himself, to whom will he be good? And he will certainly not rejoice in his wealth.

6 There is none more evil than the one begrudging himself, and this is repayment of his wickedness;

7 and even if he does good, he does it in forgetfulness, and at the last discloses his wickedness.

8 Evil is the one begrudging with an eye, turning a face away and overlooking souls.

9 A greedy man's eye is not filled with a portion, and evil injustice dries up a soul.

10 An evil eye is envious over bread, and deficient at its table.

11 Child, according as you have, do good to yourself, and bring offerings to the Lord worthily;

12 remember that death will not delay, and a covenant of Hades was not shown you;

13 before you die, do good to a friend, and according to your strength stretch out and give him.

14 Do not deprive yourself of a good day, and let no portion of good desire pass you by.

15 Will you not leave your toils to another, and your labors for division of a lot?

16 Give and take and deceive your soul, because in Hades it is not possible to seek luxury.

17 All flesh grows old like a garment; for the covenant from an age is, By death you will die.

18 Like a leaf flourishing upon a leafy tree, some it casts down, but others it grows, so is a generation of flesh and blood, one dies, but another is born.

19 Every work rotting ceases, and the one working it will depart with it.

20 Blessed is a man who will meditate in wisdom, and who will converse in his understanding,

21 the one considering her ways in his heart, and he will ponder in her hidden things.

22 Go out after her like a tracker, and lie in wait in her ways.

23 The one peering through her windows, and he will listen at her doorways,

24 the one lodging near her house, and he will fix a peg in her walls,

25 will stand his tent beside her hands, and lodge in a lodging of good things,

26 will place his children in her shelter, and lodge beneath her branches,

27 will be sheltered by her from burning heat, and lodge in her glory.

Chapter 15

1 The one fearing the Lord will do it, and the one holding the law will take hold of her;

2 and she will meet him like a mother, and like a wife of virginity receive him;

3 she will feed him bread of understanding, and give him water of wisdom to drink;

4 he will be supported upon her and certainly not incline, and will rely upon her and certainly not be put to shame;

5 and she will exalt him above his neighbors, and open his mouth in the midst of an assembly;

6 he will find gladness and a crown of exultation, and inherit an everlasting name.

7 Humans without understanding will certainly not take hold of her, and sinful men will certainly not see her;

8 she is far from arrogance, and lying men will certainly not remember her.

9 Praise is not beautiful in a sinner's mouth, because it was not sent from the Lord;

10 for praise will be said in wisdom, and the Lord will prosper it.

11 Do not say that, Because of the Lord I departed; for what he hated he will not do.

12 Do not say that, He himself led me astray; for he has no need of a sinful man.

13 The Lord hated every abomination, and it is not beloved by those fearing him.

14 He himself made a human from the beginning, and left him in the hand of his counsel.

15 If you will, you will keep commandments, and to do faithfulness is of good pleasure.

16 He placed fire and water beside you; to whichever you will, you will stretch out your hand.

17 Before humans are life and death, and whatever he may delight in will be given him.

18 Because the Lord's wisdom is great; strong in dominion and seeing all things,

19 and his eyes are upon those fearing him, and he himself will recognize every human's work.

20 He commanded no one to act ungodly, and gave no one license to sin.

Chapter 16

1 Do not desire a multitude of useless children, nor rejoice over ungodly sons;

2 if they multiply, do not rejoice over them, unless fear of the Lord is with them.

3 Do not trust their life, and do not rely upon their multitude; for one is better than a thousand, and to die childless than to have ungodly children.

4 For from one understanding man a city will be populated, but a tribe of lawless men will be laid waste.

5 My eye has seen many such things, and my ear has heard stronger things than these.

6 In an assembly of sinners fire will be kindled, and in a disobedient nation anger was kindled.

7 He did not make atonement concerning the ancient giants, who departed in their strength;

8 he did not spare concerning Lot's sojourn, whom he abhorred through their arrogance;

9 he did not have mercy on a nation of destruction, those lifted up in their sins,

10 and thus six hundred thousand footmen, those gathered together in their hardness of heart.

11 And even if there is one stiff-necked man, it is wondrous if he will be acquitted; for mercy and anger are with him, a ruler of atonements and one pouring out anger.

12 According to his great mercy, so also is his reproof great; he will judge a man according to his works.

13 A sinner will not escape with plunder, and a pious man's endurance will certainly not fall behind.

14 He will make a place for every act of almsgiving; each will find according to his works.

17 Do not say that, I will be hidden from the Lord, and who will remember me from on high? Among a greater people I will certainly not be known, for what is my soul in immeasurable creation?

18 Behold, heaven and the heaven of heaven, abyss and earth will be shaken at his inspection;

19 together the mountains and earth's foundations, when he looks upon them, are shaken together with trembling.

20 And a heart will not consider these things, and who will ponder his ways?

21 And a tempest which a human will not see, and most of his works are in hidden places.

22 Who will announce works of righteousness? Or who will endure? For the covenant is far away.

23 One deficient in heart considers these things, and a senseless and wandering man considers foolish things.

24 Hear me, child, and learn knowledge, and with your heart attend to my words;

25 I will disclose discipline by weight, and announce knowledge with exactness.

26 In the Lord's judgment are his works from the beginning, and from their making he distinguished their portions.

27 He ordered his works for an age, and their beginnings for their generations; neither did they hunger nor labor, and they did not cease from their works;

28 each did not oppress his neighbor, and for an age they will not disobey his word.

29 And after these things the Lord looked upon the earth, and filled it with his good things;

30 with the soul of every living being he covered its face, and into it is their return.

Chapter 17

1 The Lord created a human from earth, and again returned him into it.

2 He gave them numbered days and a time, and gave them authority over the things upon it.

3 According to himself he clothed them with strength, and according to his image made them.

4 He placed his fear upon all flesh, and to master beasts and birds.

6 Counsel and tongue and eyes, ears and heart he gave them to consider.

7 He filled them with knowledge of understanding, and showed them good things and evils.

8 He placed his eye upon their hearts, to show them the greatness of his works,

10 and they will praise a name of sanctification, so that they may recount the great things of his works.

11 He added knowledge to them, and gave them a law of life as inheritance.

12 He established an everlasting covenant with them, and showed them his judgments.

13 Their eyes saw a greatness of glory, and their ear heard glory of his voice.

14 And he said to them, Be attentive against every injustice; and he commanded each of them concerning his neighbor.

15 Their ways are before him continually; they will not be hidden from his eyes.

17 For each nation he appointed a leader, and Israel is the Lord's portion.

19 All their works are like the sun before him, and his eyes continually upon their ways.

20 Their injustices were not hidden from him, and all their sins are before the Lord.

22 A man's almsgiving is like a seal with him, and he will keep a human's kindness like a pupil.

23 After these things he will rise up and repay them, and render their repayment upon their head;

24 yet to those repenting he gave a return, and encouraged those failing in endurance.

25 Turn to the Lord and leave sins, entreat before his face and lessen stumbling;

26 return to the Most High and turn from injustice, and exceedingly hate an abomination.

27 Who will praise the Most High in Hades instead of those living and giving thanksgiving?

28 From a dead one, as from one not even existing, confession perishes; one living and healthy will praise the Lord.

29 How great is the Lord's mercy, and atonement for those turning to him.

30 For not all things can be in humans, because a son of man is not immortal.

31 What is brighter than the sun? And even this fails; and flesh and blood will think evil.

32 He himself inspects the power of heaven's height, and all humans are earth and ashes.

Chapter 18

1 The one living for the age created all things together;

2 the Lord alone will be justified.

4 To no one did he give the ability to declare his works; and who will trace his great things?

5 Who will count the might of his majesty? And who will add to recounting his mercies?

6 It is not possible to lessen or add, and it is not possible to trace the Lord's wondrous things;

7 when a human finishes, then he begins; and when he ceases, then he will be at a loss.

8 What is a human, and what is his use? What is his good, and what his evil?

9 The number of a human's days, many years, is a hundred;

10 like a drop of water from sea and a pebble of sand, so are few years in a day of an age.

11 Therefore the Lord was long-suffering toward them, and poured his mercy upon them.

12 He saw and recognized their downfall, that it is evil; therefore he multiplied his atonement.

13 A human's mercy is upon his neighbor, but the Lord's mercy upon all flesh; reproving and disciplining and teaching and turning back, like a shepherd his flock.

14 He has mercy on those receiving discipline, and those hastening to his judgments.

15 Child, in good things do not give blame, and in every gift sorrow of words.

16 Will dew not give rest from burning heat? Thus a word is better than a gift.

17 Behold, is not a word above a good gift? And both are with a gracious man.

18 A fool will reproach ungraciously, and an envious man's gift wastes away eyes.

19 Before speaking, learn, and before sickness, be treated.

20 Before judgment examine yourself, and in an hour of inspection you will find atonement.

21 Before you become sick, be humbled, and in a time of sins show a turning back.

22 Do not be hindered from repaying a vow at a fitting time, and do not wait until death to be justified.

23 Before praying prepare yourself, and do not become like a human testing the Lord.

24 Remember wrath in days of an end, and a time of vengeance in a turning away of a face.

25 Remember a time of famine in a time of fullness, poverty and want in days of wealth.

26 From morning until evening a time changes, and all things are swift before the Lord.

27 A wise human will be wary in everything, and in days of sins will be attentive against transgression.

28 Every understanding man knew wisdom, and will give praise to the one finding her.

29 Understanding ones in words themselves also became wise, and showered exact proverbs.

30 Do not walk after your desires, and restrain yourself from your appetites;

31 if you supply your soul with the pleasure of desire, it will make you a delight of your enemies.

32 Do not rejoice over much luxury, lest you be bound to its expense.

33 Do not become poor feasting on borrowed money, and you have nothing in a purse.

Chapter 19

1 A drunken worker will not be made rich; the one despising small things will fall little by little.

2 Wine and women will make understanding ones depart, and the one clinging to prostitutes will be more reckless;

3 rot and worms will inherit him, and a reckless soul will be removed.

4 The one trusting swiftly is light in heart, and the one sinning will transgress against his soul.

5 The one rejoicing in heart will be condemned,

6 and the one hating speech is lessened in wickedness.

7 Never repeat a word, and nothing will certainly be diminished for you.

8 With friend and enemy do not recount, and unless it is sin for you, do not disclose;

9 for he has heard you and guarded himself against you, and in a time will hate you.

10 Have you heard a word? Let it die with you; be confident, it will certainly not burst you.

11 Before a word a fool will suffer birth-pains, like a woman giving birth before an infant.

12 An arrow fixed in a thigh of flesh—thus is a word in a fool's belly.

13 Reprove a friend, perhaps he did not do it, and if he did something, lest he add to it.

14 Reprove your neighbor, perhaps he did not say it, and if he has said it, so that he may not repeat it.

15 Reprove a friend, for often slander occurs, and do not believe every word.

16 There is one slipping and not from the soul, and who did not sin with his tongue?

17 Reprove your neighbor before threatening, and give place to the Most High's law.

20 All wisdom is fear of the Lord, and in all wisdom is doing law;

22 and knowledge of wickedness is not wisdom, and there is no prudence where sinners' counsel is.

23 There is cunning, and this is an abomination, and there is a senseless man deficient in wisdom;

24 better is one inferior in understanding, fearful, than one abounding in prudence and transgressing law.

25 There is exact cunning, and this is unjust, and there is one twisting a favor to disclose a judgment.

26 There is one acting wickedly, bent down in gloom, and his inward things full of deceit;

27 hiding a face and choosing to be deaf, where he was not recognized he will forestall you;

28 and if through a deficiency of strength he is hindered from sinning, if he finds a time, he will do evil.

29 A man will be recognized from appearance, and a thoughtful man recognized from the meeting of a face;

30 a man's attire and laughter of teeth and a human's steps will announce the things concerning him.

Chapter 20

1 There is a reproof which is not beautiful, and there is one silent who is himself prudent.

2 How good it is to reprove rather than be wrathful,

3 and the one confessing will be hindered from loss.

4 A eunuch's desire to deprive a young woman of virginity—thus is the one making judgments with force.

5 There is one silent found wise, and there is one hateful from much speech.

6 There is one silent, for he has no answer, and there is one silent knowing a time.

7 A wise human will be silent until a time, but the babbler and senseless man will pass beyond a time.

8 The one abounding in word will be abhorred, and the one exercising authority will be hated.

9 There is prosperity for a man in evils, and there is a finding for loss.

10 There is a gift which will not profit you, and there is a gift whose repayment is double.

11 There is a loss for glory's sake, and there is one who raised a head from humiliation.

12 There is one buying many things for little, and repaying them sevenfold.

13 The wise man in words will make himself beloved, but fools' favors will be poured away.

14 A senseless man's gift will not profit you, for his eyes are many instead of one;

15 he will give little and reproach much, and open his mouth like a herald; today he will lend and tomorrow demand back; such a human is hateful.

16 A fool will say, I have no friend, and there is no gratitude for my good things;

17 those eating his bread are base in tongue; how often and how many will laugh at him?

18 A slip from ground rather than from a tongue; thus a fall of evil ones will come swiftly.

19 An ungracious human, an untimely tale; in mouths of undisciplined ones it will persist.

20 A parable from a fool's mouth will be rejected; for he will certainly not say it in its time.

21 There is one hindered from sinning through want, and in his rest he will not be pierced.

22 There is one destroying his soul through shame, and through a senseless face he will destroy it.

23 There is one promising a friend for shame's sake, and he acquired him as an enemy for nothing.

24 A lie is an evil blemish in a human; in mouths of undisciplined ones it will persist.

25 A thief is preferable to the one persisting in a lie, but both will inherit destruction.

26 A lying human's character is dishonor, and his shame is with him continually.

27 The wise man in words will advance himself, and a prudent human will please great men.

28 The one working earth will raise his heap, and the one pleasing great men will make atonement for injustice.

29 Guest-gifts and gifts blind wise ones' eyes, and like a muzzle in a mouth turn away reproofs.

30 Hidden wisdom and an unseen treasure—what benefit is in both?

31 Better is a human hiding his foolishness than a human hiding his wisdom.

Chapter 21

1 Child, did you sin? Add no longer, and entreat concerning your former things.

2 Flee from sin as from a serpent's face; for if you approach, it will bite you; her teeth are a lion's teeth, destroying humans' souls.

3 All lawlessness is like a two-edged sword; for its wound there is no healing.

4 Terror and insolence will lay wealth waste; thus an arrogant man's house will be laid waste.

5 A poor man's entreaty is from mouth to his ears, and his judgment comes swiftly.

6 The one hating reproof is in a sinner's track, and the one fearing the Lord will turn in heart.

7 The mighty in tongue is known from afar, but the thoughtful man knows when he slips.

8 The one building his house with others' wealth is like one gathering his stones for winter.

9 An assembly of lawless men is gathered tow, and their completion a flame of fire.

10 Sinners' way is smoothed with stones, and at its last is a pit of Hades.

11 The one guarding law masters his thought, and wisdom is completion of fear of the Lord.

12 The one who is not skillful will not be disciplined, but there is cunning multiplying bitterness.

13 A wise man's knowledge will multiply like a flood, and his counsel is like a spring of life.

14 A fool's inward parts are like a broken vessel, and he will not retain any knowledge.

15 If a knowledgeable man hears a wise word, he will praise it and add to it; the prodigal heard, and it displeased him, and he turned it behind his back.

16 A fool's explanation is like a burden on a way, but grace will be found upon an understanding man's lip.

17 A prudent man's mouth will be sought in an assembly, and they will consider his words in heart.

18 As a destroyed house, so is wisdom to a fool, and an uncomprehending man's knowledge is unexamined words.

19 Discipline is fetters upon an unthinking man's feet, and like handcuffs upon a right hand.

20 A fool raises his voice in laughter, but a skillful man will scarcely smile quietly.

21 Discipline is like a golden adornment to a prudent man, and like a bracelet upon a right arm.

22 A fool's foot is swift into a house, but an experienced human will be ashamed before a face.

23 A senseless man peers from a door into a house, but a disciplined man will stand outside.

24 It is a human's lack of discipline to listen beside a door, but the prudent man will be burdened with dishonor.

25 Strangers' lips will recount these things, but prudent men's words will be weighed in a balance.

26 Their heart is in fools' mouth, but wise ones' heart is their mouth.

27 When an ungodly man curses Satan, he himself curses his own soul.

28 The whisperer defiles his own soul, and will be hated in a sojourn.

Chapter 22

1 A lazy man was compared to a soiled stone, and everyone will hiss at his dishonor.

2 A lazy man was compared to a lump of dung; everyone taking him up will shake a hand.

3 A father's shame is in begetting an undisciplined child, and a daughter comes for loss.

4 A prudent daughter will inherit her husband, and the one causing shame is for sorrow of the one begetting her;

5 the bold woman shames father and husband, and will be dishonored by both.

6 An untimely account is music in mourning, but scourges and discipline are of wisdom at every time.

9 The one teaching a fool is gluing a potsherd, awakening a sleeper from deep sleep.

10 The one recounting to a fool is recounting to one slumbering, and at completion he will say, What is it?

11 Weep over a dead one, for he lost light, and weep over a fool, for he lost understanding; weep more gladly over a dead one, because he rested, but the fool's life is worse than death.

12 Mourning for a dead one is seven days, but for a fool and ungodly man all the days of his life.

13 Do not multiply word with a senseless man, and do not go to one without understanding; guard yourself from him, so that you may not have labor, and you will certainly not be defiled in his shaking; turn away from him and you will find rest, and certainly not become weary in his folly.

14 What will be heavier than lead? And what is its name except Fool?

15 Sand and salt and a lump of iron are easier to bear than a human without understanding.

16 Wooden bracing bound into a building will not be loosened in a shaking; thus a heart established upon a thought of counsel will not become timid in a time.

17 A heart founded upon thought of understanding is like a sandy adornment of a polished wall.

18 Stakes lying on a high place will certainly not endure before wind; thus a timid heart upon a fool's thought will certainly not endure before every fear.

19 The one pricking an eye will bring down tears, and one pricking a heart discloses perception.

20 One throwing a stone at birds scares them away, and the one reproaching a friend will dissolve friendship.

21 If you draw a sword against a friend, do not despair, for there is a return;

22 if you open a mouth against a friend, do not be wary, for there is reconciliation; except reproach and arrogance and disclosure of a secret and a deceitful blow, in these every friend will flee.

23 Acquire faithfulness with your neighbor in poverty, so that you may be filled together in his good things; in a time of affliction remain with him, so that you may inherit together in his inheritance.

24 Before fire are vapor of a furnace and smoke; thus before bloodshed are revilings.

25 I will not be ashamed to shelter a friend, and will certainly not hide from his face,

26 and if evils happen to me through him, everyone hearing will guard himself from him.

27 Who will give a guard upon my mouth, and a skillful seal upon my lips, so that I may not fall through it, and my tongue destroy me?

Chapter 23

1 Lord, Father and Master of my life, do not abandon me to their counsel, do not let me fall in them.

2 Who will set scourges over my thought, and discipline of wisdom over my heart, so that they may not spare my acts of ignorance, and he will certainly not overlook their sins,

3 so that my ignorances may not multiply, and my sins abound, and I will fall before the adversaries, and my enemy rejoice over me?

4 Lord, Father and God of my life, do not give me loftiness of eyes,

5 and turn desire away from me;

6 let appetite of belly and intercourse not overtake me, and do not deliver me to a shameless soul.

7 Hear discipline of mouth, children, and the one guarding it will certainly not be caught.

8 A sinner will be caught in his lips, and a reviler and arrogant man will stumble in them.

9 Do not accustom your mouth to an oath, and do not become accustomed to naming the Holy One;

10 for just as a household servant continually examined will not be free of a bruise, so also the one swearing and naming continually will certainly not be cleansed from sin.

11 A man of many oaths will be filled with lawlessness, and a scourge will not depart from his house; if he transgresses, his sin is upon him, and if he overlooks, he sinned doubly; and if he swore vainly, he will not be justified, for his house will be filled with afflictions.

12 There is an expression comparable to death; let it not be found in Iakob's inheritance; for all these things will depart from the pious, and they will not wallow in sins.

13 Do not accustom your mouth to coarse lack of discipline; for in it is a word of sin.

14 Remember your father and mother, for you sit among great men, lest you forget before them, and become foolish through your habit, and wish that you had not been born, and curse the day of your birth.

15 A human accustomed to words of reproach will certainly not be disciplined in all his days.

16 Two kinds multiply sins, and the third will bring anger;

17 a hot soul is like burning fire, it will certainly not be extinguished until it is swallowed; a fornicating human in the body of his flesh will certainly not cease until he kindles fire; to a fornicating human every bread is sweet, he will certainly not cease until he dies.

18 A human transgressing from his bed, saying in his soul, Who sees me? Darkness is around me, and walls cover me, and no one sees me; why am I wary? The Most High will certainly not remember my sins.

19 And humans' eyes are his fear, and he did not know that the Lord's eyes are ten-thousandfold brighter than the sun, looking upon all humans' ways and observing into hidden places.

20 Before all things were created they have been known to him, so also after they were completed.

21 This man will be punished in a city's squares, and where he did not suspect, he will be seized.

22 Thus also a woman leaving her husband, and presenting an heir from a stranger.

23 For first she disobeyed in the Most High's law, and second transgressed against her husband, and third committed adultery in fornication, and presented children from a strange man.

24 She will be brought out into an assembly, and there will be an inspection upon her children.

25 Her children will not spread into a root, and her branches will not bear fruit.

26 She will leave her memorial as a curse, and her reproach will not be wiped out,

27 and those left behind will recognize that nothing is better than fear of the Lord, and nothing sweeter than attending to the Lord's commandments.

Chapter 24

1 Wisdom will praise her soul and boast in the midst of her people;

2 in the assembly of the Most High she will open her mouth and boast before his power.

3 I came forth from the mouth of the Most High and covered the earth like mist;

4 I encamped in the heights, and my throne was in a pillar of cloud;

5 I alone circled the circuit of heaven and walked in the depth of abysses;

6 in the waves of the sea and in all the earth and in every people and nation I acquired possession.

7 Among all these I sought rest, and in whose inheritance shall I lodge?

8 Then the creator of all commanded me, and he who created me gave my tent rest and said, Encamp in Iakob, and receive an inheritance in Israel.

9 Before the age, from the beginning, he created me, and until the age I shall certainly not cease.

10 In a holy tent before him I ministered, and thus I was established in Sion;

11 in a beloved city likewise he gave me rest, and in Ierusalem is my authority;

12 and I took root in a glorified people, in the Lord's portion, his inheritance.

13 Like a cedar I was raised up in Lebanon and like a cypress in the mountains of Aermon;

14 like a palm I was raised up in Aiggadois and like rose plants in Iericho, like a comely olive in a plain, and I was raised up like a plane tree.

15 Like cinnamon and aromatic aspalathus I have given a scent, and like choice myrrh I spread fragrance, like galbanum and onycha and stacte and like a vapor of frankincense in a tent.

16 I, like a terebinth, extended my branches, and my branches are branches of glory and grace.

17 I, like a vine, sprouted grace, and my blossoms are fruit of glory and wealth.

19 Come to me, you who desire me, and be filled from my produce;

20 for my remembrance is sweeter than honey, and my inheritance than a honeycomb.

21 Those eating me will still hunger, and those drinking me will still thirst.

22 He who listens to me will not be ashamed, and those working in me will not sin.

23 All these things are the book of the covenant of God Most High, a law which Moyses commanded us as an inheritance for the congregations of Iakob,

25 he who fills with wisdom like Phison and like Tigris in the days of new produce,

26 he who fills with understanding like Euphrates and like Iordanes in the days of harvest,

27 he who manifests discipline like light, like Geon in the days of vintage.

28 The first did not finish knowing her, and likewise the last did not trace her out;

29 for her thought increased from the sea, and her counsel from a great abyss.

30 And I, like a canal from a river and like a water conduit, came forth into a garden;

31 I said, I will water my garden and drench my garden bed; and behold, my canal became a river for me, and my river became a sea.

32 Still I will illuminate discipline like dawn and manifest them far away;

33 still I will pour out teaching like prophecy and leave it for generations of ages.

34 See that I have not labored for myself alone, but for all who seek her out.

Chapter 25

1 In three things I was made beautiful and stood beautiful before the Lord and human beings: concord of brothers, and friendship of neighbors, and a wife and husband accommodating themselves to one another.

2 But three kinds my soul hated, and I was greatly offended at their life: a proud poor man, and a rich liar, an old adulterer deficient in understanding.

3 In youth you have not gathered, and how could you find in your old age?

4 How beautiful is judgment for gray hairs, and for elders to know counsel.

5 How beautiful is the wisdom of old men, and thought and counsel for the honored.

6 The crown of old men is abundant experience, and their boast is fear of the Lord.

7 Nine conceptions I called blessed in heart, and the tenth I will speak upon my tongue: a person rejoicing over children, living and looking upon the fall of enemies;

8 blessed is he who lives with an understanding wife, and he who did not slip with his tongue, and he who did not serve one unworthy of himself;

9 blessed is he who found prudence, and he who recounts to the ears of listeners;

10 how great is he who found wisdom; but he is not above him who fears the Lord;

11 fear of the Lord surpassed everything; he who holds it, to whom will he be likened?

13 Every wound, but not a wound of the heart, and every wickedness, but not the wickedness of a woman;

14 every affliction, but not an affliction from those who hate, and every vengeance, but not the vengeance of enemies.

15 There is no head above the head of a snake, and there is no fury above the fury of an enemy.

16 I will prefer to live with a lion and a dragon rather than live with a wicked woman.

17 A woman's wickedness alters her appearance and darkens her face like a bear;

18 in the midst of his neighbors her husband will recline, and unwillingly he sighed bitterly.

19 Every evil is small compared with a woman's evil; may a sinner's lot fall upon her.

20 A sandy ascent beneath an elder's feet, so is a talkative woman to a quiet man.

21 Do not fall for a woman's beauty, and do not long for a woman.

22 Wrath and shamelessness and great shame, if a woman provides for her husband.

23 A humbled heart and a gloomy face and a wound of the heart are a wicked woman; slack hands and paralyzed knees is she who will not make her husband blessed.

24 From a woman is the beginning of sin, and because of her we all die.

25 Do not give water an outlet, nor a wicked woman freedom of speech;

26 if she does not walk according to your hands, cut her off from your flesh.

Chapter 26

1 Blessed is the husband of a good wife, and the number of his days is double.

2 A courageous wife gladdens her husband, and he will fulfill his years in peace.

3 A good wife is a good portion; in the portion of those fearing the Lord she will be given;

4 and the heart of rich and poor is good, at every time a cheerful face.

5 At three things my heart was apprehensive, and at the fourth appearance I made supplication: slander of a city, and an assembly of a mob, and a false accusation, all grievous beyond death.

6 Pain of heart and mourning is a woman jealous of a woman, and a scourge of the tongue communicating with everyone.

7 A shaking ox yoke is a wicked woman; he who holds her is like one grasping a scorpion.

8 Great wrath is a drunken woman, and she will not conceal her indecency.

9 A woman's prostitution will be known in the raising of her eyes and in her eyelids.

10 Over an unrestrained daughter strengthen your guard, lest, finding freedom, she use it for herself;

11 guard against a shameless eye, and do not marvel if she transgresses against you;

12 like a thirsty traveler she will open her mouth and drink from every nearby water; opposite every stake she will sit, and before an arrow she will open a quiver.

13 A woman's grace will delight her husband, and her knowledge will fatten his bones.

14 A gift of the Lord is a silent woman, and there is no exchange for a disciplined soul;

15 grace upon grace is a modest woman, and no weight is worthy of a self-controlled soul.

16 The sun rising in the Lord's heights, and the beauty of a good woman in the adornment of her house;

17 a lamp shining upon a holy lampstand, and the beauty of a face upon a mature stature;

18 golden pillars upon a silver base, and beautiful feet upon the breasts of a steadfast one.

28 At two things my heart has been grieved, and at the third fury came upon me: a warrior lacking because of want, and understanding men if they are treated as refuse, one turning back from righteousness to sin; the Lord will prepare him for a sword.

29 A merchant will scarcely be delivered from transgression, and a retailer will not be justified from sin.

Chapter 27

1 For the sake of profit many sinned, and he who seeks to increase will turn away an eye.

2 Between the joints of stones a stake will be fixed, and between selling and buying sin will be crushed in.

3 If he does not hold firmly in fear of the Lord with diligence, his house will quickly be overthrown.

4 In the shaking of a sieve dung remains, so a person's refuse in his reasoning.

5 A furnace tests a potter's vessels, and a person's testing is in his deliberation.

6 The cultivation of a tree its fruit manifests, so does speech the thought of a person's heart.

7 Before reasoning do not praise a man; for this is the testing of human beings.

8 If you pursue what is just, you will attain it and put it on like a robe of glory reaching to the feet.

9 Birds will lodge with their like, and truth will return to those who work it.

10 A lion lies in ambush for prey, so does sin for those working unjust things.

11 A pious person's discourse is wisdom continually, but the senseless changes like the moon.

12 Among those without understanding observe the time, but among thoughtful people stay continually.

13 The discourse of fools is an offense, and their laughter is in the luxury of sin.

14 The talk of one swearing many oaths will make hairs stand up, and their quarrel is a stopping of ears.

15 A quarrel of the proud is bloodshed, and their mutual abuse is a grievous hearing.

16 He who reveals secrets destroyed trust and will certainly not find a friend for his soul.

17 Cherish a friend and be faithful with him; but if you reveal his secrets, do not pursue after him.

18 For just as a person lost his dead one, so you lost your neighbor's friendship;

19 and as you released a bird from your hand, so you let your neighbor go and will not catch him.

20 Do not pursue him, because he departed far away and escaped like a gazelle from a snare.

21 For a wound can be bound, and for abuse there is reconciliation, but he who revealed secrets has given up hope.

22 He who winks with an eye devises evils, and no one will remove them from him;

23 before your eyes he will sweeten his mouth and marvel at your words, but afterward he will twist his mouth and put a stumbling block in your words.

24 Many things I hated, and I did not liken them to him, and the Lord will hate him.

25 He who throws a stone upward throws upon his own head, and a deceitful blow will make wounds.

26 He who digs a pit will fall into it, and he who sets a snare will be caught in it.

27 He who does wicked things, they will roll upon him, and he will certainly not know from where it comes to him.

28 Mockery and reproach are for a proud person, and vengeance like a lion will lie in ambush for him.

29 Those rejoicing at the fall of the pious will be caught in a snare, and pain will consume them before their death.

30 Resentment and wrath, these too are abominations, and a sinful man will possess them.

Chapter 28

1 He who takes vengeance will find vengeance from the Lord, and he will surely keep his sins in remembrance.

2 Forgive your neighbor's wrongdoing, and then, when you make supplication, your sins will be loosed.

3 A person maintains wrath against a person, and seeks healing from the Lord?

4 He has no mercy upon a person like himself, and makes supplication concerning his sins?

5 He himself, being flesh, keeps resentment; who will make atonement for his sins?

6 Remember the last things and cease being hostile, corruption and death, and abide in commandments.

7 Remember commandments and do not bear resentment toward your neighbor, and the covenant of the Most High, and overlook ignorance.

8 Abstain from a quarrel, and you will diminish sins; for a wrathful person will kindle a quarrel,

9 and a sinful man will trouble friends and throw slander among those at peace.

10 According to the fuel of the fire, so it will be kindled, and according to the strength of the quarrel it will be kindled; according to a person's strength his fury will be, and according to his wealth he will heighten his wrath.

11 Strife being hurried on kindles fire, and a quarrel hurrying on pours out blood.

12 If you blow into a spark, it will be kindled, and if you spit upon it, it will be extinguished; and both proceed from your mouth.

13 Curse a whisperer and a double-tongued person; for he destroyed many who were at peace.

14 A third tongue shook many and dispersed them from nation to nation and demolished fortified cities and overthrew houses of great men.

15 A third tongue cast out courageous women and deprived them of their labors.

16 He who attends to it will certainly not find rest, nor encamp with quietness.

17 A blow of a whip makes a bruise, but a blow of a tongue will shatter bones.

18 Many fell by the mouth of a sword, but not as many as those who have fallen through a tongue.

19 Blessed is he who was sheltered from it, who did not pass through its fury, who did not pull its yoke and was not bound in its bonds;

20 for its yoke is an iron yoke, and its bonds are bronze bonds;

21 an evil death is its death, and Hades is more profitable than it.

22 It will certainly not take hold of the pious, and in its flame they will not be burned.

23 Those abandoning the Lord will fall into it, and among them it will be kindled and certainly not be extinguished; it will be sent against them like a lion and ravage them like a leopard.

24 See, fence your possession around with thorns; bind up your silver and your gold;

25 and for your words make a balance and a weight, and for your mouth make a door and a bar.

26 Beware lest you slip by it, lest you fall before one lying in ambush.

Chapter 29

1 He who does mercy will lend to his neighbor, and he who strengthens with his hand keeps commandments.

2 Lend to your neighbor in the time of his need, and repay your neighbor at the time;

3 Establish your word and be faithful with him, and at every time you will find what you need.

4 Many considered a loan as a windfall and provided trouble for those who helped them.

5 Until he receives, he will kiss his hands and lower his voice over his neighbor's money; and at the time of repayment he will prolong the time and repay words of indifference and blame the time.

6 If he prevails, he will scarcely recover half and reckon it as a windfall; but if not, he deprived him of his money and acquired him as an enemy without cause; curses and abuses he will repay him, and instead of honor he will repay him dishonor.

7 Many turned away, not for the sake of wickedness; they were apprehensive of being deprived without cause.

8 Nevertheless, be patient with a lowly person, and over almsgiving do not put him off.

9 For the sake of the commandment help a needy person, and according to his want do not turn him away empty.

10 Lose silver for a brother and friend, and let it not rust beneath the stone to destruction.

11 Place your treasure according to the commandments of the Most High, and it will profit you more than gold.

12 Shut up almsgiving in your store chambers, and it will deliver you from every affliction;

13 beyond a shield of strength and beyond a spear of weight it will fight for you before an enemy.

14 A good man will become surety for his neighbor, and he who has lost shame will abandon him.

15 Do not forget a surety's favors; for he gave his soul for you.

16 A sinner will overturn a surety's good things, and one ungrateful in mind will abandon his rescuer.

17 Surety destroyed many who were prospering and shook them like a wave of the sea;

18 it displaced powerful men, and they wandered among foreign nations.

19 A sinner falling into surety and pursuing contracts will fall into judgments.

20 Help your neighbor according to your ability, and take heed to yourself lest you fall.

21 The beginning of life is water and bread and clothing and a house covering indecency.

22 Better is a poor person's life beneath a shelter of beams than splendid foods among strangers.

23 With little and much have contentment, and you will certainly not hear the reproach of sojourning.

24 An evil life is from house to house, and where you sojourn you will not open your mouth;

25 you will entertain and give drink without thanks, and in addition to these you will hear bitter things:

26 Come along, sojourner, adorn a table, and if anything is in your hand, feed me;

27 go out, sojourner, from before honor; my brother has come to stay with me, there is need of the house.

28 These things are heavy for a person having prudence, rebuke concerning lodging and reproach from a lender.

Chapter 30

1 He who loves his son will apply whips to him continually, that he may rejoice at his latter end;

2 he who disciplines his son will benefit from him and boast of him among acquaintances;

3 he who teaches his son will provoke his enemy to jealousy and exult over him before friends.

4 His father died, and as though he did not die; for he left one like himself after him.

5 In his life he saw and rejoiced, and at his death he was not grieved;

6 before enemies he left an avenger, and for friends one repaying favor.

7 He who pampers a son will bind up his wounds, and at every cry his inward parts will be troubled.

8 An untamed horse turns out obstinate, and an unrestrained son turns out headlong.

9 Nurse a child, and he will alarm you; play with him, and he will grieve you.

10 Do not laugh with him, lest you suffer pain with him, and at the last you will gnash your teeth.

11 Do not give him authority in youth;

12 bruise his sides while he is an infant, lest, becoming obstinate, he disobey you.

13 Discipline your son and labor upon him, that you may not stumble in his indecency.

14 Better is a poor person healthy and strong in constitution than a rich person scourged in his body.

15 Health and good condition are better than all gold, and a vigorous body than immeasurable prosperity.

16 There is no wealth better than bodily health, and there is no gladness above joy of heart.

17 Better is death than bitter life, and rest of an age than abiding sickness.

18 Good things poured out upon a closed mouth are offerings of foods laid beside a grave.

19 What does an offering benefit an idol? For it will neither eat nor smell; so is he who is driven out by the Lord.

20 Looking with eyes and sighing, just like a eunuch embracing a virgin and sighing.

21 Do not give your soul to grief, and do not afflict yourself in your counsel.

22 Gladness of heart is a person's life, and a man's exultation is length of days.

23 Deceive your soul and comfort your heart and remove grief far from you; for grief destroyed many, and there is no benefit in it.

24 Jealousy and fury diminish days, and care brings old age before its time.

25 A cheerful and good heart will attend to the dishes of its foods.

Chapter 31

1 Wakefulness over wealth wastes flesh, and care for it removes sleep.

2 Care of wakefulness will remove drowsiness, and a heavy sickness will sober sleep away.

3 A rich person labored in gathering money, and at rest is filled with his luxuries.

4 A poor person labored in the diminution of livelihood, and at rest becomes needy.

5 He who loves gold will not be justified, and he who pursues profits will be led astray by them.

6 Many were given over to a fall for the sake of gold, and their destruction came before their face.

7 It is a wood of stumbling for those enraptured by it, and every senseless person will be caught in it.

8 Blessed is a rich person who was found blameless and who did not go after gold;

9 who is he? And we will call him blessed; for he did wondrous things among his people.

10 Who was tested by it and perfected? And it will be a boast for him. Who could transgress and did not transgress, and do evils and did not do them?

11 His good things will be established, and an assembly will recount his almsgiving.

12 Have you sat at a great table? Do not open your throat over it and do not say, Many indeed are the things upon it;

13 remember that an evil eye is an evil. What has been created more evil than an eye? For this reason it weeps from every face.

14 Wherever it looks, do not stretch out a hand and do not jostle with it in a dish.

15 Understand your neighbor's things from yourself, and consider every matter.

16 Eat like a human being the things set beside you, and do not chew greedily, lest you be hated.

17 Cease first for the sake of discipline, and do not be insatiable, lest you stumble;

18 and if you have sat among many, do not stretch out your hand before them.

19 How sufficient for a disciplined person is a little, and upon his bed he does not pant.

20 Healthy sleep is upon a moderate gut; he rose early, and his soul was with him. Pain of wakefulness and cholera and colic are with an insatiable man;

21 and if you were forced with foods, rise, vomit far away, and you will rest.

22 Hear me, child, and do not despise me, and at the last you will find my words; in all your works become skillful, and no sickness will certainly meet you.

23 Lips will bless one generous with bread, and the testimony of his goodness is faithful.

24 A city will grumble against one wicked with bread, and the testimony of his wickedness is exact.

25 Do not show yourself a man with wine; for wine destroyed many.

26 A furnace tests steel in tempering, so does wine hearts in the quarrel of the proud.

27 Wine is equal to life for human beings, if you drink it in its measure. What life is there for one deprived of wine? And it was created for gladness for human beings.

28 Exultation of heart and gladness of soul is wine drunk at its time in sufficient measure;

29 bitterness of soul is much wine drunk in irritation and conflict.

30 Drunkenness increases a senseless person's fury to stumbling, diminishing strength and adding wounds.

31 At a drinking party of wine do not reprove your neighbor and do not despise him in his gladness; do not speak a word of reproach to him and do not afflict him with a demand.

Chapter 32

1 Did they appoint you leader? Do not exalt yourself; be among them as one of them, care for them and thus sit down;

2 and having performed all your service, recline, that you may rejoice because of them and receive a crown for good order.

3 Speak, elder, for it befits you, with exact knowledge, and do not hinder musical performances.

4 Where there is a performance, do not pour out talk, and do not show wisdom untimely.

5 A carbuncle seal upon a gold ornament is a concert of musicians at a drinking party of wine;

6 in a gold setting an emerald seal is a melody of musicians over pleasant wine.

7 Speak, young man, if there is need of you, scarcely twice if you are asked;

8 sum up your speech, many things in a few; be as one knowing and at the same time silent.

9 In the midst of great men do not make yourself equal, and while another speaks do not chatter much.

10 Before thunder lightning hastens, and before a modest person grace will go forth.

11 At the hour rise and do not lag behind; run off home and do not be sluggish;

12 there play and do your intended things, and do not sin with a proud word.

13 And over these things bless him who made you and drenches you from his good things.

14 He who fears the Lord will accept discipline, and those rising early will find favor.

15 He who seeks the law will be filled with it, and he who acts hypocritically will stumble in it.

16 Those fearing the Lord will find judgment and kindle ordinances like light.

17 A sinful person will avoid reproof and find a decision according to his wish.

18 A man of counsel will certainly not overlook a thought; a stranger and a proud person will not cower in fear.

19 Without counsel do nothing, and when you have done it do not regret it.

20 Do not walk on a way of stumbling, and do not stumble on stony places.

21 Do not trust in an unobstructed way

22 and guard against your children.

23 In every work trust your soul; for this too is keeping commandments.

24 He who trusts the law attends to commandments, and he who has trusted the Lord will not be diminished.

Chapter 33

1 No evil will meet him who fears the Lord, but in testing he will again be delivered.

2 A wise man will not hate the law, but he who acts hypocritically in it is like a ship in a storm.

3 An understanding person will trust the law, and the law is faithful to him like an inquiry of manifestations.

4 Prepare speech and thus you will be heard; bind together discipline and answer.

5 A wagon wheel is a fool's inward parts, and his deliberation is like a turning axle.

6 A horse for mating is like a mocking friend; beneath everyone sitting upon it it neighs.

7 Why does a day surpass a day, when all the light of a day of the year is from the sun?

8 By the Lord's knowledge they were separated, and he varied seasons and festivals;

9 some of them he exalted and sanctified, and some of them he placed among the number of days.

10 And all human beings are from the ground, and Adam was created from earth;

11 in an abundance of knowledge the Lord separated them and varied their ways;

12 some of them he blessed and exalted, and some of them he sanctified and brought near himself; some of them he cursed and humbled and overturned them from their station.

13 As a potter's clay in his hand – all his ways according to his pleasure – , so are human beings in the hand of him who made them, to repay them according to his judgment.

14 Opposite evil is good, and opposite death is life, so opposite a pious person is a sinner;

15 and thus look into all the works of the Most High, two by two, one opposite the other.

16 And I, last, kept watch like one gleaning after grape gatherers;

17 in the Lord's blessing I came before, and like a grape gatherer I filled a winepress.

18 Consider that I have not labored for myself alone, but for all who seek discipline.

19 Hear me, great men of the people, and leaders of the assembly, give ear.

20 To son and wife, brother and friend, do not give authority over you in your life; and do not give another your money, lest, regretting it, you make supplication for it.

21 While you still live and breath is in you, do not exchange yourself with any flesh;

22 for it is better for your children to make supplication to you than for you to look into your sons' hands.

23 In all your works be preeminent; do not put a blemish on your honor.

24 On the day of the completion of the days of your life and at the time of death distribute an inheritance.

25 Fodder and rod and loads for a donkey, bread and discipline and work for a household servant.

26 Work with a servant, and you will find rest; relax your hands toward him, and he will seek freedom.

27 A yoke and a strap will bend a neck, and for a maleficent household servant there are racks and tortures;

28 put him to work, that he may not be idle, for idleness taught much evil;

29 set him to works as befits him, and if he does not obey, make his fetters heavy.

30 And do not be excessive toward any flesh, and without judgment do nothing.

31 If you have a household servant, let him be as you, because with blood you acquired him;

32 if you have a household servant, treat him as a brother, because you will need him as your soul;

33 if you ill-treat him and, departing, he runs away, on what road will you seek him?

Chapter 34

1 Empty and false hopes are for a man without understanding, and dreams give wings to the senseless.

2 Like one grasping a shadow and pursuing wind, so is he who attends to dreams;

3 this against that is a vision of dreams, a likeness of a face opposite a face.

4 From an unclean thing what will be cleansed? And from a false thing what will be true?

5 Divinations and omens and dreams are vain, and the heart imagines like that of a woman in labor;

6 if it is not sent from the Most High in an inspection, do not give your heart to them;

7 for dreams led many astray, and they fell away while hoping in them.

8 Without falsehood the law will be accomplished, and wisdom is perfection in a faithful mouth.

9 A man who has wandered knew many things, and one of abundant experience will recount understanding;

10 he who was not tested knows few things, but he who has wandered will increase skillfulness.

11 I have seen many things in my wandering, and my understanding is more than my words;

12 many times I was endangered as far as death, and I was preserved because of these things.

13 The spirit of those fearing the Lord will live; for their hope is upon him who saves them.

14 He who fears the Lord will be apprehensive of nothing and will certainly not be cowardly, because he is his hope.

15 Blessed is the soul of him who fears the Lord; to whom does he attend? And who is his support?

16 The Lord's eyes are upon those who love him, a shield of might and a support of strength, shelter from scorching heat and shelter from midday, protection from stumbling and help against falling,

17 raising the soul and illuminating eyes, giving healing, life and blessing.

18 One sacrificing from injustice, a blemished offering, and gifts of the lawless are not for favor.

19 The Most High does not take pleasure in offerings of the ungodly, nor by a multitude of sacrifices does he make atonement for sins.

20 One slaughtering a son before his father is he who brings a sacrifice from the money of the needy.

21 The bread of the needy is the life of the poor; he who deprives them of it is a person of blood.

22 He who takes away livelihood murders his neighbor, and he who withholds a hired worker's wage pours out blood.

23 One building and one demolishing; what did they benefit beyond labors?

24 One praying and one cursing; whose voice will the Master listen to?

25 One washing from a dead person and again touching him, what did he benefit in his bathing?

26 So is a person fasting over his sins and again going and doing the same things; who will listen to his prayer? And what did he benefit in being humbled?

Chapter 35

1 He who keeps the law increases offerings; he who attends to commandments sacrifices a salvation offering.

2 One repaying favor offers fine flour, and he who does almsgiving sacrifices a praise offering.

3 The Lord's pleasure is to depart from wickedness, and atonement is to depart from injustice.

4 Do not appear before the Lord empty; for all these things are for the sake of the commandment.

5 A righteous person's offering fattens an altar, and its fragrance is before the Most High.

6 A righteous man's sacrifice is acceptable, and its remembrance will not be forgotten.

7 With a good eye glorify the Lord, and do not diminish the firstfruit of your hands.

8 In every gift make your face cheerful, and in gladness sanctify a tenth.

9 Give to the Most High according to his gift and with a good eye according to what your hand finds;

10 because the Lord is one who repays, and he will repay you sevenfold.

11 Do not bribe, for he will not accept, and do not attend to an unjust sacrifice;

12 because the Lord is a judge, and with him there is no regard for a person's honor.

13 He will not show partiality against a poor person and will listen to the supplication of one wronged;

14 he will certainly not overlook an orphan's petition and a widow if she pours out speech;

15 do not a widow's tears descend upon her cheek, and the cry against him who brought them down?

16 He who serves with good will will be accepted, and his supplication will reach as far as clouds;

17 a lowly person's prayer passed through clouds, and until it draws near he will certainly not be comforted;

18 and he will certainly not withdraw until the Most High inspects, and he will judge for the righteous and execute judgment.

19 And the Lord will certainly not delay, nor will he be patient with them,

20 until he crushes the loins of the merciless and repays vengeance to the nations,

21 until he removes the multitude of the insolent and shatters the scepters of the unjust,

22 until he repays a person according to his actions and the works of human beings according to their thoughts,

23 until he judges his people's case and gladdens them in his mercy.

24 Beautiful is mercy at the time of his affliction, like rain clouds at a time of drought.

Chapter 36

1 Have mercy on us, Master, God of all, and look upon us and put your fear upon all the nations;

2 raise your hand against foreign nations, and let them see your might.

3 Just as before them you were sanctified among us, so before us may you be magnified among them;

4 and let them know you, just as we too knew that there is no God except you, Lord.

5 Renew signs and vary wonders, glorify your hand and right arm;

6 rouse fury and pour out wrath, remove an adversary and wipe out an enemy.

7 Hasten the time and remember the oath, and let them recount your great deeds.

8 In wrath of fire let the survivor be devoured, and may those afflicting your people find destruction.

9 Shatter the heads of hostile rulers who say, There is none except us.

10 Gather all the tribes of Iakob and give them an inheritance as from the beginning.

11 Have mercy, Lord, on a people called by your name and Israel, whom you likened to a firstborn.

12 Have pity on the city of your sanctuary, Ierusalem, the place of your rest;

13 fill Sion with the recounting of your virtues, and your people from your glory.

14 Give testimony to your creatures in the beginning, and raise up prophecies in your name;

15 give a reward to those awaiting you, and let your prophets be found trustworthy.

16 Listen, Lord, to the supplication of your petitioners according to Aaron's blessing concerning your people,

17 and all those upon the earth will know that you are the Lord, the God of the ages.

18 A belly will eat every food, but there is food better than food.

19 A throat tastes foods of the hunt, so an understanding heart false words.

20 A twisted heart will give grief, and a person of abundant experience will repay him.

21 A woman will accept every male, but there is a daughter better than a daughter.

22 A woman's beauty makes a face cheerful and surpasses every human desire;

23 if mercy and gentleness are upon her tongue, her husband is not like sons of human beings.

24 He who acquires a wife begins a possession, a helper corresponding to him and a pillar of rest.

25 Where there is no fence, a possession will be plundered; and where there is no wife, he will sigh as he wanders.

26 For who will trust a readily equipped robber leaping from city to city?

27 So with a person not having a nest and lodging wherever evening overtakes him.

Chapter 37

1 Every friend will say, I too have befriended; but there is a friend who is a friend in name alone.

2 Is there not grief even to death in a companion and friend turning into enmity?

3 O wicked thought, from where were you rolled in to cover the dry land with deceit?

4 A companion enjoys a friend's gladness, and at a time of affliction will be opposite him;

5 a companion labors with a friend for the sake of his belly; before war he will take a shield.

6 Do not forget a friend in your soul, and do not fail to remember him in your wealth.

7 Every counselor extols counsel, but there is one counseling for himself.

8 Guard your soul against a counselor, and know first what his need is – for he too will counsel for himself – , lest he cast a lot against you

9 and say to you, Your way is good, and stand on the opposite side to see what will happen to you.

10 Do not take counsel with him who looks askance at you, and hide counsel from those who envy you,

11 with a woman about her rival and with a coward about war, with a merchant about exchange and with a buyer about selling, with a grudging person about thankfulness and with a merciless person about kindness, with a sluggard about any work and with an annual hired worker about completion, with an idle household servant about much work; do not attend to these for any counsel;

12 but remain continually with a pious man whom you know to keep commandments, who in his soul is according to your soul, and if you stumble, he will suffer pain with you.

13 And establish counsel of heart, for there is none more faithful to you than it;

14 for a man's soul has sometimes been accustomed to report more than seven watchers sitting on a height at a lookout.

15 And over all these things make supplication to the Most High, that he may direct your way in truth.

16 The beginning of every work is a word, and before every action is counsel.

17 A trace of change of heart causes four parts to spring up,

18 good and evil, life and death, and that which continually rules them is a tongue.

19 There is a skillful man, an instructor of many, and for his own soul he is useless.

20 There is one showing wisdom in words who is hated; this one will lack all food;

21 for grace was not given him from the Lord, because he was deprived of all wisdom.

22 There is one wise for his own soul, and the fruits of his understanding are faithful upon his mouth.

23 A wise man will discipline his own people, and the fruits of his understanding are faithful.

24 A wise man will be filled with blessing, and all who see will call him blessed.

25 A man's life is in a number of days, and the days of Israel are without number.

26 The wise will inherit trust among his people, and his name will live into the age.

27 Child, in your life test your soul, and see what is evil for it and do not give it that;

28 for not all things benefit all, and not every soul takes pleasure in everything.

29 Do not be insatiable in every luxury, and do not pour yourself out upon dishes;

30 for in many foods there will be disease, and insatiability will draw near as far as cholera;

31 through insatiability many died, but he who takes heed will add life.

Chapter 38

1 Honor a physician according to his services with his honors, for the Lord created him too;

2 for healing is from the Most High, and from a king he will receive a gift.

3 A physician's knowledge will raise his head, and before great men he will be admired.

4 The Lord created medicines from earth, and a prudent man will not be offended at them.

5 Was water not sweetened by wood, that his strength might be known?

6 And he gave human beings knowledge, to be glorified in his wonders;

7 with them he healed and removed his pain; a perfumer will make a mixture with these,

8 and his works will certainly not be finished, and peace from him is upon the face of the earth.

9 Child, in your sickness do not be neglectful, but pray to the Lord, and he will heal you;

10 remove transgression and straighten your hands and cleanse your heart from every sin;

11 give fragrance and a memorial of fine flour, and fatten an offering as one who does not exist.

12 And give a physician a place, for the Lord created him too, and let him not depart from you, for there is need of him too.

13 There is a time when success too is in their hands;

14 for they too will make supplication to the Lord, that he may grant them success in rest and healing for the sake of livelihood.

15 May he who sins before him who made him fall into a physician's hands.

16 Child, over a dead person bring down tears, and as one suffering terrible things begin a lament; and according to his due wrap up his body and do not overlook his burial.

17 Make weeping bitter and mourning fervent, and perform the mourning according to his worth, one day and two, for the sake of slander, and be comforted because of grief;

18 for from grief death comes forth, and grief of heart will bend strength.

19 In affliction grief too remains, and a poor person's life is against the heart.

20 Do not give your heart to grief; remove it, remembering the last things;

21 do not forget, for there is no return, and you will not benefit this one, and you will harm yourself.

22 Remember my judgment, because yours too is so; yesterday for me and today for you.

23 At a dead person's rest give rest to his remembrance, and be comforted concerning him at the departure of his spirit.

24 A scribe's wisdom is in the opportunity of leisure, and he who is lessened in his business will become wise.

25 How will he become wise who holds a plow and boasts in the shaft of a goad, driving oxen and occupied with their works, and whose discourse is about sons of bulls?

26 He will give his heart to producing furrows, and his wakefulness is for fodder for heifers.

27 So is every artisan and master artisan, who passes night as day; those engraving engravings of seals, and his persistence is to vary the design; he will give his heart to making a painting resemble, and his wakefulness is to finish a work.

28 So is a smith sitting near an anvil and studying works of iron; vapor of fire will melt his flesh, and in the heat of a furnace he will struggle; to the sound of a hammer he will incline his ear, and opposite the likeness of a vessel are his eyes; he will give his heart to completing works, and his wakefulness is to adorn at completion.

29 So is a potter sitting at his work and turning a wheel with his feet, who continually lies in care over his work, and all his labor is by number;

30 with his arm he will shape clay, and before his feet he will bend his strength; he will give his heart to finishing the glaze, and his wakefulness is to clean a furnace.

31 All these trusted in their hands, and each shows wisdom in his work;

32 without them a city will not be inhabited, and they will not sojourn or walk about.

33 But for a council of the people they will not be sought, and in an assembly they will not leap forward; on a judge's seat they will not sit, and a covenant of judgment they will not consider.

34 Nor will they manifest discipline and judgment, and in parables they will not be found, but they will support the creation of an age, and their supplication is in the work of their craft.

Chapter 39

1 Except for him who gives his soul and considers the law of the Most High, he will seek out the wisdom of all the ancients and be occupied with prophecies,

2 he will preserve the discourse of renowned men and enter together into the turns of parables,

3 he will seek out hidden things of proverbs and be occupied with riddles of parables.

4 Among great men he will serve and before leaders he will appear; in the land of foreign nations he will pass, for he tested good and evil things among human beings.

5 He will give his heart to rising early toward the Lord who made him and make supplication before the Most High; and he will open his mouth in prayer and make supplication concerning his sins.

6 If the great Lord wills, he will be filled with a spirit of understanding; he will rain down utterances of his wisdom and in prayer confess to the Lord;

7 he will direct his counsel and knowledge and consider his hidden things;

8 he will manifest the discipline of his teaching and boast in the law of the Lord's covenant.

9 Many will praise his understanding, and until the age it will not be erased; his remembrance will not depart, and his name will live for generations of generations;

10 nations will recount his wisdom, and an assembly will proclaim his praise;

11 if he remains, he will leave a name greater than a thousand, and if he rests, he makes it for himself.

12 Still, having considered, I will recount, and like the full moon I was filled.

13 Listen to me, holy sons, and sprout like a rose growing by a stream of water

14 and like frankincense give a fragrant scent and blossom a blossom like a lily. Spread a scent and praise with a song, bless the Lord over all the works,

15 give greatness to his name and confess in his praise with songs of lips and with lyres, and thus you will say in confession:

16 All the works of the Lord are exceedingly good, and every command will be in its time; one cannot say, What is this? For what is this? For all things will be sought in their time.

17 At his word water stood like a heap, and at the utterance of his mouth reservoirs of waters.

18 In his command is all pleasure, and there is none who will diminish his salvation.

19 The works of all flesh are before him, and one cannot be hidden from his eyes;

20 from the age to the age he looked, and nothing is wondrous before him.

21 One cannot say, What is this? For what is this? For all things have been created for their uses.

22 His blessing covered like a river and drenched dry land like a flood;

23 so nations will inherit his wrath, as he turned waters into brine.

24 His ways are straight for the holy, so for the lawless stumbling blocks;

25 good things have been created for the good from the beginning, so for sinners evil things.

26 The beginning of every need for a person's life: water and fire and iron and salt and fine wheat flour and milk and honey, blood of a grape and oil and clothing;

27 all these are for good things for the pious, so for sinners they will turn into evil things.

28 There are spirits which have been created for vengeance, and in his fury he strengthened their scourges; at the time of completion they will pour out strength and abate the fury of him who made them.

29 Fire and hail and famine and death, all these have been created for vengeance;

30 teeth of beasts and scorpions and vipers and a sword avenging the ungodly to destruction;

31 in his command they will rejoice, and upon the earth they will be prepared for uses, and in their times they will not transgress a word.

32 For this reason from the beginning I was established and considered and left in writing:

33 All the works of the Lord are good, and he will supply every need in its hour,

34 and one cannot say, This is more evil than that, for all things will be approved in their time.

35 And now with all heart and mouth sing hymns and bless the Lord's name.

Chapter 40

1 Great occupation has been created for every person, and a heavy yoke upon the sons of Adam from the day of departure from their mother's womb until the day of return to the mother of all;

2 their deliberations and fear of heart, thought of expectation, the day of death.

3 From one sitting upon a glorious throne even to one humbled in earth and ashes,

4 from one wearing violet and a crown even to one clothed in raw linen, fury and jealousy and trouble and tumult and fear of death and resentment and strife.

5 And at the time of rest upon a bed, sleep of night alters his knowledge;

6 a little, as nothing, in rest, and after that in dreams, as on a day of watching, troubled in the vision of his heart, as one who has escaped from before war;

7 at the time of his need he awoke, and was astonished at no fear.

8 With all flesh, from human being to beast, and upon sinners sevenfold beyond these;

9 death and blood and strife and sword, afflictions, famine and crushing and scourge.

10 Against the lawless all these were created, and because of them the flood occurred.

11 All things which are from earth return to earth, and those from waters turn back to the sea.

12 Every gift and injustice will be erased, and faithfulness will stand into the age.

13 The money of the unjust will dry up like a river and resound like great thunder in rain;

14 when he opens hands he will rejoice; so those transgressing will cease utterly.

15 Offspring of the ungodly will not multiply branches, and unclean roots are upon a sheer rock;

16 reed grass beside every water and river bank will be plucked out before every grass.

17 Grace is like a garden amid blessings, and almsgiving will remain into the age.

18 The life of a self-sufficient person and a worker will be sweetened, and above both is he who finds a treasure.

19 Children and building a city establish a name, and above both a blameless wife is reckoned.

20 Wine and music gladden a heart, and above both is love of wisdom.

21 A flute and a harp sweeten melodies, and above both is a pleasant tongue.

22 An eye will desire grace and beauty, and above both the greenness of a crop.

23 A friend and companion meeting at the time, and above both a wife with a husband.

24 Brothers and help are for a time of affliction, and above both almsgiving will rescue.

25 Gold and silver will establish a foot, and above both counsel is approved.

26 Money and strength will raise a heart, and above both is fear of the Lord; there is no diminution in fear of the Lord, and there is no need to seek help in it;

27 fear of the Lord is like a garden of blessing, and above all glory it covered him.

28 Child, do not live a life of begging; it is better to die than to beg.

29 A man looking to a stranger's table, his existence is not in the reckoning of life; he will defile his soul with strangers' foods; but a knowledgeable and disciplined man will guard himself.

30 In a shameless person's mouth begging will be sweetened, and in his belly fire will burn.

Chapter 41

1 O death, how bitter your remembrance is to a person at peace in his possessions, to a man undistracted and prospering in all things and still strong enough to receive food.

2 O death, good is your judgment for a person needy and diminishing in strength, extremely aged and distracted about everything and disobedient and having lost endurance.

3 Do not be apprehensive of death's judgment; remember those before you and those after;

4 this is the judgment from the Lord for all flesh, and why do you refuse the pleasure of the Most High? Whether ten or a hundred or a thousand years, there is no reproof of life in Hades.

5 Children of sinners become abominable children, and those associating with the dwellings of the ungodly;

6 the inheritance of sinners' children will perish, and with their seed reproach will remain continually.

7 Children will blame an ungodly father, because through him they will be reproached.

8 Woe to you, ungodly men, who abandoned the law of God Most High;

9 and if you are born, you will be born for a curse, and if you die, you will be allotted to a curse.

10 All things which are from earth will go away to earth, so the ungodly from a curse to destruction.

11 The mourning of human beings is in their bodies, but the name of sinners, not good, will be erased.

12 Care about a name, for it will remain for you more than a thousand great treasures of gold;

13 of a good life there is a number of days, and a good name will remain into an age.

14 Keep discipline in peace, children; but hidden wisdom and unseen treasure, what benefit is in both?

15 Better is a person hiding his folly than a person hiding his wisdom.

16 Therefore be ashamed at my utterance; for it is not good to preserve every shame, and not all things are approved by all in faithfulness.

17 Be ashamed before father and mother concerning prostitution, and before leader and ruler concerning falsehood,

18 before judge and ruler concerning transgression, and before congregation and people concerning lawlessness,

19 before partner and friend concerning injustice, and before the place where you sojourn concerning theft,

20 before God's truth and covenant, and for planting an elbow over bread,

21 for contempt of receiving and giving, and before those greeting you concerning silence,

22 for looking at a courtesan, and for turning away a relative's face,

23 for taking away a portion and a gift, and for observing a married woman,

24 for meddling with his maidservant, and do not stand over her bed,

25 before friends concerning words of reproach, and after giving do not reproach,

26 for repeating also a word heard, and for uncovering secret words;

27 and you will be truly modest and find favor before every person.

Chapter 42

1 Do not be ashamed concerning these things, and do not show partiality so as to sin:

2 concerning the law of the Most High and covenant, and concerning judgment to justify the ungodly,

3 concerning a partner's and travelers' word, and concerning giving an inheritance to companions,

4 concerning the exactness of a balance and weights, and concerning acquiring many things and few,

5 concerning profit from merchants' selling, and concerning much discipline of children, and making a wicked household servant's side bleed;

6 over a wicked woman a seal is good, and where hands are many, lock up;

7 whatever you hand over, do so by number and weight, and giving and receiving, everything in writing;

8 concerning discipline of an unthinking person and a fool and an extremely aged person disputing with young people; and you will be truly disciplined and approved before every living being.

9 A daughter is hidden wakefulness for a father, and care for her removes sleep; in her youth, lest she pass her prime, and when married, lest she be hated;

10 in virginity, lest she be profaned and become pregnant in her father's house; being with a husband, lest she transgress, and when married, lest she become barren.

11 Over an unrestrained daughter strengthen your guard, lest she make you a delight for enemies, talk in a city and an outcast of the people, and shame you in a multitude of many.

12 Do not look at any person for beauty, and do not sit together in the midst of women;

13 for from garments a moth comes forth, and from a woman a woman's wickedness.

14 Better is a man's wickedness than a beneficent woman, and a woman shaming to reproach.

15 I will now remember the Lord's works, and what I have seen I will recount; in the Lord's words are his works.

16 The sun, illuminating, looked upon everything, and his work is full of the Lord's glory.

17 He did not enable the Lord's holy ones to recount all his wonders, which the Lord Almighty established for the whole to be supported in his glory.

18 Abyss and heart he traced out, and their cunning devices he considered; for the Most High knew every knowledge and looked into the sign of an age,

19 reporting the things that have passed and the things that will be, and revealing traces of hidden things;

20 No thought escaped him; not even one word was hidden from him.

21 He adorned the great things of his wisdom, as he is before the age and into the age; neither was he added to nor diminished, and he needed no counselor.

22 How desirable are all his works, and one can behold them as a spark;

23 all these live and remain into the age for all uses, and all obey.

24 All things are double, one opposite the other, and he made nothing deficient;

25 one established the other's good things, and who will be filled looking upon his glory?

Chapter 43

1 The pride of height is a firmament of purity, the appearance of heaven in a vision of glory.

2 The sun, at its appearance proclaiming at its departure, is a wondrous vessel, a work of the Most High;

3 at its midday it dries up a country, and before its burning heat who will withstand?

4 One blowing a furnace is amid works of burning heat, the sun threefold, burning mountains; blowing out fiery vapors and flashing rays, it dims eyes.

5 Great is the Lord who made it, and at his words it hastened its course.

6 And the moon in all things is for its time, a showing of times and a sign of an age;

7 from the moon is the sign of a festival, a luminary diminishing to completion.

8 A month is according to its name, increasing wondrously in change, a vessel of encampments on high, shining in the firmament of heaven.

9 The beauty of heaven is the glory of stars, an ornament illuminating in the Lord's heights;

10 at the words of a holy one they will stand according to judgment and certainly not slacken in their watches.

11 See a bow and bless him who made it exceedingly beautiful in its radiance;

12 it encircled heaven in a circuit of glory; hands of the Most High stretched it.

13 By his command he hastened snow, and he speeds the lightnings of his judgment;

14 for this reason treasuries were opened, and clouds flew out like birds;

15 by his greatness he strengthened clouds, and hailstones were shattered;

16 and at his appearance mountains will be shaken; at his will a south wind will blow.

17 The voice of his thunder reproached earth, and a storm of the north and a whirlwind.

18 Like birds flying down he sprinkles snow, and like a locust settling is its descent; an eye will marvel at the beauty of its whiteness, and a heart will be astounded at its falling.

19 And frost like salt he pours upon earth, and when frozen it becomes points of stakes.

20 A cold north wind will blow, and ice will freeze upon water; upon every gathering of water it will settle, and the water will put it on like a breastplate.

21 It will devour mountains and burn a wilderness and quench green grass like fire.

22 Healing of all things speedily is mist; dew meeting it will bring cheer from scorching heat.

23 By his reasoning he stilled an abyss and planted islands in it.

24 Those sailing the sea recount its danger, and at the hearing of our ears we marvel;

25 and there are extraordinary and wondrous works, the variety of every living creature, the creation of sea monsters.

26 Because of him his messenger prospers, and at his word all things are held together.

27 We will say many things and certainly not reach the end, and the conclusion of words is, He is the whole.

28 Glorifying, where will we have strength? For he is great beyond all his works.

29 Fearsome is the Lord and exceedingly great, and wondrous is his might.

30 Glorifying the Lord, exalt him as much as you can, for he will surpass even still; and exalting him, increase in strength; do not grow weary, for you will certainly not reach him.

31 Who has seen him and will recount? And who will magnify him as he is?

32 Many hidden things are greater than these, for we have seen few of his works;

33 for the Lord made all things and gave wisdom to the pious.

Chapter 44

1 Let us now praise glorious men and our fathers by descent;

2 the Lord created much glory, his greatness from an age.

3 Those ruling in their kingdoms and men renowned in power; those counseling in their understanding, those reporting in prophecies;

4 leaders of a people in counsels and in understanding of the people's writing, wise words in their discipline;

5 those seeking out melodies of musicians and recounting verses in writing;

6 rich men supplied with strength, at peace in their dwellings;

7 all these were glorified in generations, and in their days were a boast.

8 There are some of them who left a name for the recounting of praises;

9 and there are those of whom there is no remembrance, and they perished as though they had not existed and became as though they had not come to be, and their children after them.

10 But these are men of mercy, whose righteous deeds were not forgotten;

11 with their seed it will remain, their descendants a good inheritance;

12 in the covenants their seed stood, and their children because of them;

13 until an age their seed will remain, and their glory will not be erased;

14 their bodies were buried in peace, and their name lives for generations;

15 peoples will recount their wisdom, and an assembly proclaims their praise.

16 Enoch pleased the Lord and was transferred, an example of repentance for the generations.

17 Noe was found perfect, righteous; at a time of wrath he became an exchange; through him a remnant came to be for the earth when a flood occurred;

18 covenants of an age were established with him, that all flesh might not be erased by a flood.

19 Abraam is a great father of a multitude of nations, and none was found like him in glory;

20 who kept the law of the Most High and entered a covenant with him; in his flesh he established a covenant, and in testing he was found faithful;

21 for this reason by an oath he established for him that nations be blessed in his seed, to multiply him like the dust of the earth and raise his seed like stars and give them an inheritance from sea to sea and from a river to the extremity of the earth.

22 And in Isaak he established thus because of Abraam his father.

23 The blessing of all human beings and a covenant he caused to rest upon Iakob's head; he recognized him in his blessings and gave to him as an inheritance; and he distinguished his portions, among twelve tribes he divided them.

Chapter 45

1 And from him he brought forth a man of mercy finding favor in the eyes of all flesh, loved by God and human beings, Moyses, whose remembrance is in blessings;

2 he likened him to the glory of holy ones and magnified him in the fears of enemies;

3 at his words he made signs cease; he glorified him before the face of kings; he commanded him concerning his people and showed him of his glory;

4 in faithfulness and gentleness he sanctified him; he chose him from all flesh;

5 he made him hear his voice and brought him into the gloom and gave him commandments face to face, a law of life and knowledge, to teach Iakob a covenant and Israel his judgments.

6 Aaron he exalted as a holy one like him, his brother from the tribe of Levi;

7 he established him as a covenant of an age and gave him the priesthood of a people; he made him blessed in adornment and girded him with a robe of glory;

8 he clothed him with the perfection of boasting and strengthened him with instruments of strength, breeches and a robe reaching to the feet and a shoulder garment;

9 and he encircled him with little pomegranates, with very many golden bells all around, to sound a voice in his steps, to make a sound audible in a temple as a remembrance for sons of his people;

10 with a holy robe, gold and violet and purple, the work of an embroiderer, an oracle of judgment, manifestations of truth, with spun scarlet, an artisan's work,

11 with costly stones of seal engraving in a gold setting, a stone worker's work, for a remembrance in an engraved inscription according to the number of tribes of Israel;

12 a golden crown above a turban, an impression of a seal of holiness, a boast of honor, a work of strength, adorned objects of desire for eyes;

13 before him such beautiful things had not come to be; until an age no one of another race put them on except his sons alone and his descendants continually.

14 His sacrifices will be offered wholly, continually twice each day.

15 Moyses filled his hands and anointed him with holy oil; it became for him a covenant of an age, and for his seed in the days of heaven, to minister to him and also serve as priest and bless his people in the name.

16 He chose him from every living being to bring an offering to the Lord, incense and fragrance for a remembrance, to make atonement for your people.

17 He gave him authority in his commandments, in covenants of judgments, to teach Iakob the testimonies and illuminate Israel in his law.

18 Strangers banded together against him and envied him in the wilderness, the men around Dathan and Abiron and the congregation of Kore, in fury and wrath;

19 the Lord saw and did not take pleasure, and they were brought to an end in fury of wrath; he did portents to them, to consume them in the fire of his flame.

20 And he added glory to Aaron and gave him an inheritance; firstfruits of first produce he allotted him, bread among the first he prepared as a fullness;

21 for they too will eat the Lord's sacrifices, which he gave both to him and to his seed.

22 But in the people's land he will not inherit, and he has no portion among the people; for he himself is your portion and inheritance.

23 And Phinees son of Eleazar is third in glory, in his being zealous in fear of the Lord and his standing at the people's turning in the goodness of his soul's readiness; and he made atonement for Israel.

24 For this reason a covenant of peace was established for him, to preside over holy things and his people, that for him and his seed there might be the greatness of priesthood into the ages.

25 And a covenant for David son of Iessai from the tribe of Iouda, an inheritance of a king, son from son alone; Aaron's inheritance is also for his seed.

26 May he give you wisdom in your heart to judge his people in righteousness, that their good things may not vanish, and their glory for their generations.

Chapter 46

1 Mighty in war is Iesous of Naue, and a successor of Moyses in prophecies, who became, according to his name, great for the salvation of his chosen ones, to take vengeance upon enemies rising up, so as to give Israel an inheritance.

2 How he was glorified in raising his hands and stretching out a sword against cities.

3 Who before him stood thus? For he brought on the Lord's wars.

4 Was not the sun hindered by his hand, and did not one day become as two?

5 He called upon the Most High ruler when enemies pressed him all around, and the great Lord listened to him with hailstones of mighty power;

6 he dashed war down upon a nation and at the descent destroyed those resisting, that nations might know his full armor, because his war is before the Lord.

7 For he too followed after the ruler and in the days of Moyses did mercy, he and Chaleb son of Iephonne, to resist before an assembly, to restrain a people from sin and abate murmuring of wickedness.

8 And they, being two, were preserved out of six hundred thousand foot soldiers, to bring them into an inheritance, into a land flowing with milk and honey.

9 And the Lord gave Chaleb strength, and until old age it remained with him, for him to mount the height of the land, and his seed held an inheritance,

10 so that all the sons of Israel might see that it is good to walk after the Lord.

11 And the judges, each by his own name, whose heart did not prostitute itself and who did not turn away from the Lord, may their remembrance be in blessings;

12 may their bones bloom again from their place, and their name be exchanged anew upon sons of those glorified among them.

13 Loved by his Lord, Samouel, a prophet of the Lord, established a kingdom and anointed rulers over his people;

14 by the Lord's law he judged a congregation, and the Lord inspected Iakob;

15 in his faithfulness he was proven exact as a prophet, and in his utterances he was known as faithful in vision.

16 And he called upon the Lord, the ruler, when his enemies pressed all around, with the offering of a suckling lamb;

17 and the Lord thundered from heaven and with a great sound made his voice audible

18 and wiped out leaders of Tyrians and all rulers of Phylistiim.

19 And before the time of sleep of an age he testified before the Lord and his anointed, Money and even sandals I have not taken from any flesh; and no person accused him.

20 And after falling asleep he prophesied and showed a king his death and raised his voice from earth in prophecy, to erase a people's lawlessness.

Chapter 47

1 And after him Nathan arose to prophesy in the days of David.

2 As fat separated from a salvation offering, so was David from the sons of Israel.

3 With lions he played as with young goats, and with bears as with lambs of sheep.

4 In his youth did he not kill a giant and remove reproach from a people by raising a hand with a sling stone and casting down Goliath's pride?

5 For he called upon the Lord Most High, and he gave strength in his right hand to remove a person powerful in war, to raise the horn of his people.

6 Thus with myriads they glorified him and praised him with the Lord's blessings, when a diadem of glory was brought to him;

7 for he wiped out enemies all around and brought to nothing the hostile Phylistiim; until today he shattered their horn.

8 In every work of his he gave confession to the holy Most High with an utterance of glory; with all his heart he sang hymns and loved him who made him.

9 And he established psalm singers opposite the altar, and from their sound to sweeten melodies;

10 he gave festivals comeliness and adorned seasons to completion, in their praising his holy name and the sanctuary sounding from morning.

11 The Lord took away his sins and raised his horn into an age and gave him a covenant of kings and a throne of glory in Israel.

12 After him a knowledgeable son arose, and because of him he lodged in spaciousness;

13 Salomon reigned in days of peace, for whom God gave rest all around, that he might establish a house in his name and prepare a sanctuary into the age.

14 How you were made wise in your youth and filled like a river with understanding.

15 Your soul covered earth, and you filled it with parables of riddles;

16 to distant islands your name reached, and you were loved in your peace;

17 in songs and proverbs and parables and interpretations countries marveled at you.

18 In the name of the Lord God, called the God of Israel, you gathered gold like tin and multiplied silver like lead.

19 You inclined your loins to women, and you were ruled in your body;

20 you put a blemish on your glory and profaned your seed, to bring wrath upon your children and be pierced at your senselessness,

21 for the sovereignty to become divided and from Ephraim to rule a disobedient kingdom.

22 But the Lord will certainly not abandon his mercy and will certainly not destroy any of his words, nor erase his chosen one's offspring, and the seed of him who loved him he will certainly not remove; and to Iakob he gave a remnant, and to David a root from him.

23 And Salomon rested with his fathers and left after him from his seed the people's senselessness, and Roboam, deficient in understanding, who made a people revolt by his counsel.

24 And Ieroboam son of Nabat, who caused Israel to sin and gave Ephraim a way of sin; and their sins increased exceedingly, to remove them from their land;

25 and they sought out every wickedness until vengeance came upon them.

Chapter 48

1 And Elias arose, a prophet like fire, and his word burned like a torch;

2 who brought famine upon them and by his zeal made them few;

3 by the Lord's word he held back heaven; thus he brought down fire three times.

4 How you were glorified, Elias, in your wonders; and who is like you in boasting?

5 He who raised a dead person from death and from Hades by the word of the Most High;

6 he who brought down kings to destruction and honored ones from their bed;

7 hearing reproof at Sina and judgments of vengeance at Choreb;

8 he who anoints kings for repayment and prophets as successors after him;

9 he who was taken up in a whirlwind of fire, in a chariot of fiery horses;

10 he who was recorded in reproofs for times, to abate wrath before fury, to turn a father's heart toward a son and establish the tribes of Iakob.

11 Blessed are those who saw you and those who have fallen asleep in love; for we too will surely live.

12 Elias, who was sheltered in a whirlwind, and Elisaie was filled with his spirit; and in his days he was not shaken by a ruler, and no one oppressed him.

13 No word surpassed him, and in sleep his body prophesied;

14 and in his life he did portents, and at death his works were wonders.

15 In all these things the people did not repent, and they did not depart from their sins, until they were plundered from their land and dispersed in all the earth.

16 And the people was left very few, and a ruler in the house of David; some of them did what was pleasing, but some multiplied sins.

17 Ezekias fortified his city and brought water into its midst; with iron he dug sheer rock and built fountains for waters.

18 In his days Sennacherim came up and sent Rapsakes, and departed; and he raised his hand against Sion and boasted greatly in his pride.

19 Then their hearts and hands were shaken, and they suffered labor pains like women giving birth;

20 and they called upon the merciful Lord, spreading their hands toward him. And the holy one from heaven quickly listened to them and redeemed them by the hand of Esaias;

21 he struck the camp of the Assyrians, and his angel wiped them out.

22 For Ezekias did what was pleasing to the Lord and strengthened himself in the ways of David his father, which Esaias commanded, the prophet great and faithful in his vision.

23 In his days the sun went backward, and he added life to a king.

24 With a great spirit he saw the last things and comforted those mourning in Sion.

25 Until the age he showed the things that will be, and hidden things before they came to be.

Chapter 49

1 The remembrance of Iosias is like a composition of incense prepared by a perfumer's work; in every mouth it will be sweetened like honey and like music at a drinking party of wine.

2 He was directed in the turning of a people and removed abominations of lawlessness;

3 he directed his heart toward the Lord; in days of the lawless he strengthened piety.

4 Except for David and Ezekias and Iosias, all transgressed a transgression; for they abandoned the law of the Most High; the kings of Iouda ceased;

5 for they gave their horn to others and their glory to a foreign nation.

6 They burned a chosen city of a sanctuary and made its ways desolate

7 by the hand of Ieremias; for they afflicted him, and he was sanctified in the womb as a prophet to uproot and afflict and destroy, likewise to build and plant.

8 Iezekiel, who saw a vision of glory, which he showed him upon a chariot of cheroubin;

9 for he too remembered the enemies in a rainstorm, and to do good to those straightening ways.

10 And may the bones of the twelve prophets bloom again from their place; for they comforted Iakob and redeemed them in faithfulness of hope.

11 How shall we magnify Zorobabel? He too is like a seal upon a right hand, 12 so is Iesous son of Iosedek, who in their days built a house and raised a holy temple for the Lord, prepared for glory of an age.

13 And great is the remembrance of Neemias, who raised for us fallen walls and established gates and bars and rebuilt our house sites.

14 No one was created upon the earth such as Enoch; for he too was taken up from the earth.

15 Nor was a man born like Ioseph, a leader of brothers, a support of a people, and his bones were inspected.

16 Sem and Seth were glorified among human beings, and above every living being in creation was Adam.

Chapter 50

1 Simon son of Onias, the great priest, who in his life repaired a house and in his days strengthened a temple;

2 and by him was founded the height of a double wall, a high support of the temple enclosure;

3 in his days a reservoir of waters was hewn out, a pit with a circumference like that of a sea;

4 he who cared for his people against falling and strengthened a city in a siege.

5 How he was glorified amid the surrounding people, at his departure from the house of the curtain;

6 like a morning star in the midst of clouds, like a full moon in its days,

7 like a sun shining upon the temple of the Most High, and like a bow illuminating in clouds of glory,

8 like a blossom of roses in days of new produce, like lilies at an outlet of water, like a shoot of Lebanon in days of summer,

9 like fire and frankincense upon a firepan, like a vessel of gold wholly hammered, adorned with every costly stone,

10 like an olive budding fruits and like a cypress rising into clouds.

11 When he took up a robe of glory and put on the perfection of boasting, in ascending the holy altar he glorified the enclosure of the sanctuary;

12 and when he received portions from priests' hands, and himself stood by the hearth of the altar, around him was a crown of brothers like a growth of cedars in Lebanon, and they surrounded him like trunks of palms,

13 and all the sons of Aaron in their glory, and the Lord's offering in their hands before all the assembly of Israel,

14 and ministering the completion upon altars, to adorn an offering of the Most High Almighty,

15 he stretched his hand over a libation bowl and poured a libation from the blood of a grape; he poured into the foundations of the altar a fragrant scent for the Most High, king of all.

16 Then the sons of Aaron cried out; with hammered trumpets they sounded, they made a great voice audible for a remembrance before the Most High;

17 then all the people together hastened and fell upon their face upon the earth, to worship their Lord, God Almighty, Most High;

18 and the psalm singers praised with their voices; with very great sound a melody was sweetened;

19 and the people made supplication to the Lord Most High in prayer before the merciful one, until the Lord's adornment was completed and they finished his ministry.

20 Then, coming down, he raised his hands over all the assembly of the sons of Israel, to give the Lord's blessing from his lips and boast in his name;

21 and they repeated their worship to receive the blessing from the Most High.

22 And now bless the God of all, who does great things everywhere, who raises our days from the womb and deals with us according to his mercy.

23 May he give us gladness of heart, and may there be peace in our days in Israel according to the days of the age;

24 may he entrust his mercy to us, and in our days let him redeem us.

25 At two nations my soul was offended, and the third is not a nation;

26 those sitting on a mountain of Samareia, and Phylistiim, and the foolish people dwelling in Sikima.

27 Discipline of understanding and knowledge Iesous son of Sirach Eleazar, the Ierusalemite, inscribed in this book, who rained down wisdom from his heart.

28 Blessed is he who will be occupied with these things, and having placed them upon his heart he will become wise;

29 for if he does them, he will be strong for everything; because the Lord's light is his trace.

Chapter 51

1 I will confess to you, Lord, king, and praise you, God my savior; I confess to your name,

2 because you became my shelter and helper and redeemed my body from destruction and from a snare of a tongue's slander, from lips working falsehood; and before those standing nearby you became a helper and redeemed me,

3 according to the abundance of your mercy and name, from gnashing, ready for food, from the hand of those seeking my soul, from the many afflictions which I had,

4 from the choking of a pyre all around and from the midst of fire which I did not kindle,

5 from the depth of the belly of Hades and from an unclean tongue and a false word.

6 To a king, slander of an unjust tongue. My soul drew near as far as death, and my life was close to Hades below.

7 They surrounded me on every side, and there was no helper; I looked to assistance from human beings, and there was none.

8 And I remembered your mercy, Lord, and your work from an age, that you deliver those awaiting you and save them from the hand of enemies.

9 And I raised my petition from earth and made supplication for rescue from death;

10 I called upon the Lord, father of my lord, not to abandon me in days of affliction, at a time of proud acts, of helplessness; I will praise your name continually and sing hymns in confession.

11 And my supplication was heard; for you saved me from destruction and delivered me from an evil time.

12 For this reason I will confess to you and praise you and bless the Lord's name.

13 While still younger, before I wandered, I sought wisdom openly in my prayer.

14 Before a temple I asked concerning her, and until the last I will seek her out.

15 From blossom, as of a ripening grape, my heart rejoiced in her. My foot stepped in uprightness; from my youth I tracked her.

16 I inclined my ear a little and received, and found much discipline for myself.

17 Progress came to me in her; to him who gives me wisdom I will give glory.

18 For I considered doing her, and I was zealous for the good and will certainly not be ashamed.

19 My soul has struggled in her, and in doing the law I was exact. I spread my hands toward the height and mourned the ignorances of her.

20 I directed my soul toward her and in cleansing found her. I acquired a heart with her from the beginning; for this reason I will certainly not be abandoned.

21 And my belly was troubled to seek her out; for this reason I acquired a good possession.

22 The Lord gave me a tongue as my wage, and with it I will praise him.

23 Draw near to me, undisciplined ones, and lodge in a house of discipline.

24 Why do you say you are lacking in these things, and your souls thirst exceedingly?

25 I opened my mouth and spoke, Acquire for yourselves without silver.

26 Put your neck beneath a yoke, and let your soul receive discipline. She is near to find.

27 See with your eyes that I labored little and found much rest for myself.

28 Partake of discipline with a great number of silver, and acquire much gold in her.

29 May your soul rejoice in his mercy, and may you not be ashamed in his praise.

30 Work your work before the time, and he will give your wage in his time.

Psalms of Solomon

Chapter 1

1 I cried to the Lord when I was afflicted to the utmost, to God when sinners attacked;

2 suddenly a cry of war was heard before me; [I said] He will listen to me, because I was filled with righteousness.

3 I reasoned in my heart that I was filled with righteousness, when I prospered and became abundant in children.

4 Their wealth was spread into all the earth, and their glory to the extremity of the earth.

5 They were raised as far as the stars; they said, They will certainly not fall;

6 and they acted insolently in their good things and did not bear it.

7 Their sins were in hidden places, and I did not know;

8 their lawlessness exceeded the nations before them; they profaned the Lord's holy things with profanation.

Chapter 2

1 t A psalm for Salomon; concerning Ierusalem.

1 When the sinner acted proudly, with a battering ram he cast down fortified walls, and you did not hinder him.

2 Foreign nations ascended upon your altar; they trampled with their sandals in pride,

3 because the sons of Ierusalem defiled the Lord's holy things; they profaned God's gifts with lawlessness.

4 Because of these things he said, Cast them far away from me; I take no pleasure in them.

5 The beauty of her glory was despised before God; it was dishonored to the utmost.

6 The sons and daughters are in evil captivity; their neck is under a seal, under a mark among the nations.

7 According to their sins he did to them, because he abandoned them into the hands of those prevailing.

8 For he turned his face away from mercy toward them, young and old and their children altogether, because they did evil things altogether, not listening.

9 And heaven was deeply grieved, and earth abhorred them, because no person upon it did as much as they did.

10 And earth will know all your righteous judgments, O God.

11 They set the sons of Ierusalem for mockery in place of prostitutes in her; everyone passing by entered before the sun.

12 They mocked their lawlessness just as they themselves were doing; before the sun they exposed their injustices.

13 And the daughters of Ierusalem were profane according to your judgment, because they themselves defiled themselves in the mire of mingling.

14 I suffer pain in my belly and my inward parts over these things.

15 I will justify you, O God, in uprightness of heart, because in your judgments is your righteousness, O God.

16 Because you repaid sinners according to their works and according to their exceedingly wicked sins.

17 You uncovered their sins, that your judgment might appear; you erased their remembrance from earth.

18 God is a righteous judge and will not admire a face.

19 For nations reproached Ierusalem in trampling; her beauty was dragged down from a throne of glory.

20 She girded herself with sackcloth instead of a garment of comeliness, a cord around her head instead of a crown.

21 She removed a turban of glory, which God had put around her; her beauty is in dishonor; she was cast upon the earth.

22 And I saw and made supplication before the Lord's face and said, Let it suffice, Lord, that your hand is heavy upon Ierusalem in the bringing of nations;

23 because they mocked and did not spare, in wrath and fury with resentment; and they will be brought to an end unless you, Lord, rebuke them in your wrath.

24 Because they did not do it in zeal, but in desire of soul to pour out their wrath upon us in plunder.

25 Do not delay, O God, in repaying upon their heads, in declaring the dragon's pride in dishonor.

26 And I did not wait long until God showed me his insolence, pierced upon the mountains of Egypt, despised beyond the least upon earth and sea;

27 his body carried about upon waves in great insult, and there was no one burying him, because he despised him in dishonor.

28 He did not reckon that he is a human being, and he did not reckon the later end.

29 He said, I will be lord of earth and sea; and he did not recognize that God is great, mighty in his great strength.

30 He is king upon the heavens and judges kings and rulers;

31 he who raises me to glory and puts the proud to sleep in destruction of an age, in dishonor, because they did not know him.

32 And now see, great men of the earth, the Lord's judgment, because he is a great king and righteous, judging what is beneath heaven.

33 Bless God, you who fear the Lord with knowledge, because the Lord's mercy is upon those fearing him, with judgment

34 to distinguish between righteous person and sinner, to repay sinners into the age according to their works

35 and have mercy on a righteous person from a sinner's humiliation, and repay a sinner for what he did to a righteous person.

36 Because the Lord is kind to those calling upon him with endurance, to do according to his mercy for his holy ones, to stand continually before him in strength.

37 Blessed is the Lord into the age before his servants.

Chapter 3

1 t A psalm for Salomon; concerning righteous people.

1 Why do you sleep, soul, and not bless the Lord? Sing a new hymn to God, who is to be praised.

2 Sing and keep watch for his watching, because a psalm to God from a good heart is good.

3 The righteous remember the Lord continually, in confession and justification the Lord's judgments.

4 A righteous person will not disregard being disciplined by the Lord; his good will is continually before the Lord.

5 The righteous person stumbled and justified the Lord; he fell and looks to what God will do to him; he watches from where his salvation will come.

6 The truth of the righteous is from God their savior; sin upon sin does not lodge in a righteous person's house;

7 the righteous person continually inspects his house to remove injustice in his transgression.

8 He made atonement for ignorance with fasting and humiliation of his soul, and the Lord cleanses every holy man and his house.

9 A sinner stumbled and curses his life, the day of his birth and his mother's labor pains.

10 He added sins upon sins to his life; he fell, because his fall is evil, and he will not rise.

11 The sinner's destruction is into the age, and he will not be remembered when he inspects the righteous.

12 This is the portion of sinners into the age; but those fearing the Lord will rise to eternal life, and their life is in the Lord's light and will no longer cease.

Chapter 4

1 t A discourse of Salomon; for people-pleasers.

1 Why do you, profane one, sit in a council of holy ones, and your heart has departed far from the Lord, provoking the God of Israel with unlawful deeds?

2 Excessive in words, excessive in signaling beyond everyone, he who is harsh in words to condemn sinners in judgment;

3 and his hand is among the first against him, as in zeal, and he himself is guilty of a variety of sins and of lack of self-control.

4 His eyes are upon every woman without distinction; his tongue is false in a transaction with an oath.

5 At night and in hidden places he sins as though unseen; with his eyes he speaks to every woman in a compact of evil; quick to enter every house cheerfully, as though innocent.

6 May God remove those living hypocritically with holy ones, with corruption of his flesh and poverty in his life;

7 may God uncover the works of people-pleasing human beings, his works in derision and mockery.

8 And may holy ones justify their God's judgment when sinners are removed from before a righteous person, a people-pleaser speaking law with deceit.

9 And their eyes are upon a man's house in stability, like a snake, to dissolve each other's wisdom with words of the unlawful.

10 His words are deceptions for the practice of unjust desire; he did not depart until he prevailed, to scatter as in orphanhood;

11 and he made a house desolate because of unlawful desire; he deceived with words, because there is none seeing and judging;

12 he was filled with this unlawful deed, and his eyes are upon another house, to destroy with words of encouragement.

13 His soul, like Hades, is not filled with all these things.

14 May his portion, Lord, be in dishonor before you, his departure with sighs and his entrance with a curse;

15 his life in pains and poverty and want, Lord, his sleep in griefs and his awakening in perplexities.

16 May sleep be taken away from his temples at night; may he fail in every work of his hands in dishonor.

17 May he enter his house empty-handed, and his house be deficient in everything with which he will fill his soul;

18 his old age in the solitude of childlessness until his taking away.

19 May the flesh of people-pleasers be scattered by beasts, and the bones of the unlawful before the sun in dishonor.

20 May ravens gouge out the eyes of hypocrites, because they made many people's houses desolate in dishonor and scattered them in desire

21 and did not remember God and did not fear God in all these things, and provoked God to wrath and exasperated him.

22 May he remove them from the earth, because they deceived souls of the innocent with false reasoning.

23 Blessed are those fearing the Lord in their innocence; the Lord will rescue them from deceitful people and sinners, and rescue us from every unlawful stumbling block.

24 May God remove those proudly doing every injustice, because the Lord our God is a great and mighty judge in righteousness.

25 May your mercy, Lord, be upon all those loving you.

Chapter 5

1 t A psalm for Salomon.

1 Lord God, I will praise your name in exultation, among those knowing your righteous judgments;

2 because you are kind and merciful, the refuge of the poor; when I cry to you, do not remain silent toward me.

3 For [anyone] will not take spoils from a powerful man; and who will take from all that you made, unless you give?

4 Because a person and his portion are from you by weight; he will not add to increase beyond your judgment, O God.

5 When we are afflicted we will call upon you for help, and you will not turn away our supplication, because you are our God.

6 Do not make your hand heavy upon us, that we may not sin through necessity.

7 And if you do not turn us back, we will not hold back, but we will come to you.

8 For if I hunger, I will cry to you, O God, and you will give to me.

9 The birds and fish you feed when you give rain to deserts for the sprouting of green grass;

10 you prepared fodder in a desert for every living being, and if they hunger, they will raise their face toward you.

11 Kings and rulers and peoples you feed, O God, and who is the hope of poor and needy except you, Lord?

12 And you will listen; because who is kind and equitable except you, to gladden a lowly person's soul when you open your hand in mercy?

13 A person's kindness is with sparing, and tomorrow's too, and if he repeats it without murmuring, even this you might marvel at.

14 But your gift is abundant with kindness and rich, and he whose hope is upon you will not spare in giving.

15 Upon all the earth is your mercy, Lord, in kindness.

16 Blessed is he whom God remembers in a proportion of sufficiency; if a person increases excessively, he sins.

17 What is moderate with righteousness is sufficient, and in this is the Lord's blessing unto fullness with righteousness.

18 May those fearing the Lord rejoice in good things, and your kindness be upon Israel in your kingdom.

19 Blessed is the Lord's glory, because he is our king.

Chapter 6

1 t In hope; for Salomon.

1 Blessed is a man whose heart is ready to call upon the Lord's name; when he remembers the Lord's name he will be saved.

2 His ways are directed by the Lord, and the works of his hands have been guarded by the Lord his God.

3 From a vision of his evil dreams his soul will not be troubled; in crossing rivers and in the tumult of seas he will not be terrified.

4 He rose from his sleep and blessed the Lord's name; for the stability of his heart he sang hymns to his God's name;

5 and he made supplication before the Lord's face concerning all his house, and the Lord heard the prayer of everyone in fear of God.

6 And every request of a soul hoping toward him the Lord fulfills; blessed is the Lord who does mercy to those loving him in truth.

Chapter 7

1 t For Salomon; of turning back.

1 Do not move your tent away from us, O God, that those who hated us without cause may not attack us.

2 Because you repelled them, O God; let their foot not tread the inheritance of your sanctuary.

3 You, by your will, discipline us, and do not give us to nations.

4 For if you send death, you will command it concerning us;

5 because you are merciful and will not be angered so as to bring us to an end.

6 When your name encamps in our midst, we will be shown mercy, and a nation will not prevail against us.

7 Because you are our shield, and we will call upon you, and you will listen to us.

8 Because you will have pity on the race of Israel into the age and will not repel it.

9 And we are beneath your yoke for the age, and the scourge of your discipline.

10 You will direct us at the time of your assistance, to have mercy on the house of Iakob for the day on which you promised them.

Chapter 8

1 t For Salomon; for strife.

1 Affliction and a voice of war my ear heard, a voice of a trumpet sounding slaughter and destruction;

2 a voice of many people like a very great wind, like a storm of much fire carried through a desert.

3 And I said [in] my heart, Where then will God judge him?

4 A voice I heard toward Ierusalem, a city of a sanctuary;

5 my loins were shattered from the hearing, my knees were paralyzed, my heart was afraid, my bones were troubled like flax.

6 I said, They will direct their ways in righteousness.

7 I considered God's judgments from the creation of heaven and earth; I justified God in his judgments from an age.

8 God uncovered their sins before the sun; all the earth knew God's righteous judgments.

9 In underground hidden places were their unlawful deeds, provoking wrath; son with mother and father with daughter were mingled together.

10 Each committed adultery with his neighbor's wife; they made agreements among themselves with an oath concerning these things.

11 They plundered God's holy things as though there were no heir redeeming.

12 They trod the Lord's altar from every uncleanness, and with a discharge of blood they defiled the sacrifices as profane meats.

13 They left no sin which they did not do beyond the nations.

14 For this reason God mixed for them a spirit of wandering; he gave them a cup of unmixed wine to drink unto drunkenness.

15 He brought him from the extremity of the earth, him who strikes mightily; he decreed war upon Ierusalem and her land.

16 The rulers of the land met him with joy; they said to him, Your way is wished for; come, enter with peace.

17 They smoothed rough ways for his entrance, opened gates toward Ierusalem, crowned her walls.

18 He entered like a father into his sons' house with peace; he set his feet with great security.

19 He seized her tower citadels and the wall of Ierusalem, because God brought him with security in their wandering.

20 He destroyed their rulers and everyone wise in counsel; he poured out the blood of those dwelling in Ierusalem like water of uncleanness.

21 He led away their sons and daughters, whom they begot in profanation.

22 They did according to their uncleanness, just as their fathers; they defiled Ierusalem and the things sanctified for God's name.

23 God was justified in his judgments among the nations of the earth, and God's holy ones were like lambs in innocence in their midst.

24 Praiseworthy is the Lord who judges all the earth in his righteousness.

25 Behold now, O God, you showed us your judgment in your righteousness; our eyes saw your judgments, O God.

26 We justified your honored name into ages, because you are the God of righteousness, judging Israel with discipline.

27 Turn your mercy toward us, O God, and have pity on us;

28 gather the dispersion of Israel with mercy and kindness, because your faithfulness is with us.

29 And we hardened our neck, and you are our disciplinarian.

30 Do not overlook us, our God, that nations may not swallow us as though there were no redeemer.

31 And you are our God from the beginning, and our hope is upon you, Lord;

32 and we will not hold back from you, because your judgments upon us are kind.

33 For us and our children is favor into the age; Lord our savior, we will no longer be shaken for the time of the age.

34 Praiseworthy is the Lord in his judgments in the mouth of holy ones, and blessed is Israel by the Lord into the age.

Chapter 9

1 t For Salomon; for reproof.

1 When Israel was led away in exile into a foreign land, when they departed from the Lord who redeemed them, they were cast away from the inheritance which the Lord gave them.

2 In every nation is the dispersion of Israel according to God's utterance, that you may be justified, O God, in your righteousness amid our lawlessness, because you are a righteous judge over all the peoples of the earth.

3 For no one doing unjust things will be hidden from your knowledge, and the righteous deeds of your holy ones are before you, Lord; and where will a person be hidden from your knowledge, O God?

4 Our works are in the choice and authority of our soul, to do righteousness and injustice by the works of our hands; and in your righteousness you inspect sons of human beings.

5 He who does righteousness treasures up life for himself with the Lord, and he who does injustice is himself responsible for his soul in destruction; for the Lord's judgments are in righteousness upon each man and house.

6 To whom will you show kindness, O God, except those calling upon the Lord? You will cleanse a soul amid sins in confession, in declarations, because shame is ours and our faces' concerning everything.

7 And to whom will you forgive sins except those who have sinned? You will bless righteous people and not hold them accountable for what they sinned, and your kindness is upon those sinning in repentance.

8 And now you are God, and we are the people whom you loved; see and have pity, God of Israel, because we are yours, and do not remove your mercy from us, that they may not attack us.

9 Because you chose the seed of Abraam above all the nations and placed your name upon us, Lord, and you will not repel us into the age.

10 In a covenant you made a disposition with our fathers concerning us, and we will hope upon you in the turning of our soul.

11 The Lord's mercy is upon the house of Israel into the age and beyond.

Chapter 10

1 t In hymns; for Salomon.

1 Blessed is a man whom the Lord remembered in reproof, and he was turned around from an evil way by a scourge, to be cleansed from sin so as not to multiply it.

2 He who prepares a back for scourges will be cleansed; for the Lord is kind to those enduring discipline.

3 For he will straighten the ways of righteous people and will not distort them in discipline, and the Lord's mercy is upon those loving him in truth.

4 And the Lord will remember his servants in mercy; for the testimony is in the law of an eternal covenant, the Lord's testimony is upon human ways in inspection.

5 Righteous and holy is our Lord in his judgments into the age, and Israel will praise the Lord's name in gladness.

6 And holy ones will confess in an assembly of the people, and God will have mercy on poor people in Israel's gladness;

7 because God is kind and merciful into the age, and congregations of Israel will glorify the Lord's name.

8 The Lord's salvation is upon the house of Israel unto eternal gladness.

Chapter 11

1 t For Salomon; for expectation.

1 Blow a trumpet in Sion, a trumpet signaling holy things; proclaim in Ierusalem a voice of one announcing good news; because God had mercy on Israel in their inspection.

2 Stand, Ierusalem, on a height and see your children from east and west gathered together by the Lord.

3 From the north they come with the gladness of their God; from distant islands God gathered them.

4 High mountains he lowered to level ground for them; the hills fled from their entrance;

5 the woods shaded them in their passage; every fragrant tree God caused to spring up for them,

6 that Israel might pass in an inspection of their God's glory.

7 Put on, Ierusalem, the garments of your glory; prepare the robe of your sanctuary; because God spoke good things for Israel into the age and beyond.

8 May the Lord do what he spoke concerning Israel and Ierusalem; may the Lord raise Israel in the name of his glory;

9 the Lord's mercy is upon Israel into the age and beyond.

Chapter 12

1 t For Salomon; on the tongue of the unlawful.

1 Lord, rescue my soul from an unlawful and wicked man, from an unlawful and whispering tongue speaking false and deceitful things.

2 In a variety of turns are the words of a wicked man's tongue, like fire among a people kindling its beauty.

3 His dwelling is to burn houses with a false tongue, to cut down trees of gladness that flames against the unlawful, to confound houses in war with whispering lips.

4 May God put the lips of the unlawful far from innocent people in perplexity, and may the bones of whisperers be scattered away from those fearing the Lord; in a fire of flame may a whispering tongue perish away from holy ones.

5 May the Lord guard a quiet soul hating unjust people, and may the Lord direct a man making peace at home.

6 The Lord's salvation is upon Israel his servant into the age; and may sinners perish altogether from before the Lord, and may the Lord's holy ones inherit the Lord's promises.

Chapter 13

1 t A psalm for Salomon; consolation of the righteous.

1 The Lord's right hand sheltered me; the Lord's right hand spared us;

2 the Lord's arm saved us from a passing sword, from famine and the death of sinners.

3 Evil beasts ran against them; with their teeth they tore their flesh, and with their molars they crushed their bones;

4 and from all these things the Lord rescued us.

5 The pious person was troubled because of his transgressions, lest he be taken away together with the sinners;

6 because terrible is the sinner's overthrow, and none of all these things will touch a righteous person.

7 Because the discipline of the righteous in ignorance and the overthrow of sinners are not alike.

8 With restraint a righteous person is disciplined, that the sinner may not rejoice over the righteous person;

9 because he will admonish a righteous person as a beloved son, and his discipline is as that of a firstborn.

10 Because the Lord will spare his holy ones and erase their transgressions by discipline.

11 For the life of the righteous is into the age; but sinners will be taken away to destruction, and their remembrance will no longer be found;

12 but upon the holy ones is the Lord's mercy, and upon those fearing him his mercy.

Chapter 14

1 t A hymn for Salomon.

1 The Lord is faithful to those loving him in truth, to those enduring his discipline,

2 to those walking in the righteousness of his commands, in the law which he commanded us for our life.

3 The Lord's holy ones will live in him into the age; the Lord's garden, the trees of life, are his holy ones.

4 Their planting is rooted into the age; they will not be plucked out all the days of heaven;

5 because Israel is God's portion and inheritance.

6 And not so are the sinners and unlawful, who loved a day in participation in their sin;

7 in the smallness of rottenness is their desire, and they did not remember God.

8 Because human ways are continually known before him, and he knows the heart's chambers before they come to be.

9 For this reason their inheritance is Hades and darkness and destruction, and they will not be found on the day of mercy for the righteous;

10 but the Lord's holy ones will inherit life in gladness.

Chapter 15

1 t A psalm for Salomon with a song.

1 When I was afflicted I called upon the Lord's name; I hoped for help from the God of Iakob and was saved; because you are the hope and refuge of the poor, O God.

2 For who has strength, O God, except to confess to you in truth? And in what is a person powerful except confessing to your name?

3 A new psalm with a song in gladness of heart, fruit of lips with the tuned instrument of a tongue, a firstfruit of lips from a holy and righteous heart,

4 he who does these things will not be shaken into the age by evil; a flame of fire and the wrath of unjust people will not touch him,

5 when it goes forth against sinners from before the Lord to destroy every substance of sinners;

6 because God's sign is upon righteous people for salvation.

7 Famine and sword and death are far from righteous people, for they will flee from holy ones like those pursued in war;

8 but they will pursue sinners and overtake them, and those doing lawlessness will not escape the Lord's judgment;

9 they will be overtaken as by experienced enemies, for the sign of destruction is upon their forehead.

10 And the inheritance of sinners is destruction and darkness, and their lawlessness will pursue them as far as Hades below.

11 Their inheritance will not be found for their children, for sins will make sinners' houses desolate;

12 and sinners will perish into the age on the day of the Lord's judgment, when God inspects the earth with his judgment;

13 but those fearing the Lord will be shown mercy on it and live in the mercy of their God; and sinners will perish for the time of the age.

Chapter 16

1 t A hymn for Salomon; for assistance to holy ones.

1 When my soul grew drowsy away from the Lord, I nearly slipped in the deep sleep of those sleeping far from God,

2 my soul was nearly poured out into death, close to the gates of Hades with a sinner,

3 when my soul was carried away from the Lord God of Israel, had the Lord not helped me by his mercy into the age.

4 He pricked me like a horse's goad for his watching; my savior and helper at every time saved me.

5 I will confess to you, O God, because you helped me unto salvation and did not reckon me with sinners unto destruction.

6 Do not remove your mercy from me, O God, nor remembrance of you from my heart until death.

7 Hold me back, O God, from evil sin and from every wicked woman causing a senseless person to stumble.

8 And let not the beauty of a woman acting unlawfully deceive me, nor that of anything subject to unprofitable sin.

9 Direct the works of my hands in your place, and preserve my steps in remembrance of you.

10 Enclose my tongue and my lips in words of truth; put wrath and irrational fury far from me.

11 Put murmuring and faintheartedness in affliction far from me, if I sin when you discipline for turning back.

12 But with good will and cheerfulness support my soul; when you strengthen my soul, what is given will suffice for me.

13 Because unless you strengthen, who will endure discipline in poverty?

14 When a soul is reproved by the hand of his rottenness, your testing is in his flesh and in the affliction of poverty;

15 when a righteous person endures in these things, he will be shown mercy by the Lord.

Chapter 17

1 t A psalm for Salomon with a song; for the king.

1 Lord, you yourself are our king into the age and beyond; because in you, O God, our soul will boast.

2 And what is the span of a person's life upon the earth? According to his span is his hope upon him too.

3 But we will hope upon God our savior; because our God's might is into the age with mercy, and our God's kingdom is into the age over the nations in judgment.

4 You, Lord, chose David as king over Israel, and you swore to him concerning his seed into the age, that his royal house should not cease before you.

5 And in our sins sinners rose against us; they attacked us and drove us out, those to whom you did not promise; with violence they took away and did not glorify your honored name.

6 In glory they established a royal house in place of their height; they made David's throne desolate in the pride of exchange.

7 And you, O God, will cast them down and remove their seed from the earth when a person foreign to our race rises against them.

8 According to their sins you will repay them, O God, for it to be found for them according to their works.

9 God did not have mercy on them; he searched out their seed and did not leave one of them.

10 Faithful is the Lord in all his judgments which he executes upon the earth.

11 The lawless one made our land desolate of its inhabitants; they made young and old and their children vanish together;

12 in the wrath of his beauty he sent them out as far as the west, and the rulers of the land for mockery, and did not spare.

13 In estrangement the enemy acted proudly, and his heart is estranged from our God.

14 And all that he did in Ierusalem was just as the nations too do in the cities of their strength.

15 And the sons of the covenant dominated them among mixed nations; there was none among them doing mercy and truth in Ierusalem.

16 Those loving congregations of holy ones fled from them; like sparrows they flew out from their resting place.

17 They wandered in deserts to save their souls from evil, and precious in the eyes of sojourning was a soul saved from among them.

18 Into all the earth came their scattering by lawless people, because heaven held back from dripping rain upon the earth.

19 Perennial springs from abysses, from high mountains, were restrained, because there was none among them doing righteousness and judgment.

20 From their ruler and the least of the people they were in every sin, the king in unlawful conduct and the judge in disobedience and the people in sin.

21 See, Lord, and raise for them their king, a son of David, for the time which you chose, O God, for him to reign over Israel your servant;

22 and gird him with strength to shatter unjust rulers, to cleanse Ierusalem from nations trampling in destruction,

23 in wisdom of righteousness to drive sinners out of the inheritance, to wipe out a sinner's pride like a potter's vessels,

24 with an iron rod to shatter all their substance, to destroy unlawful nations with the word of his mouth,

25 at his threat for nations to flee from before him, and to reprove sinners by the word of their heart.

26 And he will gather a holy people whom he will lead in righteousness, and judge the tribes of a people sanctified by the Lord his God;

27 and he will not allow injustice to lodge any longer in their midst, and no person knowing evil will dwell with them; for he will know them, that all of them are sons of God.

28 And he will apportion them in their tribes upon the earth, and a sojourner and one of another race will no longer sojourn with them;

29 he will judge peoples and nations in the wisdom of his righteousness. Musical interlude.

30 And he will have peoples of nations serve him beneath his yoke, and he will glorify the Lord prominently in all the earth and cleanse Ierusalem in sanctification as also from the beginning,

31 for nations to come from the extremity of the earth to see his glory, bringing as gifts her exhausted sons, and to see the Lord's glory with which God glorified her.

32 And he is a righteous king taught by God over them, and there is no injustice in his days among them, because all are holy, and their king is the Lord's anointed.

33 For he will not hope upon horse and rider and bow, nor multiply gold or silver for himself for war, and with many [peoples] he will not gather hopes for a day of war.

34 The Lord himself is his king, the hope of him who is powerful through hope in God, and he will have mercy on all the nations before him in fear.

35 For he will strike earth with the word of his mouth into an age; he will bless the Lord's people with wisdom and gladness;

36 and he is clean from sin to rule a great people, to reprove rulers and remove sinners by the strength of a word.

37 And he will not weaken in his days, relying on his God; because God made him powerful in a holy spirit and wise in counsel of understanding with strength and righteousness.

38 And the Lord's blessing is with him in strength, and he will not weaken.

39 His hope is upon the Lord, and who can prevail against him?

40 Strong in his works and mighty in fear of God, shepherding the Lord's flock in faithfulness and righteousness, and he will not allow weakness among them in their pasture.

41 In equality he will lead them all, and there will be no pride among them, for oppression to occur among them.

42 This is the comeliness of the king of Israel, which God knew, to raise him over the house of Israel to discipline it.

43 His utterances have been refined beyond the foremost precious gold; in congregations he will distinguish the tribes of a sanctified people; his words are like words of holy ones among sanctified peoples.

44 Blessed are those who come to be in those days to see the good things of Israel in a congregation of tribes, which God will do.

45 May God hasten his mercy upon Israel; may he rescue us from the uncleanness of profane enemies.

46 The Lord himself is our king into the age and beyond.

Chapter 18

1 t A psalm for Salomon; further concerning the Lord's anointed.

1 Lord, your mercy is upon the works of your hands into the age, your kindness with a rich gift upon Israel;

2 your eyes look upon them, and none of them will lack; your ears listen to a poor person's supplication in hope.

3 Your judgments are upon all the earth with mercy, and your love upon the seed of Abraam, the sons of Israel.

4 Your discipline is upon us as upon a firstborn, only-begotten son, to turn a listening soul from lack of learning in ignorance.

5 May God cleanse Israel for a day of mercy with blessing, for a day of choosing when he brings up his anointed.

6 Blessed are those who come to be in those days to see the Lord's good things which he will do for the coming generation

7 beneath the rod of discipline of the Lord's anointed, in fear of his God, in wisdom of spirit and righteousness and strength,

8 to direct a man in works of righteousness by fear of God, to establish them all before the Lord,

9 a good generation in fear of God, in days of mercy. Musical interlude.

10 Great is our God and glorious, dwelling in the heights, who arranged luminaries in their course for seasons of hours from days to days, and they did not transgress the way which you commanded them;

11 in fear of God is their way each day, from the day on which God created them and until an age;

12 and they did not wander from the day on which he created them; from ancient generations they did not depart from their ways, unless God commanded them at the bidding of his servants.

Hosea

Chapter 1

1 The Lord's word which came to Osee son of Beeri in the days of Ozias and Ioatham and Achaz and Ezekias, kings of Iouda, and in the days of Ieroboam son of Ioas, king of Israel.

2 The beginning of the Lord's word to Osee; and the Lord said to Osee, Go, take for yourself a wife of prostitution and children of prostitution, because the land will surely prostitute itself away from following the Lord.

3 And he went and took Gomer daughter of Debelaim, and she conceived and bore him a son.

4 And the Lord said to him, Call his name Iezrael, because yet a little while and I will avenge the blood of Iezrael upon the house of Iou and make the kingdom of the house of Israel cease;

5 and it will be on that day, I will shatter Israel's bow in the valley of Iezrael. –

6 And she conceived again and bore a daughter. And he said to him, Call her name Not – shown-mercy, because I will certainly no longer continue to have mercy on the house of Israel, but I will surely oppose them.

7 But I will have mercy on the sons of Iouda and save them by the Lord their God, and I will not save them by bow or sword or war or chariots or horses or horsemen. –

8 And she weaned Not – shown-mercy and conceived again and bore a son.

9 And he said, Call his name Not – my – people, because you are not my people, and I am not yours.

Chapter 2

1 And the number of the sons of Israel was like the sand of the sea, which will not be measured out or counted; and it will be in the place where it was said to them, You are not my people, there they will be called sons of a living God.

2 And the sons of Iouda and the sons of Israel will be gathered together and appoint for themselves one leadership and ascend from the land, because great is the day of Iezrael.

3 Say to your brother, My – people, and to your sister, Shown-mercy.

4 Dispute with your mother, dispute, because she is not my wife, and I am not her husband; and I will remove her prostitution from before my face and her adultery from between her breasts,

5 so that I may strip her naked and restore her as on the day of her birth; and I will make her like a desert and set her like a waterless land and kill her with thirst;

6 and her children I will certainly not show mercy, because they are children of prostitution.

7 Because their mother prostituted herself, she who bore them acted shamefully; for she said, I will follow after my lovers who give me my breads and my water and my garments and my linens and my oil and everything that is due me.

8 For this reason behold, I fence her way with stakes and will build up her ways, and she will certainly not find her path;

9 and she will pursue her lovers and certainly not overtake them; and she will seek them and certainly not find them; and she will say, I will go and return to my former husband, because it was better for me then than now.

10 And she did not know that I have given her the grain and wine and oil, and I multiplied silver for her; but she made silver and gold things for Baal.

11 For this reason I will return and recover my grain at its hour and my wine at its season and take away my garments and my linens so as not to cover her indecency;

12 and now I will uncover her uncleanness before her lovers, and no one will certainly deliver her from my hand;

13 and I will turn away all her gladness, her festivals and her new moons and her sabbaths and all her festal assemblies;

14 and I will make her vine and her fig trees vanish, of which she said, These are my wages which my lovers gave me, and I will make them a testimony, and the beasts of the field and the birds of heaven and the creeping things of earth will devour them;

15 and I will avenge upon her the days of the Baalim, on which she sacrificed to them and put on her earrings and her necklaces and went after her lovers, but forgot me, says the Lord.

16 For this reason behold, I lead her astray and will set her in a desert and speak to her heart

17 and give her her possessions from there and the valley of Achor to open her understanding, and she will be humbled there as in the days of her infancy and as in the days of her ascent from the land of Egypt.

18 And it will be on that day, says the Lord, she will call me, My husband, and no longer call me Baalim;

19 and I will remove the names of the Baalim from her mouth, and their names will certainly no longer be remembered.

20 And I will make for them on that day a covenant with the beasts of the field and with the birds of heaven and with the creeping things of earth; and bow and sword and war I will shatter out of the land and settle you in hope.

21 And I will betroth you to myself into the age, and I will betroth you to myself in righteousness and judgment and mercy and compassion

22 and I will betroth you to myself in faithfulness, and you will know the Lord.

23 And it will be on that day, says the Lord, I will listen to heaven, and heaven will listen to earth,

24 and earth will listen to grain and wine and oil, and they will listen to Iezrael.

25 And I will sow her for myself upon the earth and have mercy on Not – shown-mercy and say to Not – my – people, You are my people, and he will say, You are the Lord my God.

Chapter 3

1 And the Lord said to me, Go again and love a woman loving evil things and an adulteress, just as God loves the sons of Israel, and they look to foreign gods and love cakes with raisins,

2 and I hired for myself for fifteen of silver and a gomor of barley and a nebel of wine

3 and said to her, Many days you will stay with me and certainly not prostitute yourself or belong to another man, and I will be with you.

4 Because many days the sons of Israel will stay without king or ruler or sacrifice or altar or priesthood or manifestations.

5 And after these things the sons of Israel will return and seek the Lord their God and David their king; and they will be astounded at the Lord and at his good things in the last days.

Chapter 4

1 Hear the Lord's word, sons of Israel, because the Lord has a judgment against those dwelling in the land, because there is no truth or mercy or knowledge of God upon the earth;

2 curse and falsehood and murder and theft and adultery have been poured upon the earth, and they mingle blood with blood.

3 For this reason the earth will mourn and be diminished with all those dwelling in it, with the beasts of the field and with the creeping things of earth and with the birds of heaven, and the fish of the sea will cease,

4 so that no one may either litigate or reprove anyone; but my people is like a priest contradicted.

5 And you will weaken by day, and a prophet too will weaken with you; to night I likened your mother.

6 My people was likened to one not having knowledge; because you rejected knowledge, I too will reject you from serving me as priest; and you forgot your God's law, and I too will forget your children.

7 According to their multitude, so they sinned against me; their glory I will make dishonor.

8 They will eat the sins of my people, and in their injustices they will take their souls.

9 And it will be, as the people, so also the priest, and I will avenge his ways upon him and repay him his counsels.

10 And they will eat and certainly not be filled; they prostituted themselves and certainly will not prosper, because they abandoned the Lord, to keep him.

11 Prostitution and wine and intoxicating drink the heart of my people received.

12 With signs they inquired, and with his rods they reported to him; by a spirit of prostitution they were led astray and prostituted themselves away from their God.

13 Upon the summits of mountains they sacrificed, and upon hills they offered sacrifices, beneath oak and poplar and a shading tree, because shelter is good. For this reason your daughters will prostitute themselves, and your daughters-in-law will commit adultery;

14 and I will certainly not inspect your daughters when they prostitute themselves, and your daughters-in-law when they commit adultery, because they themselves too mingled with prostitutes and sacrificed with the initiated, and the people that understands entangled itself with a prostitute.

15 But you, Israel, do not be ignorant, and Iouda, do not enter Galgala and do not ascend to the house of On and do not swear by the living Lord.

16 Because like a frenzied heifer Israel became frenzied; now the Lord will pasture them like a lamb in a broad place.

17 Ephraim, a partner of idols, set stumbling blocks for himself.

18 He chose Chananites; they surely prostituted themselves; they loved dishonor out of their arrogance.

19 You are a whirlwind in her wings, and they will be ashamed because of their altars.

Chapter 5

1 Hear these things, priests, and attend, house of Israel, and house of the king, give ear, because judgment is against you, because you became a snare at the lookout and like a net stretched upon Itabyrion,

2 which those hunting prey fixed. But I am your disciplinarian;

3 I knew Ephraim, and Israel is not absent from me, because now Ephraim prostituted himself, Israel was defiled;

4 they did not give their counsels to returning to their God, because a spirit of prostitution is in them, but they did not know the Lord.

5 And Israel's insolence will be humbled before his face, and Israel and Ephraim will weaken in their injustices, and Ioudas too will weaken with them.

6 With sheep and calves they will go to seek out the Lord and certainly not find him, because he turned away from them,

7 because they abandoned the Lord, because foreign children were born to them; now mildew will devour them and their allotted portions.

8 Blow a trumpet upon the hills, sound upon the heights, proclaim in the house of On; Beniamin was astounded,

9 Ephraim became a desolation in days of reproof; among the tribes of Israel I showed faithful things.

10 The rulers of Iouda became like those moving boundaries; upon them I will pour my onslaught like water.

11 Ephraim oppressed his adversary, trampled judgment, because he began to walk after vain things.

12 And I am like trouble to Ephraim and like a goad to the house of Iouda.

13 And Ephraim saw his disease, and Ioudas his pain, and Ephraim went to Assyrians and sent ambassadors to King Iarim; and he was unable to heal you, and pain will certainly not cease from you.

14 Because I am like a panther to Ephraim and like a lion to the house of Iouda; and I seize and will go and take, and there will be no deliverer.

15 I will go and return to my place until they vanish; and they will seek my face; in their affliction they will rise early toward me, saying,

Chapter 6

1 Let us go and return to the Lord our God, because he has seized and will heal us; he will strike and dress our wounds;

2 he will make us healthy after two days; on the third day we will rise and live before him;

3 and we will know, we will pursue knowing the Lord; like prepared dawn we will find him, and he will come to us like early and late rain upon the earth. –

4 What shall I do to you, Ephraim? What shall I do to you, Iouda? But your mercy is like a morning cloud and like departing early dew.

5 For this reason I reaped your prophets, killed them by the utterances of my mouth, and my judgment will go forth like light.

6 Because I desire mercy and not sacrifice, and knowledge of God rather than whole burnt offerings.

7 But they are like a person transgressing a covenant; there he despised me.

8 Galaad is a city working vain things, troubling water,

9 and your strength is that of a pirate; priests hid the Lord's way, murdered Sikima, because they did lawlessness.

10 In the house of Israel I saw horrifying things, there Ephraim's prostitution; Israel and Iouda were defiled.

11 Begin to gather a vintage for yourself when I turn back the captivity of my people,

Chapter 7

1 when I heal Israel. And the injustice of Ephraim and the evil of Samareia will be uncovered, because they worked false things; and a thief will enter toward him, a robber stripping on his way,

2 so that they may sing together as those singing together with their heart. All their evils I remembered; now their counsels surrounded them; they came before my face.

3 With their evils they gladdened kings, and with their falsehoods rulers;

4 all committing adultery, like an oven burning for baking, with a burning heat from the flame, from the kneading of fat until it is leavened.

5 The days of your kings, the rulers began to become furious from wine; he stretched his hand with pestilent people;

6 because their hearts were kindled like an oven when they dashed them down; all night Ephraim was filled with sleep; morning came, he was kindled like the glow of fire.

7 All were heated like an oven and devoured their judges; all their kings fell; there was none among them calling upon me.

8 Ephraim mingled together among his peoples; Ephraim became a cake not turned.

9 Strangers devoured his strength, but he did not recognize it; and gray hairs blossomed upon him, and he did not know.

10 And Israel's insolence will be humbled before his face, and they did not return to the Lord their God or seek him out in all these things.

11 And Ephraim was like a mindless dove not having a heart; he called upon Egypt, and they went to Assyrians.

12 As they go, I will throw my net upon them; like the birds of heaven I will bring them down; I will discipline them at the hearing of their affliction.

13 Woe to them, because they leaped away from me; they are wretched, because they acted impiously against me; but I redeemed them, and they spoke falsehoods against me.

14 And their hearts did not cry to me, but they wailed upon their beds; over grain and wine they cut themselves. They were disciplined by me,

15 and I strengthened their arms, and against me they devised evil things.

16 They turned away to nothing, became like a drawn bow; their rulers will fall by a sword because of their tongue's lack of discipline; this is their contempt in the land of Egypt.

Chapter 8

1 Into their bosom like earth, like an eagle upon the Lord's house, because they transgressed my covenant and acted impiously against my law.

2 They will cry to me, O God, we have known you.

3 Because Israel turned away good things, they pursued an enemy.

4 They reigned for themselves and not through me; they ruled and did not make it known to me; their silver and gold they made into idols for themselves, so that they might be destroyed.

5 Wipe away your calf, Samareia; my fury was provoked against them; how long will they be unable to be cleansed

6 in Israel? And an artisan made it, and it is not God; because your calf was leading astray, Samareia.

7 Because they sowed wind-blighted things, and their overthrow will receive them; a sheaf not having strength to make flour; but even if it makes it, strangers will devour it.

8 Israel was swallowed; now he became among the nations like a useless vessel.

9 Because they ascended to Assyrians; Ephraim blossomed by himself; they loved gifts;

10 for this reason they will be handed over among the nations. Now I will receive them, and they will cease a little from anointing a king and rulers.

11 Because Ephraim multiplied altars, beloved altars became sins for him.

12 I will record for him a multitude and his ordinances; the beloved altars were reckoned as foreign things.

13 Because if they sacrifice a sacrifice and eat meat, the Lord will not accept them; now he will remember their injustices and avenge their sins; they returned to Egypt and will eat unclean things among Assyrians.

14 And Israel forgot him who made him, and they built sacred precincts, and Ioudas multiplied walled cities; and I will send fire into his cities, and it will devour their foundations.

Chapter 9

1 Do not rejoice, Israel, or be glad like the peoples; because you prostituted yourself away from your God, you loved gifts upon every threshing floor of grain.

2 Threshing floor and winepress did not know them, and wine deceived them.

3 They did not dwell in the Lord's land; Ephraim dwelt in Egypt, and among Assyrians they will eat unclean things.

4 They did not pour wine to the Lord or please him; their sacrifices are like bread of mourning for them; all eating them will be defiled, because their breads for their souls will not enter the Lord's house.

5 What will you do on a day of festal assembly and on a day of the Lord's festival?

6 For this reason behold, they will go out of Egypt's misery, and Memphis will receive them, and Machmas will bury them; destruction will inherit their silver, thorns in their tents.

7 The days of vengeance have come, the days of your repayment have come, and Israel will be afflicted like the deranged prophet, the spirit-bearing person; by the multitude of your injustices your madness increased.

8 Ephraim's watcher is with God; a prophet, a crooked snare upon all his ways; they fixed madness in the Lord's house.

9 They were corrupted as in the days of the hill; he will remember his injustice, avenge his sins.

10 Like a grape in a desert I found Israel, and like an early lookout in a fig tree I saw their fathers; they entered toward Beelphegor and were estranged unto shame, and the beloved became like the abhorred.

11 Ephraim flew out like a bird, their glories from births and labor pains and conceptions;

12 because even if they rear their children, they will be bereaved of human beings; because woe too is theirs, my flesh from them.

13 Ephraim, as I saw, they presented their children for prey, and Ephraim is to bring out his children for piercing.

14 Give them, Lord; what will you give them? Give them a childless womb and dry breasts.

15 All their evils are at Galgal, because there I hated them; because of the evils of their practices I will cast them out of my house; I will certainly no longer continue to love them; all their rulers are disobedient.

16 Ephraim suffered pain, was dried up in his roots; he will certainly no longer bear fruit; because even if they beget, I will kill the desired things of their belly.

17 God will reject them, because they did not listen to him, and they will be wanderers among the nations.

Chapter 10

1 Israel is a vine with good branches, its fruit flourishing; according to the abundance of his fruits he multiplied altars; according to the good things of his land he built pillars.

2 They divided their hearts; now they will vanish; he will demolish their altars; their pillars will suffer misery.

3 Because now they will say, We have no king, because we did not fear the Lord, and what will the king do for us?

4 Speaking utterances, false pretexts, he will make a covenant; judgment will spring up like couch grass upon a fallow field.

5 Those dwelling in Samareia will sojourn with the calf of the house of On, because its people mourned over it; and as they embittered it, they will rejoice over its glory, because it was removed from it.

6 And having bound it they carried it away to Assyrians as gifts for King Iarim; Ephraim will receive in a gift, and Israel will be ashamed in his counsel.

7 Samareia cast away her king like brushwood upon the face of water.

8 And the altars of On, the sins of Israel, will be removed; thorns and thistles will grow upon their altars; and they will say to mountains, Cover us, and to hills, Fall upon us.

9 Since the hills, Israel sinned, there they stood; will war against the children of injustice certainly not overtake them on the hill?

10 He came to discipline them, and peoples will gather against them when they are disciplined for their two injustices.

11 Ephraim is a heifer taught to love strife, but I will come upon the most beautiful part of her neck; I will mount Ephraim and pass over Iouda in silence; Iakob will strengthen him.

12 Sow for yourselves unto righteousness, gather a vintage unto fruit of life, illuminate for yourselves a light of knowledge, seek out the Lord until produce of righteousness comes to you.

13 Why did you pass over impiety in silence and gather its injustices as a vintage, eat false fruit? Because you hoped in your chariots, in the multitude of your force.

14 And destruction will arise among your people, and all your walled places will be gone; as ruler Salaman from the house of Ierobaal, in days of war they dashed a mother upon her children.

15 Thus I will do to you, house of Israel, because of your evils; at dawn they were cast away, the king of Israel was cast away.

Chapter 11

1 Because Israel was an infant, and I loved him and called back his children from Egypt.

2 As I called them back, so they departed from before me; they sacrificed to the Baalim and burned incense to carved things.

3 And I bound Ephraim's feet together, took him upon my arm, and they did not know that I have healed them.

4 In human corruption I stretched them with bonds of my love, and I will be to them like a person slapping upon his cheeks; and I will look toward him, I will be able for him.

5 Ephraim dwelt in Egypt, and Assour himself is his king, because he did not wish to return.

6 And a sword weakened in his cities and ceased in his hands, and they will eat from their counsels.

7 And his people is hanging from his dwelling, and God will be furious over his precious things and certainly not exalt him.

8 How shall I dispose of you, Ephraim? Shall I shield you, Israel? How shall I dispose of you? Shall I make you like Adama and like Seboim? My heart turned within itself; my regret was troubled together.

9 I will certainly not do according to the wrath of my fury; I will certainly not abandon Ephraim to be erased; because I am God and not a human being; holy among you, and I will not enter a city.

10 I will walk after the Lord; like a lion he will roar, because he will roar, and children of waters will be astounded.

11 And they will be astounded like a bird from Egypt and like a dove from the land of Assyrians; and I will restore them to their houses, says the Lord.

Chapter 12

1 Ephraim surrounded me with falsehood, and the house of Israel and Iouda with impieties. Now God knew them, and it will be called God's holy people.

2 But Ephraim is an evil spirit; he pursued scorching heat all day; he multiplied empty and vain things and made a covenant with Assyrians, and oil was traded into Egypt.

3 And the Lord has a judgment against Iouda, to avenge Iakob according to his ways, and according to his practices he will repay him.

4 In the womb he took his brother by the heel, and in his labors he prevailed against God

5 and prevailed with an angel and had strength; they wept and made supplication to me; in the house of On they found me, and there it was spoken to him.

6 But the Lord God Almighty will be his remembrance.

7 And you will return by your God; keep mercy and judgment and draw near to your God continually.

8 Chanaan, in his hand is a balance of injustice; he loved to oppress.

9 And Ephraim said, Nevertheless I have become rich, I have found refreshment for myself. All his labors will not be found for him because of injustices which he sinned.

10 But I, the Lord your God, brought you up from the land of Egypt; still I will settle you in tents as on a day of festival.

11 And I will speak to prophets, and I multiplied visions and was likened by the hands of prophets.

12 Unless it is Galaad; then the rulers sacrificing in Galgal were false, and their altars are like turtles upon a fallow field.

13 And Iakob withdrew to the plain of Syria, and Israel served for a wife and guarded for a wife.

14 And by a prophet the Lord brought Israel up from Egypt, and by a prophet he was preserved.

15 Ephraim enraged and provoked to wrath, and his blood will be poured upon him, and the Lord will repay him his reproach.

Chapter 13

1 According to Ephraim's word he received ordinances in Israel, and he assigned them to Baal and died.

2 And he continued to sin still, and they made for themselves a molten thing from their silver according to an image of idols, works of artisans completed for them; they say, Sacrifice human beings, for calves have ceased.

3 For this reason they will be like a morning cloud and like departing early dew, like chaff blown from a threshing floor and like vapor from locusts.

4 But I am the Lord your God, establishing heaven and creating earth, whose hands created all the host of heaven, and I did not show them to you for you to walk after them; and I brought you up from the land of Egypt, and you will know no God except me, and there is no savior apart from me.

5 I shepherded you in the desert, in an uninhabited land,

6 according to their pastures. And they were filled unto fullness, and their hearts were exalted; because of this they forgot me.

7 And I will be to them like a panther and like a leopard along the way of Assyrians;

8 I will meet them like a bear in want and tear open the enclosure of their heart, and there cubs of the forest will devour them; beasts of the field will tear them apart.

9 In your corruption, Israel, who will help?

10 Where is this king of yours? And let him preserve you in all your cities; let him judge you, he of whom you said, Give me a king and a ruler.

11 And I gave you a king in my wrath, and in my fury I held

12 a gathering of injustice. Ephraim, his sin is hidden away.

13 Labor pains like those of a woman giving birth will come to him; this son of yours is not prudent, because he will certainly not withstand the crushing of children.

14 From the hand of Hades I will rescue them, and from death I will redeem them; where is your penalty, death? Where is your goad, Hades? Consolation has been hidden from my eyes.

15 Because this one will distinguish among brothers. The Lord will bring a scorching wind from the desert upon him and dry up his veins, make his springs desolate; he will dry up his land and all his desirable vessels.

Chapter 14

1 Samareia will vanish, because she resisted her God; they will fall by a sword, and their sucklings will be dashed upon the ground, and their pregnant women will be torn open.

2 Return, Israel, to the Lord your God, because you weakened in your injustices.

3 Take words with yourselves and return to the Lord your God; say to him, so that you may not receive injustice and may receive good things, and we will repay the fruit of our lips.

4 Assour will certainly not save us; we will not mount a horse; we will certainly no longer say, Our gods, to the works of our hands; he who is in you will have mercy on an orphan.

5 I will heal their dwellings, love them openly, because my wrath turned away from them.

6 I will be like dew to Israel; he will blossom like a lily and put forth his roots like Lebanon;

7 his branches will spread, and he will be like a fruitful olive, and his scent like Lebanon;

8 they will return and sit beneath his shelter, live and be drenched with grain; and his remembrance will blossom like a vine, like wine of Lebanon.

9 For Ephraim, what has he still to do with idols? I humbled him, and I will strengthen him; I am like a leafy juniper; from me your fruit has been found.

10 Who is wise and will understand these things? Or understanding and will know them? Because the Lord's ways are straight, and righteous people will walk in them, but the ungodly will weaken in them.

Amos

Chapter 1

1 Words of Amos, which came to be among the nakkarim from Thekoue, which he saw concerning Ierusalem in the days of Ozias king of Iouda and in the days of Ieroboam son of Ioas, king of Israel, two years before the earthquake.

2 And he said: The Lord uttered from Sion and gave his voice from Ierusalem, and the pastures of the shepherds mourned, and the summit of Karmel dried up.

3 And the Lord said: For the three impieties of Damascus and for the four I will not turn him away, because they were sawing with iron saws the pregnant women among those in Galaad;

4 and I will send out fire into the house of Azael, and it will devour the foundations of the son of Ader;

5 and I will shatter the bars of Damascus and destroy inhabitants from the plain of On, and cut down a tribe from the men of Charran, and the people of Syria called by name will be taken captive, says the Lord.

6 Thus says the Lord: For the three impieties of Gaza and for the four I will not turn them away, because they took captive the captivity of Salomon to shut it up into Idoumaia;

7 and I will send out fire upon the walls of Gaza, and it will devour her foundations;

8 and I will destroy inhabitants from Azotos, and a tribe will be removed from Askalon, and I will bring my hand upon Akkaron, and the remaining ones of the foreigners will perish, says the Lord.

9 Thus says the Lord: For the three impieties of Tyre and for the four I will not turn her away, because they shut up the captivity of Salomon into Idoumaia and did not remember a covenant of brothers;

10 and I will send out fire upon the walls of Tyre, and it will devour her foundations.

11 Thus says the Lord: For the three impieties of Idoumaia and for the four I will not turn them away, because they pursued his brother with a sword, and he ravaged a womb upon the earth, and seized his shuddering for a testimony, and kept his impulse for strife;

12 and I will send out fire into Thaiman, and it will devour the foundations of her walls.

13 Thus says the Lord: For the three impieties of the sons of Ammon and for the four I will not turn him away, because they ripped open the pregnant women of the Galaadites, so that they might widen their boundaries;

14 and I will kindle fire upon the walls of Rabba, and it will devour her foundations with shouting on a day of war, and she will be shaken on the day of her consummation;

15 and her kings will go into captivity, their priests and their rulers together, says the Lord.

Chapter 2

1 Thus says the Lord: For the three impieties of Moab and for the four I will not turn him away, because they burned the bones of the king of Idoumaia into lime;

2 and I will send out fire upon Moab, and it will devour the foundations of her cities, and Moab will die in weakness, with shouting and with the sound of a trumpet;

3 and I will destroy a judge from her, and I will kill all her rulers with him, says the Lord.

4 Thus says the Lord: For the three impieties of the sons of Iouda and for the four I will not turn him away, because they rejected the law of the Lord and did not keep his ordinances, and their vain things which they made led them astray, after which their fathers followed;

5 and I will send out fire upon Iouda, and it will devour the foundations of Ierusalem.

6 Thus says the Lord: For the three impieties of Israel and for the four I will not turn him away, because they sold a righteous one for silver and a needy one for the sake of sandals,

7 which tread upon the dust of the earth, and they struck the heads of the poor with their fists and turned aside the way of the lowly, and a son and his father were going in to the same girl, so that they might profane the name of their God,

8 and, binding their garments with cords, they made curtains adjoining the altar, and they drank wine from extortions in the house of their God.

9 But I removed the Amorrite from before them, whose height was like the height of a cedar, and he was strong as an oak, and I removed his fruit from above and his roots from below;

10 and I brought you up from the land of Egypt and led you about in the wilderness forty years, to inherit the land of the Amorrites;

11 and I took from your sons for prophets and from your young men for sanctification. Are these things not so, sons of Israel? says the Lord.

12 And you were giving the sanctified ones wine to drink, and commanding the prophets, saying: You shall certainly not prophesy.

13 Therefore, behold, I roll beneath you, as the wagon full of straw rolls;

14 and escape will perish from a runner, and the strong one will certainly not retain his strength, and the warrior will certainly not save his soul,

15 and the archer will certainly not stand firm, and the one swift on his feet will certainly not be saved, nor will the horseman save his soul,

16 and he will find his heart in mighty deeds; the naked one will pursue on that day, says the Lord.

Chapter 3

1 Hear this word which the Lord spoke against you, house of Israel, and against every tribe which I brought up from the land of Egypt, saying:

2 Only you have I known out of all the tribes of the earth; therefore I will punish all your sins upon you.

3 Will two go together at all unless they make themselves known?

4 Will a lion roar from his thicket without having prey? Will a young lion give his voice from his enclosure at all unless he seizes something?

5 Will a bird fall upon the earth without a birdcatcher? Will a snare be sprung upon the earth without catching something?

6 Will a trumpet sound in a city and the people not be terrified? Will there be evil in a city which the Lord has not done?

7 For the Lord God will certainly not do a thing unless he reveals his discipline to his servants the prophets.

8 A lion will roar, and who will not fear? The Lord God has spoken, and who will not prophesy?

9 Report to regions among the Assyrians and to the regions of Egypt, and say: Gather upon the mountain of Samareia, and see many astonishing things in her midst and the oppression in her;

10 and he did not know what will be against her, says the Lord, those treasuring injustice and misery in their regions.

11 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Tyre, your land will be laid waste round about, and he will bring down your strength from you, and your regions will be plundered.

12 Thus says the Lord: As when the shepherd pulls two legs or a lobe of an ear from the mouth of the lion, so will the sons of Israel be pulled out, those dwelling in Samareia opposite a tribe, and priests in Damascus.

13 Hear and bear witness to the house of Iakob, says the Lord God the Almighty,

14 for on the day when I punish the impieties of Israel upon him, I will also punish the altars of Baithel, and the horns of the altar will be torn down and fall upon the earth;

15 I will demolish and strike the house surrounded by columns upon the summer house, and ivory houses will perish, and many other houses will be added, says the Lord.

Chapter 4

1 Hear this word, heifers of Basanitis who are on the mountain of Samareia, who oppress the poor and trample the needy, who say to their lords: Give to us so that we may drink;

2 The Lord swears by his holy things: For behold, days are coming upon you, and they will take you with weapons, and fiery plagues will cast those with you into cauldrons heated from beneath,

3 and you will be carried out naked, opposite one another, and cast away onto the mountain Remman, says the Lord God.

4 You entered Baithel and acted lawlessly, and in Galgala you multiplied impiety, and brought your sacrifices in the morning, your tithes on the third day;

5 and they read a law outside and called for pledges; report that the sons of Israel loved these things, says the Lord God.

6 And I will give you aching teeth in all your cities and lack of bread in all your places; and you did not return to me, says the Lord.

7 And I withheld the rain from you three months before the harvest; and I will rain upon one city, but upon one city I will not rain; one portion will be rained upon, and a portion upon which I will not rain will dry up;

8 and two and three cities will gather into one city to drink water and will certainly not be filled; and you did not return to me, says the Lord.

9 I struck you with scorching and with jaundice; you multiplied your gardens; the caterpillar devoured your vineyards and your fig orchards and your olive groves; and not even thus did you return to me, says the Lord.

10 I sent out death among you on the way of Egypt, and killed your young men with a sword, along with the captivity of your horses, and brought up your camps in fire in my wrath; and not even thus did you return to me, says the Lord.

11 I overturned you, as God overturned Sodoma and Gomorra, and you became like a firebrand pulled out of fire; and not even thus did you return to me, says the Lord.

12 Therefore I will do thus to you, Israel; nevertheless, because I will do thus to you, prepare to call upon your God, Israel.

13 For behold, I am the one establishing thunder and creating spirit and announcing his anointed one to men, making dawn and mist and stepping upon the heights of the earth; the Lord God the Almighty is his name.

Chapter 5

1 Hear this word of the Lord, which I take up as a lament against you, house of Israel:

2 The virgin of Israel has fallen; she will certainly no longer rise again; she stumbled upon her land; there is no one who will raise her.

3 For thus says the Lord Lord: The city from which a thousand were going out will have a hundred left, and that from which a hundred were going out will have ten left for the house of Israel.

4 For thus says the Lord to the house of Israel: Seek me out and you will live;

5 and do not seek out Baithel, and do not enter Galgala, and do not cross over to the well of the oath, because Galgala, being taken captive, will be taken captive, and Baithel will be as though not existing;

6 seek out the Lord and live, so that the house of Ioseph may not blaze up like fire, and it will devour him, and there will be no one to quench it for the house of Israel.

7 The Lord, who makes judgment on high, and he placed righteousness upon the earth,

8 making all things and refashioning them and turning the shadow of death into morning and darkening day into night, who summons the water of the sea and pours it out upon the face of the earth; the Lord God the Almighty is his name;

9 who apportions crushing upon strength and brings misery upon a stronghold.

10 They hated one reproving in the gates and abhorred a holy word.

11 Therefore, because you were striking the poor with your fists and received choice gifts from them, you built houses of dressed stone and will certainly not dwell in them; you planted desirable vineyards and will certainly not drink the wine from them.

12 For I knew your many impieties, and your sins are mighty, trampling a righteous one, taking payments and turning aside the needy in the gates.

13 Therefore the one who understands will be silent at that time, because it is an evil time.

14 Seek out the good and not the evil, so that you may live; and thus the Lord God the Almighty will be with you, as you said:

15 We have hated evil things and loved good things; and restore judgment in the gates, so that the Lord God the Almighty may have mercy on the remaining ones of Ioseph.

16 Therefore thus says the Lord God the Almighty: In all squares, beating of the breast, and in all streets it will be said: Woe, woe; a farmer will be called to mourning and beating of the breast, and to those who know lamentation,

17 and in all streets, beating of the breast, because I will pass through your midst, said the Lord.

18 Woe to those desiring the day of the Lord; why is this day of the Lord for you? And it is darkness and not light, 19 as when a man flees from before the lion and the bear encounters him, and he leaps into his house and rests his hands against the wall, and the serpent bites him.

20 Is not the day of the Lord darkness and not light? And gloom, having no brightness in it.

21 I have hated, I have rejected your feasts, and I will certainly not smell at your assemblies;

22 for even if you bring me whole burnt offerings and your sacrifices, I will not accept them, and I will not look upon your splendid offerings of salvation.

23 Remove from me the sound of your songs, and I will not hear the music of your instruments;

24 and judgment will roll like water, and righteousness like an impassable torrent.

25 Did you offer me slaughtered offerings and sacrifices in the wilderness forty years, house of Israel?

26 And you took up the tent of Moloch and the star of your god Raiphan, their figures which you made for yourselves.

27 And I will resettle you beyond Damascus, says the Lord; God the Almighty is his name.

Chapter 6

1 Woe to those despising Sion and those trusting in the mountain of Samareia; they harvested the firstfruits of nations, and they entered. House of Israel,

2 cross over, all of you, and see, and pass from there into Emath Rabba, and go down from there into Geth of the foreigners, the strongest of all these kingdoms, whether their boundaries are greater than your boundaries.

3 Those coming to an evil day, those approaching and laying hold of false sabbaths,

4 those sleeping upon ivory beds and living luxuriously upon their couches, and eating kids from flocks and suckling calves from the midst of herds,

5 those clapping to the sound of the instruments reckoned them as standing and not as fleeing;

6 those drinking the filtered wine and anointing themselves with the foremost perfumes, and they suffered nothing over the crushing of Ioseph.

7 Therefore now they will be captives from the foremost of the potentates, and the neighing of horses will be removed from Ephraim.

8 For the Lord swore by himself: For I abhor all the arrogance of Iakob and have hated his regions, and I will remove a city together with all who dwell in it;

9 and it will be, if ten men are left in one house, they too will die, and the remaining ones will be left,

10 and their relatives will take them and force themselves to carry their bones out of the house; and he will say to those in charge of the house: Is there still anyone with you? And he will say: No longer; and he will say: Be silent, so as not to name the name of the Lord.

11 For behold, the Lord commands, and he will strike the great house with crushings and the small house with fissures.

12 Will horses pursue on rocks? Will they keep silent among mares? For you turned judgment into wrath and the fruit of righteousness into bitterness,

13 those rejoicing over no matter, those saying: Did we not acquire horns by our strength?

14 For behold, I raise up a nation against you, house of Israel, and they will press you out so that you do not enter Emath, and as far as the torrent of the west.

Chapter 7

1 Thus the Lord showed me, and behold, a brood of locusts coming in the morning, and behold, one locust, Gog the king.

2 And it will be, if it finishes devouring the grass of the earth, and I said: Lord Lord, be gracious; who will raise Iakob? For he is very small;

3 change your mind, Lord, over this. And this will not be, says the Lord.

4 Thus the Lord showed me, and behold, the Lord called for punishment by fire, and it devoured the great abyss and devoured the portion.

5 And I said: Lord Lord, cease now; who will raise Iakob? For he is very small;

6 change your mind, Lord, over this. And this will certainly not happen, says the Lord.

7 Thus the Lord showed me, and behold, a man standing upon an adamantine wall, and adamant in his hand.

8 And the Lord said to me: What do you see, Amos? And I said: Adamant. And the Lord said to me: Behold, I place adamant in the midst of my people Israel; I will certainly no longer pass him by;

9 and altars of laughter will disappear, and the rites of Israel will be laid waste, and I will rise against the house of Ieroboam with a sword.

10 And Amasias the priest of Baithel sent to Ieroboam king of Israel, saying: Amos is making conspiracies against you in the midst of the house of Israel; the land will certainly not be able to endure all his words;

11 for thus says Amos: Ieroboam will die by a sword, but Israel will be led captive from his land.

12 And Amasias said to Amos: Seer, go, withdraw into the land of Iouda, and live there, and there you will prophesy;

13 but in Baithel you shall certainly no longer prophesy, because it is a king's sanctuary and a house of a kingdom.

14 And Amos answered and said to Amasias: I was not a prophet, nor a prophet's son, but I was a goatherd and one scratching mulberries;

15 and the Lord took me up from the sheep, and the Lord said to me: Go, prophesy against my people Israel.

16 And now hear a word of the Lord: You say: Do not prophesy against Israel, and you shall certainly not address a crowd against the house of Iakob;

17 therefore thus says the Lord: Your wife will prostitute herself in the city, and your sons and your daughters will fall by a sword, and your land will be measured out with a cord, and you will die in an unclean land, but Israel will be led captive from his land.

Chapter 8

1 Thus the Lord showed me, and behold, a birdcatcher's vessel.

2 And he said: What do you see, Amos? And I said: A birdcatcher's vessel. And the Lord said to me: The end has come upon my people Israel; I will certainly no longer pass him by;

3 and the panels of the temple will howl; on that day, says the Lord, many are the fallen in every place; I will cast silence upon them.

4 Hear now these things, those wearing down a needy one in the morning and oppressing the poor from the earth,

5 those saying: When will the month pass and we trade, and the sabbaths, and we open storehouses, to make a measure small and enlarge weights and make an unjust balance,

6 to acquire the poor with silver and a lowly one in exchange for sandals, and we will trade from every kind of produce?

7 The Lord swears by the arrogance of Iakob: If he will forget all your works for strife.

8 And over these things will the earth not be troubled? And everyone dwelling in it will mourn, and consummation will rise like a river and go down like the river of Egypt.

9 And it will be on that day, says the Lord God, that the sun will set at noon, and the light will grow dark upon the earth in daytime;

10 and I will turn your feasts into mourning and all your songs into lamentation, and I will bring sackcloth upon every waist and baldness upon every head, and I will make him like mourning for a beloved one and those with him like a day of anguish.

11 Behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and I will send out famine upon the earth, not a famine of bread nor a thirst for water, but a famine of hearing a word of the Lord;

12 and waters will be shaken as far as the sea, and from the north as far as the east they will run about seeking the word of the Lord and will certainly not find it.

13 On that day the beautiful virgins and the young men will fail with thirst,

14 those swearing by the atonement of Samareia and those saying: Your god lives, Dan, and your god lives, Bersabee; and they will fall and certainly no longer rise.

Chapter 9

1 I saw the Lord standing over the altar, and he said: Strike upon the mercy seat, and the gateways will be shaken, and cut through onto the heads of all; and I will kill their remaining ones with a sword; no fleeing one among them will escape, and no one among them saving himself will be saved.

2 If they dig down into Hades, from there my hand will pull them up; and if they go up into heaven, from there I will bring them down;

3 if they hide in the summit of Karmel, from there I will search out and take them; and if they sink from my eyes into the depths of the sea, there I will command the dragon, and it will bite them;

4 and if they go into captivity before their enemies, there I will command the sword, and it will kill them; and I will fix my eyes upon them for evil things and not for good things.

5 And the Lord Lord God the Almighty, who touches the earth and shakes it, and all who dwell in it will mourn, and its consummation will rise like a river and go down like the river of Egypt;

6 who builds his ascent into heaven and establishes his promise upon the earth, who summons the water of the sea and pours it out upon the face of the earth; the Lord God the Almighty is his name.

7 Are you not like sons of Ethiopians to me, sons of Israel? says the Lord. Did I not bring Israel up from the land of Egypt, and the foreigners from Kappadokia, and the Syrians from a pit?

8 Behold, the eyes of the Lord God are upon the kingdom of the sinners, and I will remove it from the face of the earth; nevertheless, I will not completely remove the house of Iakob, says the Lord.

9 For behold, I command, and I will winnow the house of Israel among all the nations, as it is winnowed in the winnowing basket, and a fragment will certainly not fall upon the earth.

10 All sinners of my people will die by a sword, those saying: The evil things will certainly not approach or come upon us.

11 On that day I will raise the fallen tent of David and rebuild its fallen parts, and raise its demolished parts and rebuild it as in the days of the age,

12 so that the remaining ones of men and all the nations upon whom my name has been called may seek out, says the Lord God who does these things.

13 Behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and the threshing will overtake the grape harvest, and the grape will ripen at the sowing, and the mountains will drip sweetness, and all the hills will be grown together;

14 and I will turn back the captivity of my people Israel, and they will build the cities that have disappeared and dwell in them, and plant vineyards and drink their wine, and plant gardens and eat their fruit;

15 and I will plant them upon their land, and they will certainly no longer be pulled out from their land which I gave them, says the Lord God the Almighty.

Micah

Chapter 1

1 And a word of the Lord came to Michaias of Morasthi in the days of Ioatham and Achaz and Ezekias, kings of Iouda, concerning what he saw about Samareia and about Ierusalem.

2 Hear words, peoples, and let the earth and all who are in it pay attention, and the Lord will be among you for a testimony, the Lord from his holy house;

3 for behold, the Lord goes out from his place, and he will descend and step upon the heights of the earth,

4 and the mountains will be shaken beneath him, and the valleys will melt like wax before fire and like water carried down a descent.

5 All these things are because of the impiety of Iakob and because of the sin of the house of Israel. What is the impiety of Iakob? Is it not Samareia? And what is the sin of the house of Iouda? Is it not Ierusalem?

6 And I will make Samareia a fruit watchman's hut in a field and a planting of a vineyard, and I will pull her stones down into a chasm and uncover her foundations;

7 and they will cut down all her carved images and burn all her wages with fire, and I will consign all her idols to disappearance; for she gathered from wages of prostitution and amassed from wages of prostitution.

8 Because of this she will beat her breast and lament; she will go barefoot and naked; she will make a beating of the breast like that of dragons and mourning like that of daughters of sirens;

9 for her wound has prevailed, because it came as far as Iouda and reached as far as the gate of my people, as far as Ierusalem.

10 Those in Geth, do not magnify yourselves; those in Akim, do not rebuild from a house for laughter; sprinkle earth upon yourselves for your laughter.

11 Dwelling well in her cities, the one dwelling in Sennaan did not go out to mourn a house adjoining her; she will receive from you a wound of anguish.

12 Who began good things for her who dwells in pains? For evil things came down from the Lord upon the gates of Ierusalem,

13 a sound of chariots and horsemen. She who dwells in Lachis is the originator of sin for the daughter of Sion, because the impieties of Israel were found in you.

14 Therefore you will give those being sent away, as far as the inheritance of Geth, vain houses; it became empty things for the kings of Israel.

15 Until I bring the heirs to you, inheritance dwelling in Lachis, the glory of the daughter of Israel will come as far as Odollam.

16 Shave yourself and shear yourself over your delicate children; widen your widowhood like an eagle, because they were taken captive from you.

Chapter 2

1 They became those devising troubles and working evil things in their beds, and at daybreak they accomplished them, because they did not lift their hands to God;

2 and they were desiring fields and plundering orphans and oppressing houses, and plundering a man and his house, a man and his inheritance.

3 Therefore thus says the Lord: Behold, I devise evil things against this tribe, from which you will certainly not lift your necks, and you will certainly not suddenly walk upright, because it is an evil time.

4 On that day a parable will be taken up against you, and a lament will be lamented in song, saying: With misery we have been made miserable; the portion of my people was measured out with a cord, and there was no one to prevent him from turning it away; our fields were divided.

5 Therefore you will have no one casting a cord by lot in the assembly of the Lord.

6 Do not weep with tears, nor let them shed tears over these things; for he will not put away reproaches.

7 The one saying: The house of Iakob provoked the spirit of the Lord to anger; are these his practices? Are not his words good with him, and have they not proceeded upright?

8 And formerly my people stood against him in enmity; against his peace they flayed his skin, to take away hope, a crushing of war.

9 Therefore the leaders of my people will be cast out of their houses of luxury; because of their evil practices they were thrust out; approach everlasting mountains.

10 Rise and go, because this is not your rest on account of uncleanness. You were destroyed with destruction,

11 you were pursued with no one pursuing; a spirit established a lie; it dripped for you into wine and intoxicating drink. And it will be from the drop of this people:

12 being gathered, Iakob will be gathered with all; awaiting, I will await the remaining ones of Israel; I will place their return together; like sheep in affliction, like a flock in the midst of their resting place, they will leap out from men.

13 Through the breach before them they broke through and passed through a gate and went out through it, and their king went out before them, but the Lord will lead them.

Chapter 3

1 And he will say: Hear now these things, the rulers of the house of Iakob and the remaining ones of the house of Israel. Is it not yours to know judgment?

2 Those hating good things and seeking evil things, seizing their skins from them and their flesh from their bones.

3 As they devoured the flesh of my people and flayed their skins from their bones, and crushed their bones and cut them into pieces like flesh for a cauldron and like meat for a pot,

4 so they will cry to the Lord, and he will not hear them; and he will turn his face from them at that time, because they acted wickedly in their practices against them.

5 Thus says the Lord against the prophets who lead my people astray, who bite with their teeth and proclaim peace over him, and nothing was given into their mouth, they raised war against him;

6 therefore night will be yours instead of vision, and darkness will be yours instead of divination, and the sun will set upon the prophets, and the day will grow dark upon them;

7 and those seeing dreams will be put to shame, and the diviners will be laughed at, and all of them will speak against them, because there will be no one hearing them.

8 Unless I fill up strength in the spirit of the Lord and of judgment and of power, to announce to Iakob his impieties and to Israel his sins.

9 Hear now these things, the leaders of the house of Iakob and the remaining ones of the house of Israel, who abhor judgment and distort all upright things,

10 who build Sion with bloodshed and Ierusalem with injustices;

11 her leaders judged with gifts, and her priests answered with payment, and her prophets divined with silver, and they rested upon the Lord, saying: Is not the Lord among us? Evil things will certainly not come upon us.

12 Therefore, because of you, Sion will be plowed like a field, and Ierusalem will be like a fruit watchman's hut, and the mountain of the house like a grove of a thicket.

Chapter 4

1 And in the last days the mountain of the Lord will be manifest, ready upon the summits of the mountains, and it will be raised above the hills; and peoples will hasten to it,

2 and many nations will go and say: Come, let us go up to the mountain of the Lord and to the house of the God of Iakob, and they will show us his way, and we will walk in his paths; for a law will go out from Sion, and a word of the Lord from Ierusalem.

3 And he will judge between many peoples and reprove strong nations as far as a distant land, and they will cut down their swords into plows and their spears into sickles, and nation will certainly no longer raise a sword against nation, and they will certainly no longer learn to wage war.

4 And each will rest beneath his vine and each beneath his fig tree, and there will be no one frightening them, because the mouth of the Lord Almighty spoke these things.

5 For all the peoples will go, each his own way, but we will go in the name of the Lord our God into the age and beyond.

6 On that day, says the Lord, I will gather her who has been crushed, and receive her who has been thrust out and those whom I rejected;

7 and I will make her who has been crushed a remnant, and her who has been rejected a strong nation, and the Lord will reign over them on mount Sion from now and into the age.

8 And you, parched tower of a flock, daughter of Sion, to you will come and enter the first dominion, a kingdom from Babylon for the daughter of Ierusalem.

9 And now, why did you know evil things? Did you not have a king? Or did your counsel perish, that birth pangs seized you like one giving birth?

10 Be in labor and be courageous and draw near, daughter of Sion, like one giving birth; for now you will go out from a city and encamp in a plain and come as far as Babylon; from there he will rescue you, and from there the Lord your God will redeem you from the hand of your enemies.

11 And now many nations gathered against you, those saying: We will rejoice over her, and our eyes will look upon Sion.

12 But they did not know the thought of the Lord and did not understand his counsel, that he gathered them like sheaves of a threshing floor.

13 Rise and thresh them, daughter of Sion, for I will make your horns iron and your hooves bronze, and with them you will melt down nations and grind many peoples fine, and you will dedicate their multitude to the Lord and their strength to the Lord of all the earth.

14 Now the daughter of Ephraim will be shut in with a barrier; he appointed confinement against us; with a rod they will strike the tribes of Israel upon the cheek.

Chapter 5

1 And you, Bethlehem, house of Ephratha, are very small to be among the thousands of Iouda; from you one will go out for me to be a ruler in Israel, and his goings out are from the beginning, from days of an age.

2 Therefore he will give them up until the time of one giving birth; she will give birth, and the remaining ones of their brothers will return to the sons of Israel.

3 And he will stand and see and shepherd his flock in the strength of the Lord, and they will exist in the glory of the name of the Lord their God; for now he will be magnified as far as the ends of the earth.

4 And this will be peace; when an Assyrian comes upon your land and when he steps upon your region, seven shepherds and eight bites of men will be raised against him;

5 and they will shepherd Assour with a sword and the land of Nebrod in its trench; and he will rescue from Assour when he comes upon your land and when he steps upon your boundaries.

6 And the remnant of Iakob will be among the nations in the midst of many peoples like dew falling from the Lord and like lambs upon grass, so that no one may be gathered or stand among sons of men.

7 And the remnant of Iakob will be among the nations in the midst of many peoples like a lion among beasts in the thicket and like a young lion among flocks of sheep, as when he passes through and, separating, seizes, and there is no one rescuing.

8 Your hand will be raised against those afflicting you, and all your enemies will be destroyed.

9 And it will be on that day, says the Lord, I will destroy your horses from your midst and destroy your chariots,

10 and I will destroy the cities of your land and remove all your strongholds;

11 and I will remove your sorceries from your hands, and there will be no utterers in you;

12 and I will destroy your carved images and your pillars from your midst, and you will certainly no longer bow down to the works of your hands;

13 and I will cut out your groves from your midst and make your cities disappear;

14 and I will execute vengeance in wrath and in anger among the nations, because they did not listen.

Chapter 6

1 Hear now a word of the Lord; the Lord said: Rise, plead your case before the mountains, and let the hills hear your voice.

2 Hear, hills, the judgment of the Lord, and you ravines, foundations of the earth, for the Lord has a case against his people, and he will dispute with Israel.

3 My people, what did I do to you, or how did I grieve you, or how did I trouble you? Answer me.

4 For I brought you up from the land of Egypt and redeemed you from a house of slavery, and sent out before you Moyses and Aaron and Mariam.

5 My people, remember now what Balak king of Moab planned against you, and what Balaam son of Beor answered him, from the rushes as far as Galgal, so that the righteousness of the Lord may be known.

6 With what shall I reach the Lord, shall I take hold of my God Most High? Shall I reach him with whole burnt offerings, with year-old calves?

7 Will the Lord accept with thousands of rams or with myriads of fat torrents? Shall I give my firstborn for impiety, the fruit of my womb for the sin of my soul?

8 Was it announced to you, man, what is good? Or what does the Lord seek from you except to do judgment and love mercy and be ready to walk with the Lord your God?

9 A voice of the Lord will be called to the city, and he will save those fearing his name. Hear, tribe, and who will adorn a city?

10 Is there not fire and a house of a lawless one treasuring lawless treasures, and injustice with arrogance?

11 Will a lawless one be justified with a balance, and weights of deceit in a purse?

12 From which they filled their wealth with impiety, and those dwelling in it were speaking false things, and their tongue was raised in their mouth.

13 And I will begin to strike you; I will make you disappear on account of your sins.

14 You will eat and certainly not be filled; and it will grow dark within you and turn aside, and you will certainly not be saved; and as many as are saved will be handed over to a sword.

15 You will sow and certainly not reap; you will press olives and certainly not anoint with oil, and wine, and you will certainly not drink, and the ordinances of my people will disappear.

16 And you kept the statutes of Zambri and all the works of the house of Achaab, and you walked in their counsels, so that I may hand you over to disappearance and those dwelling in it to hissing; and you will receive reproaches of peoples.

Chapter 7

1 Alas for me, for I became like one gathering straw at harvest and like a grape gleaning at vintage, with no cluster existing to eat the first fruits. Alas, soul,

2 for a devout one has perished from the earth, and one acting uprightly does not exist among men; all plead for bloodshed; each presses out his neighbor with a pressing out.

3 They prepare their hands for evil; the ruler asks, and the judge spoke peaceful words; it is according to the desire of his soul. And I will remove

4 their good things like a moth eating away and walking upon a measuring rod on a day of watching. Woe, woe, your punishments have come; now there will be their weepings.

5 Do not put trust in friends and do not place hope in leaders; guard yourself against your bedmate, from entrusting anything to her;

6 for a son dishonors a father, a daughter will rise against her mother, a daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; a man's enemies are all the men in his house.

7 But I will look to the Lord; I will wait for God my savior; my God will hear me.

8 Do not rejoice over me, my enemy, because I have fallen; and I will rise, for if I sit in darkness, the Lord will give me light.

9 I will bear the wrath of the Lord, because I sinned against him, until he vindicates my case; and he will execute my judgment and bring me out into the light; I will see his righteousness.

10 And my enemy will see and clothe herself in shame, she who says to me: Where is the Lord your God? My eyes will look upon her; now she will be for trampling like mud in the streets

11 of a day of brick plastering. That day is your erasure, and it will rub away your ordinances,

12 that day; and your cities will come to leveling and to division among Assyrians, and your fortified cities to division from Tyre as far as the river of Syria, a day of water and tumult;

13 and the land will be consigned to disappearance together with those dwelling in it, from the fruits of their practices.

14 Shepherd your people with your rod, sheep of your inheritance, those encamping by themselves in a thicket in the midst of Karmel; they will graze in Basanitis and Galaaditis as in the days of the age.

15 And according to the days of your departure from Egypt, you will see astonishing things.

16 Nations will see and be put to shame for all their strength; they will place hands upon their mouth; their ears will be deafened.

17 They will lick dust like serpents dragging along the earth; they will be confounded in their confinement; they will be astounded at the Lord our God and fear you.

18 Who is a God like you? Removing injustices and passing over impieties for the remaining ones of his inheritance, and he did not retain his wrath for a testimony, because he is one desiring mercy.

19 He will turn and have compassion on us; he will sink our injustices, and they will be cast away into the depths of the sea, all our sins.

20 You will give truth to Iakob, mercy to Abraam, as you swore to our fathers in the former days.

Joel

Chapter 1

1 A word of the Lord, which came to Ioel son of Bathouel.

2 Hear now these things, elders, and give ear, all who dwell in the land. Have such things happened in your days or in the days of your fathers?

3 Tell your children about them, and your children their children, and their children another generation.

4 The locust devoured what remained of the caterpillar, and the locust grub devoured what remained of the locust, and the mildew devoured what remained of the locust grub.

5 Sober up from their wine, you who are drunk, and weep; lament, all who drink wine to drunkenness, because gladness and joy have been removed from your mouth.

6 For a nation came up upon my land, strong and innumerable; its teeth are a lion's teeth, and its molars those of a young lion;

7 it consigned my vine to disappearance and my fig trees to breaking; searching, it searched her out and cast her away; it whitened her branches.

8 Lament to me more than a bride girded with sackcloth over the husband of her virginity.

9 Sacrifice and libation have been removed from the house of the Lord. Mourn, priests who minister at the altar,

10 for the plains have suffered misery; let the earth mourn, for grain has suffered misery, wine dried up, oil diminished.

11 The farmers dried up; lament, estates, over wheat and barley, because the harvest has perished from the field;

12 the vine dried up, and the fig trees diminished; pomegranate and palm and apple tree and all the trees of the field dried up, because the sons of men put joy to shame.

13 Gird yourselves and beat your breasts, priests; lament, those ministering at the altar; enter, sleep in sackcloth, those ministering to God, because sacrifice and libation have withdrawn from the house of your God.

14 Sanctify a fast, proclaim a service, gather elders, all who dwell in the land, into the house of your God, and cry earnestly to the Lord:

15 Alas, alas, alas for the day, because the day of the Lord is near, and it will come like misery out of misery.

16 Before your eyes food was destroyed, gladness and joy from the house of your God.

17 Heifers leaped at their mangers; storehouses disappeared; winepresses were torn down, because grain dried up.

18 What shall we store up for ourselves? Herds of cattle wept because there was no pasture for them, and the flocks of sheep disappeared.

19 To you, Lord, I will cry, because fire consumed the beautiful things of the wilderness, and a flame kindled all the trees of the field;

20 and the beasts of the plain looked up to you, because outlets of waters dried up, and fire devoured the beautiful things of the wilderness.

Chapter 2

1 Sound a trumpet in Sion, proclaim on my holy mountain, and let all who dwell in the land be confounded, because the day of the Lord is present, because it is near,

2 a day of darkness and gloom, a day of cloud and mist. Like dawn, a numerous and strong people will be poured upon the mountains; its like has not come to be from the age, and after it none will be added for years into generations of generations.

3 Before it, a consuming fire, and behind it, a kindled flame; the land before it is like a paradise of delight, and behind it a plain of disappearance, and it will have no survivor.

4 Their appearance is like the sight of horses, and like horsemen, so they will pursue;

5 like the sound of chariots they will leap upon the summits of the mountains, and like the sound of a flame of fire devouring straw, and like a numerous and strong people drawn up for war.

6 Before it peoples will be crushed; every face is like the scorching of a pot.

7 Like fighters they will run, and like warrior men they will climb upon the walls, and each will go in his way, and they will certainly not turn aside their paths,

8 and each will not keep away from his brother; weighed down with their weapons, they will go and fall among their missiles and certainly not be brought to an end.

9 They will take hold of the city and run upon the walls and climb upon the houses and enter through windows like thieves.

10 Before them the earth will be confounded and heaven shaken; the sun and the moon will grow dark, and the stars will cause their brightness to set.

11 And the Lord will give his voice before his force, because his camp is exceedingly numerous, because the works of his words are strong; for the day of the Lord is great, great and exceedingly manifest, and who will be sufficient for it?

12 And now the Lord your God says: Return to me with your whole heart and with fasting and with weeping and with beating of the breast;

13 and tear your hearts and not your garments, and return to the Lord your God, because he is merciful and compassionate, long-suffering and abundant in mercy, and changes his mind over evil things.

14 Who knows whether he will turn and change his mind and leave behind him a blessing, a sacrifice and a libation to the Lord our God?

15 Sound a trumpet in Sion, sanctify a fast, proclaim a service,

16 gather a people, sanctify an assembly, choose elders, gather infants sucking breasts; let a bridegroom go out from his bedroom and a bride from her bridal chamber.

17 In the midst of the base of the altar the priests ministering to the Lord will weep and say: Spare, Lord, your people, and do not give your inheritance to reproach, for nations to rule them, so that they may not say among the nations: Where is their God?

18 And the Lord was zealous for his land and spared his people.

19 And the Lord answered and said to his people: Behold, I send out to you grain and wine and oil, and you will be filled with them, and I will no longer give you to reproach among the nations;

20 and I will drive away from you the one from the north, and thrust him into a waterless land, and make his front disappear into the first sea and his rear into the last sea; and his decay will rise, and his stench will rise, because he magnified his works.

21 Take courage, earth, rejoice and be glad, because the Lord magnified his doing.

22 Take courage, beasts of the plain, because plains of the wilderness have sprouted, because a tree bore its fruit; vine and fig tree gave their strength.

23 And children of Sion, rejoice and be glad in the Lord your God, because he gave you food for righteousness, and he will rain upon you early and late rain as before,

24 and the threshing floors will be filled with grain, and the winepresses will overflow with wine and oil.

25 And I will repay you for the years which the locust and the locust grub and the mildew and the caterpillar devoured, my great force which I sent out among you;

26 and eating, you will eat and be filled, and praise the name of the Lord your God, for what he did with you as wonders, and my people will certainly not be put to shame into the age;

27 and you will know that I am in the midst of Israel, and I am the Lord your God, and there is no other except me, and all my people will certainly no longer be put to shame into the age.

Chapter 3

1 And it will be after these things that I will pour out from my spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and your daughters will prophesy, and your elders will dream dreams, and your young men will see visions;

2 and upon the male slaves and upon the female slaves in those days I will pour out from my spirit.

3 And I will give portents in heaven and upon the earth, blood and fire and vapor of smoke;

4 the sun will be turned into darkness and the moon into blood before the great and manifest day of the Lord comes.

5 And it will be that everyone who calls upon the name of the Lord will be saved; for on mount Sion and in Ierusalem there will be a survivor, as the Lord said, and those announcing good news whom the Lord has called.

Chapter 4

1 For behold, I, in those days and at that time, when I turn back the captivity of Iouda and Ierusalem,

2 will also gather all the nations and bring them down into the valley of Iosaphat, and I will plead against them there on behalf of my people and my inheritance Israel, who were scattered among the nations; and they divided up my land,

3 and cast lots for my people, and gave the boys to prostitutes and were selling the girls in exchange for wine, and drinking.

4 And what are you also to me, Tyre and Sidon and all Galilaia of the foreigners? Are you repaying me a recompense? Or do you bear a sharp grudge against me? And quickly I will repay your recompense upon your heads,

5 because you took my silver and my gold and brought my choice things and beautiful things into your temples,

6 and sold the sons of Iouda and the sons of Ierusalem to the sons of the Greeks, so that you might thrust them out of their boundaries.

7 Behold, I rouse them from the place where you sold them, and I will repay your recompense upon your heads,

8 and sell your sons and your daughters into the hands of sons of Iouda, and they will sell them into captivity to a nation far away, because the Lord spoke.

9 Proclaim these things among the nations, sanctify war, rouse the fighters; bring them forward and go up, all warrior men.

10 Beat your plows into swords and your sickles into lances; let the powerless one say: I am strong.

11 Gather and enter, all the nations round about, and be gathered there; let the meek one be a fighter.

12 Let all the nations be roused and go up into the valley of Iosaphat, for there I will sit to judge all the nations round about.

13 Send out sickles, because the harvest is present; enter, tread, because the winepress is full; the vats overflow, because their evil things have multiplied.

14 Sounds resounded in the valley of judgment, because the day of the Lord is near in the valley of judgment.

15 The sun and the moon will grow dark, and the stars will cause their brightness to set.

16 But the Lord will cry out from Sion and give his voice from Ierusalem, and heaven and earth will be shaken; but the Lord will spare his people, and the Lord will strengthen the sons of Israel.

17 And you will know that I am the Lord your God who dwells in Sion on my holy mountain; and Ierusalem will be a holy city, and foreigners will no longer pass through her.

18 And it will be on that day that the mountains will drip sweetness, and the hills will flow with milk, and all the outlets of Iouda will flow with waters, and a spring will go out from the house of the Lord and water the torrent of the rushes.

19 Egypt will be consigned to disappearance, and Idoumaia will be a plain of disappearance because of injustices against sons of Iouda, because they poured out righteous blood in their land.

20 But Ioudaia will be inhabited into the age, and Ierusalem into generations of generations.

21 And I will avenge their blood and certainly not acquit. And the Lord will dwell in Sion.

Obadiah

Chapter 1

1 A vision of Abdias. Thus says the Lord God to Idoumaia: I heard a report from the Lord, and he sent out a dispatch to the nations: Rise, and let us rise up against her for war.

2 Behold, I have made you very small among the nations; you are exceedingly dishonored.

3 The arrogance of your heart lifted you up, dwelling in the openings of the rocks, raising his dwelling, saying in his heart: Who will bring me down to the earth?

4 If you are raised aloft like an eagle, and if you place your nest among the stars, from there I will bring you down, says the Lord.

5 If thieves entered to you, or robbers by night, where would you have been cast away? Would they not have stolen what was sufficient for themselves? And if grape harvesters entered to you, would they not have left a gleaning?

6 How Esau was searched out, and his hidden things seized.

7 All the men of your covenant sent you out as far as your boundaries; your men of peace opposed you, prevailed against you; they placed ambushes beneath you; there is no understanding in them.

8 On that day, says the Lord, I will destroy wise men from Idoumaia and understanding from the mountain of Esau;

9 and your fighters from Thaiman will be terrified, so that a man may be removed from the mountain of Esau

10 because of the slaughter and the impiety against your brother Iakob, and shame will cover you, and you will be removed into the age.

11 From the day you stood opposed, on a day when foreigners were taking his force captive, and strangers entered his gates and cast lots over Ierusalem, you too were like one of them.

12 And do not look upon your brother's day on a day of strangers, and do not rejoice over the sons of Iouda on the day of their destruction, and do not speak boastfully on a day of affliction;

13 nor enter the gates of peoples on the day of their troubles, nor yourself look upon their gathering on the day of their ruin, nor join in attacking their force on the day of their destruction;

14 nor stand over their passageways to destroy their survivors, nor shut in those fleeing from them on a day of affliction.

15 For the day of the Lord is near upon all the nations; as you did, so it will be for you; your recompense will be repaid upon your head;

16 for as you drank upon my holy mountain, all the nations will drink wine; they will drink and go down, and they will be as though not existing.

17 But on mount Sion there will be salvation, and it will be holy; and the house of Iakob will inherit those who inherited them.

18 And the house of Iakob will be fire, but the house of Ioseph a flame, and the house of Esau straw, and they will blaze against them and devour them, and there will be no fire-bearer in the house of Esau, because the Lord spoke.

19 And those in Nageb will inherit the mountain of Esau, and those in Sephela the foreigners, and they will inherit the mountain of Ephraim and the plain of Samareia and Beniamin and Galaaditis.

20 And this is the beginning of the resettlement: for the sons of Israel, the land of the Chananites as far as Sarepta, and the resettlement of Ierusalem as far as Ephratha, and they will inherit the cities of Nageb.

21 And saved men will go up from mount Sion to punish the mountain of Esau, and the kingdom will belong to the Lord.

Jonah

Chapter 1

1 And a word of the Lord came to Ionas son of Amathi, saying:

2 Rise and go to Nineue, the great city, and proclaim in it, because the cry of its wickedness came up to me.

3 And Ionas rose to flee to Tharsis from the presence of the Lord, and went down to Ioppe and found a ship going to Tharsis, and paid its fare and boarded it to sail with them to Tharsis from the presence of the Lord.

4 And the Lord stirred up a wind upon the sea, and a great surge arose in the sea, and the ship was in danger of being shattered.

5 And the sailors feared and were crying out, each to their god, and cast the equipment in the ship into the sea to be lightened of it; but Ionas went down into the hollow of the ship and was sleeping and snoring.

6 And the lookout approached him and said to him: Why are you snoring? Rise and call upon your god, so that God may save us and we may not perish.

7 And each said to his neighbor: Come, let us cast lots and learn on whose account this evil is among us. And they cast lots, and the lot fell upon Ionas.

8 And they said to him: Tell us on whose account this evil is among us. What is your work? And from where do you come, and from what region and what people are you?

9 And he said to them: I am a slave of the Lord, and I worship the Lord God of heaven, who made the sea and the dry land.

10 And the men feared a great fear and said to him: What is this you have done? For the men knew that he was fleeing from the presence of the Lord, because he told them.

11 And they said to him: What shall we do to you, and the sea will abate from us? For the sea was continuing and stirring up a greater surge.

12 And Ionas said to them: Lift me and cast me into the sea, and the sea will abate from you; for I know that this great surge is upon you because of me.

13 And the men were forcing themselves to return to the land and could not, because the sea was continuing and being stirred up more against them.

14 And they cried out to the Lord and said: By no means, Lord, let us not perish on account of this man's soul, and do not place righteous blood upon us, because you, Lord, have done as you wished.

15 And they took Ionas and cast him out into the sea, and the sea ceased from its tossing.

16 And the men feared the Lord with great fear, and sacrificed a sacrifice to the Lord and vowed vows.

Chapter 2

1 And the Lord commanded a great sea creature to swallow Ionas; and Ionas was in the belly of the sea creature three days and three nights.

2 And Ionas prayed to the Lord his God from the belly of the sea creature,

3 and said: I cried in my affliction to the Lord my God, and he heard me; from the belly of Hades, of my cry, you heard my voice.

4 You cast me away into the depths of the heart of the sea, and rivers surrounded me; all your billows and your waves passed over me.

5 And I said: I have been rejected from your eyes; shall I again look toward your holy temple?

6 Water poured around me as far as my soul; the utmost abyss surrounded me; my head sank into clefts of mountains.

7 I went down into a land whose bars are everlasting restraints, and let the corruption of my life rise up, Lord my God.

8 When my soul was failing from me, I remembered the Lord, and may my prayer come to you into your holy temple.

9 Those guarding vain and false things abandoned their mercy.

10 But I will sacrifice to you with a voice of praise and confession; whatever I vowed, I will repay to you, of salvation to the Lord.

11 And the sea creature was commanded, and it cast Ionas out upon the dry land.

Chapter 3

1 And a word of the Lord came to Ionas a second time, saying:

2 Rise and go to Nineue, the great city, and proclaim in it according to the former proclamation which I spoke to you.

3 And Ionas rose and went to Nineue, as the Lord spoke; but Nineue was a city great to God, about a journey of three days' road.

4 And Ionas began to enter the city about a day's journey, and proclaimed and said: Yet three days, and Nineue will be overturned.

5 And the men of Nineue believed God and proclaimed a fast and put on sackcloth, from their great to their small.

6 And the word reached the king of Nineue, and he rose from his throne and removed his robe from himself and clothed himself in sackcloth and sat upon ashes.

7 And it was proclaimed and said in Nineue by the king and by his grandees, saying: Let men and beasts and cattle and sheep taste nothing, nor graze, nor drink water.

8 And the men and the beasts clothed themselves in sackcloth and cried earnestly to God; and each turned from his evil way and from the injustice in their hands, saying:

9 Who knows whether God will change his mind and turn from the wrath of his anger, and we will certainly not perish?

10 And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil ways, and God changed his mind over the evil which he spoke of doing to them, and did not do it.

Chapter 4

1 And Ionas was grieved with great grief and was confounded.

2 And he prayed to the Lord and said: O Lord, were these not my words while I was still in my land? Therefore I made haste to flee to Tharsis, for I knew that you are merciful and compassionate, long-suffering and abundant in mercy, and change your mind over evil things.

3 And now, Master Lord, take my soul from me, because it is better for me to die than for me to live.

4 And the Lord said to Ionas: Have you been exceedingly grieved?

5 And Ionas went out from the city and sat opposite the city; and he made himself a tent there and was sitting beneath it in shade, until he should see what would happen to the city.

6 And the Lord God commanded a gourd, and it rose above the head of Ionas to be shade above his head, to shade him from his evils; and Ionas rejoiced over the gourd with great joy.

7 And God commanded a worm at dawn the next day, and it struck the gourd, and it dried up.

8 And it happened as the sun rose that God commanded a scorching wind of burning heat, and the sun struck upon the head of Ionas; and he grew faint and was renouncing his soul, and said: It is better for me to die than to live.

9 And God said to Ionas: Have you been exceedingly grieved over the gourd? And he said: I have been exceedingly grieved unto death.

10 And the Lord said: You had pity on the gourd, for which you suffered no hardship and which you did not nourish, which came to be in a night and perished in a night.

11 But shall I not have pity on Nineue, the great city, in which dwell more than twelve myriads of men, who did not know their right hand or their left hand, and many beasts?

Nahum

Chapter 1

1 An oracle of Nineue; a book of the vision of Naoum the Elkesite.

2 A jealous God and an avenger is the Lord, the Lord avenging with anger, the Lord avenging his adversaries, and he himself removing his enemies.

3 The Lord is long-suffering, and his strength is great, and acquitting, the Lord will not acquit. His way is in consummation and shaking together, and clouds are the dust of his feet.

4 Threatening the sea and drying it, and laying waste all the rivers; Basanitis and Karmel diminished, and the blossoming things of Lebanon failed.

5 The mountains were shaken by him, and the hills were moved; and the earth recoiled before him, the whole earth and all who dwell in it.

6 Who will stand before his wrath? And who will resist in the wrath of his anger? His anger melts dominions, and the rocks were shattered by him.

7 The Lord is kind to those awaiting him on a day of affliction, and knows those revering him;

8 and in a flood in its course he will make an end of those rising up, and darkness will pursue his enemies.

9 What do you devise against the Lord? He himself will make an end; he will not punish twice for the same thing with affliction;

10 for it will be laid barren as far as their foundation, and consumed like an entwined bindweed and like straw full of dryness.

11 From you will go out a thought against the Lord, devising evil things in opposition.

12 Thus says the Lord who rules many waters: And thus they will be separated, and your report will no longer be heard.

13 And now I will shatter his rod from you and tear your bonds;

14 and the Lord will command concerning you; no longer will anything be sown from your name; from the house of your god I will destroy the carved and cast images; I will appoint your burial, because you are swift.

Chapter 2

1 Behold, upon the mountains the feet of one announcing good news and reporting peace; celebrate your feasts, Iouda, repay your vows, because they will certainly no longer pass through you unto old age. It has been brought to an end, removed.

2 One blowing into your face went up, rescuing from affliction; watch a road, strengthen your waist, be exceedingly courageous in strength,

3 for the Lord turned away the arrogance of Iakob as the arrogance of Israel, because shaking out, they shook them out and their branches; they destroyed

4 the weapons of their power from men, mighty men mocking amid fire; the reins of their chariots on the day of his preparation, and the horsemen will be disturbed

5 in the roads, and the chariots will be confounded and entangled in the squares; their appearance is like torches of fire and like lightning running through.

6 And their grandees will remember and flee by day and grow weak in their journey and hasten to the walls and prepare their outposts.

7 The gates of the rivers were opened, and the palaces collapsed,

8 and the foundation was uncovered, and she was going up, and her female slaves were being led, like doves uttering in their hearts.

9 And Nineue, her waters are like a pool of water, and they, fleeing, did not stop, and there was no one looking back.

10 They were plundering silver, plundering gold, and there was no end to her adornment; they have been weighed down beyond all her desirable vessels.

11 A shaking out and a shaking up and a boiling out and a breaking of heart and a loosening of knees and birth pangs upon every waist, and the face of all like the scorching of a pot.

12 Where is the dwelling place of the lions and the pasture belonging to the young lions, where a lion went to enter there, a young lion, and there was no one frightening it?

13 A lion seized what was sufficient for his young lions and strangled for his lions, and filled his nest with prey and his dwelling with plunder.

14 Behold, I am against you, says the Lord Almighty, and I will burn your multitude into smoke, and a sword will devour your lions, and I will destroy your prey from the earth, and your works will certainly no longer be heard.

Chapter 3

1 O city of bloodshed, wholly false, full of injustice; prey will not be felt for.

2 A sound of whips and a sound of the shaking of wheels and of a horse pursuing and of a chariot bounding,

3 and of a horseman mounting and of a glittering sword and of flashing weapons and of a multitude of wounded and of a heavy fall; and there was no end to her nations, and they will grow weak among their bodies

4 from the multitude of prostitution. A beautiful and pleasing prostitute, a mistress of sorceries, who sells nations through her prostitution and tribes through her sorceries,

5 behold, I am against you, says the Lord God the Almighty, and I will uncover your rear over your face and show nations your shame and kingdoms your dishonor,

6 and cast abomination upon you according to your uncleannesses and make you an example,

7 and it will be that everyone seeing you will leap away from you and say: Wretched Nineue; who will lament her? From where shall I seek consolation for her?

8 Prepare a portion, fit a string, prepare a portion, Amon who dwells among rivers, water round about her, whose dominion is the sea and whose walls are water,

9 and Ethiopia is her strength, and Egypt, and there is no end to flight, and Libyans became her helpers.

10 And she will go captive into resettlement, and they will dash her infants to the ground at the beginnings of all her roads, and cast lots for all her glorious things, and all her grandees will be bound with hand fetters.

11 And you will be made drunk and be disregarded, and you will seek for yourself a stand against enemies.

12 All your strongholds are fig trees having watchmen; if they are shaken, they too will fall into the mouth of one eating.

13 Behold, your people are like women within you; opening, the gates of your land will be opened to your enemies, and fire will devour your bars.

14 Draw water for a siege for yourself and hold fast your strongholds; step into clay and be trampled together in straw; hold fast for brick;

15 there fire will devour you, a sword will destroy you, it will devour you like a locust, and you will be weighed down like a locust grub.

16 You multiplied your trades beyond the stars of heaven; a locust grub rushed and spread its wings.

17 Your mixed multitude leaped out like a grasshopper, like a locust mounted upon a hedge on days of frost; the sun rose, and it leaped away, and he did not know her place; woe to them.

18 Your shepherds grew drowsy; an Assyrian king put your potentates to sleep; your people departed to the mountains, and there was no one receiving them.

19 There is no healing for your crushing; your wound became inflamed; all who hear your report will clap hands over you; for upon whom has your wickedness not come continually?

Habakkuk

Chapter 1

1 The oracle which Ambakoum the prophet saw.

2 How long, Lord, will I cry and you certainly not hear? Will I cry to you, being wronged, and you not save?

3 Why did you show me troubles and pains, to look upon misery and impiety? Judgment has arisen against me, and the judge takes.

4 Therefore law has been dispersed, and judgment is not carried through to completion, because the impious one oppresses the righteous one; because of this judgment will go out distorted.

5 See, despisers, and look and marvel at wonders and disappear, because I work a work in your days which you will certainly not believe if someone recounts it.

6 For behold, I rouse against you the Chaldeans, the fighters, the bitter and swift nation going over the breadths of the earth to inherit dwellings not its own;

7 he is fearsome and manifest; his judgment will be from himself, and his oracle will go out from himself;

8 and his horses will leap beyond leopards and are swifter than the wolves of Arabia; and his horsemen will ride out and rush from afar and fly like an eagle eager to eat.

9 An end will come to the impious who stand opposed to their faces, and he will gather captivity like sand.

10 And he will revel among kings, and tyrants are his playthings, and he will mock every stronghold and throw up a mound and seize it.

11 Then the spirit will change and pass through and make atonement; this strength belongs to my God. –

12 Are you not from the beginning, Lord, my holy God? And we will certainly not die. Lord, you have appointed him for judgment; and he formed me to reprove his discipline.

13 The eye is pure so as not to see evil things, and you will not be able to look upon pains; why do you look upon despisers? Will you remain silent when an impious one swallows the righteous one?

14 And you will make men like the fish of the sea and like the creeping things having no leader.

15 He pulled up an entirety with a hook and dragged him in a casting net and gathered him in his drag nets; because of this his heart will be glad and rejoice;

16 because of this he will sacrifice to his drag net and burn incense to his casting net, because with them he fattened his portion, and his food is choice;

17 therefore he will cast his casting net and will not spare to kill nations continually.

Chapter 2

1 I will stand upon my watch and step upon a rock, and look out to see what he will speak in me and what I will answer concerning my reproof.

2 And the Lord answered me and said: Write a vision, and clearly upon a tablet, so that the one reading these things may run.

3 For the vision is still for an appointed time, and it will rise toward an end and not in vain; if he is late, await him, because coming, he will come and certainly not delay.

4 If he draws back, my soul takes no pleasure in him; but the righteous one will live by my faith.

5 But the wine-soaked and contemptuous man, a boaster, will certainly accomplish nothing, who widened his soul like Hades, and he, like death, is not filled, and he will gather all the nations to himself and receive all the peoples to himself.

6 Will not all these take up a parable against him and a riddle for his narration? And they will say: Woe to the one multiplying for himself what is not his – how long? – and heavily weighing down his collar.

7 For suddenly those biting him will rise, and your plotters will sober up, and you will become plunder for them.

8 Because you despoiled many nations, all the remaining peoples will despoil you because of bloodshed of men and impieties of land and city and all who dwell in it. –

9 O one gaining an evil gain for his house, to place his nest on high, to be pulled out from the hand of evil things.

10 You planned shame for your house; you brought many peoples to an end, and your soul sinned;

11 for a stone will cry from a wall, and a beetle from wood will utter these things. –

12 Woe to the one building a city with bloodshed and preparing a city with injustices.

13 Are these things not from the Lord Almighty? And considerable peoples failed in fire, and many nations grew faint.

14 For the earth will be filled with knowing the glory of the Lord; like water it will cover them. –

15 O one giving his neighbor drink with a turbid overthrow and making him drunk, so that he may look upon their caves.

16 Drink, you too, a fullness of dishonor instead of glory, and be moved and shaken; the cup of the Lord's right hand came round upon you, and dishonor gathered upon your glory.

17 For the impiety of Lebanon will cover you, and the misery of beasts will terrify you because of bloodshed of men and impieties of land and city and all who dwell in it. –

18 What does a carved image profit, that they carved it? They formed it as a cast image, a false apparition, because the one forming it trusts in his formation to make mute idols.

19 Woe to the one saying to wood: Sober up, be roused, and to stone: Be raised; and it is an apparition; this is a plate of gold and silver, and there is no spirit at all in it.

20 But the Lord is in his holy temple; let all the earth revere before him.

Chapter 3

1 A prayer of Ambakoum the prophet with a song.

2 Lord, I have heard your report and feared; I considered your works and was astounded. In the midst of two living creatures you will be known; as the years approach you will be recognized; when the time is present you will be shown forth; when my soul is troubled, in wrath you will remember mercy.

3 God will come from Thaiman, and the holy one from a densely wooded, shaded mountain. Musical interlude. His excellence covered heavens, and the earth is full of his praise.

4 And his brightness will be like light, horns in his hands, and he appointed a mighty love of his strength.

5 A word will go before him, and he will go out, his feet in sandals.

6 He stood, and the earth was moved; he looked, and nations melted. The mountains were shattered violently; everlasting hills melted.

7 I saw his everlasting journeys in place of troubles; dwellings of Ethiopians will be terrified, and the tents of the land of Madiam.

8 Were you angry with rivers, Lord, or was your anger against rivers, or your impulse against the sea? For you will mount your horses, and your riding is salvation.

9 Stretching, you will stretch your bow against the scepters, says the Lord. Musical interlude. The earth will be broken by rivers.

10 Peoples will see you and be in labor, scattering waters of his course; the abyss gave her voice, the height of her apparition.

11 The sun was raised, and the moon stood in her station; your missiles will go into light, into the brightness of the lightning of your weapons.

12 With a threat you will diminish the earth, and in anger bring down nations.

13 You went out for the salvation of your people, to save your anointed ones; you cast death upon the heads of lawless ones; you raised bonds as far as the neck. Musical interlude.

14 In astonishment you cut through heads of potentates; they will be shaken in it; they will open their bridles like a poor one eating secretly.

15 And you brought your horses into the sea, troubling much water.

16 I guarded myself, and my belly was terrified at the sound of the prayer of my lips, and trembling entered my bones, and beneath me my condition was troubled. I will rest on a day of affliction, to go up to the people of my sojourning.

17 For a fig tree will not bear fruit, and there will be no produce in the vines; the work of an olive tree will prove false, and the plains will not produce food; sheep failed for lack of food, and cattle do not exist at mangers.

18 But I will exult in the Lord, rejoice in God my savior.

19 The Lord God is my strength and will appoint my feet for completion; he brings me up upon the high places, to conquer in his song.

Zephaniah

Chapter 1

1 A word of the Lord which came to Sophonias son of Chousi, son of Godolias, son of Amarias, son of Ezekias, in the days of Iosias son of Amon, king of Iouda.

2 With a failing let all things fail from the face of the earth, says the Lord,

3 let man and beasts fail, let the birds of heaven and the fish of the sea fail, and I will remove men from the face of the earth, says the Lord.

4 And I will stretch my hand against Iouda and against all who dwell in Ierusalem, and remove from this place the names of Baal and the names of the priests,

5 and those bowing down on the rooftops to the army of heaven, and those swearing by the Lord and those swearing by their king,

6 and those turning aside from the Lord and those who did not seek the Lord and those not holding fast to the Lord.

7 Revere before the Lord God, because the day of the Lord is near, because the Lord has prepared his sacrifice, has sanctified his invited ones.

8 And it will be on the day of the Lord's sacrifice that I will punish the rulers and the house of the king and all those clothed in foreign garments;

9 and on that day I will punish all openly at the gateways, those filling the house of the Lord their God with impiety and deceit.

10 And on that day, says the Lord, there will be a sound of a cry from the gate of those piercing, and a howl from the second, and a great crushing from the hills.

11 Lament, those dwelling in the cut-down place, because all the people of Chanaan were made alike; all those lifted up with silver were destroyed.

12 And on that day I will search Ierusalem with a lamp and punish the men who despise upon their guarded stores, those saying in their hearts: The Lord will certainly not do good or do harm,

13 and their force will become plunder and their houses disappearance, and they will build houses and certainly not dwell in them, and plant vineyards and certainly not drink their wine.

14 For the great day of the Lord is near, near and exceedingly swift; the sound of the day of the Lord is bitter and harsh; it has been appointed mighty.

15 That day is a day of wrath, a day of affliction and necessity, a day of untimeliness and disappearance, a day of darkness and gloom, a day of cloud and mist,

16 a day of trumpet and shouting against the fortified cities and against the high corners.

17 And I will press men hard, and they will walk like blind men, because they sinned against the Lord; and he will pour out their blood like dust and their flesh like dung.

18 And their silver and their gold will certainly not be able to rescue them on the day of the Lord's wrath, and all the earth will be consumed in the fire of his jealousy, because he will bring an end and haste upon all who dwell in the earth.

Chapter 2

1 Gather and be bound together, undisciplined nation,

2 before you become like a flower passing away, before the wrath of the Lord comes upon you, before the day of the Lord's anger comes upon you.

3 Seek the Lord, all lowly ones of the earth; work judgment and seek righteousness and answer these things, so that you may be sheltered on the day of the Lord's wrath.

4 For Gaza will be plundered, and Askalon will be consigned to disappearance, and Azotos will be cast out at noon, and Akkaron uprooted.

5 Woe to those dwelling in the measured portion of the sea, sojourners of Cretans; a word of the Lord is against you, Chanaan, land of foreigners, and I will destroy you from habitation;

6 and Crete will be pasture for flocks and an enclosure for sheep,

7 and the measured portion of the sea will belong to the remaining ones of the house of Iouda; they will graze upon them in the houses of Askalon; at evening they will lodge away from the presence of the sons of Iouda, because the Lord their God has visited them and turned back their captivity.

8 I heard reproaches of Moab and blows of the fists of the sons of Ammon, with which they were reproaching my people and magnifying themselves against my boundaries.

9 Therefore, I live, says the Lord of forces, the God of Israel, for Moab will be like Sodoma and the sons of Ammon like Gomorra, and Damascus abandoned like a heap on a threshing floor and made to disappear into the age; and the remaining ones of my people plunder them, and the remaining ones of my nation will inherit them.

10 This is for them in exchange for their arrogance, because they reproached and magnified themselves against the Lord Almighty.

11 The Lord will appear against them and destroy all the gods of the nations of the earth, and they will bow down to him, each from his place, all the islands of the nations.

12 And you, Ethiopians, are wounded by my sword.

13 And he will stretch his hand against the north and destroy the Assyrian and make Nineue a waterless disappearance like a wilderness;

14 and flocks and all the beasts of the earth will graze in her midst, and chameleons and hedgehogs will lie in her panels, and beasts will call in her excavations, ravens in her gateways, because her structure is cedar.

15 This is the contemptuous city dwelling in hope, saying in her heart: I am, and there is no other after me. How she became a disappearance, a pasture for beasts; everyone passing through her will hiss and move his hands.

Chapter 3

1 O manifest and redeemed one, the dove city;

2 she did not hear a voice, did not receive discipline, did not trust in the Lord, and did not draw near to her God.

3 Her rulers within her are like roaring lions; her judges like wolves of Arabia; they left nothing for morning;

4 her prophets are spirit-bearers, contemptuous men; her priests profane the holy things and act impiously toward law.

5 But the Lord is righteous in her midst and will certainly not do injustice; morning by morning he will give his judgment into light, and it was not hidden, and he did not know injustice in exaction, nor injustice for strife.

6 In destruction I pulled down arrogant ones; their corners disappeared; I will lay their roads entirely waste so that no one passes through; their cities failed because no one existed or dwelt there.

7 I said: Only fear me and receive discipline, and you will certainly not be destroyed from her eyes, all that I punished upon her; prepare, rise early; all their gleaning has been destroyed.

8 Therefore await me, says the Lord, for the day of my rising for a testimony; for my judgment is for gatherings of nations, to receive kings, to pour upon them all the wrath of my anger; for all the earth will be consumed in the fire of my jealousy.

9 For then I will turn a tongue upon peoples into its generation, so that all may call upon the name of the Lord, to serve him under one yoke.

10 From the ends of the rivers of Ethiopia they will bring me sacrifices.

11 On that day you will certainly not be put to shame for all your practices with which you acted impiously against me; for then I will remove from you the contemptuous acts of your arrogance, and you will certainly no longer boast over my holy mountain.

12 And I will leave in you a meek and lowly people, and they will revere before the name of the Lord,

13 the remaining ones of Israel, and they will not do injustice or speak vain things, and a deceitful tongue will certainly not be found in their mouth, because they will graze and lie down, and there will be no one frightening them.

14 Rejoice exceedingly, daughter of Sion; proclaim, daughter of Ierusalem; be glad and delight with your whole heart, daughter of Ierusalem.

15 The Lord removed your wrongdoings; he has redeemed you from the hand of your enemies; the king of Israel, the Lord, is in your midst; you will no longer see evil things.

16 At that time the Lord will say to Ierusalem: Take courage, Sion, let your hands not be slack;

17 the Lord your God is in you, a mighty one will save you; he will bring gladness upon you and renew you in his love, and be glad over you with delight as on a day of a feast.

18 And I will gather those who have been crushed; woe, who took up reproach against her?

19 Behold, I act in you for your sake at that time, says the Lord, and I will save her who has been squeezed out and her who has been rejected; I will receive them and make them a boast and renowned in all the earth.

20 And they will be put to shame at that time, when I do well for you, and at the time when I receive you; for I will make you renowned and a boast among all the peoples of the earth, when I turn back your captivity before you, says the Lord.

Haggai

Chapter 1

1 In the second year under Dareios the king, in the sixth month, on the first of the month, a word of the Lord came by the hand of Aggaios the prophet, saying: Say now to Zorobabel son of Salathiel, of the tribe of Iouda, and to Iesous son of Iosedek, the great priest, saying:

2 Thus says the Lord Almighty, saying: This people say: The time has not come to build the house of the Lord.

3 And a word of the Lord came by the hand of Aggaios the prophet, saying:

4 Is it a time for you to dwell in your paneled houses, but this house has been laid waste?

5 And now thus says the Lord Almighty: Set now your hearts upon your ways;

6 you sowed much and brought in little, ate and not to fullness, drank and not to drunkenness, clothed yourselves and were not warmed in them, and the one gathering wages gathered into a pierced bundle.

7 Thus says the Lord Almighty: Place your hearts upon your ways;

8 go up upon the mountain and cut wood and build the house, and I will take pleasure in it and be glorified, said the Lord.

9 You looked for much, and it became little; and it was brought into the house, and I blew it away. Therefore thus says the Lord Almighty: Because my house is desolate, but you hurry, each to his house,

10 therefore heaven will refrain from dew, and the earth will withhold its produce;

11 and I will bring a sword upon the earth and upon the mountains and upon the grain and upon the wine and upon the oil and whatever the earth brings forth, and upon men and upon beasts and upon all the labors of their hands. –

12 And Zorobabel son of Salathiel, of the tribe of Iouda, and Iesous son of Iosedek, the great priest, and all the remaining ones of the people heard the voice of the Lord their God and the words of Aggaios the prophet, as the Lord their God sent him to them, and the people feared before the Lord.

13 And Aggaios the messenger of the Lord said to the people: I am with you, says the Lord.

14 And the Lord roused the spirit of Zorobabel son of Salathiel, of the tribe of Iouda, and the spirit of Iesous son of Iosedek, the great priest, and the spirit of the remaining ones of all the people, and they entered and were doing works in the house of the Lord Almighty their God,

15 on the twenty-fourth of the sixth month in the second year under Dareios the king.

Chapter 2

1 In the seventh month, on the twenty-first of the month, the Lord spoke by the hand of Aggaios the prophet, saying:

2 Say now to Zorobabel son of Salathiel, of the tribe of Iouda, and to Iesous son of Iosedek, the great priest, and to all the remaining ones of the people, saying:

3 Who among you saw this house in its former glory? And how do you see it now? As though not existing before you.

4 And now be strong, Zorobabel, says the Lord, and be strong, Iesous son of Iosedek, the great priest, and let all the people of the land be strong, says the Lord, and work; for I am with you, says the Lord Almighty,

5 and my spirit stands in your midst; take courage.

6 For thus says the Lord Almighty: Yet once I will shake heaven and earth and sea and dry land;

7 and I will shake all the nations together, and the choice things of all the nations will come, and I will fill this house with glory, says the Lord Almighty.

8 Mine is the silver and mine the gold, says the Lord Almighty.

9 For the latter glory of this house will be great beyond the first, says the Lord Almighty; and in this place I will give peace, says the Lord Almighty, and peace of soul as a possession for everyone building to raise this temple.

10 On the twenty-fourth of the ninth month of the second year under Dareios, a word of the Lord came to Aggaios the prophet, saying:

11 Thus says the Lord Almighty: Ask the priests about law, saying:

12 If a man takes holy meat in the edge of his garment, and the edge of his garment touches bread or boiled food or wine or oil or any food, will it be sanctified? And the priests answered and said: No.

13 And Aggaios said: If one defiled by a soul touches any of these things, will it be defiled? And the priests answered and said: It will be defiled.

14 And Aggaios answered and said: So is this people, and so is this nation before me, says the Lord, and so are all the works of their hands, and whoever approaches there will be defiled because of their morning gains; they will suffer pain before their troubles; and you hated those reproving in the gates.

15 And now place in your hearts, from this day and above, before placing stone upon stone in the temple of the Lord,

16 what you were; when you were putting twenty sata of barley into a bin, it became ten sata of barley; and you were entering the vat to draw fifty measures, and they became twenty.

17 I struck you with barrenness and destruction by wind and hail, all the works of your hands, and you did not return to me, says the Lord.

18 Subject now your hearts from this day and beyond; from the twenty-fourth of the ninth month and from the day when the temple of the Lord was founded, place in your hearts

19 whether it will still be recognized upon the threshing floor, and whether still the vine and the fig tree and the pomegranate and the olive trees which bear no fruit; from this day I will bless.

20 And a word of the Lord came a second time to Aggaios the prophet, on the twenty-fourth of the month, saying:

21 Say to Zorobabel son of Salathiel, of the tribe of Iouda, saying: I shake heaven and earth and sea and dry land,

22 and I will overturn thrones of kings and destroy the force of kings of the nations and overturn chariots and riders, and horses and their riders will come down, each with a sword against his brother.

23 On that day, says the Lord Almighty, I will take you, Zorobabel son of Salathiel, my slave, says the Lord, and make you like a seal, because I chose you, says the Lord Almighty.

Zechariah

Chapter 1

1 In the eighth month of the second year under Dareios, a word of the Lord came to Zacharias son of Barachias, son of Addo, the prophet, saying:

2 The Lord was angry with your fathers with great wrath.

3 And you will say to them: Thus says the Lord Almighty: Return to me, and I will return to you, says the Lord.

4 And do not become like your fathers, whom the former prophets accused, saying: Thus says the Lord Almighty: Turn from your evil ways and from your evil practices, and they paid no attention to hearing me, says the Lord.

5 Where are your fathers? And will the prophets live for the age?

6 Only receive my words and my ordinances, whatever I command in my spirit to my slaves the prophets, who overtook your fathers. And they answered and said: As the Lord Almighty has drawn himself up to act according to your ways and according to your practices, so he acted for you.

7 On the twenty-fourth in the eleventh month – this is the month Sabat – in the second year under Dareios, a word of the Lord came to Zacharias son of Barachias, son of Addo, the prophet, saying:

8 I have seen the night, and behold, a man mounted upon a red horse, and he stood between the two shaded mountains, and behind him red and gray and variegated and white horses.

9 And I said: What are these, lord? And the angel speaking in me said to me: I will show you what these things are.

10 And the man standing between the mountains answered and said to me: These are those whom the Lord has sent out to go around the earth.

11 And they answered the angel of the Lord standing between the mountains and said: We have gone around all the earth, and behold, all the earth is inhabited and quiet.

12 And the angel of the Lord answered and said: Lord Almighty, how long will you not have mercy on Ierusalem and the cities of Iouda, which you disregarded this seventieth year?

13 And the Lord Almighty answered the angel speaking in me with good sayings and consoling words.

14 And the angel speaking in me said to me: Cry out, saying: Thus says the Lord Almighty: I have been jealous for Ierusalem and Sion with great jealousy,

15 and I am angry with great wrath against the nations joining in attack, because I was angry a little, but they joined in attack for evil things.

16 Therefore thus says the Lord: I will return to Ierusalem with compassion, and my house will be rebuilt in her, says the Lord Almighty, and a measure will yet be stretched over Ierusalem.

17 And the angel speaking in me said to me: Cry out, saying: Thus says the Lord Almighty: Cities will yet overflow with good things, and the Lord will yet have mercy on Sion and yet choose Ierusalem.

Chapter 2

1 And I lifted my eyes and saw, and behold, four horns.

2 And I said to the angel speaking in me: What are these, lord? And he said to me: These are the horns that scattered Iouda and Israel.

3 And the Lord showed me four craftsmen.

4 And I said: What are these coming to do? And he said to me: These horns that scattered Iouda and Israel broke them, and none of them lifted a head; and these entered to sharpen them into their hands, the four horns, the nations raising a horn against the land of the Lord to scatter it.

5 And I lifted my eyes and saw, and behold, a man, and in his hand a land-measuring cord.

6 And I said to him: Where are you going? And he said to me: To measure Ierusalem, to see how great its breadth is and how great its length.

7 And behold, the angel speaking in me stood, and another angel was going out to meet him,

8 and said to him, saying: Run and speak to that young man, saying: Ierusalem will be inhabited fruitfully because of a multitude of men and beasts in her midst;

9 and I will be for her, says the Lord, a wall of fire round about, and I will be for glory in her midst.

10 O, O, flee from the land of the north, says the Lord, because from the four winds of heaven I will gather you, says the Lord;

11 save yourselves into Sion, those dwelling in the daughter of Babylon.

12 For thus says the Lord Almighty: After glory he has sent me against the nations which despoiled you, because the one touching you is like one touching the pupil of his eye;

13 for behold, I bring my hand upon them, and they will be spoils for those enslaved to them, and you will know that the Lord Almighty has sent me.

14 Delight and be glad, daughter of Sion, for behold, I come and will dwell in your midst, says the Lord.

15 And many nations will take refuge in the Lord on that day and be a people for him and dwell in your midst, and you will know that the Lord Almighty has sent me to you.

16 And the Lord will inherit Iouda, his portion, upon the holy land, and yet choose Ierusalem.

17 Let all flesh revere before the Lord, because he has been roused from his holy clouds.

Chapter 3

1 And he showed me Iesous the great priest standing before the angel of the Lord, and the devil stood at his right to oppose him.

2 And the Lord said to the devil: May the Lord rebuke you, devil, and may the Lord who chose Ierusalem rebuke you; is this not, behold, like a firebrand pulled out of fire?

3 And Iesous was clothed in filthy garments and stood before the angel.

4 And he answered and said to those standing before him, saying: Remove the filthy garments from him. And he said to him: Behold, I have removed your lawless deeds, and clothe him in a robe reaching the feet,

5 and place a clean turban upon his head. And they clothed him in garments and placed a clean turban upon his head, and the angel of the Lord stood.

6 And the angel of the Lord solemnly testified to Iesous, saying:

7 Thus says the Lord Almighty: If you walk in my ways and if you keep my ordinances, you too will judge my house; and if you indeed guard my court, I will also give you those going about among these who stand.

8 Hear now, Iesous the great priest, you and your neighbors sitting before you, because they are men observing portents; for behold, I bring my slave, Rising;

9 for the stone which I gave before Iesous, upon the one stone there are seven eyes; behold, I dig a pit, says the Lord Almighty, and I will feel for all the injustice of that land in one day.

10 On that day, says the Lord Almighty, you will invite, each his neighbor, beneath a vine and beneath a fig tree.

Chapter 4

1 And the angel speaking in me returned and roused me as when a man is roused from his sleep,

2 and said to me: What do you see? And I said: I have seen, and behold, a lampstand wholly gold, and its lamp bowl above it, and seven lamps above it, and seven pouring vessels for the lamps above it;

3 and two olive trees above it, one to the right of the lamp bowl and one to the left.

4 And I asked and said to the angel speaking in me, saying: What are these, lord?

5 And the angel speaking in me answered and said to me: Do you not know what these are? And I said: No, lord.

6 And he answered and said to me, saying: This is the word of the Lord to Zorobabel, saying: Not by a great force nor by strength, but by my spirit, says the Lord Almighty.

7 Who are you, great mountain, before Zorobabel, to set things right? And I will bring out the stone of inheritance, equality of grace, its grace.

8 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

9 The hands of Zorobabel founded this house, and his hands will complete it, and you will know that the Lord Almighty has sent me to you.

10 For who despised small days? And they will rejoice and see the tin stone in the hand of Zorobabel. These seven are the eyes of the Lord looking upon all the earth.

11 And I answered and said to him: What are these two olive trees to the right of the lampstand and to the left?

12 And I asked a second time and said to him: What are the two branches of the olive trees in the hands of the two golden spouts pouring upon and bringing up the golden pouring vessels?

13 And he said to me: Do you not know what these are? And I said: No, lord.

14 And he said: These two sons of fatness stand beside the Lord of all the earth.

Chapter 5

1 And I turned and lifted my eyes and saw, and behold, a flying sickle.

2 And he said to me: What do you see? And I said: I see a flying sickle, twenty cubits long and ten cubits wide.

3 And he said to me: This is the curse going out over the face of all the earth, because every thief will be punished from this unto death, and every perjurer will be punished from this unto death;

4 and I will bring it out, says the Lord Almighty, and it will enter the house of the thief and the house of the one swearing falsely by my name, and lodge in the midst of his house and bring it and its wood and its stones to an end.

5 And the angel speaking in me went out and said to me: Look up with your eyes and see what this thing going out is.

6 And I said: What is it? And he said: This is the measure going out. And he said: This is their injustice in all the earth.

7 And behold, a talent of lead being lifted, and behold, one woman sat in the midst of the measure.

8 And he said: This is lawlessness; and he cast her into the midst of the measure and cast the stone of lead into her mouth.

9 And I lifted my eyes and saw, and behold, two women going out, and wind in their wings, and they had wings like a hoopoe's wings; and they lifted the measure between earth and heaven.

10 And I said to the angel speaking in me: Where are these carrying away the measure?

11 And he said to me: To build a house for it in the land of Babylon and prepare it, and they will place it there upon its prepared place.

Chapter 6

1 And I turned and lifted my eyes and saw, and behold, four chariots going out from between two mountains, and the mountains were bronze mountains.

2 In the first chariot red horses, and in the second chariot black horses,

3 and in the third chariot white horses, and in the fourth chariot variegated gray horses.

4 And I answered and said to the angel speaking in me: What are these, lord?

5 And the angel speaking in me answered and said: These are the four winds of heaven; they go out to stand beside the Lord of all the earth;

6 that in which the black horses were, they were going out to the land of the north, and the white ones were going out behind them, and the variegated ones were going out to the land of the south,

7 and the gray ones were going out and looking to go, to go around the earth. And he said: Go and go around the earth; and they went around the earth.

8 And he cried out and spoke to me, saying: Behold, those going out to the land of the north brought my anger to rest in the land of the north.

9 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

10 Take the things from the captivity from its rulers and from its useful ones and from those who have known it, and you will enter on that day into the house of Iosias son of Sophonias, who has come from Babylon,

11 and take silver and gold and make crowns and place them upon the head of Iesous son of Iosedek, the great priest,

12 and say to him: Thus says the Lord Almighty: Behold, a man, Rising is his name, and beneath him he will rise, and he will build the house of the Lord;

13 and he will receive excellence and sit and rule upon his throne, and the priest will be at his right, and peaceful counsel will be between both.

14 But the crown will be for those awaiting and for its useful ones and for those who have known it, and for the favor of the son of Sophonias and for a song in the house of the Lord.

15 And those far from them will come and build in the house of the Lord, and you will know that the Lord Almighty has sent me to you; and it will be, if hearing, you hear the voice of the Lord your God.

Chapter 7

1 And it happened in the fourth year under Dareios the king that a word of the Lord came to Zacharias on the fourth of the ninth month, which is Chaseleu,

2 and the king sent Sarasar and Arbeseer and his men to Baithel to propitiate the Lord,

3 saying to the priests in the house of the Lord Almighty and to the prophets, saying: The sanctification has entered here in the fifth month, as I have already done for considerable years.

4 And a word of the Lord of forces came to me, saying:

5 Say to all the people of the land and to the priests, saying: If you fast or beat your breasts on the fifths or on the sevenths, and behold, seventy years, did you fast a fast for me?

6 And if you eat or drink, is it not you who eat and you who drink?

7 Are these not the words which the Lord spoke by the hands of the former prophets, when Ierusalem was inhabited and prospering, and her cities round about, and the hill country and the plain were inhabited?

8 And a word of the Lord came to Zacharias, saying:

9 Thus says the Lord Almighty: Judge righteous judgment and do mercy and compassion, each toward his brother,

10 and do not oppress widow and orphan and proselyte and needy one, and let no one bear a grudge for his brother's evil in your hearts.

11 And they refused to pay attention and gave a deranged back and made their ears heavy so as not to hear,

12 and appointed their heart disobedient so as not to hear my law and the words which the Lord Almighty sent out in his spirit by the hands of the former prophets; and great wrath came from the Lord Almighty.

13 And it will be, as he spoke and they did not hear him, so they will cry, and I will certainly not hear, says the Lord Almighty.

14 And I will cast them out into all the nations which they did not know, and the land will disappear behind them, without anyone passing through or returning; and they consigned a choice land to disappearance.

Chapter 8

1 And a word of the Lord Almighty came, saying:

2 Thus says the Lord Almighty: I was jealous for Ierusalem and Sion with great jealousy, and with great anger I was jealous for her.

3 Thus says the Lord: And I will return to Sion and dwell in the midst of Ierusalem, and Ierusalem will be called the true city, and the mountain of the Lord Almighty a holy mountain.

4 Thus says the Lord Almighty: Old men and old women will yet sit in the squares of Ierusalem, each having his staff in his hand because of a multitude of days;

5 and the squares of the city will be filled with boys and girls playing in her squares.

6 Thus says the Lord Almighty: For if it is impossible before the remaining ones of this people in those days, will it also be impossible before me? says the Lord Almighty.

7 Thus says the Lord Almighty: Behold, I save my people from the land of the east and from the land of the west,

8 and I will bring them in and dwell in the midst of Ierusalem, and they will be a people for me, and I will be a God for them in truth and righteousness.

9 Thus says the Lord Almighty: Let your hands be strong, those hearing in these days these words from the mouth of the prophets, from the day when the house of the Lord Almighty has been founded, and the temple from when it has been built.

10 For before those days the wage of men will not be for benefit, and the wage of beasts will not exist, and for the one going out and the one entering there will be no peace because of affliction; and I will send out all men, each against his neighbor.

11 And now I do not act for the remaining ones of this people as in the former days, says the Lord Almighty,

12 but I will show peace; the vine will give its fruit, and the earth its produce, and heaven its dew, and I will give all these things as an inheritance to the remaining ones of my people.

13 And as you were under a curse among the nations, house of Iouda and house of Israel, so I will save you, and you will be under a blessing; take courage and be strong in your hands.

14 For thus says the Lord Almighty: As I intended to harm you when your fathers provoked me to anger, says the Lord Almighty, and did not change my mind,

15 so I have drawn myself up and intended in these days to do well for Ierusalem and the house of Iouda; take courage.

16 These are the words which you will do: Speak truth, each to his neighbor, and judge peaceful judgment in your gates,

17 and do not devise, each, the evil of his neighbor in your hearts, and do not love a false oath, because I hated all these things, says the Lord Almighty.

18 And a word of the Lord Almighty came to me, saying:

19 Thus says the Lord Almighty: The fourth fast and the fifth fast and the seventh fast and the tenth fast will be joy and gladness and good feasts for the house of Iouda, and you will be glad; and love truth and peace.

20 Thus says the Lord Almighty: Many peoples will yet come, and those dwelling in many cities;

21 and those dwelling in five cities will come together into one city, saying: Let us go to beseech the face of the Lord and seek out the face of the Lord Almighty; I too will go.

22 And many peoples and many nations will come to seek out the face of the Lord Almighty in Ierusalem and to propitiate the face of the Lord.

23 Thus says the Lord Almighty: In those days, if ten men from all the tongues of the nations take hold and take hold of the fringe of a Ioudaian man's garment, saying: We will go with you, because we have heard that God is with you.

Chapter 9

1 An oracle of a word of the Lord; in the land of Sedrach and Damascus is his sacrifice, because the Lord watches men and all the tribes of Israel.

2 And Emath in her boundaries, Tyre and Sidon, because they were exceedingly wise.

3 And Tyre built strongholds for herself and treasured silver like dust and gathered gold like mud of roads.

4 Therefore the Lord will inherit her and strike her force into the sea, and she will be consumed with fire.

5 Askalon will see and fear, and Gaza too, and suffer exceedingly, and Akkaron, because she was put to shame at her fall; and a king will perish from Gaza, and Askalon will certainly not be inhabited.

6 And foreigners will dwell in Azotos, and I will bring down the arrogance of foreigners.

7 And I will remove their blood from their mouth and their abominations from between their teeth, and this one too will remain for our God, and they will be like a commander of a thousand in Iouda, and Akkaron like the Iebousite.

8 And I will establish a defense for my house, so that none passes through or returns, and one driving out will certainly no longer come upon them, because now I have seen with my eyes.

9 Rejoice exceedingly, daughter of Sion; proclaim, daughter of Ierusalem; behold, your king comes to you, righteous and saving, meek and mounted upon a beast of burden and a young colt.

10 And he will destroy chariots from Ephraim and a horse from Ierusalem, and a war bow will be destroyed, and a multitude and peace from nations; and he will rule waters as far as the sea, and rivers, the outlets of the earth.

11 And you, by blood of a covenant, sent out your prisoners from a pit having no water.

12 You will sit in a stronghold, prisoners of the gathering, and for one day of your sojourning I will repay you double;

13 for I stretched you, Iouda, as a bow for myself, filled Ephraim, and will rouse your children, Sion, against the children of the Greeks and handle you like a fighter's sword;

14 and the Lord will be over them, and a missile will go out like lightning, and the Lord Almighty will sound a trumpet and go in the tossing of his threat.

15 The Lord Almighty will shield them, and they will consume them and bury them with sling stones and drink them down like wine and fill an altar like bowls.

16 And the Lord will save them on that day, his people like sheep, because holy stones roll upon his land.

17 For if anything is good of his and if anything beautiful from him, grain for young men and fragrant wine for virgins.

Chapter 10

1 Ask rain from the Lord in season, early and late; the Lord made apparitions, and will give them winter rain, to each vegetation in a field.

2 For the utterers spoke troubles, and the diviners false visions, and they were speaking false dreams, vainly consoling; therefore they were removed like sheep and harmed, because there was no healing.

3 My anger was provoked against the shepherds, and I will visit the lambs; and the Lord God the Almighty will visit his flock, the house of Iouda, and appoint them like his splendid horse in war.

4 And from him he looked, and from him he appointed, and from him a bow in anger; from him everyone driving out will go out together.

5 And they will be like fighters treading mud in the roads in war, and draw themselves up, because the Lord is with them, and riders of horses will be put to shame.

6 And I will strengthen the house of Iouda and save the house of Ioseph and settle them, because I loved them, and they will be as though I had not turned them away, because I am the Lord their God and will hear them.

7 And they will be like fighters of Ephraim, and their heart will rejoice as with wine; and their children will see and be glad, and their heart will rejoice in the Lord.

8 I will signal to them and receive them, because I will redeem them, and they will be multiplied as they were numerous;

9 and I will sow them among peoples, and those far away will remember me, nourish their children and return.

10 And I will return them from the land of Egypt and receive them from Assyrians and bring them into Galaaditis and into Lebanon, and not even one of them will certainly be left behind;

11 and they will pass through a narrow sea and strike waves in the sea, and all the depths of rivers will dry up, and all the arrogance of Assyrians will be removed, and a scepter of Egypt taken away.

12 And I will strengthen them in the Lord their God, and they will boast in his name, says the Lord.

Chapter 11

1 Open your doors, Lebanon, and let fire devour your cedars;

2 let a pine howl, because a cedar has fallen, because grandees suffered great misery; howl, oaks of Basanitis, because the closely grown thicket was pulled down.

3 A sound of lamenting shepherds, because their greatness has suffered misery; a sound of roaring lions, because the pride of the Iordan has suffered misery.

4 Thus says the Lord Almighty: Shepherd the sheep of slaughter,

5 which their possessors were slaughtering and did not regret, and those selling them were saying: Blessed is the Lord, and we have become rich, and their shepherds suffered nothing over them.

6 Therefore I will no longer spare those dwelling in the earth, says the Lord, and behold, I hand over men, each into the hands of his neighbor and into the hands of his king, and they will cut down the earth, and I will certainly not rescue from their hand.

7 And I will shepherd the sheep of slaughter into Chanaanitis; and I will take two staffs for myself – the one I called Beauty and the other I called Measured Portion – and I will shepherd the sheep.

8 And I will remove the three shepherds in one month, and my soul will be weighed down over them, for their souls too were roaring against me.

9 And I said: I will not shepherd you; let the dying one die, and let the failing one fail, and let the remaining ones devour, each, the flesh of his neighbor.

10 And I will take my beautiful staff and cast it away, to disperse my covenant which I made with all the peoples;

11 and it will be dispersed on that day, and the Chananites will know the sheep that are guarded, because it is a word of the Lord.

12 And I will say to them: If it is good before you, give my wage, weighing it, or refuse; and they weighed my wage, thirty silver pieces.

13 And the Lord said to me: Put them down into the smelting furnace, and consider whether it is approved, as I was tested on their behalf. And I took the thirty silver pieces and cast them into the house of the Lord, into the smelting furnace.

14 And I cast away the second staff, Measured Portion, to disperse the possession between Iouda and Israel.

15 And the Lord said to me: Yet take for yourself the shepherd's equipment of an inexperienced shepherd.

16 For behold, I rouse a shepherd upon the land; he will certainly not visit the failing one or seek the scattered one or heal the crushed one or guide the whole one, and he will devour the flesh of the choice ones and wrench their ankle bones out.

17 O those shepherding vain things and those who have abandoned the sheep; a sword upon his arms and upon his right eye; drying, his arm will dry up, and blinding, his right eye will be blinded.

Chapter 12

1 An oracle of a word of the Lord against Israel; says the Lord, who stretches heaven and founds earth and forms the spirit of man within him:

2 Behold, I make Ierusalem like shaking doorways for all the peoples round about, and in Ioudaia there will be a siege against Ierusalem.

3 And on that day I will make Ierusalem a stone trampled by all the nations; everyone trampling her, mocking, will be mocked, and all the nations of the earth will gather against her.

4 On that day, says the Lord Almighty, I will strike every horse with astonishment and its rider with derangement, but over the house of Iouda I will open my eyes, and strike all the horses of the peoples with blindness.

5 And the commanders of thousands of Iouda will say in their hearts: We will find for ourselves those dwelling in Ierusalem in the Lord Almighty their God.

6 On that day I will make the commanders of thousands of Iouda like a firebrand among wood and like a torch of fire among straw, and they will devour to the right and to the left all the peoples round about, and Ierusalem will yet dwell by herself.

7 And the Lord will save the dwellings of Iouda as from the beginning, so that the boast of the house of David and the exaltation of those dwelling in Ierusalem may not be magnified over Iouda.

8 And on that day the Lord will shield those dwelling in Ierusalem, and the weak one among them on that day will be like the house of David, but the house of David like the house of God, like an angel of the Lord before them.

9 And on that day I will seek to remove all the nations coming against Ierusalem.

10 And I will pour upon the house of David and upon those dwelling in Ierusalem a spirit of grace and compassion, and they will look toward me because they danced in triumph against me, and beat their breasts over him as over a beloved one, and suffer anguish as over a firstborn.

11 On that day the beating of the breast will be magnified in Ierusalem like mourning for a pomegranate grove cut down in a plain,

12 and the land will beat its breast tribe by tribe, a tribe by itself and their women by themselves, the tribe of the house of David by itself and their women by themselves, the tribe of the house of Nathan by itself and their women by themselves,

13 the tribe of the house of Leui by itself and their women by themselves, the tribe of Symeon by itself and their women by themselves,

14 all the remaining tribes, a tribe by itself and their women by themselves.

Chapter 13

1 On that day every place will be opened in the house of David.

2 And on that day, says the Lord, I will destroy the names of the idols from the land, and there will no longer be remembrance of them; and I will remove the false prophets and the unclean spirit from the land.

3 And if a man yet prophesies, his father and his mother who begot him will say to him: You will not live, because you spoke false things in the name of the Lord; and his father and his mother who begot him will bind his feet together when he prophesies.

4 And on that day the prophets will be put to shame, each for his vision when he prophesies, and they will put on a hairy skin because they lied.

5 And he will say: I am not a prophet, for I am a man working the earth, because a man begot me from my youth.

6 And I will say to him: What are these wounds between your hands? And he will say: Those with which I was wounded in my beloved house.

7 Sword, be roused against my shepherds and against a man, my fellow citizen, says the Lord Almighty; strike the shepherds and pull out the sheep, and I will bring my hand upon the shepherds.

8 And in all the land, says the Lord, the two parts will be destroyed and fail, but the third will remain in it;

9 and I will bring the third through fire and refine them as silver is refined and test them as gold is tested; he will call upon my name, and I will hear him and say: This is my people, and he will say: The Lord is my God.

Chapter 14

1 Behold, days of the Lord are coming, and your spoils will be divided within you.

2 And I will gather all the nations against Ierusalem for war, and the city will be taken, and the houses plundered, and the women defiled, and half the city will go out into captivity, but the remaining ones of my people will certainly not be destroyed from the city.

3 And the Lord will go out and draw himself up among those nations, as on the day of his battle array on a day of war.

4 And his feet will stand on that day upon the mountain of olives opposite Ierusalem to the east; and the mountain of olives will be split, half of it toward the east and half toward the sea, an exceedingly great chasm; and half the mountain will incline toward the north and half toward the south.

5 And the ravine of my mountains will be blocked, and a ravine of mountains will be joined as far as Iasol and be blocked as it was blocked in the days of the earthquake in the days of Ozias king of Iouda; and the Lord my God will come, and all the holy ones with him.

6 On that day there will be no light and cold and frost;

7 it will be one day, and that day known to the Lord, and neither day nor night, and toward evening there will be light.

8 And on that day living water will go out from Ierusalem, half of it into the first sea and half of it into the last sea, and in summer and in spring it will be thus.

9 And the Lord will be king over all the earth; on that day the Lord will be one and his name one.

10 Encircling all the land and the wilderness from Gabe as far as Remmon south of Ierusalem; but Rama will remain in place from the gate of Beniamin as far as the place of the first gate, as far as the gate of the corners and as far as the tower of Ananeel, as far as the king's vats.

11 They will dwell in her, and there will no longer be a thing devoted to destruction, and Ierusalem will dwell confidently.

12 And this will be the fall with which the Lord will strike all the peoples that marched against Ierusalem; their flesh will melt while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes will flow from their sockets, and their tongue will melt in their mouth.

13 And on that day a great astonishment from the Lord will be upon them, and each will take hold of his neighbor's hand, and his hand will be entangled with the hand of his neighbor.

14 And Ioudas will draw himself up in Ierusalem and gather the strength of all the peoples round about, gold and silver and clothing in an exceedingly great multitude.

15 And this will be the fall of the horses and the mules and the camels and the donkeys and all the beasts in those camps, according to this fall.

16 And as many as are left of all the nations which came against Ierusalem will go up yearly to bow down to the king, the Lord Almighty, and celebrate the feast of tent pitching.

17 And as many as do not go up from all the tribes of the earth to Ierusalem to bow down to the king, the Lord Almighty, these too will be added to those.

18 But if the tribe of Egypt does not go up or come there, upon these too will be the fall with which the Lord will strike all the nations that do not go up to celebrate the feast of tent pitching.

19 This will be the sin of Egypt and the sin of all the nations that do not go up to celebrate the feast of tent pitching.

20 On that day what is upon the bridle of the horse will be holy to the Lord Almighty, and the cauldrons in the house of the Lord will be like bowls before the altar,

21 and every cauldron in Ierusalem and in Iouda will be holy to the Lord Almighty; and all those sacrificing will come and take of them and boil in them. And there will no longer be a Chananite in the house of the Lord Almighty on that day.

Malachi

Chapter 1

1 An oracle of a word of the Lord against Israel by the hand of his messenger; place it now upon your hearts.

2 I loved you, says the Lord. And you said: In what did you love us? Was Esau not Iakob's brother? says the Lord; and I loved Iakob,

3 but hated Esau and consigned his boundaries to disappearance and his inheritance to gifts of a wilderness.

4 For Idoumaia will say: It has been overturned, and let us return and rebuild the desolate places; thus says the Lord Almighty: They will build, and I will overturn; and they will be called boundaries of lawlessness and a people against whom the Lord has drawn himself up until an age.

5 And your eyes will see, and you will say: The Lord was magnified beyond the boundaries of Israel.

6 A son glorifies a father and a slave his lord. And if I am a father, where is my glory? And if I am a lord, where is my fear? says the Lord Almighty. You priests who disparage my name; and you said: In what did we disparage your name?

7 Bringing polluted loaves to my altar. And you said: In what did we pollute them? In your saying: The table of the Lord is despised, and the food placed upon it despised.

8 For if you bring a blind one for sacrifice, is it not evil? And if you bring a lame or sick one, is it not evil? Bring it now to your governor, whether he will accept it, whether he will receive your face, says the Lord Almighty.

9 And now propitiate the face of your God and beseech him; these things have happened by your hands; shall I receive your faces from you? says the Lord Almighty.

10 For doors will also be shut among you, and you will not kindle my altar for nothing; I have no pleasure in you, says the Lord Almighty, and I will not accept a sacrifice from your hands.

11 For from the rising of the sun to its setting my name has been glorified among the nations, and in every place incense is brought to my name and a pure sacrifice, because my name is great among the nations, says the Lord Almighty.

12 But you profane it by saying: The table of the Lord is polluted, and its food placed upon it has been despised.

13 And you said: These things are from hardship, and I blew them away, says the Lord Almighty; and you were bringing plunder and lame things and afflicted things; and if you bring the sacrifice, shall I accept them from your hands? says the Lord Almighty.

14 And cursed is one who was able, and a male existed in his flock, and his vow was upon it, and he sacrifices a spoiled one to the Lord; for I am a great king, says the Lord Almighty, and my name is manifest among the nations.

Chapter 2

1 And now this command is for you, priests;

2 if you do not hear, and if you do not place in your heart to give glory to my name, says the Lord Almighty, I will also send the curse upon you and curse your blessing and curse it; and I will disperse your blessing, and it will not be among you, because you do not place it in your heart.

3 Behold, I set apart the shoulder for you and will scatter the stomach upon your faces, the stomach of your feasts, and I will take you to the same place;

4 and you will know that I have sent this command to you, so that my covenant may be with the Leuites, says the Lord Almighty.

5 My covenant was with him, of life and peace, and I gave it to him in fear, to fear me and shrink before my name.

6 A law of truth was in his mouth, and injustice was not found on his lips; directing rightly in peace, he walked with me and turned many from injustice.

7 For a priest's lips will guard knowledge, and they will seek out law from his mouth, because he is a messenger of the Lord Almighty.

8 But you turned aside from the way and made many weak in law; you destroyed the covenant of Leui, says the Lord Almighty.

9 And I have made you despised and slack among all the nations, because you did not guard my ways, but were receiving faces in law.

10 Did not one God create you? Is there not one father of all of you? Why did you abandon, each, his brother, to profane the covenant of your fathers?

11 Ioudas was abandoned, and an abomination arose in Israel and in Ierusalem, because Ioudas profaned the holy things of the Lord which he loved, and practiced toward foreign gods.

12 The Lord will destroy the man doing these things, until he is also humbled from the dwellings of Iakob and from those bringing a sacrifice to the Lord Almighty.

13 And these things which I hated you were doing; you were covering the altar of the Lord with tears and weeping and groaning from troubles. Is it still fitting to look upon a sacrifice or take an acceptable thing from your hands?

14 And you said: For what reason? Because the Lord solemnly testified between you and the wife of your youth, whom you abandoned, and she is your companion and the wife of your covenant.

15 And no other did it, and a remnant of his spirit. And you said: What else but seed does God seek? And guard yourselves in your spirit, and do not abandon the wife of your youth;

16 but if, hating, you send her away, says the Lord God of Israel, impiety will also cover your thoughts, says the Lord Almighty. And guard yourselves in your spirit, and you will certainly not abandon.

17 Those provoking God with your words, and you said: In what did we provoke him? In your saying: Everyone doing evil is good before the Lord, and he took pleasure in them; and: Where is the God of righteousness?

Chapter 3

1 Behold, I send out my messenger, and he will look upon a way before me, and suddenly the Lord whom you seek will come to his own temple, and the messenger of the covenant whom you desire; behold, he comes, says the Lord Almighty.

2 And who will endure the day of his entry? Or who will stand at his appearance? For he enters like fire of a smelting furnace and like the herb of washers.

3 And he will sit smelting and purifying like silver and like gold; and he will purify the sons of Leui and melt them like gold and like silver; and they will be bringing a sacrifice to the Lord in righteousness.

4 And a sacrifice of Iouda and Ierusalem will please the Lord as in the days of the age and as in the former years.

5 And I will draw near to you in judgment and be a swift witness against the sorceresses and the adulteresses and those swearing falsely by my name, and those withholding a hired worker's wage and those oppressing a widow and those striking orphans with their fists and those turning aside the judgment of a proselyte and those not fearing me, says the Lord Almighty.

6 For I am the Lord your God, and I have not changed; and you, sons of Iakob, do not refrain

7 from the injustices of your fathers; you turned aside from my ordinances and did not guard them. Return to me, and I will return to you, says the Lord Almighty. And you said: In what shall we return?

8 Will a man supplant God? For you supplant me. And you will say: In what have we supplanted you? Because the tithes and the firstfruits are with you;

9 and looking away, you look away, and you supplant me; the nation was brought to an end.

10 And you brought all the produce into the storehouses, and in his house will be his plunder. Examine now by this, says the Lord Almighty, whether I will not open for you the floodgates of heaven and pour my blessing upon you until there is sufficiency;

11 and I will set apart for you for food and certainly not destroy your fruit of the earth, and your vine in the field will certainly not grow weak, says the Lord Almighty.

12 And all the nations will call you blessed, because you will be a desired land, says the Lord Almighty.

13 You made your words heavy against me, says the Lord, and you said: In what did we speak against you?

14 You said: Vain is the one serving God, and what more is there, that we guarded his observances and went as suppliants before the Lord Almighty?

15 And now we call strangers blessed, and all those doing lawless things are built up, and they resisted God and were saved.

16 Those fearing the Lord spoke these things, each to his neighbor; and the Lord attended and heard and wrote a book of remembrance before him for those fearing the Lord and revering his name.

17 And they will be mine, says the Lord Almighty, for a day which I make for a possession, and I will choose them as a man chooses his son serving him.

18 And you will return and see between righteous and lawless, and between the one serving God and the one not serving.

19 For behold, the day of the Lord comes burning like an oven and will burn them, and all the foreigners and all those doing lawless things will be straw, and the coming day will kindle them, says the Lord Almighty, and neither root nor branch will certainly remain of them.

20 And for you who fear my name a sun of righteousness will rise, and healing in its wings, and you will go out and leap like calves released from bonds.

21 And you will trample lawless ones, because they will be ashes beneath your feet on the day which I make, says the Lord Almighty.

22 And behold, I send you Elias the Thesbite before the great and manifest day of the Lord comes,

23 who will restore a father's heart to a son and a man's heart to his neighbor, lest I come and strike the earth utterly.

24 Remember the law of Moyses my slave, as I commanded him at Choreb for all Israel, ordinances and statutes.

Isaiah

Chapter 1

1 A vision which Esaias son of Amos saw, which he saw against Ioudaia and against Ierusalem in the reign of Ozias and Ioatham and Achaz and Ezekias, who reigned over Ioudaia.

2 Hear, heaven, and give ear, earth, because the Lord spoke: I begot sons and raised them, but they rejected me.

3 An ox knew its owner and a donkey its lord's manger; but Israel did not know me, and the people did not understand me.

4 Woe, sinful nation, people full of sins, evil seed, lawless sons; you abandoned the Lord and provoked the holy one of Israel to anger.

5 Why should you yet be struck, adding lawlessness? Every head is in pain and every heart in grief.

6 From feet to head, neither wound nor bruise nor inflamed injury; there is no poultice to apply, nor oil nor bandages.

7 Your land is desolate, your cities burned with fire; strangers devour your region before you, and it has been laid waste, overturned by foreign peoples.

8 The daughter of Sion will be left like a tent in a vineyard and like a fruit watchman's hut in a cucumber patch, like a besieged city;

9 and if the Lord Sabaoth had not left us seed, we would have become like Sodoma and been made like Gomorra.

10 Hear a word of the Lord, rulers of Sodoma; attend to a law of God, people of Gomorra.

11 What is the multitude of your sacrifices to me? says the Lord; I am full of whole burnt offerings of rams, and I do not desire fat of lambs and blood of bulls and goats,

12 not even if you come to appear to me. For who sought these things from your hands? To tread my court

13 you will no longer proceed; if you bring fine flour, it is vain; incense is an abomination to me; your new moons and sabbaths and a great day I do not endure; fasting and idleness

14 and your new moons and your feasts my soul hates; you became a surfeit to me; I will no longer release your sins.

15 When you stretch your hands toward me, I will turn my eyes from you, and if you multiply supplication, I will not hear you; for your hands are full of blood.

16 Wash yourselves, become clean, remove wickednesses from your souls before my eyes, cease from your wickednesses,

17 learn to do good, seek out judgment, rescue one being wronged, judge for an orphan and vindicate a widow;

18 and come and let us dispute, says the Lord, and if your sins are like purple, I will whiten them like snow, but if they are like scarlet, I will whiten them like wool.

19 And if you are willing and hear me, you will eat the good things of the earth;

20 but if you are unwilling and do not hear me, a sword will devour you; for the mouth of the Lord spoke these things.

21 How faithful city Sion became a prostitute, full of judgment, in which righteousness slept, but now murderers.

22 Your silver is unapproved; your retailers mix wine with water;

23 your rulers disobey, partners of thieves, loving gifts, pursuing recompense, not judging for orphans and not attending to the judgment of widows.

24 Therefore thus says the Master, the Lord Sabaoth: Woe to the strong ones of Israel; for my anger will not cease against adversaries, and I will exact judgment from my enemies.

25 And I will bring my hand upon you and refine you to purity, but destroy the disobedient and remove all lawless ones from you and humble all arrogant ones.

26 And I will appoint your judges as formerly and your counselors as from the beginning; and after these things you will be called City of righteousness, faithful mother-city Sion.

27 For her captivity will be saved with judgment and with mercy;

28 and the lawless and the sinners will be crushed together, and those abandoning the Lord will be brought to an end.

29 For they will be ashamed of their idols which they desired, and were put to shame over their gardens which they coveted;

30 for they will be like a terebinth that has shed its leaves and like a garden having no water;

31 and their strength will be like straw of tow and their works like sparks of fire, and the lawless and the sinners will be burned together, and there will be no one quenching.

Chapter 2

1 The word which came from the Lord to Esaias son of Amos concerning Ioudaia and concerning Ierusalem.

2 For in the last days the mountain of the Lord will be manifest, and the house of God upon the summits of the mountains, and it will be raised above the hills; and all the nations will come to it,

3 and many nations will go and say: Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord and to the house of the God of Iakob, and he will announce his way to us, and we will walk in it; for a law will go out from Sion, and a word of the Lord from Ierusalem.

4 And he will judge between the nations and reprove a numerous people, and they will beat their swords into plows and their spears into sickles, and nation will no longer take a sword against nation, and they will certainly no longer learn to wage war.

5 And now, house of Iakob, come, let us walk in the light of the Lord.

6 For he abandoned his people, the house of Israel, because their region was filled, as from the beginning, with divinations like that of the foreigners, and many foreign children came to be for them.

7 For their region was filled with silver and gold, and there was no number to their treasures; and the land was filled with horses, and there was no number to their chariots;

8 and the land was filled with abominations, the works of their hands, and they bowed down to what their fingers made;

9 and a man bowed and a man was humbled, and I will certainly not release them.

10 And now enter the rocks and hide in the earth before the fear of the Lord and the glory of his strength, when he rises to shatter the earth.

11 For the eyes of the Lord are high, but man is lowly; and the height of men will be humbled, and the Lord alone will be raised on that day.

12 For a day of the Lord Sabaoth is against every arrogant and proud one and against every high and lofty one, and they will be humbled,

13 and against every cedar of Lebanon among the high and lofty ones, and against every acorn tree of Basan,

14 and against every mountain and against every high hill,

15 and against every high tower and against every high wall,

16 and against every ship of the sea and against every sight of beautiful ships;

17 and every man will be humbled, and the height of men will fall, and the Lord alone will be raised on that day.

18 And they will conceal all the handmade things,

19 bringing them into the caves and into the clefts of the rocks and into the holes of the earth, before the fear of the Lord and the glory of his strength, when he rises to shatter the earth.

20 For on that day a man will cast out his silver and gold abominations which they made to worship, to vain things and to bats,

21 to enter the holes of the solid rock and the clefts of the rocks, before the fear of the Lord and the glory of his strength, when he rises to shatter the earth.

Chapter 3

1 Behold now, the Master, the Lord Sabaoth, will remove from Ioudaia and from Ierusalem a strong man and a strong woman, strength of bread and strength of water,

2 a giant and a strong one and a warrior man and a judge and a prophet and a conjecturer and an elder,

3 and a commander of fifty and a marvelous counselor and a wise master builder and an understanding hearer;

4 and I will appoint young men as their rulers, and mockers will lord over them.

5 And the people will collide, man against man and man against his neighbor; the child will clash with the old man, the dishonored with the honored.

6 For a man will take hold of his brother or his father's relative, saying: You have a garment; become our leader, and let my food be under you.

7 And answering, he will say on that day: I will not be your leader; for there is neither bread nor a garment in my house; I will not be leader of this people.

8 For Ierusalem has been abandoned, and Ioudaia has collapsed, and their tongues are with lawlessness, disobeying in things toward the Lord; for now their glory was humbled,

9 and the shame of their face opposed them; but they announced their sin like that of Sodoma and made it manifest. Woe to their soul, because they have planned an evil plan against themselves,

10 saying: Let us bind the righteous one, because he is inconvenient to us; therefore they will eat the produce of their works.

11 Woe to the lawless one; evil things according to the works of his hands will happen to him.

12 My people, your collectors glean you, and those exacting payment lord over you; my people, those calling you blessed lead you astray and trouble the path of your feet.

13 But now the Lord will take his stand for judgment and set his people for judgment;

14 the Lord himself will come to judgment with the elders of the people and with its rulers: But why did you burn my vineyard, and the plunder of the poor is in your houses?

15 Why do you wrong my people and put the face of the poor to shame?

16 Thus says the Lord: Because the daughters of Sion were exalted and walked with a high neck and with gestures of eyes, and in the going of their feet were dragging their tunics and playing with their feet together,

17 God will also humble ruling daughters of Sion, and the Lord will uncover their form

18 on that day, and the Lord will remove the glory of their clothing and their ornaments and their braided ornaments and their fringes and their crescent ornaments,

19 and the necklace and the ornament of their face,

20 and the arrangement of glorious adornment and the armlets and the bracelets and the braided ornament and the wristbands and the rings and the earrings,

21 and the purple-bordered garments and the garments purple in the middle,

22 and the coverings for the house and the transparent Laconian garments,

23 and the fine linen and the hyacinth-colored and the scarlet things and the fine linen interwoven with gold and hyacinth, and flowing summer coverings.

24 And instead of a sweet scent there will be dust, and instead of a belt you will gird yourself with a cord, and instead of the golden ornament of the head you will have baldness because of your works, and instead of the tunic purple in the middle you will gird yourself with sackcloth.

25 And your most beautiful son whom you love will fall by a sword, and your strong ones will fall by a sword.

26 And the cases of your adornment will be humbled and mourn, and you will be left alone and dashed to the ground.

Chapter 4

1 And seven women will take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our bread and put on our garments; only let your name be called upon us; take away our reproach.

2 But on that day God will shine forth in counsel with glory upon the earth, to exalt and glorify what is left of Israel,

3 and it shall be that what remains in Sion and what is left in Ierusalem will be called holy, all those written for life in Ierusalem;

4 because the Lord will wash away the filth of the sons and daughters of Sion and cleanse the blood from their midst with a spirit of judgment and a spirit of burning.

5 And he will come, and it shall be that a cloud will shade every place of Mount Sion and all that surrounds her by day, and as smoke and as the light of a burning fire by night; with all the glory it will be covered;

6 and it will be for shade from heat and in shelter and in a hiding place from harshness and rain.

Chapter 5

1 I will indeed sing to the beloved a song of the beloved for my vineyard. A vineyard came to be for the beloved on a horn, in a fertile place.

2 And I put a fence around it and palisaded it and planted a Sorech vine and built a tower in its midst and dug a vat in it; and I waited for it to produce a grape cluster, but it produced thorns.

3 And now, man of Iouda and those dwelling in Ierusalem, judge between me and my vineyard.

4 What shall I still do for my vineyard that I have not done for it? For I waited for it to produce a grape cluster, but it produced thorns.

5 But now I will announce to you what I will do to my vineyard: I will take away its fence, and it will be for plundering, and I will pull down its wall, and it will be for trampling,

6 and I will abandon my vineyard, and it will certainly not be pruned or dug, and a thorn will come up in it as in waste ground; and I will command the clouds not to rain rain upon it.

7 For the vineyard of the Lord Sabaoth is the house of Israel, and the man of Iouda a beloved new planting; I waited for it to do justice, but it did lawlessness, and not righteousness but an outcry.

8 Woe to those joining house to house and bringing field near to field, so that they may take something away from their neighbor; will you dwell alone upon the earth?

9 For these things were heard in the ears of the Lord Sabaoth: for if many houses come to be, great and beautiful ones will be for desolation, and there will be none dwelling in them.

10 For where ten yokes of oxen work, it will produce one jar, and the one sowing six artabas will produce three measures. —

11 Woe to those rising in the morning and pursuing sikera, those remaining late; for the wine will burn them up.

12 For they drink wine with lyre and harp and drums and pipes, but they do not look at the works of the Lord and do not consider the works of his hands.

13 Therefore my people became captive because they did not know the Lord, and there came to be a multitude of dead because of famine and thirst for water.

14 And Hades enlarged its soul and opened its mouth without ceasing, and her glorious and great and rich and pestilent ones will go down.

15 And a human will be humbled, and a man will be dishonored, and the lofty eyes will be humbled;

16 and the Lord Sabaoth will be exalted in judgment, and the holy God will be glorified in righteousness.

17 And those plundered will graze like bulls, and lambs will eat the deserted places of those taken away. —

18 Woe to those dragging sins as with a long rope, and lawless deeds as with the strap of a heifer's yoke,

19 those saying, Let what he will do draw near quickly, so that we may see, and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel come, so that we may know. —

20 Woe to those calling evil good and good evil, those making darkness light and light darkness, those making bitter sweet and sweet bitter. —

21 Woe to those intelligent in themselves and knowledgeable before themselves. —

22 Woe to your strong ones who drink wine and the powerful ones who mix sikera,

23 those justifying the impious because of gifts and taking away the right of the righteous.

24 Therefore, in the manner that stubble will be burned by a coal of fire and burned up by a spreading flame, their root will be like chaff, and their flower will rise like dust; for they did not desire the law of the Lord Sabaoth, but provoked the utterance of the Holy One of Israel.

25 And the Lord Sabaoth was angered with wrath against his people, and he laid his hand upon them and struck them, and the mountains were provoked, and their carcasses became like dung in the midst of a road. And in all these things the fury did not turn away, but still the hand is raised.

26 Therefore he will raise a signal among the nations far away and whistle to them from the end of the earth, and behold, they come quickly, lightly;

27 they will not hunger or grow weary or doze or sleep or loosen their belts from their waist, nor will the straps of their sandals be broken;

28 whose arrows are sharp and their bows drawn, the feet of their horses were reckoned as solid rock, the wheels of their chariots as a tempest;

29 they charge like lions and have stood by like a lion's cub; and it will seize and cry out as a beast and cast out, and there will be no one rescuing them.

30 And it will cry out because of them on that day like the sound of a surging sea; and they will look toward the earth, and behold, harsh darkness in their perplexity.

Chapter 6

1 And it happened in the year in which Ozias the king died, I saw the Lord sitting upon a high and lifted throne, and the house full of his glory.

2 And seraphin stood around him, six wings to the one and six wings to the one, and with two they covered their face and with two they covered their feet and with two they flew.

3 And they cried out, one to the other, and said, Holy, holy, holy is the Lord Sabaoth; all the earth is full of his glory.

4 And the lintel was lifted by the voice with which they cried out, and the house was filled with smoke.

5 And I said, O wretched me, because I am pierced, because, being a human and having unclean lips, I dwell in the midst of a people having unclean lips, and I saw the King, the Lord Sabaoth, with my eyes.

6 And one of the seraphin was sent to me, and in its hand it had a coal, which it took with the tongs from the altar,

7 and it touched my mouth and said, Behold, this touched your lips and will take away your lawless deeds and thoroughly cleanse your sins.

8 And I heard the voice of the Lord saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go to this people? And I said, Behold, here I am; send me.

9 And he said, Go and say to this people, By hearing you will hear and certainly not understand, and looking you will look and certainly not see;

10 for the heart of this people grew thick, and with their ears they heard heavily and shut their eyes, lest they see with their eyes and hear with their ears and understand with their heart and turn back, and I will heal them.

11 And I said, Until when, Lord? And he said, Until cities are desolated through not being inhabited, and houses through there being no humans, and the earth will be left desolate.

12 And after these things God will remove the humans far away, and those left will be multiplied upon the earth;

13 and still upon it there is the tenth part, and again it will be for plunder, like a terebinth and like an acorn when it falls out of its casing.

Chapter 7

1 And it happened in the days of Achaz, son of Ioatham, son of Ozias, king of Iouda, Raasson king of Aram and Phakee son of Romelias, king of Israel, went up against Ierusalem to war against her, and they were not able to besiege her.

2 And it was announced to the house of David, saying, Aram has agreed with Ephraim; and his soul and the soul of his people were astounded, as when a tree in a wood is shaken by wind.

3 And the Lord said to Esaias, Go out to meet Achaz, you and the remaining Iasoub your son, toward the pool of the upper road of the fuller's field,

4 and you will say to him, Take care to be quiet and do not fear, nor let your soul be weak because of these two pieces of wood, these smoking firebrands; for when the wrath of my fury comes, I will heal again.

5 And the son of Aram and the son of Romelias, because they counseled an evil counsel concerning you, saying,

6 We will go up into Ioudaia and, speaking together with them, turn them toward us, and we will make the son of Tabeel king over her,

7 thus says the Lord Sabaoth, This counsel will certainly not endure, nor will it be;

8 but the head of Aram is Damascus, but within yet sixty-five years the kingdom of Ephraim will cease from being a people,

9 and the head of Ephraim is Somoron, and the head of Somoron the son of Romelias; and if you do not believe, you will certainly not understand either.

10 And the Lord proceeded to speak to Achaz, saying,

11 Ask for yourself a sign from the Lord your God, into depth or into height.

12 And Achaz said, I will certainly not ask, nor will I certainly test the Lord.

13 And he said, Hear indeed, house of David; is it a small thing for you to cause humans a struggle? And how do you cause the Lord a struggle?

14 Therefore the Lord himself will give you a sign: behold, the virgin will have in the womb and bear a son, and you will call his name Emmanouel;

15 he will eat butter and honey; before he knows or chooses evil things, he will choose the good;

16 because before the child knows good or bad, he disobeys wickedness so as to choose the good, and the land which you fear will be abandoned before the two kings.

17 But God will bring upon you and upon your people and upon your father's house days which have not yet come since the day he took Ephraim away from Iouda—the king of the Assyrians.

18 And it shall be on that day that the Lord will whistle to flies, that which rules a part of the river of Egypt, and to the bee which is in the country of the Assyrians,

19 and they will all come and rest in the ravines of the country and in the holes of the rocks and in the caves and in every fissure and in every tree.

20 On that day the Lord will shave with the great and drunken razor, which is beyond the river of the king of the Assyrians, the head and the hair of the feet, and he will take away the beard.

21 And it shall be on that day that a human will rear a heifer of the cattle and two sheep,

22 and it shall be that, because of the producing of very much milk, everyone left upon the earth will eat butter and honey.

23 And it shall be on that day that every place where there are a thousand vines worth a thousand shekels will become waste ground and thorns;

24 with arrow and bow they will enter there, because all the earth will be waste ground and thorns.

25 And every mountain being plowed will be plowed, and fear will certainly not come there; for from waste ground and thorns it will become a pasture for sheep and a trampling place for cattle.

Chapter 8

1 And the Lord said to me, Take for yourself a volume of a large new scroll and write in it with a human's stylus, To make a swift plundering of spoils; for it is present.

2 And make faithful humans witnesses for me, Ourias and Zacharias son of Barachias.

3 And I approached the prophetess, and she conceived in the womb and bore a son. And the Lord said to me, Call his name, Spoil quickly, plunder swiftly;

4 because before the child knows to call father or mother, he will take the power of Damascus and the spoils of Samaria before the king of the Assyrians.

5 And the Lord proceeded to speak to me again,

6 Because this people does not desire the water of Siloam which goes quietly, but desires to have Raasson and the son of Romelias as king over you,

7 therefore behold, the Lord brings up upon you the water of the river, strong and abundant, the king of the Assyrians and his glory, and it will go up upon every ravine of yours and walk upon every wall of yours,

8 and he will take away from Ioudaia a human who will be able to raise a head or one able to accomplish something, and his encampment will be such as to fill the breadth of your country; God is with us.

9 Know, nations, and be defeated; listen as far as the end of the earth; having become strong, be defeated; for if you become strong again, you will be defeated again.

10 And whatever counsel you may counsel, the Lord will scatter it, and whatever word you may speak will certainly not endure for you, because the Lord God is with us.

11 Thus says the Lord, With the strong hand they disobey the course of the way of this people, saying,

12 Never say, Hard; for everything which this people may say is hard; but you will certainly not fear its fear or be troubled;

13 sanctify the Lord himself, and he will be your fear.

14 And if you are trusting in him, he will be for you a sanctuary, and you will not encounter him as a stumbling against a stone or as a falling against a rock; but the house of Iakob is in a snare, and those sitting in Ierusalem in a hollow.

15 Therefore many among them will be powerless and will fall and be shattered, and humans who are in security will draw near and be captured.

16 Then those sealing the law so that it may not be learned will be manifest.

17 And he will say, I will wait for God, who turned his face away from the house of Iakob, and I will be trusting in him.

18 Behold, I and the children whom God gave me, and it will be for signs and wonders in the house of Israel from the Lord Sabaoth, who dwells on Mount Sion.

19 And if they say to you, Seek those speaking from the earth and the ventriloquists, those speaking empty words who speak from the belly—is not a nation toward its God? Why do they seek the dead concerning the living?

20 For he gave a law for help, so that they may speak unlike this utterance, concerning which there are no gifts to give concerning it.

21 And a harsh famine will come upon you, and it shall be that when you hunger, you will be grieved and speak evil of the ruler and the patachra, and they will look up toward heaven above

22 and look toward the earth below, and behold, affliction and confinement and darkness, constricted perplexity and darkness so as not to see,

23 and the one in confinement will not be perplexed until a time. Do this first, do it quickly, country of Zaboulon, land of Nephthalim, the way of the sea, and the remaining ones inhabiting the coast and beyond the Iordan, Galilaia of the nations, the parts of Ioudaia.

Chapter 9

1 The people walking in darkness, see a great light; those dwelling in a country and shadow of death, light will shine upon you.

2 The greatest part of the people, which you brought down in your gladness, and they will be glad before you as those glad at harvest and in the manner of those dividing spoils.

3 Because the yoke lying upon them has been taken away, and the rod upon their neck; for the Lord scattered the rod of those exacting payment, as on the day against Madiam.

4 Because they will repay every robe gathered by deceit and a garment with restitution, and they will wish that they had become burned by fire.

5 Because a child was born to us, a son was also given to us, whose rule came to be upon his shoulder, and his name is called Messenger of Great Counsel; for I will bring peace upon the rulers, peace and health to him.

6 Great is his rule, and there is no limit to his peace upon the throne of David and his kingdom, to establish it and uphold it in righteousness and in judgment from now and for eternal time; the zeal of the Lord Sabaoth will do these things.

7 The Lord sent death upon Iakob, and it came upon Israel,

8 and all the people of Ephraim and those sitting in Samaria will know, saying in insolence and a lofty heart,

9 Bricks have fallen, but come, let us hew stones and cut down sycamores and cedars and build ourselves a tower.

10 And God will dash those rising against Mount Sion upon them and scatter their enemies,

11 Syria from the rising of the sun and the Greeks from the setting of the sun, those devouring Israel with the whole mouth. In all these things the fury did not turn away, but still the hand is raised. —

12 And the people did not turn back until it was struck, and they did not seek the Lord.

13 And the Lord took away from Israel head and tail, great and small, in one day, 14 an elder and those admiring faces [this is the rule], and a prophet teaching lawless things [this is the tail].

15 And those blessing this people will be leading astray, and they lead astray so that they may swallow them.

16 Therefore God will not be glad over their young men and will not have mercy on their orphans and their widows, because all are lawless and evil, and every mouth speaks unjust things. In all these things the fury did not turn away, but still the hand is raised. —

17 And lawlessness will burn like fire and like dry grass will be eaten by fire; and it will burn in the thickets of the wood, and it will devour together everything around the hills.

18 Because of the fury of the Lord's wrath, the whole earth has been burned up, and the people will be as burned up by fire; a human will not have mercy on his brother,

19 but will turn aside to the right because he will hunger, and will eat from the left, and a human eating the flesh of his arm will certainly not be filled.

20 For Manasse will eat of Ephraim, and Ephraim of Manasse, because together they will besiege Ioudas. In all these things the fury did not turn away, but still the hand is raised. —

Chapter 10

1 Woe to those writing wickedness; for, writing, they write wickedness,

2 turning aside the justice of the poor, snatching the judgment of the needy of my people, so that a widow may be for them for seizure and an orphan for plunder.

3 And what will they do on the day of visitation? For affliction will come to you from far away; and to whom will you flee for help? And where will you leave your glory,

4 so as not to fall into calamity? In all these things the fury did not turn away, but still the hand is raised.

5 Woe to the Assyrians; the rod of my fury and wrath is in their hands.

6 I will send my wrath against a lawless nation, and I will order my people to make spoils and plunder and trample the cities and turn them into dust.

7 But he did not consider it thus and has not reckoned it thus in his soul, but his mind will turn to doing away with and destroying not a few nations.

8 And if they say to him, You alone are ruler,

9 he will also say, Did I not take the country above Babylon and Chalanne, where the tower was built? And I took Arabia and Damascus and Samaria;

10 in the manner that I took these in my hand, I will also take all the dominions. Wail, carved things in Ierusalem and in Samaria;

11 for in the manner that I did to Samaria and her handmade things, thus I will also do to Ierusalem and her idols. —

12 And it shall be, when the Lord finishes doing everything on Mount Sion and in Ierusalem, he will bring it upon the great mind, the ruler of the Assyrians, and upon the height of the glory of his eyes.

13 For he said, By strength I will do it, and by the wisdom of understanding; I will take away the boundaries of nations and plunder their strength and shake inhabited cities,

14 and I will seize the whole inhabited world with my hand like a nest and lift it like abandoned eggs, and there is no one who will escape me or contradict me.

15 Will an axe be glorified without the one cutting with it? Or will a saw be exalted without the one pulling it? Likewise, if someone lifts a rod or a piece of wood.

16 And not thus, but the Lord Sabaoth will send dishonor into your honor, and into your glory a burning fire will burn;

17 and the light of Israel will become fire, and he will sanctify him in burning fire and eat the woodland like grass. On that day

18 the mountains and hills and woods will be extinguished, and it will devour from soul to flesh; and the one fleeing will be like the one fleeing from a burning flame;

19 and those left of them will be a number, and a child will write them.

20 And it shall be on that day that what is left of Israel will no longer continue, and those saved of Iakob will certainly no longer be trusting in those who wronged them, but they will be trusting in God, the Holy One of Israel, in truth,

21 and what is left of Iakob will be toward a strong God.

22 And if the people Israel become like the sand of the sea, their remnant will be saved; for, completing and cutting short a word in righteousness,

23 because God will do a word cut short in the whole inhabited world.

24 Therefore thus says the Lord Sabaoth, Do not fear, my people, those dwelling in Sion, because of the Assyrians, because he will strike you with a rod; for I bring a blow upon you to see the way of Egypt.

25 For yet a little while and the wrath will cease, but my fury will be against their counsel;

26 and God will raise up against them according to the blow against Madiam in a place of affliction, and his fury by the way along the sea into the way toward Egypt.

27 And it shall be on that day that his fear will be taken away from you and his yoke from your shoulder, and the yoke will be destroyed from your shoulders.

28 For he will come into the city Aggai and pass into Magedo and place his equipment in Machmas;

29 and he will pass a ravine and come into Aggai; fear will seize Rama, the city of Saoul; she will flee,

30 the daughter of Gallim; Laisa will listen; Anathoth will listen;

31 Madebena was astounded, and those dwelling in Gibbir; encourage 32 today on the way to remain; with the hand encourage the mountain, the daughter Sion, and the hills in Ierusalem.

33 For behold, the Master, the Lord Sabaoth, throws the glorious ones into turmoil with strength, and the lofty in insolence will be shattered, and the lofty will be humbled,

34 and the lofty will fall by a sword, and Lebanon will fall with the lofty.

Chapter 11

1 And a rod will come forth from the root of Iessai, and a flower will come up from the root.

2 And the spirit of God will rest upon him, a spirit of wisdom and understanding, a spirit of counsel and strength, a spirit of knowledge and piety;

3 a spirit of the fear of God will fill him. He will not judge according to appearance or reprove according to talk,

4 but he will judge a judgment for a humble one and reprove the humble of the earth; and he will strike the earth with the word of his mouth and with a breath through his lips kill an impious one;

5 and he will be girded at his waist with righteousness and wrapped at his sides with truth.

6 And a wolf will graze together with a lamb, and a leopard will rest together with a kid, and a calf and a bull and a lion will graze together, and a small child will lead them;

7 and an ox and a bear will graze together, and their children will be together, and a lion and an ox will eat straw together.

8 And an infant child will put its hand upon a hole of asps and upon a bed of the offspring of asps.

9 And they will certainly not do evil or be able to destroy anyone upon my holy mountain, because the whole earth was filled with knowing the Lord, as much water covers seas.

10 And it shall be on that day that the root of Iessai and the one rising to rule nations—in him nations will hope, and his rest will be honor.

11 And it shall be on that day that the Lord will proceed to show his hand, to be zealous for the remaining remnant of the people, whatever may be left from the Assyrians and from Egypt and Babylonia and Ethiopia and from the Ailamites and from the rising of the sun and from Arabia.

12 And he will raise a sign to the nations and gather the lost ones of Israel, and he will gather the scattered ones of Iouda from the four wings of the earth.

13 And the jealousy of Ephraim will be taken away, and the enemies of Iouda will perish; Ephraim will not be jealous of Ioudas, and Ioudas will not afflict Ephraim.

14 And they will fly in ships of foreigners over the sea; together they will plunder both those from the rising of the sun and Idoumaia; and upon Moab they will first lay their hands, and the sons of Ammon will first obey.

15 And the Lord will desolate the sea of Egypt and lay his hand upon the river with a violent wind and strike seven ravines so that one may pass through it in sandals;

16 and there will be a passage for my people left in Egypt, and it will be for Israel like the day when it came out of the land of Egypt.

Chapter 12

1 And you will say on that day, I will bless you, Lord, because you were angry with me and turned away your fury and had mercy on me.

2 Behold, my God, my Savior, is the Lord; I will be trusting in him and will be saved in him and will not fear, because the Lord is my glory and my praise, and he became salvation for me.

3 And you will draw water with gladness from the springs of salvation.

4 And you will say on that day, Hymn the Lord, cry out his name, announce his glorious things among the nations, remember that his name was exalted.

5 Hymn the name of the Lord, because he did lofty things; announce these things in all the earth.

6 Exult and be glad, those dwelling in Sion, because the Holy One of Israel was exalted in her midst.

Chapter 13

1 A vision which Esaias son of Amos saw against Babylon.

2 Upon a level mountain raise a sign; lift the voice to them; do not fear; encourage with the hand, Open, rulers.

3 I give orders, and I lead them; they are sanctified, and I lead them; giants come to fulfill my fury, rejoicing together and acting insolently.

4 A sound of many nations upon the mountains, like many nations, a sound of kings and nations gathered together. The Lord Sabaoth has commanded an armed fighting nation

5 to come from a land far away, from the end of the foundation of heaven, the Lord and his armed fighters, to destroy the whole inhabited world.

6 Wail, for the day of the Lord is near, and destruction will come from God.

7 Therefore every hand will be slackened, and every human soul will be cowardly;

8 and the elders will be troubled, and pangs will hold them like those of a woman giving birth; and they will lament to one another and be astounded and change their face like a flame.

9 For behold, an incurable day of the Lord comes, of fury and wrath, to make the whole inhabited world desolate and destroy the sinners from it.

10 For the stars of heaven and Orion and all the adornment of heaven will not give light, and it will be darkened as the sun rises, and the moon will not give her light.

11 And I will command evils for the whole inhabited world and their sins for the impious; and I will destroy the insolence of the lawless and humble the insolence of the proud.

12 And those left will be more precious than unfired gold, and the human will be more precious than the stone from Souphir.

13 For heaven will be angered, and the earth will be shaken from her foundations because of the fury of the wrath of the Lord Sabaoth on the day when his fury comes upon it.

14 And those left will be like a fleeing little gazelle and like a wandering sheep, and there will be no one gathering, so that a human turns back to his people and a human hastens to his country.

15 For whoever is captured will be defeated, and whoever are gathered will fall by a sword;

16 and they will dash their children before them and plunder their houses and have their wives.

17 Behold, I raise up against you the Medes, who do not reckon silver or have need of gold.

18 They will shatter young men's bows and will certainly not have mercy on your children, nor will their eyes spare the children.

19 And Babylon, which is called glorious by the king of the Chaldeans, will be as when God overturned Sodoma and Gomorra;

20 she will not be inhabited for eternal time, nor will they enter her through many generations, nor will Arabs pass through her, nor will shepherds rest in her;

21 and beasts will rest there, and the houses will be filled with noise, and sirens will rest there, and demons will dance there,

22 and donkey-centaurs will dwell there, and hedgehogs will make nests in their houses; it comes quickly and will not delay.

Chapter 14

1 And the Lord will have mercy on Iakob and will yet choose Israel, and they will rest upon their land, and the sojourner will be added to them and will be added to the house of Iakob,

2 and nations will take them and bring them into their place, and they will inherit and be multiplied upon God's land as male slaves and female slaves; and those who took them captive will be captives, and those who ruled them will be ruled.

3 And it shall be on that day that God will give you rest from the pain and your fury and your harsh slavery, in which you served them.

4 And you will take up this lament over the king of Babylon and say on that day, How has the one exacting payment rested, and the taskmaster rested?

5 God shattered the yoke of sinners, the yoke of rulers;

6 having struck a nation in fury with an incurable blow, beating a nation with a blow of fury which did not spare,

7 he rested in confidence. All the earth cries out with gladness,

8 and the trees of Lebanon were glad over you, and the cedar of Lebanon: Since you have fallen asleep, the one cutting us has not come up.

9 Hades below was embittered, meeting you; all the giants who ruled the earth were raised up together for you, those raising all kings of nations from their thrones.

10 All will answer and say to you, You too were captured, just as we were, and you were reckoned among us.

11 But your glory went down into Hades, your abundant gladness; below you they will spread decay, and your covering is a worm.

12 How did the dawn-bearer who rises in the morning fall from heaven? The one sending to all the nations was shattered to the earth.

13 But you said in your mind, I will go up into heaven; above the stars of heaven I will place my throne; I will sit on a high mountain, upon the high mountains toward the north;

14 I will go up above the clouds; I will be like the Most High.

15 But now you will go down into Hades and into the foundations of the earth.

16 Those seeing you will marvel at you and say, Is this the human who provokes the earth, shaking kings?

17 The one who made the whole inhabited world desolate and pulled down the cities did not release those in calamity.

18 All the kings of the nations fell asleep in honor, each human in his house;

19 but you will be thrown in the mountains like an abhorred corpse with many dead, pierced by swords, going down into Hades. In the manner that a garment stained with blood will not be clean,

20 thus neither will you be clean, because you destroyed my land and killed my people; you will certainly not remain for eternal time, evil seed.

21 Prepare your children to be slaughtered for the sins of your father, so that they may not rise and inherit the earth and fill the earth with cities.

22 And I will rise against them, says the Lord Sabaoth, and destroy their name and remnant and seed—thus says the Lord—

23 and I will make Babylonia desolate so that hedgehogs dwell there, and she will become nothing; and I will make her a pit of mud for destruction. —

24 Thus says the Lord Sabaoth, In the manner that I have spoken, thus it will be, and in the manner that I have counseled, thus it will remain,

25 to destroy the Assyrians from my land and from my mountains, and they will be for trampling, and their yoke will be taken away from them, and their renown will be taken away from the shoulders.

26 This is the counsel which the Lord has counseled against the whole inhabited world, and this the raised hand against all the nations of the inhabited world.

27 For what the holy God has counseled, who will scatter it? And who will turn back the raised hand?

28 In the year in which Achaz the king died, this utterance came to be.

29 Do not be glad, all you foreigners, because the yoke of the one beating you was shattered; for from the seed of snakes will come offspring of asps, and their offspring will come forth as flying snakes.

30 And poor people will graze through him, and poor men will rest in peace; but he will kill your seed by famine and kill your remnant.

31 Wail, gates of cities; let troubled cities cry out, all the foreigners, because smoke comes from the north, and there is no remaining.

32 And what will kings of nations answer? That the Lord founded Sion, and through him the humble of the people will be saved.

Chapter 15

1 The utterance against Moabitis. At night Moabitis will perish, for at night the wall of Moabitis will perish.

2 Be grieved for yourselves, for Debon too will perish; where your altar is, there you will go up to weep; over Nabau of Moabitis wail—baldness upon every head, all arms cut;

3 in her squares gird yourselves with sackcloth and beat yourselves; upon her roofs and in her streets all wail with weeping.

4 Because Esebon and Eleale have cried out, their voice was heard as far as Iassa; therefore the waist of Moabitis cries out; her soul will know.

5 The heart of Moabitis cries out within her as far as Segor, for she is a three-year-old heifer; but on the ascent of Louith they will go up toward you weeping; on the road of Aroniim destruction and shaking cry out.

6 The water of Nemrim will be desolate, and her grass will cease; for there will be no green grass.

7 Will she perhaps be saved even thus? For I will bring Arabs against the ravine, and they will take her.

8 For the cry reached the boundary of Moabitis, of Agallim, and her wailing as far as the well of Ailim.

9 But the water of Remmon will be filled with blood; for I will bring Arabs upon Remmon and take away the seed of Moab and Ariel and the remnant of Adama.

Chapter 16

1 I will send like creeping things upon the earth; is Mount Sion not a desolate rock?

2 For you will be like a removed chick of a flying bird, daughter of Moab. But then, Arnon,

3 counsel more; make a shelter of mourning for her continually; in midday darkness they flee; they were astounded; do not be carried away.

4 The fugitives of Moab will sojourn with you; they will be a shelter for you from the face of a pursuer, because your alliance was taken away, and the ruler who tramples upon the earth perished.

5 And a throne will be established with mercy, and he will sit upon it with truth in the tent of David, judging and seeking judgment and hastening righteousness.

6 We heard the insolence of Moab—exceedingly insolent; you raised up pride. Your divination is not thus,

7 not thus. Moab will wail, for in Moabitis all will wail; you will meditate for those dwelling in Deseth and will not be ashamed.

8 You will mourn the plains of Esebon, vine of Sebama; swallowing the nations, trample her vines as far as Iazer; you will certainly not reach; wander the desert; those sent were abandoned, for they crossed the desert.

9 Therefore I will weep as with the weeping of Iazer for the vine of Sebama; he cast down your trees, Esebon and Eleale, because at your harvest and at your vintage I will trample, and everything will fall.

10 And gladness and exultation will be taken away from your vineyards, and in your vineyards they will certainly not be glad or tread wine into the vats, for it has ceased.

11 Therefore my belly will sound over Moab like a lyre, and my inward parts like a wall which you renewed.

12 And it will result in your being ashamed, because Moab grew weary upon the altars, and she will enter her handmade things to pray, and it will certainly not be able to deliver him.

13 This is the utterance which the Lord spoke against Moab, whenever he also spoke it.

14 And now I say, Within three years, years of a hired worker, the glory of Moab will be dishonored with all the abundant wealth, and he will be left very small and not honored.

Chapter 17

1 The utterance against Damascus. Behold, Damascus will be removed from among cities and will become a ruin,

2 abandoned forever, a bed and resting place for flocks, and there will be no pursuer.

3 And there will no longer be a stronghold for Ephraim to flee to, and there will no longer be a kingdom in Damascus, and the remainder of the Syrians will perish; for you are not better than the sons of Israel and their glory; thus says the Lord Sabaoth.

4 On that day there will be a failing of the glory of Iakob, and the fat things of his glory will be shaken.

5 And it will be as when someone gathers a standing harvest and reaps the seed of ears in his arm, and it will be as when someone gathers an ear in a solid ravine

6 and stubble is left in it, or as two or three olive berries are left upon a lofty top, or four or five upon their branches; thus says the Lord, the God of Israel.

7 On that day a human will be trusting in the one who made him, and his eyes will look toward the Holy One of Israel,

8 and they will certainly not be trusting in the altars or in the works of their hands which their fingers made, and they will not see their trees or their abominations.

9 On that day your cities will be abandoned, in the manner that the Amorraians and the Euaians abandoned them before the sons of Israel, and they will be desolate,

10 because you abandoned God your Savior and did not remember the Lord your helper. Therefore you will plant an unfaithful planting and unfaithful seed;

11 but on the day when you plant, you will be led astray; and in the morning, if you sow, it will flower for a harvest on whatever day you allot, and as a human's father you will allot to your sons.

12 Woe, multitude of many nations; like a surging sea, thus you will be troubled, and the back of many nations will sound like water.

13 Like much water are many nations, like much water borne down violently; and he will drive him away and pursue him far away like chaff of straw from those winnowing before wind, and like dust of a wheel borne by a tempest.

14 Toward evening there will be mourning; before morning it will also be no more. This is the portion of those who plundered you and an inheritance for those who inherited you.

Chapter 18

1 Woe, wings of a land of ships beyond rivers of Ethiopia,

2 the one sending hostages on the sea and papyrus letters upon the water; for swift messengers will go to a lofty nation and a strange and harsh people—who is beyond it?—a hopeless and trampled nation. Now the rivers of the land,

3 all like an inhabited country; their country will be inhabited; as though a sign is raised from a mountain, like the sound of a trumpet it will be audible.

4 Because thus the Lord said to me, There will be security in my city like the light of midday heat, and it will be like a cloud of dew on a harvest day.

5 Before the harvest, when a flower is completed and an unripe grape flowers a flower, becoming an unripe grape, he will also take away the small clusters with sickles and take away and cut down the vine shoots

6 and leave them together to the birds of heaven and to the beasts of the earth, and the birds of heaven will be gathered upon them, and all the beasts of the earth will come upon him.

7 At that time gifts will be brought up to the Lord Sabaoth from an afflicted and plucked people and from a great people from now and for eternal time, a hoping and trampled nation, which is in a part of the river of its country, to the place where the name of the Lord Sabaoth was called upon, Mount Sion.

Chapter 19

1 A vision of Egypt. Behold, the Lord sits upon a light cloud and will come into Egypt, and the handmade things of Egypt will be shaken before him, and their heart will be defeated within them.

2 And Egyptians will be raised against Egyptians, and a human will war against his brother and a human against his neighbor, city against city and district against district.

3 And the spirit of the Egyptians will be troubled within them, and I will scatter their counsel, and they will inquire of their gods and their images and those speaking from the earth and the ventriloquists.

4 And I will deliver Egypt into the hands of humans, harsh masters, and harsh kings will rule them; thus says the Lord Sabaoth.

5 And the Egyptians will drink the water beside the sea, but the river will fail and dry up;

6 and the rivers and the channels of the river will fail, and every gathering of water will dry up, also in every marsh of reed and papyrus;

7 and all the green achi around the river and everything sown through the river will dry up, destroyed by wind.

8 And the fishermen will groan, and all those casting a hook into the river will groan, and those casting dragnets and those casting nets will mourn.

9 And shame will seize those working the split flax and those working the fine linen,

10 and those warping them will be in pain, and all those making beer will be grieved and suffer in their souls.

11 And the rulers of Tanis will be foolish; the wise counselors of the king—their counsel will be made foolish. How will you say to the king, We are sons of intelligent ones, sons of kings from the beginning?

12 Where are your wise ones now? And let them announce to you and say what the Lord Sabaoth has counseled against Egypt.

13 The rulers of Tanis failed, and the rulers of Memphis were exalted, and they will lead Egypt astray by tribes.

14 For the Lord mixed for them a spirit of wandering, and they led Egypt astray in all their works, as one who is drunk and vomiting together wanders.

15 And there will be no work for the Egyptians which will make head and tail, beginning and end.

16 But on that day the Egyptians will be like women in fear and trembling before the hand of the Lord Sabaoth which he himself will lay upon them.

17 And the country of the Ioudaians will be a terror to the Egyptians; everyone who may name it to them—they will fear because of the counsel which the Lord has counseled against her. —

18 On that day there will be five cities in Egypt speaking in the Chanaanite tongue and swearing by the name of the Lord; the one city will be called City-Asedek. —

19 On that day there will be an altar to the Lord in the country of the Egyptians and a pillar toward her boundary to the Lord,

20 and it will be a sign forever to the Lord in the country of Egypt, because they will cry out to the Lord because of those afflicting them, and the Lord will send them a human who will save them; judging, he will save them.

21 And the Lord will be known to the Egyptians, and the Egyptians will know the Lord on that day and make sacrifices and vow vows to the Lord and pay them.

22 And the Lord will strike the Egyptians with a great blow and heal them with healing, and they will turn to the Lord, and he will listen to them and heal them. —

23 On that day there will be a road from Egypt to the Assyrians, and Assyrians will enter Egypt, and Egyptians will go to the Assyrians, and the Egyptians will serve the Assyrians. —

24 On that day Israel will be third among the Assyrians and among the Egyptians, blessed in the land,

25 which the Lord Sabaoth blessed, saying, Blessed is my people in Egypt and among the Assyrians and my inheritance Israel.

Chapter 20

1 In the year when Tanathan entered Azotos, when he was sent by Arna king of the Assyrians and warred against Azotos and seized her,

2 then the Lord spoke to Esaias, saying, Go and take away the sackcloth from your waist and unfasten your sandals from your feet; and he did thus, going naked and barefoot.

3 And the Lord said, In the manner that Esaias my servant has gone naked and barefoot three years, there will be signs and wonders for the Egyptians and Ethiopians;

4 because thus the king of the Assyrians will lead the captivity of Egypt and of the Ethiopians, young men and elders, naked and barefoot, uncovered—the shame of Egypt.

5 And the Egyptians will be ashamed, defeated, over the Ethiopians in whom the Egyptians had been trusting, for they were a glory to them.

6 And those dwelling on this island will say, Behold, we had been trusting in fleeing to them for help, who were not able to be saved from the king of the Assyrians; and how will we be saved?

Chapter 21

1 The vision of the desert. As a tempest might pass through a desert, coming from a desert, from a land, fearful

2 and harsh was the vision announced to me. The one setting aside sets aside; the one acting lawlessly acts lawlessly. Against me are the Ailamites, and the elders of the Persians come against me. Now I will groan and comfort myself.

3 Therefore my waist was filled with weakness, and pangs took me like a woman giving birth; I did wrong so as not to hear; I was eager not to see.

4 My heart wanders, and lawlessness immerses me; my soul has come to fear.

5 Prepare the table; drink, eat; rising, rulers, prepare shields.

6 Because thus the Lord said to me, Going, station a watchman for yourself and announce whatever you see;

7 and I saw riders, two horsemen, a rider of a donkey and a rider of a camel. Listen with much listening,

8 and call Ourias to the Lord's lookout. And he said, I stood continually by day, and I stood at the encampment the whole night,

9 and behold, he himself comes, a rider of a pair of horses. And answering, he said, Babylon has fallen, and all her images and her handmade things were shattered to the earth.

10 Hear, those left and those suffering pain; hear what I heard from the Lord Sabaoth; the God of Israel announced it to us.

11 The vision of Idoumaia. To me he calls from Seir, Guard the battlements.

12 I guard the morning and the night; if you seek, seek and dwell with me;

13 in the wood at evening you will sleep on the road of Daidan.

14 Bring water to meet a thirsty one, those dwelling in the country of Thaiman; meet the fugitives with bread,

15 because of the multitude of those fleeing and because of the multitude of those wandering and because of the multitude of the sword and because of the multitude of the drawn bows and because of the multitude of those fallen in the war.

16 Because thus the Lord said to me, Yet a year, like a hired worker's year, and the glory of the sons of Kedar will cease,

17 and the remainder of the bows of the strong sons of Kedar will be few, because the Lord, the God of Israel, spoke.

Chapter 22

1 The utterance of the ravine of Sion. What happened to you now, that you all went up to roofs,

2 empty ones? The city was filled with those shouting; your wounded are not wounded by a sword, nor are your dead dead in war.

3 All your rulers have fled, and those captured are harshly bound, and the strong among you have fled far away.

4 Therefore I said, Leave me; I will weep bitterly; do not strive to comfort me over the destruction of the daughter of my race.

5 Because it is a day of trouble and destruction and trampling and wandering from the Lord Sabaoth in the ravine of Sion; they wander from small to great; they wander upon the mountains.

6 And the Ailamites took quivers, humans riding upon horses and a gathering of a battle formation.

7 And it shall be that your chosen ravines will be filled with chariots, and the horsemen will block your gates;

8 and they will uncover the gates of Iouda and look on that day toward the chosen houses of the city,

9 and they will uncover the hidden things of the houses of the citadel of David. And they saw that they are more numerous and that they turned the water of the old pool into the city

10 and that they pulled down the houses of Ierusalem for a fortification of the wall for the city.

11 And you made water for yourselves between the two walls, inward of the old pool, and you did not look toward the one who made her from the beginning and did not see the one who created her.

12 And the Lord Sabaoth called on that day for weeping and beating and shaving and girding with sackcloth,

13 but they made gladness and exultation, slaughtering calves and sacrificing sheep so as to eat meat and drink wine, saying, Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die.

14 And these things have been uncovered in the ears of the Lord Sabaoth, that this sin will not be forgiven you until you die.

15 Thus says the Lord Sabaoth, Go into the temple chamber to Somnas the treasurer and say to him,

16 What are you here, and what is there for you here, that you hewed yourself a tomb here and made yourself a tomb in a high place and inscribed yourself a tent in a rock?

17 Behold indeed, the Lord Sabaoth will cast out and crush a man and take away your robe

18 and your glorious crown and throw you into a great and immeasurable country, and there you will die; and he will put your beautiful chariot into dishonor and your ruler's house into trampling,

19 and you will be removed from your stewardship and from your station.

20 And it shall be on that day that I will call my servant Eliakim, the son of Chelkias,

21 and clothe him in your robe and give him your crown, and I will give your might and stewardship into his hands, and he will be like a father to those dwelling in Ierusalem and those dwelling in Iouda.

22 And I will give him the glory of David, and he will rule, and there will be no one contradicting.

23 And I will station him as ruler in a faithful place, and he will be a throne of glory for the house of his father.

24 And every glorious one in the house of his father will be trusting in him, from small to great, and they will be hanging upon him.

25 On that day—thus says the Lord Sabaoth—the human established in a faithful place will be moved and will fall, and the glory upon him will be taken away, because the Lord spoke.

Chapter 23

1 The vision of Tyre. Wail, ships of Carthage, because she perished, and they no longer come from the land of the Kitiaians; she has been led captive.

2 To whom have those dwelling on the island become like, merchants of Phoinike crossing the sea

3 in much water, seed of merchants? Like a harvest being brought in are the merchants of the nations.

4 Be ashamed, Sidon, the sea said; and the strength of the sea said, I did not labor in birth or give birth or rear young men or raise up virgins.

5 But when it becomes heard in Egypt, pain will seize them concerning Tyre.

6 Go away into Carthage; wail, those dwelling on this island.

7 Was this not your insolence from the beginning, before she was delivered over?

8 Who counseled these things against Tyre? Is she inferior or without strength? Her merchants are glorious, rulers of the earth.

9 The Lord Sabaoth counseled to loosen all the insolence of the glorious ones and dishonor every glorious thing upon the earth.

10 Work your land, for ships no longer come from Carthage either.

11 And your hand no longer has strength over the sea, the one provoking kings; the Lord Sabaoth commanded concerning Chanaan to destroy her strength.

12 And they will say, You will certainly no longer continue to act insolently and wrong the daughter of Sidon; and if you go away to the Kitieis, not even there will there be rest for you;

13 and into the land of the Chaldeans—this too has been desolated by the Assyrians—not even there will there be rest for you, because her wall has fallen.

14 Wail, ships of Carthage, because your stronghold perished.

15 And it shall be on that day that Tyre will be abandoned seventy years, like the time of a king, like the time of a human; and it shall be after seventy years that Tyre will be like a prostitute's song:

16 Take a lyre, wander cities, forgotten prostitute; play the lyre well, sing much, so that a remembrance of you may come to be.

17 And it shall be after seventy years that God will make a visitation of Tyre, and she will again be restored to the former state and will be a trading place for all the kingdoms of the inhabited world.

18 And her trade and wage will be holy to the Lord; it will not be gathered for themselves, but all her trade will be for those dwelling before the Lord, to eat and drink and be filled, for a contribution, a memorial before the Lord.

Chapter 24

1 Behold, the Lord destroys the inhabited world and will desolate her and uncover her face and scatter those dwelling in her.

2 And the people will be like the priest, and the servant like the master, and the maidservant like the mistress; the buyer will be like the seller, and the lender like the borrower, and the debtor like the one to whom he owes.

3 With destruction the earth will be destroyed, and with plunder the earth will be plundered; for the mouth of the Lord spoke these things.

4 The earth mourned, and the inhabited world was destroyed; the lofty of the earth mourned.

5 But the earth acted lawlessly because of those dwelling in her, because they transgressed the law and changed the ordinances, an eternal covenant.

6 Therefore a curse will eat the earth, because those dwelling in her sinned; therefore those dwelling in the earth will be poor, and few humans will be left.

7 Wine will mourn, a vine will mourn, all those gladdening the soul will groan.

8 The gladness of drums has ceased, the self-will and wealth of the impious have ceased, the sound of a lyre has ceased.

9 They were ashamed; they did not drink wine; sikera became bitter to those drinking.

10 Every city was desolated; he will shut a house so that no one enters.

11 Wail concerning the wine everywhere; all the gladness of the earth has ceased.

12 And cities will be left desolate, and abandoned houses will perish.

13 All these things will be in the earth in the midst of the nations; in the manner that someone gleans an olive tree, thus they will glean them, and if the vintage ceases.

14 These will cry out with a voice, and those left upon the earth will be glad together with the glory of the Lord. The water of the sea will be troubled;

15 therefore the glory of the Lord will be in the islands of the sea; the name of the Lord will be glorious: Lord, the God of Israel.

16 From the wings of the earth we heard wonders: Hope for the pious. And they will say, Woe to those setting aside, those setting aside the law.

17 Fear and pit and snare are upon you who dwell upon the earth;

18 and it shall be that the one fleeing fear will fall into the pit, and the one coming out of the pit will be captured by the snare, because windows from heaven were opened, and the foundations of the earth will be shaken.

19 With trouble the earth will be troubled, and with perplexity the earth will be perplexed;

20 the earth inclined and will be shaken like a fruit watchman's hut, like one drunk and hung over, and will fall and certainly not be able to rise, for lawlessness prevailed upon her.

21 And God will bring the hand upon the adornment of heaven and upon the kings of the earth;

22 and they will gather and shut them into a stronghold and into a prison; after many generations there will be a visitation of them.

23 And the brick will melt, and the wall will fall, because the Lord will reign in Sion and in Ierusalem and will be glorified before the elders.

Chapter 25

1 Lord my God, I will glorify you, I will hymn your name, because you did wonderful deeds, an ancient true counsel; may it be, Lord.

2 Because you made cities into a mound, strong cities so that their foundations fall; a city of the impious will certainly not be built forever.

3 Therefore the poor people will bless you, and cities of humans being wronged will bless you;

4 for you became a helper to every humble city and a shelter to those discouraged because of want; you will rescue them from evil humans, a shelter for the thirsty and a breath for humans being wronged.

5 They will bless you like fainthearted humans thirsting in Sion because of impious humans to whom you delivered us.

6 And the Lord Sabaoth will do it for all the nations upon this mountain. They will drink gladness, they will drink wine, they will anoint themselves with ointment.

7 On this mountain deliver all these things to the nations; for this counsel is against all the nations.

8 Death swallowed, having prevailed, and again God took away every tear from every face; he took away the reproach of the people from all the earth, for the mouth of the Lord spoke.

9 And they will say on that day, Behold, our God in whom we hoped and exulted, and we will be glad at our salvation.

10 Because God will give rest upon this mountain, and Moabitis will be trampled, in the manner that they tread a threshing floor with wagons;

11 and he will relax his hands, in the manner that he himself also humbled to destroy, and he will humble his insolence over the things on which he laid his hands;

12 and he will humble the height of the refuge of your wall, and it will go down as far as the ground.

Chapter 26

1 On that day they will sing this song upon the land of Iouda, saying, Behold, a strong city, and our salvation will set a wall and an outer wall.

2 Open gates; let a people enter, guarding righteousness and guarding truth,

3 upholding truth and guarding peace. Because in you

4 they hoped, Lord, forever, the great, eternal God,

5 who, humbling, brought down those dwelling in lofty places; you will cast down strong cities and bring them down as far as the ground,

6 and feet of gentle and humble ones will tread them.

7 The way of the pious became straight, and the way of the pious is prepared.

8 For the way of the Lord is judgment; we hoped in your name and in the remembrance

9 which our soul desires. From night my spirit rises early toward you, God, because your ordinances are light upon the earth. Learn righteousness, those dwelling upon the earth.

10 For the impious one has ceased; he will certainly not learn righteousness upon the earth; he will certainly not do truth; let the impious one be taken away so that he may not see the glory of the Lord.

11 Lord, your arm is raised, and they did not know, but knowing, they will be ashamed; zeal will seize an undisciplined people, and now fire will eat the adversaries. —

12 Lord our God, give us peace, for you repaid everything to us.

13 Lord our God, acquire us; Lord, apart from you we do not know another; we name your name.

14 But the dead will certainly not see life, nor will physicians raise them; therefore you brought upon them and destroyed and took away every male of theirs.

15 Add evils to them, Lord; add evils to all the glorious ones of the earth.

16 Lord, in affliction I remembered you; in little affliction your discipline was for us.

17 And as a woman in labor draws near to giving birth and cried out in her labor, thus we became to your beloved because of your fear, Lord.

18 We conceived in the womb and labored and gave birth; we made a spirit of your salvation upon the earth, but those dwelling upon the earth will fall.

19 The dead will rise, and those in the tombs will be raised, and those in the earth will be glad; for the dew from you is healing for them, but the earth of the impious will fall. —

20 Go, my people, enter your chambers, shut your door, hide yourself a little, a very little, until the wrath of the Lord passes;

21 for behold, the Lord from the holy place brings wrath upon those dwelling upon the earth, and the earth will uncover her blood and will not cover those killed.

Chapter 27

1 On that day God will bring the holy and great and strong sword upon the dragon, a fleeing snake, upon the dragon, a crooked snake, and will kill the dragon.

2 On that day a beautiful vineyard; a desire to lead a song against her.

3 I am a strong city, a city under siege; in vain I will water her; for she will be captured by night, and by day the wall will fall.

4 There is none that did not take hold of her; who will set me to guard stubble in a field? Because of this hostility I rejected her. Therefore because of this the Lord God did everything that he ordered. I have been burned up,

5 those dwelling in her will cry out, Let us make peace with him, let us make peace.

6 Those coming, children of Iakob—Israel will sprout and blossom, and the inhabited world will be filled with his fruit.

7 Will he not be struck thus, as he himself struck, and be killed thus, as he himself killed?

8 Fighting and reproaching, he will send them away; were you not the one meditating with a harsh spirit to kill them with a spirit of fury?

9 Therefore the lawlessness of Iakob will be taken away, and this is his blessing, when I take away his sin, when they make all the stones of the altars chopped up like fine dust; and their trees will certainly not remain, and their idols cut down like a wood far away.

10 The inhabited flock will be abandoned like a flock left behind; and it will be for a long time for grazing, and there they will rest.

11 And after a time there will not be anything green in her, because of drying up. Women coming from a spectacle, come; for it is not a people having understanding; therefore the one who made them will certainly not pity, nor will the one who formed them have mercy.

12 And it shall be on that day that the Lord will close up from the channel of the river as far as Rhinokoroura, but you gather the sons of Israel one by one.

13 And it shall be on that day that they will trumpet with the great trumpet, and those lost in the country of the Assyrians and those lost in Egypt will come and worship the Lord upon the holy mountain in Ierusalem.

Chapter 28

1 Woe to the crown of insolence, the hired workers of Ephraim; the flower fallen from glory upon the summit of the fertile mountain, those drunk without wine.

2 Behold, the fury of the Lord is strong and harsh, like hail borne down without shelter, borne down violently; like a great multitude of water dragging a country, it will make rest on the earth for the hands.

3 And the crown of insolence, the hired workers of Ephraim, will be trampled by the feet.

4 And the flower fallen from the hope of glory upon the top of the high mountain will be like an early fig; the one seeing it will desire to swallow it before taking it into his hand.

5 On that day the Lord Sabaoth will be the crown of hope, the woven crown of glory, for my people left behind;

6 they will be left with a spirit of judgment for judgment and strength, he preventing killing. —

7 For these have been led astray by wine; they were led astray because of sikera; priest and prophet were astounded because of wine; they were shaken by the drunkenness of sikera; they were led astray; this is an apparition.

8 A curse will eat this counsel; for this counsel is for the sake of greed.

9 To whom did we announce evils, and to whom did we announce a message, those weaned from milk, those drawn away from a breast?

10 Expect affliction upon affliction, hope upon hope, yet a little, yet a little,

11 because of contempt of lips, through another tongue, because they will speak to this people,

12 saying to it, This is the resting place for the hungry, and this the destruction, and they did not desire to hear.

13 And the utterance of the Lord God will be for them affliction upon affliction, hope upon hope, yet a little, yet a little, so that they may go and fall backward, and they will be endangered and shattered and captured. —

14 Therefore hear a word of the Lord, afflicted men and rulers of this people in Ierusalem:

15 Because you said, We made a covenant with Hades and agreements with death; if a borne tempest passes, it will certainly not come upon us; we made falsehood our hope, and we will be sheltered by falsehood,

16 therefore thus says the Lord, Behold, I will cast into the foundations of Sion a costly, chosen, precious cornerstone into her foundations, and the one believing in it will certainly not be put to shame.

17 And I will make judgment into hope, and my mercy into weights, and those trusting vainly in falsehood; because a tempest will certainly not pass you by,

18 will it not also take away your covenant of death? And your hope toward Hades will certainly not endure; if a borne tempest comes upon you, you will be for its trampling.

19 When it passes, it will take you; morning by morning it will pass by day, and by night there will be an evil hope; learn to hear.

20 Being confined, we cannot fight, and we ourselves are too weak for us to be gathered.

21 Like a mountain of impious ones he will rise and be in the ravine of Gabaon; with fury he will do his works, a work of bitterness; but his fury will act strangely, and his bitterness is strange.

22 And do not be glad, nor let your bonds grow strong, because I heard completed and cut-short deeds from the Lord Sabaoth which he will do upon all the earth.

23 Give ear and hear my voice; pay attention and hear my words.

24 Is the one plowing going to plow all day? Or will he prepare seed before working the earth?

25 Is it not when he levels her face that he then sows a little black cumin and cumin, and again sows wheat and barley and spelt in your boundaries?

26 And you will be disciplined by your God's judgment and be glad.

27 For black cumin is not cleansed with harshness, nor will a wagon wheel go around upon cumin, but black cumin is shaken out with a rod, and cumin

28 will be eaten with bread. For I will not be angry with you forever, nor will the voice of my bitterness trample you.

29 And these wonders came forth from the Lord Sabaoth; take counsel; exalt vain encouragement.

Chapter 29

1 Woe, city Ariel, against which David warred; gather produce year upon year, for you will eat with Moab.

2 For I will oppress Ariel, and her strength and wealth will be mine.

3 And I will encircle you like David and cast a palisade around you and set towers around you,

4 and your words will be humbled to the earth, and your words will sink into the earth; and your voice will be like those speaking from the earth, and your voice will weaken toward the ground.

5 And the wealth of the impious will be like dust from a wheel and like borne chaff, and it will be like a moment, immediately,

6 from the Lord Sabaoth; for there will be a visitation with thunder and shaking and a great voice, a borne tempest and a devouring flame of fire.

7 And the wealth of all the nations, all who campaigned against Ariel, and all those campaigning against Ierusalem and all those gathered against her and afflicting her, will be like one dreaming in sleep.

8 And they will be like those drinking and eating in sleep, and when they rise, their dream is empty, and in the manner that the thirsty one dreams as though drinking and, rising, still thirsts, and his soul hoped in emptiness, thus will be the wealth of all the nations, all who campaigned against Mount Sion.

9 Grow weak and be astounded and be hung over, not from sikera or from wine;

10 because the Lord has given you a spirit of stupor to drink and will shut their eyes and those of their prophets and their rulers, those seeing hidden things.

11 And all these utterances will be for you like the words of this sealed book, which, if they give it to a human knowing letters, saying, Read these things, he will also say, I cannot read, for it has been sealed.

12 And this book will be given into the hands of a human not knowing letters, and he will say to him, Read this; and he will say, I do not know letters.

13 And the Lord said, This people draws near to me; with their lips they honor me, but their heart is far away from me, and in vain they revere me, teaching human commands and teachings.

14 Therefore behold, I will proceed to transfer this people and will transfer them and destroy the wisdom of the wise and hide the understanding of the intelligent.

15 Woe to those making counsel deeply and not through the Lord; woe to those making counsel in secret, and their works will be in darkness, and they will say, Who has seen us, and who will know us or what we do?

16 Will you not be reckoned as the potter's clay? Will the thing formed say to the one forming it, You did not form me? Or the thing made to the one making it, You did not make me intelligently?

17 Is it not yet a little while, and Lebanon will be transferred like Mount Chermel, and Mount Chermel will be reckoned as a wood?

18 And on that day deaf ones will hear words of a book, and in darkness and in gloom the eyes of blind ones will see;

19 and poor ones will exult because of the Lord in gladness, and the hopeless among humans will be filled with gladness.

20 A lawless one failed, and a proud one perished, and those acting lawlessly in wickedness were destroyed,

21 and those making humans sin with a word; and they will make all those reproving in gates a stumbling block, and they turned aside a righteous one among unjust things.

22 Therefore thus says the Lord concerning the house of Iakob, whom he separated from Abraam, Iakob will not now be ashamed, nor will Israel now change his face;

23 but when their children see my works, because of me they will sanctify my name and sanctify the Holy One of Iakob and fear the God of Israel.

24 And those wandering in spirit will know understanding, and those grumbling will learn to obey, and stammering tongues will learn to speak peace.

Chapter 30

1 Woe, rebellious children, thus says the Lord, you made counsel not through me and agreements not through my spirit, to add sins upon sins,

2 those going to go down into Egypt, but they did not inquire of me, to be helped by Pharao and sheltered by Egyptians.

3 For the shelter of Pharao will become shame for you, and reproach for those trusting in Egypt.

4 Because in Tanis there are leaders, evil messengers; in vain they will labor

5 toward a people which will not benefit them, neither for help nor for benefit, but for shame and reproach.

6 The vision of the four-footed animals in the desert. In affliction and confinement, a lion and a lion's cub from there, and asps and offspring of flying asps, who carried their wealth upon donkeys and camels toward a nation which will not benefit them for help, but for shame and reproach.

7 Egyptians will benefit you with vain and empty things; announce to them that, This encouragement of yours is vain.

8 Now therefore, sitting, write these things on a tablet and in a book, because these things will be for days of times and forever.

9 Because it is a disobedient people, false sons, who did not desire to hear the law of God,

10 those saying to the prophets, Do not announce to us, and to those seeing the visions, Do not speak to us, but speak to us and announce to us another wandering,

11 and turn us away from this way; take this path away from us and take the Holy One of Israel away from us.

12 Therefore thus says the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, Because you disobeyed these words and hoped in falsehood and because you grumbled and became trusting in this word,

13 therefore this sin will be for you like a wall falling immediately, of a strong city captured, whose fall is immediately present,

14 and her fall will be like the shattering of an earthen vessel, small pieces from a jar, so as not to find among them a shard in which you will lift fire and in which you will draw a little water.

15 Thus says the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, When you turn back and groan, then you will be saved and know where you were; when you had trusted in vain things, your strength became vain. And you did not desire to hear,

16 but said, We will flee upon horses; therefore you will flee; and you said, Upon swift ones we will be riders; therefore those pursuing you will be swift.

17 Because of the voice of one, a thousand will flee, and because of the voice of five, many will flee, until you are left like a mast on a mountain and like one bearing a banner on a hill.

18 And again God will wait to pity you, and therefore he will be exalted to have mercy on you, because the Lord our God is a judge, and where will you leave your glory? Blessed are those abiding in him.

19 Because a holy people will dwell in Sion, and Ierusalem wept with weeping, Have mercy on me; he will have mercy on you at the voice of your cry; when he saw, he listened to you.

20 And the Lord will give you bread of affliction and scant water, and those leading you astray will certainly no longer draw near you, because your eyes will see those leading you astray,

21 and your ears will hear the words of those who led you astray from behind, those saying, This is the way; let us go in it, whether right or left.

22 And you will remove the silver-covered and gold-covered idols; you will make them small and winnow them like the fluid of a menstruating woman and push them away like dung.

23 Then there will be rain for the seed of your land, and the bread of the produce of your land will be abundant and rich; and your livestock will graze on that day in a fertile and spacious place;

24 your bulls and the oxen working the earth will eat straw prepared with barley, winnowed.

25 And there will be water passing through upon every high mountain and upon every lofty hill on that day, when many perish and when towers fall.

26 And the light of the moon will be like the light of the sun, and the light of the sun will be sevenfold on the day when the Lord heals the destruction of his people, and he will heal the pain of your wound.

27 Behold, the name of the Lord comes after a long time, the fury burning, the utterance of his lips with glory, the utterance full of wrath, and the wrath of fury will eat like fire.

28 And his spirit will come like water dragging in a ravine, as far as the neck, and will be divided to trouble nations in vain wandering, and wandering will pursue them and seize them before their face.

29 Must you not continually be glad and enter my holy places continually as though celebrating a festival and as though rejoicing to enter with a pipe into the mountain of the Lord toward the God of Israel?

30 And God will make the glory of his voice audible and show the fury of his arm with fury and wrath and a devouring flame; he will thunder violently, and like water and hail borne down together violently.

31 For because of the voice of the Lord the Assyrians will be defeated by the blow with which he strikes them.

32 And it will be around him, from where his hope of help was, in which he himself had trusted; they themselves with pipes and lyre will war against him in a reversal.

33 For you will be called to account before days; was it not also prepared for you to reign over a deep ravine, wood lying there, fire and much wood? The fury of the Lord is like a ravine burning with sulfur.

Chapter 31

1 Woe to those going down into Egypt for help, those trusting in horses and in chariots, for they are many, and in horses, a very great multitude, and they had not been trusting in the Holy One of Israel and did not seek God.

2 And he himself, wise, brought evils upon them, and his word will certainly not be set aside, and he will rise against houses of evil humans and against their vain hope,

3 an Egyptian human and not a god, horses' flesh, and there is no help; but the Lord will bring his hand upon them, and those helping will grow weary, and all together will perish.

4 Because thus the Lord said to me, In the manner that a lion or a cub cries out over the prey which it took and cries over it until the mountains are filled with its voice, and they were defeated and frightened by the abundance of fury, thus the Lord Sabaoth will go down to campaign against Mount Sion, against her mountains.

5 Like flying birds, thus the Lord will shield Ierusalem and deliver and preserve and save.

6 Turn back, those counseling the deep and lawless counsel.

7 Because on that day humans will renounce their silver and gold handmade things which their hands made.

8 And Assour will fall; no sword of a man or sword of a human will devour him, and he will flee, not before a sword; and the young men will become a defeat,

9 for they will be enclosed by a rock as by a palisade and be defeated, and the one fleeing will be captured. Thus says the Lord, Blessed is the one who has seed in Sion and household members in Ierusalem.

Chapter 32

1 For behold, a righteous king will reign, and rulers will rule with judgment.

2 And the human will be hiding his words and will be hidden as from rushing water; and he will appear in Sion like a rushing river, glorious in a thirsty land.

3 And they will no longer be trusting in humans, but will give their ears to hear.

4 And the heart of the weak will pay attention to hearing, and stammering tongues will quickly learn to speak peace.

5 And they will certainly no longer tell the fool to rule, and your attendants will certainly no longer say, Be silent.

6 For the fool will speak foolish things, and his heart will think vain things, to accomplish lawless things and speak wandering against the Lord, to scatter hungry souls and make thirsty souls empty.

7 For the counsel of the evil ones will counsel lawless things, to destroy humble ones with unjust words and scatter words of humble ones in judgment.

8 But the pious counseled intelligent things, and this counsel will remain.

9 Rich women, rise and hear my voice; daughters in hope, hear my words.

10 Make remembrance of days of a year in pain with hope; the vintage has been consumed, the sowing has ceased and will certainly no longer come.

11 Be astounded, be grieved, confident women; strip yourselves, become naked, gird your waists with sackcloth,

12 and beat yourselves upon the breasts because of a desirable field and a fruitful vine.

13 The land of my people—thorn and grass will come up, and gladness will be taken away from every house; a rich city,

14 abandoned houses will leave the wealth of a city and desirable houses; and the villages will be caves forever, a gladness of wild donkeys, pastures of shepherds,

15 until a spirit from on high comes upon you. And Chermel will be desolate, and Chermel will be reckoned as a wood.

16 And judgment will rest in the desert, and righteousness will dwell in Karmel;

17 and the works of righteousness will be peace, and righteousness will hold rest, and they will be confident forever;

18 and his people will dwell in a city of peace and dwell confidently, and they will rest with wealth.

19 But if hail goes down, it will not come upon you. And those dwelling in the woods will be confident like those in the plain.

20 Blessed are those sowing beside every water, where an ox and a donkey tread.

Chapter 33

1 Woe to those making you miserable, but no one makes you miserable, and the one rejecting you does not reject; those rejecting will be captured and delivered over and defeated thus, like a moth upon a garment.

2 Lord, have mercy on us, for in you we have trusted; the seed of the disobedient became destruction, but our salvation is in a time of affliction.

3 Because of the voice of your terror, peoples were astounded by your terror, and the nations were scattered.

4 But now your spoils will be gathered, of small and great; in the manner that someone gathers locusts, thus they will mock you.

5 Holy is God who dwells in lofty places; Sion was filled with judgment and righteousness.

6 In law they will be delivered over; our salvation is in treasures; there are wisdom and knowledge and piety toward the Lord; these are treasures of righteousness.

7 Behold indeed, at your fear they themselves will fear; those whom you feared will fear because of you; for messengers will be sent requesting peace, weeping bitterly, pleading for peace.

8 For their ways will be desolated; the fear of the nations has ceased, and the covenant with these is taken away, and you will certainly not reckon them humans.

9 The earth mourned, Lebanon was ashamed, Saron became marshes; Galilaia and Karmel will be manifest.

10 Now I will rise, says the Lord, now I will be glorified, now I will be exalted;

11 now you will see, now you will perceive; the strength of your spirit will be vain; fire will devour you.

12 And nations will be burned up like a thorn thrown in a field and burned up.

13 Those far away will hear what I did; those drawing near will know my strength.

14 The lawless in Sion departed; trembling will seize the impious; who will announce to you that fire burns? Who will announce to you the eternal place?

15 One walking in righteousness, speaking a straight way, hating lawlessness and injustice and shaking his hands free of gifts, making his ears heavy so that he may not hear a judgment of blood, shutting his eyes so that he may not see injustice,

16 this one will dwell in a high cave of a strong rock; bread will be given to him, and his water is faithful.

17 You will see a king with glory, and your eyes will see a land far away.

18 Your soul will meditate on fear; where are the scribes? Where are those counseling? Where is the one counting those being fed,

19 a small and great people? To whom they did not give counsel, nor did he know a deep voice so that a despised people did not hear, and there is no understanding for the one hearing.

20 Behold Sion, the city, our salvation; your eyes will see Ierusalem, a rich city, tents which will certainly not be shaken, nor will the stakes of her tent be moved for eternal time, nor will her ropes be torn apart.

21 Because the name of the Lord is great for you; there will be a place for you, rivers and channels, broad and spacious; you will not go this way, nor will a rowing ship go.

22 For my God is great; the Lord will not pass me by; the Lord is our judge, the Lord our ruler, the Lord our king; this one will save us.

23 Your ropes were torn because it was not strong; your mast inclined; it will not lower the sails; it will not raise a sign until it is delivered to plunder; therefore many lame ones will make plunder.

24 And the people dwelling among them will certainly not say, I am weary; for their sin was forgiven them.

Chapter 34

1 Draw near, nations, and hear, rulers; let the earth and those in her hear, the inhabited world and the people in her.

2 Because the fury of the Lord is against all the nations and wrath against their number, to destroy them and deliver them to slaughter.

3 And their wounded and dead will be thrown out, and their odor will rise, and the mountains will be wetted by their blood.

4 And heaven will be rolled like a book, and all the stars will fall like leaves from a vine and as leaves fall from a fig tree.

5 My sword became drunk in heaven; behold, it will go down upon Idoumaia and upon the people of destruction with judgment.

6 The sword of the Lord was filled with blood; it grew fat with the fat of lambs and with the fat of male goats and rams, because there is a sacrifice to the Lord in Bosor and a great slaughter in Idoumaia.

7 And the stout ones will fall together with them, and the rams and bulls, and the earth will become drunk with blood and be filled with their fat.

8 For it is a day of the Lord's judgment and a year of recompense for the judgment of Sion.

9 And her ravines will be turned into pitch and her land into sulfur, and her land will be burning like pitch

10 night and day and will not be extinguished for eternal time, and her smoke will rise upward; for generations and for a long time she will be desolated.

11 And birds and hedgehogs and ibises and ravens will dwell in her, and a measuring cord of desolation will be laid upon her, and donkey-centaurs will dwell in her.

12 Her rulers will not be; for her kings and her rulers and her magnates will be for destruction.

13 And thorny trees will sprout into their cities and into her strongholds, and she will be a dwelling of sirens and a court of ostriches.

14 And demons will meet donkey-centaurs and cry out to one another; there donkey-centaurs will rest, for they found rest for themselves.

15 There a hedgehog nested, and the earth saved her children with security; there deer met and saw one another's faces;

16 they passed by number, and not one of them perished; one did not seek another; because the Lord commanded them, and his spirit gathered them.

17 And he himself will cast lots for them, and his hand divided for grazing; for eternal time you will inherit; for generations of generations they will rest upon her.

Chapter 35

1 Be glad, thirsty desert; let a desert exult and flower like a lily,

2 and the deserted places of the Iordan will blossom and exult; and the glory of Lebanon was given to her and the honor of Karmel, and my people will see the glory of the Lord and the height of God.

3 Grow strong, slack hands and paralyzed knees;

4 give encouragement, those fainthearted in mind; grow strong, do not fear; behold, our God repays judgment and will repay; he himself will come and save us.

5 Then eyes of blind ones will be opened, and ears of deaf ones will hear.

6 Then the lame one will leap like a deer, and the tongue of those speaking with difficulty will be clear, because water burst forth in the desert and a ravine in a thirsty land,

7 and the waterless land will become marshes, and there will be a spring of water in the thirsty land; there will be gladness of birds, a dwelling of reed and marshes.

8 There will be a clean way there, and it will be called a holy way, and an unclean one will certainly not pass there, nor will there be an unclean way there; but the scattered ones will go upon it and certainly not wander.

9 And there will be no lion there, nor will any of the evil beasts go up upon it or be found there, but redeemed ones will go in it.

10 And those gathered because of the Lord will turn back and come into Sion with gladness, and eternal gladness above their head; for upon their head are praise and exultation, and gladness will seize them; pain and grief and groaning fled away.

Chapter 36

1 And it happened in the fourteenth year of Ezekias reigning, Sennacherim king of the Assyrians went up against the strong cities of Ioudaia and took them.

2 And the king of the Assyrians sent Rapsakes from Lachis into Ierusalem to King Ezekias with much force, and he stood at the aqueduct of the upper pool on the road of the fuller's field.

3 And Eliakim the son of Chelkias, the steward, and Somnas the scribe and Ioach the son of Asaph, the recorder, went out to him.

4 And Rapsakes said to them, Say to Ezekias, Thus says the king, the great king of the Assyrians, In what are you trusting?

5 Does a battle formation come to be by counsel or words of lips? And now in whom have you trusted, that you disobey me?

6 Behold, you are trusting in this broken reed rod, in Egypt; whoever leans upon it, it will enter his hand; thus are Pharao king of Egypt and all those trusting in him.

7 But if you say, In the Lord our God we have trusted,

8 now make an agreement with my master, the king of the Assyrians, and I will give you two thousand horses, if you will be able to provide riders upon them.

9 And how can you turn against the face of one district ruler? Those trusting in Egyptians for horse and rider are servants.

10 And now, did we go up against this country to war against her without the Lord?

11 And Eliakim and Somnas and Ioach said to him, Speak to your servants in Syrian, for we understand, and do not speak to us in Ioudaian; and why do you speak into the ears of the humans upon the wall?

12 And Rapsakes said to them, Has my master sent me to your master or to you to speak these words? Not to the humans sitting upon the wall, so that they may eat dung and drink urine together with you?

13 And Rapsakes stood and cried out with a great voice in Ioudaian and said, Hear the words of the king, the great king of the Assyrians:

14 Thus says the king, Do not let Ezekias deceive you with words which will not be able to rescue you;

15 and do not let Ezekias say to you that, God will rescue you, and this city will certainly not be delivered into the hand of the king of the Assyrians;

16 do not listen to Ezekias. Thus says the king of the Assyrians, If you desire to be blessed, come out to me, and each will eat his vine and the fig trees and drink water of your cistern,

17 until I come and take you into a land like your land, a land of grain and wine and bread and vineyards.

18 Do not let Ezekias deceive you, saying, Your God will rescue you. Did the gods of the nations rescue, each, his own country from the hand of the king of the Assyrians?

19 Where is the god of Aimath and Arphath? And where the god of the city Seppharim? Were they able to rescue Samaria from my hand?

20 Who among the gods of all these nations rescued his land from my hand, that God will rescue Ierusalem from my hand?

21 And they were silent, and no one answered him a word, because the king ordered no one to answer.

22 And Eliakim the son of Chelkias, the steward, and Somnas the scribe of the force and Ioach the son of Asaph, the recorder, entered to Ezekias with their tunics torn and announced to him the words of Rapsakes.

Chapter 37

1 And it happened, when King Ezekias heard, he tore his garments and put on sackcloth and went up into the house of the Lord.

2 And he sent Eliakim the steward and Somnas the scribe and the elders of the priests, clothed in sackcloth, to Esaias son of Amos, the prophet,

3 and they said to him, Thus says Ezekias, Today is a day of affliction and reproach and rebuke and wrath, because the pang has come to the woman giving birth, but she has no strength to give birth.

4 May the Lord your God hear the words of Rapsakes, whom the king of the Assyrians sent to reproach a living God and to reproach words which the Lord your God heard; and you will make supplication to the Lord your God concerning these who are left.

5 And the servants of the king came to Esaias,

6 and Esaias said to them, Thus you will say to your master, Thus says the Lord, Do not fear because of the words which you heard, with which the envoys of the king of the Assyrians reproached me;

7 behold, I will cast a spirit into him, and hearing a message he will turn back to his country and fall by a sword in his land.

8 And Rapsakes returned and found the king besieging Lomna. And the king of the Assyrians heard that

9 Tharaka king of the Ethiopians went out to besiege him; and hearing, he turned back and sent messengers to Ezekias, saying,

10 Thus you will say to Ezekias king of Ioudaia, Do not let your God in whom you are trusting deceive you, saying, Ierusalem will certainly not be delivered into the hands of the king of the Assyrians.

11 Or did you not hear what the kings of the Assyrians did, how they destroyed all the earth?

12 Did the gods of the nations whom my fathers destroyed rescue them, both Gozan and Charran and Raphes, which are in the country of Themad?

13 Where are the kings of Aimath and Arphath and of the city Seppharim, Anag, Ougaua? —

14 And Ezekias took the document from the messengers and opened it before the Lord,

15 and Ezekias prayed to the Lord, saying,

16 Lord Sabaoth, the God of Israel, who sits upon the cheroubin, you alone are God of every kingdom of the inhabited world; you made heaven and earth.

17 Hear, Lord; look, Lord, and see the words which Sennacherim sent to reproach a living God.

18 For in truth the kings of the Assyrians desolated the whole inhabited world and their country

19 and cast their idols into the fire, for they were not gods but works of human hands, wood and stones, and they destroyed them.

20 But you, Lord our God, save us from their hand, so that every kingdom of the earth may know that you alone are God.

21 And Esaias son of Amos was sent to Ezekias and said to him, Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel, I heard what you prayed to me concerning Sennacherim king of the Assyrians.

22 This is the word which God spoke concerning him: A virgin daughter of Sion despised you and sneered at you; a daughter of Ierusalem shook a head at you.

23 Whom did you reproach and provoke? Or against whom did you lift your voice? And you did not lift your eyes on high toward the Holy One of Israel.

24 Because through messengers you reproached the Lord; for you said, With the multitude of chariots I went up to the height of mountains and into the furthest parts of Lebanon and cut the height of its cedar and the beauty of the cypress and entered the height of a part of the wood

25 and set a bridge and desolated waters and every gathering of water.

26 Did you not hear long ago these things which I did? From ancient days I ordered them, but now I showed the desolating of nations in strongholds and those dwelling in strong cities;

27 I relaxed the hands, and they dried up and became like dry grass upon roofs and like wild grass.

28 But now I know your rest and your going out and your coming in;

29 and your fury with which you were angered and your bitterness rose to me, and I will cast a muzzle into your nose and a bridle into your lips and turn you back by the way in which you came.

30 And this is the sign for you: eat this year what you have sown, and in the second year the remnant, and in the third, sowing, reap and plant vineyards and eat their fruit.

31 And it shall be that those left in Ioudaia will grow a root below and make seed above.

32 Because those left will come out of Ierusalem, and those being saved out of Mount Sion; the zeal of the Lord Sabaoth will do these things.

33 Therefore thus says the Lord concerning the king of the Assyrians, He will certainly not enter this city or cast an arrow upon her or lay a shield upon her or encircle her with a palisade,

34 but by the way in which he came, by it he will turn back; thus says the Lord.

35 I will shield this city to save her because of me and because of David my servant.

36 And an angel of the Lord went out and killed one hundred eighty-five thousand from the encampment of the Assyrians, and rising in the morning, they found all the bodies dead.

37 And turning back, the king of the Assyrians departed and dwelt in Nineue.

38 And while he was worshiping his patachron in the house of Nasarach, Adramelech and Sarasar his sons struck him with swords, and they themselves escaped into Armenia; and Asordan his son reigned in his place.

Chapter 38

1 And it happened at that time that Ezekias became sick unto death; and Esaias son of Amos, the prophet, came to him and said to him, Thus says the Lord, Put your house in order, for you are dying and will not live.

2 And Ezekias turned his face toward the wall and prayed to the Lord,

3 saying, Remember, Lord, how I walked before you with truth in a true heart and did the pleasing things before you; and Ezekias wept with great weeping.

4 And a word of the Lord came to Esaias, saying,

5 Go and say to Ezekias, Thus says the Lord, the God of David your father, I heard the voice of your prayer and saw your tears; behold, I add fifteen years to your time;

6 and I will save you from the hand of the king of the Assyrians and shield this city.

7 And this is the sign for you from the Lord, that God will do this utterance;

8 the shadow of the steps which the sun went down, the ten steps of your father's house—I will turn the sun back the ten steps. And the sun went up the ten steps which the shadow went down.

9 A prayer of Ezekias king of Ioudaia, when he became sick and rose from his sickness.

10 I said, At the height of my days, at the gates of Hades, I will leave the remaining years.

11 I said, I will certainly no longer see the salvation of God upon the earth; I will certainly no longer see a human

12 from my kinship. I left the remainder of my life; it went out and departed from me like one dismantling a tent which he pitched; my spirit with me became like the web of a weaving woman drawing near to cut it off. On that day I was delivered over

13 until morning as to a lion; thus he shattered my bones, for from day until night I was delivered over.

14 Like a swallow, thus I will sound, and like a dove, thus I will murmur; for my eyes failed from looking toward the height of heaven, toward the Lord, who delivered me

15 and took away the pain of my soul.

16 Lord, for concerning her it was announced to you, and you roused my breath, and, comforted, I lived.

17 For you chose my soul so that it may not perish, and you cast all my sins behind me.

18 For those in Hades will not praise you, nor will those dead bless you, nor will those in Hades hope for your mercy;

19 the living will bless you in the manner that I too do. For from today I will make children who will announce your righteousness,

20 Lord of my salvation; and I will not cease blessing you with a harp all the days of my life before the house of God.

21 And Esaias said to Ezekias, Take a cake of figs and crush it and apply it as a poultice, and you will be healthy.

22 And Ezekias said, This is the sign, that I will go up into the house of the Lord God.

Chapter 39

1 At that time Marodach son of Laadan, the king of Babylonia, sent letters and envoys and gifts to Ezekias; for he heard that he became sick unto death and rose.

2 And Ezekias rejoiced over them with great joy and showed them the house of the nechotha and of the stacte and of the incenses and of the ointment and of the silver and of the gold, and all the houses of the equipment of the treasury and everything which was in his treasures; and there was nothing which Ezekias did not show in his house.

3 And Esaias the prophet came to King Ezekias and said to him, What do these humans say, and from where have they come to you? And Ezekias said, From a land far away they have come to me, from Babylon.

4 And Esaias said, What did they see in your house? And Ezekias said, They saw everything in my house, and there is nothing in my house which they did not see, but also the things in my treasures.

5 And Esaias said to him, Hear the word of the Lord Sabaoth:

6 Behold, days come, says the Lord, and they will take everything in your house, and whatever your fathers gathered until this day will come to Babylon, and they will certainly leave nothing; and God said

7 that they will also take from your children whom you begot and make them eunuchs in the house of the king of the Babylonians.

8 And Ezekias said to Esaias, Good is the word of the Lord which he spoke; let there indeed be peace and righteousness in my days.

Chapter 40

1 Comfort, comfort my people, says God.

2 Priests, speak into the heart of Ierusalem; comfort her, because her humiliation was fulfilled, her sin has been loosed, because she received from the hand of the Lord her sins double.

3 A voice of one crying in the desert, Prepare the way of the Lord; make straight the paths of our God;

4 every ravine will be filled, and every mountain and hill will be humbled, and all the crooked things will become straight, and the rough way plains;

5 and the glory of the Lord will be seen, and all flesh will see the salvation of God, because the Lord spoke.

6 A voice of one saying, Cry out; and I said, What shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and all human glory like a flower of grass;

7 the grass dried up, and the flower fell,

8 but the utterance of our God remains forever.

9 Go up upon a high mountain, the one announcing good news to Sion; lift your voice with strength, the one announcing good news to Ierusalem; lift it, do not fear; say to the cities of Iouda, Behold, your God.

10 Behold, the Lord comes with strength, and the arm with dominion; behold, his wage is with him and the work before him.

11 Like a shepherd he will shepherd his flock and gather lambs with his arm and comfort those having in the womb.

12 Who measured the water with the hand and heaven with a span and all the earth with a handful? Who weighed the mountains with a weight and the valleys with a balance?

13 Who knew the mind of the Lord, and who became his counselor, who instructs him?

14 Or with whom did he take counsel, and who instructed him? Or who showed him judgment? Or who showed him a way of understanding?

15 If all the nations were reckoned like a drop from a bucket and like a tilt of a balance, they will also be reckoned like saliva;

16 and Lebanon is not sufficient for burning, and all the four-footed animals are not sufficient for a whole burnt offering,

17 and all the nations are like nothing and were reckoned as nothing.

18 To whom did you liken the Lord, and to what likeness did you liken him?

19 Did a craftsman make an image, or did a goldsmith, melting gold, gild him, fashion him as a likeness?

20 For a craftsman chooses wood that does not rot and wisely seeks how he will set up his image, and so that it may not be shaken.

21 Will you not know? Will you not hear? Was it not announced to you from the beginning? Did you not know the foundations of the earth?

22 The one holding the circle of the earth, and those dwelling in her are like locusts, the one setting heaven like a vault and stretching it like a tent to dwell in,

23 the one giving rulers nothing to rule, and he made the earth like nothing.

24 For they will certainly not sow or plant, nor will their root be rooted into the earth; he blew upon them, and they dried up, and a tempest will take them up like brushwood.

25 Now therefore, to whom did you liken me, and I will be exalted? said the Holy One.

26 Look up on high with your eyes and see; who showed all these things? The one bringing forth his adornment by number will call all by name; because of much glory and in the might of strength, nothing escaped you.

27 For do not say, Iakob—and what did you speak, Israel?—My way was hidden from God, and my God took away the judgment and departed?

28 And now, did you not know, if you did not hear? An eternal God is the God who fashioned the ends of the earth; he will not hunger or grow weary, nor is there a searching out of his understanding;

29 giving strength to the hungry and grief to those not suffering pain.

30 For younger ones will hunger, and young men will grow weary, and chosen ones will be powerless;

31 but those waiting for God will exchange strength; they will grow wings like eagles; they will run and not grow weary; they will walk and not hunger.

Chapter 41

1 Be renewed toward me, islands, for the rulers will exchange strength; let them draw near and speak together; then let them announce judgment.

2 Who raised righteousness from the east, called her to his feet, and she will go? He will give her before nations and astound kings and put their swords into the earth and their bows like driven-out brushwood;

3 and he will pursue them, and the way of his feet will pass through in peace.

4 Who worked and did these things? The one calling her from generations of the beginning called her; I am God, first, and for the things coming I am.

5 Nations saw and feared; the ends of the earth drew near and came together,

6 each judging to help the neighbor and the brother, and he will say,

7 A man, a craftsman, grew strong, and a smith striking with a hammer, beating together; at one time he will say, The joint is good; they strengthened them with nails; they will set them, and they will not be moved.

8 But you, Israel, my servant Iakob whom I chose, seed of Abraam whom I loved,

9 of whom I took hold from the ends of the earth, and from her lookouts I called you and said to you, You are my servant; I chose you and did not abandon you,

10 do not fear, for I am with you; do not wander, for I am your God who strengthened you, and I helped you and secured you with my righteous right hand.

11 Behold, all those opposing you will be ashamed and abashed; for they will be as though not existing, and all your adversaries will perish.

12 You will seek them and certainly not find the humans who will act insolently toward you; for they will be as though not existing, and those warring against you will not be.

13 Because I am your God, the one holding your right hand, the one saying to you, Do not fear,

14 Iakob, very small Israel; I helped you, says God who redeems you, Israel.

15 Behold, I made you like new, saw-shaped threshing wheels of a wagon, and you will thresh mountains and make hills small and turn them into chaff;

16 and you will winnow, and wind will take them, and a tempest will scatter them, but you will be glad in the holy ones of Israel. And they will exult,

17 the poor and the needy; for they will seek water, and there will be none; their tongue dried up from thirst; I am the Lord God; I will listen, the God of Israel, and will not abandon them,

18 but will open rivers upon the mountains and springs in the midst of plains, make the desert into marshes and the thirsty land into aqueducts;

19 I will put cedar and box and myrtle and cypress and poplar into the waterless land,

20 so that they may see and know and consider and understand together that the hand of the Lord did all these things, and the Holy One of Israel showed them.

21 Your judgment draws near, says the Lord God; your counsels drew near, says the king of Iakob.

22 Let them draw near and announce to you what will happen, or say what the former things were, and we will apply the mind and know what the last things are, and tell us the things coming.

23 Announce to us the things coming at the end, and we will know that you are gods; do good and do harm, and we will marvel and see together;

24 because from where are you, and from where is your work? From earth; they chose you, an abomination.

25 But I raised the one from the north and the one from the rising of the sun; they will be called by my name; let rulers come, and like potter's clay and like a potter treading clay, thus you will be trampled.

26 For who will announce the things from the beginning, so that we may know, and the things beforehand, and we will say that they are true? There is no one foretelling or hearing your words.

27 I will give a beginning to Sion and encourage Ierusalem for a way.

28 For from the nations, behold, no one, and from their idols there was no one announcing; and if I ask them, From where are you? they will certainly not answer me.

29 For those making you exist, and those leading you astray do so in vain.

Chapter 42

1 Iakob is my servant; I will uphold him; Israel is my chosen one; my soul accepted him; I gave my spirit upon him; he will bring forth judgment to the nations.

2 He will not cry out or raise his voice, nor will his voice be heard outside.

3 He will not shatter a broken reed or extinguish smoking flax, but he will bring forth judgment in truth.

4 He will shine forth and not be crushed until he sets judgment upon the earth; and nations will hope in his name.

5 Thus says the Lord God who made heaven and pitched it, who established the earth and the things in her, and gives breath to the people upon her and spirit to those treading her;

6 I, the Lord God, called you in righteousness and will hold your hand and strengthen you, and I gave you for a covenant of a race, for a light of nations,

7 to open eyes of blind ones, to bring bound ones out of bonds and those sitting in darkness out of a prison house. —

8 I am the Lord God; this is my name; I will not give my glory to another or my excellences to carved things.

9 Behold, the things from the beginning have come, and new things which I will announce, and before springing up they were made clear to you.

10 Hymn a new hymn to the Lord, his dominion; glorify his name from the end of the earth, those going down into the sea and sailing it, the islands and those dwelling in them.

11 Be glad, desert and her villages, dwellings and those dwelling in Kedar; those dwelling in Petra will be glad; from the tops of the mountains they will cry out;

12 they will give glory to God; they will announce his excellences in the islands.

13 The Lord, the God of forces, will go out and shatter war; he will rouse zeal and cry out against his enemies with strength.

14 I was silent; will I also always be silent and endure? I persevered like a woman giving birth; I will astound and dry up together.

15 And I will make rivers into islands and dry up marshes.

16 And I will lead blind ones in a way which they did not know and make them tread paths which they did not know; I will make darkness into light for them and crooked things into straight; I will do these utterances and will not abandon them.

17 But they themselves turned backward; be ashamed with shame, those trusting in carved things, those saying to cast things, You are our gods.

18 Deaf ones, hear, and blind ones, look up to see.

19 And who is blind but my servants, and deaf but those ruling them? And the slaves of God were blinded.

20 You saw many times and did not guard yourselves; the ears are open, and you did not hear.

21 The Lord God desired that he be justified and magnify praise. And I saw,

22 and the people became plundered and pillaged; for the snare is in the chambers everywhere, and together in houses where they hid them; they became plunder, and there was no one delivering what was seized, and there was no one saying, Give it back.

23 Who among you will give ear to these things, will listen for the things coming?

24 Who gave Iakob to pillaging and Israel to those plundering him? Was it not God, against whom they sinned and did not desire to go in his ways or hear his law?

25 And he brought upon them the wrath of his fury, and war prevailed against them and those burning them up all around, and each of them did not know or lay it upon the soul.

Chapter 43

1 And now thus says the Lord God who made you, Iakob, who formed you, Israel, Do not fear, because I redeemed you; I called you by your name; you are mine.

2 And if you cross through water, I am with you, and rivers will not overwhelm you; and if you pass through fire, you will certainly not be burned up; a flame will not burn you up.

3 Because I am the Lord your God, the Holy One of Israel who saves you; I made Egypt your exchange, and Ethiopia and Soene for you.

4 Since you became precious before me, you were glorified, and I loved you; and I will give many humans for you and rulers for your head.

5 Do not fear, because I am with you; from the east I will bring your seed and from the west gather you.

6 I will say to the north, Bring, and to the southwest, Do not hinder; bring my sons from a land far away and my daughters from the ends of the earth,

7 all who have been called by my name. For in my glory I fashioned him and formed and made him;

8 and I brought out a blind people, and eyes are likewise blind, and they are deaf, having ears.

9 All the nations were gathered together, and rulers will be gathered from them; who will announce these things? Or who will announce to you the things from the beginning? Let them bring their witnesses and be justified and say true things.

10 Become witnesses for me, and I am a witness, says the Lord God, and the servant whom I chose, so that you may know and believe and understand that I am; before me no other god came to be, and after me there will be none;

11 I am God, and there is no one saving apart from me.

12 I announced and saved, I reproached, and there was no stranger among you; you are witnesses for me, and I am a witness, says the Lord God.

13 Yet from the beginning, and there is no one delivering from my hands; I will do it, and who will turn it back?

14 Thus says the Lord God who redeems you, the Holy One of Israel, For your sake I will send into Babylon and raise up all who flee, and Chaldeans will be bound in ships.

15 I am the Lord God, your Holy One, who showed Israel as your king.

16 Thus says the Lord who gives a way in a sea and a path in strong water,

17 who brought out chariots and horse and a strong crowd, but they fell asleep and will not rise; they were extinguished like extinguished flax:

18 Do not remember the first things, and do not reckon together the ancient things.

19 Behold, I make new things which will now spring up, and you will know them; and I will make a way in the desert and rivers in the waterless land.

20 The beasts of the field will bless me, sirens and daughters of ostriches, because I gave water in the desert and rivers in the waterless land to give drink to my chosen race,

21 my people whom I acquired to recount my excellences.

22 I did not now call you, Iakob, nor did I make you weary, Israel;

23 the sheep of your whole burnt offering were not for me, nor did you glorify me in your sacrifices, nor did I make you labor with frankincense,

24 nor did you acquire incense for me with silver, nor did I desire the fat of your sacrifices, but in your sins and in your injustices I stood before you.

25 I am, I am the one wiping out your lawless deeds, and I will certainly not remember.

26 But you remember, and let us be judged; you say your lawless deeds first, so that you may be justified.

27 Your first fathers and their rulers acted lawlessly against me,

28 and the rulers defiled my holy things, and I gave Iakob to destruction and Israel to reproach.

Chapter 44

1 But now hear, my servant Iakob and Israel whom I chose;

2 thus says the Lord God who made you and who formed you from the womb, You will yet be helped; do not fear, my servant Iakob and beloved Israel whom I chose;

3 because I will give water in thirst to those going in a waterless land; I will put my spirit upon your seed and my blessings upon your children,

4 and they will spring up like grass in the midst of water and like a willow beside flowing water.

5 This one will say, I am God's, and this one will cry out in the name of Iakob, and another will inscribe, I am God's, in the name of Israel.

6 Thus says God, the king of Israel, who rescued him, God Sabaoth, I am first, and I am after these things; apart from me there is no god.

7 Who is like me? Let him stand, call and prepare for me since I made a human forever, and let them announce to you the things coming before they come.

8 Do not cover yourselves; did you not give ear from the beginning, and I announced to you? You are witnesses whether there is a god apart from me; and they were not then.

9 Those forming and carving are all vain, those making the things they desire, which will not benefit them; but they will be ashamed,

10 all those forming a god and carving useless things,

11 and all from whom they came to be dried up, and let deaf ones from among humans all be gathered and stand together, be abashed and ashamed together.

12 Because a craftsman sharpened iron, worked it with an adze and bored it with a drill, worked it with the arm of his strength; and he will hunger and be weak and certainly not drink water. Having chosen

13 wood, a craftsman set it by measure and fitted it with glue; he made it like the form of a man and like the beauty of a human, to set it in a house.

14 The wood which he cut from the wood, which the Lord planted and rain lengthened, 15 so that it may be for humans for burning; and taking from it, he warmed himself, and burning it, they baked bread upon them; but they worked the remainder into gods and worship them.

16 Half of it they burned up in fire and, burning it, baked bread upon them; and roasting meat upon it, he ate and was filled; and, warmed, he said, It is pleasant for me, because I was warmed and saw fire.

17 But the remainder he made into a carved god and worships it and prays, saying, Deliver me, because you are my god.

18 They did not know to understand, because they were dimmed from seeing with their eyes and thinking with their heart.

19 And he did not reckon in his heart or consider in his soul or know in his understanding that he burned half of it in fire and baked bread upon its coals and roasted meat and ate, and made its remainder into an abomination, and they worship it.

20 Know that their heart is ash, and they wander, and no one can deliver his soul; see, will you not say that, Falsehood is in my right hand?

21 Remember these things, Iakob and Israel, because you are my servant; I formed you as my servant, and you, Israel, do not forget me.

22 For behold, I wiped away your lawless deeds like a cloud and your sins like gloom; turn to me, and I will redeem you.

23 Be glad, heavens, because God had mercy on Israel; trumpet, foundations of the earth; cry out gladness, mountains, the hills and all the trees in them, because God redeemed Iakob, and Israel will be glorified.

24 Thus says the Lord who redeems you and who forms you from the womb, I, the Lord who accomplishes everything, stretched heaven alone and established the earth. Who else

25 will scatter signs of ventriloquists and divinations from a heart, turning intelligent ones backward and making their counsel foolish,

26 and establishing utterances of his servant and making the counsel of his messengers true? The one saying to Ierusalem, You will be inhabited, and to the cities of Ioudaia, You will be built, and her deserted places will spring up;

27 the one saying to the abyss, You will be desolated, and I will dry up your rivers;

28 the one telling Kyros to be wise, and, He will do all my desires; the one saying to Ierusalem, You will be built, and I will found my holy house.

Chapter 45

1 Thus says the Lord God to my anointed Kyros, whose right hand I held so that nations may obey before him, and I will tear apart the strength of kings, open doors before him, and cities will not be shut:

2 I will go before you and level mountains; I will shatter bronze doors and break iron bars,

3 and give you dark treasures; I will open hidden, unseen ones to you, so that you may know that I am the Lord God who calls your name, the God of Israel.

4 For the sake of Iakob my servant and Israel my chosen one, I will call you by your name and accept you, but you did not know me.

5 Because I am the Lord God, and there is no god besides me any longer, and you did not know me,

6 so that those from the rising of the sun and those from the west may know that there is none apart from me; I am the Lord God, and there is no other;

7 I am the one who fashioned light and made darkness, who makes peace and creates evils; I am the Lord God who does all these things.

8 Let heaven be glad from above, and let the clouds sprinkle righteousness; let the earth bring forth mercy and bring forth righteousness together; I am the Lord who created you.

9 What better thing did I fashion like potter's clay? Will the one plowing plow the earth all day? Will the clay say to the potter, What are you doing, because you do not work or have hands?

10 The one saying to the father, What will you beget? and to the mother, What will you labor to bear?

11 Because thus says the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel who made the things coming, Ask me concerning my sons and concerning my daughters, and command me concerning the works of my hands.

12 I made earth and a human upon her; I established heaven with my hand; I commanded all the stars.

13 I raised him as king with righteousness, and all his ways are straight; this one will build my city and turn back the captivity of my people, not with ransoms or with gifts, said the Lord Sabaoth.

14 Thus says the Lord Sabaoth, Egypt labored, and trade of Ethiopians, and the Seboin, tall men, will cross over to you and be slaves to you and follow behind you, bound with handcuffs, and worship you and pray in you, because God is in you, and they will say, There is no god apart from you;

15 for you are God, and we did not know, the God of Israel, a Savior.

16 All those opposing him will be ashamed and abashed and go in shame. Be renewed toward me, islands.

17 Israel is saved by the Lord with eternal salvation; they will not be ashamed or abashed forever.

18 Thus says the Lord who made heaven—this is the God who showed the earth and made her; he himself marked her out; he did not make her for emptiness but to be inhabited—I am, and there is no other.

19 I have not spoken in secret or in a dark place of earth; I did not say to the seed of Iakob, Seek a vain thing; I am, I am the Lord speaking righteousness and announcing truth.

20 Be gathered and come; take counsel together, those being saved from the nations. Those lifting the wood, their carving, and praying as to gods who do not save did not know.

21 If they will announce, let them draw near, so that they may know together who made these things audible from the beginning. Then it was announced to you, I am God, and there is no other apart from me; there is no righteous one and Savior besides me.

22 Turn to me, and you will be saved, those from the furthest part of the earth; I am God, and there is no other.

23 By myself I swear, Surely righteousness will come out of my mouth; my words will not turn back, that every knee will bend to me, and every tongue will confess to God,

24 saying, Righteousness and glory will come to him, and all those separating themselves will be ashamed;

25 from the Lord all the seed of the sons of Israel will be justified and glorified in God.

Chapter 46

1 Bel fell, Dagon was shattered, their carved things became for beasts and livestock; lift them, tied up like a burden for one weary

2 and hungry and weakened, without strength, together, who will not be able to be saved from war, but they themselves were led captive.

3 Hear me, house of Iakob and all the remnant of Israel, those lifted from the womb and disciplined from childhood;

4 until old age I am, and until you grow very old, I am; I endure you, I made and I will release, I will take up and save you.

5 To whom did you liken me? See, devise, those wandering.

6 Those contributing gold from a purse will weigh silver with a balance by weight, and hiring a goldsmith, they made handmade things and, bowing, worship them.

7 They lift it upon the shoulders and go; but if they set it down, it remains in its place; it will certainly not be moved; and whoever cries out to it, it will certainly not listen; it will certainly not save him from evils.

8 Remember these things and groan; repent, those led astray; turn back in heart.

9 And remember the former things from eternity, because I am God, and there is no other apart from me,

10 announcing the last things beforehand, before they come to be, and together they were accomplished; and I said, All my counsel will stand, and everything which I have counseled I will do;

11 calling a bird from the east and from a land far away concerning the things which I have counseled, I spoke and brought, I created and did, I brought him and prospered his way.

12 Hear me, those who have lost the heart, those far from righteousness.

13 I brought my righteousness near and will not delay the salvation from me; I have given salvation in Sion to Israel for glory.

Chapter 47

1 Go down, sit upon the earth, virgin daughter of Babylon; enter darkness, daughter of the Chaldeans, because you will no longer continue to be called delicate and tender.

2 Take a mill, grind flour, uncover your veil, uncover the gray hairs, bare the shins, cross rivers;

3 your shame will be uncovered, your reproaches will appear; I will take justice from you; I will certainly no longer deliver it to humans.

4 The one who rescued you said, the Lord Sabaoth is his name, the Holy One of Israel:

5 Sit stricken, enter darkness, daughter of the Chaldeans; you will certainly no longer be called strength of a kingdom.

6 I was provoked against my people; you defiled my inheritance; I gave into your hand, but you did not give them mercy; you made the elder's yoke very heavy.

7 And you said, Forever I will be a ruler; you did not consider these things in your heart or remember the last things.

8 But now hear these things, tender woman sitting confidently, saying in her heart, I am, and there is no other; I will not sit as a widow or know orphanhood.

9 But now these two things will come suddenly upon you in one day; widowhood and childlessness will come suddenly upon you in your sorcery, in the strength of your enchantments, exceedingly,

10 in the hope of your wickedness. For you said, I am, and there is no other. Know that the understanding of these things and your prostitution will be shame for you. And you said in your heart, I am, and there is no other.

11 And destruction will come upon you, and you will certainly not know, a pit, and you will fall into it; and misery will come upon you, and you will certainly not be able to become clean; and destruction will come upon you suddenly, and you will certainly not know.

12 Stand now in your enchantments and your abundant sorcery, which you learned from your youth, if you will be able to be benefited.

13 You have grown weary in your counsels; let the astrologers of heaven stand and save you; let those seeing the stars announce to you what is going to come upon you.

14 Behold, all will be burned up like brushwood upon fire and will certainly not deliver their soul from a flame; because you have coals of fire, sit upon them.

15 These will be a help to you; you labored in your trade from youth; each human wandered by himself, but there will be no salvation for you.

Chapter 48

1 Hear these things, house of Iakob, those called by the name of Israel and those who came out of Iouda, those swearing by the name of the Lord God of Israel, remembering not with truth or with righteousness,

2 and clinging to the name of the holy city and leaning upon the God of Israel; the Lord Sabaoth is his name.

3 I announced the former things beforehand, and they came out of my mouth and became audible; suddenly I did them, and they came upon you.

4 I know that you are harsh, and your neck is an iron sinew, and your forehead bronze.

5 And I announced to you long ago; before it came upon you I made it audible to you; do not say that, My idols did it, and do not say that, The carved things and the cast things commanded me.

6 You heard everything, and you did not know; but I also made audible to you the new things from now, which are going to happen, and you did not speak.

7 Now they happen and not long ago, and you did not hear them in former days; do not say that, Yes, I know them.

8 You neither knew nor understood, nor did I open your ears from the beginning; for I knew that, rejecting, you will reject, and, lawless still from the womb, you will be beguiled.

9 For the sake of my name I will show you my fury and bring my glorious things upon you, so that I may not destroy you.

10 Behold, I have sold you, not for the sake of silver, but I delivered you from a furnace of poverty;

11 for my sake I will do it for you, because my name is profaned, and I will not give my glory to another.

12 Hear me, Iakob and Israel whom I call; I am first, and I am forever,

13 and my hand founded the earth, and my right hand established heaven; I will call them, and they will stand together

14 and all be gathered and hear. Who announced these things to them? Loving you, I did your desire against Babylon, to take away the seed of the Chaldeans.

15 I spoke, I called, I brought him and prospered his way.

16 Draw near to me and hear these things; from the beginning I did not speak in secret or in a dark place of earth; when it happened, I was there, and now the Lord has sent me, and his spirit.

17 Thus says the Lord who rescued you, the Holy One of Israel, I am your God; I have shown you so that you may find the way in which you will go.

18 And if you had heard my commands, your peace would have become like a river and your righteousness like a wave of the sea;

19 and your seed would have become like the sand and the offspring of your womb like the dust of the earth; nor will you even now be destroyed, nor will your name perish before me.

20 Come out of Babylon, fleeing from the Chaldeans; announce a voice of gladness, and let this become audible; announce as far as the furthest part of the earth; say, The Lord rescued his slave Iakob.

21 And if they thirst, he will lead them through a desert; he will bring out water from a rock for them; a rock will be split, and water will flow, and my people will drink.

22 There is no rejoicing for the impious, says the Lord.

Chapter 49

1 Hear me, islands, and pay attention, nations; after a long time it will stand, says the Lord. From my mother's womb he called my name

2 and made my mouth like a sharp sword, and under the shelter of his hand he hid me; he made me like a chosen arrow and sheltered me in his quiver.

3 And he said to me, You are my slave, Israel, and in you I will be glorified.

4 And I said, I labored emptily and gave my strength to vanity and nothing; therefore my judgment is with the Lord, and my toil before my God.

5 And now thus says the Lord who formed me from the womb as a slave for himself, to gather Iakob and Israel to him—I will be gathered and glorified before the Lord, and my God will be my strength—

6 and he said to me, It is great for you to be called my servant, to establish the tribes of Iakob and turn back the dispersion of Israel; behold, I have made you a covenant of a race, a light of nations, so that you may be salvation as far as the furthest part of the earth.

7 Thus says the Lord who rescued you, the God of Israel, Sanctify the one despising his soul, the one abhorred by the nations of the slaves of the rulers; kings will see him and rise, and rulers will worship him for the sake of the Lord; because the Holy One of Israel is faithful, and I chose you.

8 Thus says the Lord, At an acceptable time I listened to you, and on a day of salvation I helped you and gave you for a covenant of nations, to establish the earth and inherit an inheritance of a desert,

9 saying to those in bonds, Come out, and to those in darkness to be uncovered. And on all their ways they will graze, and on all the paths will be their pasture;

10 they will not hunger or thirst, nor will scorching heat or the sun strike them, but the one having mercy on them will comfort and lead them through springs of waters;

11 and I will make every mountain a way and every path a pasture for them.

12 Behold, these come from far away, these from the north and these from the sea, and others from the land of the Persians.

13 Be glad, heavens, and let the earth exult; let the mountains burst forth gladness and the hills righteousness, because God had mercy on his people and comforted the humble of his people.

14 But Sion said, The Lord abandoned me, and the Lord forgot me.

15 Will a woman forget her child, so as not to have mercy on the offspring of her womb? But even if a woman should forget these, I will not forget you, said the Lord.

16 Behold, upon my hands I painted your walls, and you are before me continually;

17 and quickly you will be built by those by whom you were pulled down, and those desolating you will come out of you.

18 Lift your eyes around and see all; behold, they were gathered and came to you; I live, says the Lord, that you will put on all of them and put them around you like a bride's adornment.

19 Because your deserted places and the destroyed and fallen things will now be cramped because of those dwelling, and those swallowing you will be far removed from you.

20 For your sons whom you lost will say into your ears, The place is narrow for me; make a place for me so that I may dwell.

21 And you will say in your heart, Who begot these for me? But I am childless and a widow, and who reared these for me? But I was left alone, and where were these for me?

22 Thus says the Lord, Behold, I lift my hand to the nations and will raise my signal to the islands, and they will bring your sons in a bosom and lift your daughters upon shoulders,

23 and kings will be your fosterers and ruling women your nurses; upon the face of the earth they will worship you and lick the dust of your feet; and you will know that I am the Lord, and you will not be ashamed.

24 Will someone take spoils from a giant? And if someone takes captive unjustly, will he be saved?

25 Thus says the Lord, If someone takes a giant captive, he will take spoils; and taking from a strong one, he will be saved; but I will judge your judgment, and I will rescue your sons;

26 and those who afflicted you will eat their flesh and drink their blood like new wine and become drunk, and all flesh will perceive that I am the Lord who rescued you and who upholds the strength of Iakob.

Chapter 50

1 Thus says the Lord, What is the document of your mother's divorce, by which I sent her away? Or to what creditor have I sold you? Behold, for your sins you were sold, and for your lawless deeds I sent your mother away.

2 Why was it that I came and there was no human? I called and there was no one obeying? Does my hand lack strength to rescue? Or do I lack strength to deliver? Behold, by my threat I will desolate the sea and make rivers desolate, and their fish will dry up because there is no water and die in thirst.

3 And I will clothe heaven with darkness and make its covering like sackcloth.

4 The Lord gives me a tongue of discipline, to know at a time when it is necessary to say a word; he appointed morning for me; he added an ear for me to hear;

5 and the discipline of the Lord opens my ears, but I do not disobey or contradict.

6 I have given my back to scourges and my cheeks to blows, and I did not turn my face away from the shame of spittings;

7 and the Lord became my helper; therefore I was not abashed, but I made my face like solid rock and knew that I would certainly not be ashamed.

8 Because the one who justified me draws near; who is the one contending with me? Let him stand against me together; and who is the one contending with me? Let him draw near me.

9 Behold, the Lord helps me; who will harm me? Behold, all of you will grow old like a garment, and as a moth he will devour you.

10 Who among you is the one fearing the Lord? Let him hear the voice of his servant; those going in darkness have no light; trust in the name of the Lord and lean upon God.

11 Behold, all of you kindle fire and strengthen a flame; go by the light of your fire and by the flame which you kindled; because of me these things happened to you; in grief you will sleep.

Chapter 51

1 Hear me, those pursuing justice and seeking the Lord; look toward the solid rock which you hewed and toward the pit of the cistern which you dug.

2 Look toward Abraam your father and toward Sarra who labored to bear you, because he was one, and I called him and blessed him and loved him and multiplied him.

3 And you I will now comfort, Sion, and I comforted all her deserted places and will make her deserted places like a paradise of the Lord; they will find gladness and exultation in her, thanksgiving and a voice of praise. —

4 Hear me, hear, my people, and kings, give ear to me, because a law will come forth from me, and my judgment as a light of nations.

5 My righteousness draws near quickly, and my salvation will come forth like light, and nations will hope in my arm; islands will wait for me and hope in my arm.

6 Lift your eyes toward heaven and look toward the earth below, because heaven was established like smoke, and the earth will grow old like a garment, and those dwelling on the earth will die like these, but my salvation will be forever, and my righteousness will certainly not fail. —

7 Hear me, those knowing judgment, my people, whose heart contains my law; do not fear the reproach of humans and do not be defeated by their contempt.

8 For like a garment it will be eaten by time and like wool eaten by a moth; but my righteousness will be forever, and my salvation for generations of generations.

9 Awake, awake, Ierusalem, and put on the strength of your arm; awake as at the beginning of a day, as a generation of eternity. Are you not

10 the one desolating a sea, the abundant water of an abyss? The one making the depths of the sea a way of crossing for those being rescued

11 and redeemed? For by the Lord they will turn back and come into Sion with gladness and eternal exultation; for upon their head are exultation and praise, and gladness will seize them; pain and grief and groaning fled away.

12 I am, I am the one comforting you; know whom you were wary of, that you feared a mortal human and a son of a human, who dried up like grass.

13 And you forgot God who made you, who made heaven and founded the earth, and you feared always, all the days, the face of the fury of the one afflicting you; for in the manner that he counseled to take you away—and now where is the fury of the one afflicting you?

14 For when you are saved, he will not stand or delay;

15 because I am your God who troubles the sea and makes her waves sound; the Lord Sabaoth is my name.

16 I will put my words into your mouth and shelter you under the shadow of my hand, with which I established heaven and founded the earth; and he will say to Sion, You are my people.

17 Awake, awake, rise, Ierusalem who drank the cup of fury from the hand of the Lord; for you drank out and emptied the cup of falling, the bowl of fury.

18 And there was no one comforting you from all your children whom you bore, and there was no one holding your hand, not even from all your sons whom you raised up.

19 These two are opposed to you; who will grieve with you? Fall and destruction, famine and sword; who will comfort you?

20 Your sons who are perplexed, who sleep at the end of every exit like a half-boiled beet, who are full of the Lord's fury, weakened through the Lord God.

21 Therefore hear, humbled woman and drunk, not from wine;

22 thus says the Lord God who judges his people, Behold, I have taken from your hand the cup of falling, the bowl of fury, and you will not continue to drink it any longer;

23 and I will cast it into the hands of those who wronged you and those who humbled you, who said to your soul, Bend down, so that we may pass; and you made your back equal to the earth outside for those passing by.

Chapter 52

1 Awake, awake, Sion; put on your strength, Sion, and put on your glory, Ierusalem, the holy city; an uncircumcised and unclean one will no longer continue to pass through you.

2 Shake off the dust and rise, sit, Ierusalem; take off the bond of your neck, captive daughter of Sion.

3 Because thus says the Lord, You were sold for nothing, and you will be redeemed without silver.

4 Thus says the Lord, My people went down into Egypt formerly to sojourn there, and they were led to the Assyrians by force;

5 and now why are you here? Thus says the Lord. Because my people was taken for nothing, marvel and wail; thus says the Lord. Because of you my name is continually blasphemed among the nations.

6 Therefore my people will know my name on that day, that I am he who speaks; I am present,

7 like beauty upon the mountains, like feet of one announcing good news of a report of peace, like one announcing good things, because I will make your salvation audible, saying to Sion, Your God will reign;

8 because the voice of those guarding you was raised, and with the voice they will be glad together, because eyes will see eye to eye when the Lord has mercy on Sion.

9 Let the deserted places of Ierusalem burst forth gladness together, because the Lord had mercy on her and rescued Ierusalem.

10 And the Lord will uncover his holy arm before all the nations, and all the ends of the earth will see the salvation from God.

11 Depart, depart, come out from there, and do not touch an unclean thing; come out of her midst, be separated, those carrying the vessels of the Lord;

12 because you will not come out with trouble or go in flight, for the Lord will go before you, and the one gathering you is the Lord, the God of Israel.

13 Behold, my servant will understand and be exalted and glorified exceedingly.

14 In the manner that many will be astounded at you—thus your appearance will be without glory among humans, and your glory among humans—

15 thus many nations will marvel at him, and kings will hold their mouth shut; because those to whom it was not announced concerning him will see, and those who have not heard will understand. —

Chapter 53

1 Lord, who believed our report? And to whom was the arm of the Lord revealed?

2 We announced before him like a child, like a root in thirsty land; he has no appearance or glory; and we saw him, and he had no appearance or beauty;

3 but his appearance was dishonored, failing beyond all humans, a human who is in a blow and knows to bear sickness, because his face has been turned away; he was dishonored and not reckoned.

4 This one bears our sins and suffers pain concerning us, and we reckoned him to be in toil and in a blow and in mistreatment.

5 But he was wounded because of our lawless deeds and has been made sick because of our sins; the discipline of our peace is upon him; by his bruise we were healed.

6 All of us wandered like sheep; each human wandered on his way; and the Lord delivered him to our sins.

7 And he, because of being mistreated, does not open the mouth; like a sheep he was led to slaughter, and like a lamb voiceless before the one shearing it, thus he does not open his mouth.

8 In the humiliation his judgment was taken away; who will recount his generation? Because his life is taken from the earth, because of the lawless deeds of my people he was led to death.

9 And I will give the evil ones in exchange for his burial and the rich in exchange for his death, because he did not do lawlessness, nor was deceit found in his mouth.

10 And the Lord desires to cleanse him of the blow; if you give for sin, your soul will see long-lived seed; and the Lord desires to take away

11 from the toil of his soul, to show him light and form him with understanding, to justify a righteous one serving many well, and he himself will bear their sins.

12 Therefore he himself will inherit many and divide spoils of the strong, because his soul was delivered to death, and he was reckoned among the lawless; and he himself bore sins of many and was delivered because of their sins.

Chapter 54

1 Be glad, barren woman who does not give birth; burst forth and cry out, woman not in labor, because the children of the desolate woman are many, more than those of the one having the husband, for the Lord said it.

2 Broaden the place of your tent and of your curtains; pitch them, do not spare; lengthen your cords and strengthen your stakes.

3 Spread out yet to the right and to the left, and your seed will inherit nations, and you will settle desolated cities.

4 Do not fear because you were put to shame, nor be abashed because you were reproached, because you will forget eternal shame and certainly not remember the reproach of your widowhood.

5 Because the Lord is the one making you; the Lord Sabaoth is his name; and the one who rescued you is himself the God of Israel; he will be called so in all the earth.

6 The Lord has not called you as an abandoned and fainthearted woman or as a woman hated from youth, said your God;

7 for a little time I abandoned you, and with great mercy I will have mercy on you;

8 in a little fury I turned my face away from you, and with eternal mercy I will have mercy on you, said the Lord who rescued you.

9 From the water in Noe's time this is for me; according as I swore to him at that time concerning the earth, not to be angry at you any longer or, in threatening you,

10 for the mountains to be removed, nor will your hills be moved; thus neither will the mercy from me for you fail, nor will the covenant of your peace be removed; for the Lord said, I am propitious to you.

11 Humble and unsettled woman, you were not comforted; behold, I prepare a carbuncle as your stone and sapphire as your foundations,

12 and I will make your battlements jasper and your gates stones of crystal and your enclosure chosen stones,

13 and all your sons taught by God, and your children in much peace.

14 And in righteousness you will be built; keep away from injustice, and you will not fear, and trembling will not draw near you.

15 Behold, proselytes will approach you through me and flee to you.

16 Behold, I create you, not like a smith blowing coals and bringing forth a vessel for work; but I created you not for destruction, to destroy

17 every perishable vessel. Against you I will not prosper it, and every voice will rise against you for judgment; you will defeat all of them, and those guilty toward you will be in it. There is an inheritance for those serving the Lord, and you will be righteous for me, says the Lord.

Chapter 55

1 Thirsty ones, go for water, and all who have no silver, go, buy and drink without silver and the price of wine, and fat.

2 Why are you valued for silver, and your toil not for fullness? Hear me, and you will eat good things, and your soul will luxuriate in good things.

3 Pay attention with your ears and follow my ways; listen to me, and your soul will live in good things; and I will covenant with you an eternal covenant, the faithful holy things of David.

4 Behold, I have given him as a testimony among nations, a ruler and one commanding nations.

5 Nations which did not know you will call upon you, and peoples which do not understand you will flee to you for the sake of your God, the Holy One of Israel, because he glorified you.

6 Seek God and, when finding him, call upon him; and whenever he draws near you,

7 let the impious one leave his ways and a lawless man his counsels, and let him turn to the Lord, and he will be shown mercy, because he will abundantly forgive your sins.

8 For my counsels are not like your counsels, nor are my ways like your ways, says the Lord;

9 but as heaven is distant from earth, thus my way is distant from your ways, and your thoughts from my mind.

10 For as rain or snow comes down from heaven and certainly does not turn back until it saturates the earth, and she brings forth and sprouts and gives seed to the sower and bread for eating,

11 thus will be my utterance which comes out of my mouth; it will certainly not turn back until whatever I desired is accomplished, and I will prosper your ways and my commands.

12 For in gladness you will go out, and in joy you will be taught; for the mountains and hills will leap out, welcoming you in joy, and all the trees of the field will clap with the branches,

13 and instead of thorny burnet a cypress will come up, and instead of fleabane a myrtle will come up; and the Lord will be for a name and for an eternal sign and will not fail.

Chapter 56

1 Thus says the Lord, Guard judgment, do righteousness, for my salvation drew near to arrive, and my mercy to be revealed.

2 Blessed is a man doing these things and a human clinging to them and guarding the sabbaths so as not to profane them and preserving his hands so as not to do an injustice.

3 Let the foreigner attached to the Lord not say, The Lord will surely separate me from his people; and let the eunuch not say that, I am a dry tree.

4 Thus says the Lord, To the eunuchs, all who guard my sabbaths and choose what I desire and cling to my covenant,

5 I will give them in my house and within my wall a renowned place, better than sons and daughters; I will give them an eternal name, and it will not fail.

6 And the foreigners attached to the Lord to serve him and love the name of the Lord, to be male slaves and female slaves for him, and all those guarding my sabbaths so as not to profane them and clinging to my covenant,

7 I will bring them into my holy mountain and gladden them in my house of prayer; their whole burnt offerings and their sacrifices will be acceptable upon my altar; for my house will be called a house of prayer for all the nations,

8 said the Lord who gathers the scattered ones of Israel, that, I will gather a gathering to him.

9 All the wild beasts, come, eat, all the beasts of the wood.

10 See that all have been blinded; they did not know to understand; all are mute dogs; they will not be able to bark, dreaming of a bed, loving to doze.

11 And the dogs are shameless in soul, not knowing fullness; and they are evil, not knowing understanding; all followed their ways, each according to his own.

Chapter 57

1 See how the righteous one perished, and no one takes it to heart, and righteous men are taken away, and no one considers. For the righteous one has been taken away from the face of injustice;

2 his burial will be in peace; he has been taken away from the midst.

3 But you draw near here, lawless sons, seed of adulterers and of a prostitute;

4 in what did you luxuriate? And against whom did you open your mouth? And against whom did you let loose your tongue? Are you not children of destruction, lawless seed?

5 Those appealing to the idols under dense trees, slaughtering their children in the ravines between the rocks.

6 That is your portion, this your lot, and to those you poured libations and to those you brought up sacrifices; will I therefore not be angry at these things?

7 Upon a high and lofty mountain, there is your bed, and there you brought up sacrifices.

8 And behind the posts of your door you put your memorials; you thought that if you departed from me, you would have something more; you loved those sleeping with you,

9 and multiplied your prostitution with them and made many those far away from you, and sent envoys beyond your boundaries and turned back and were humbled as far as Hades.

10 In your many journeys you labored and did not say, I will cease strengthening myself; because you did these things, therefore you did not supplicate me,

11 you. Whom were you wary of, that you feared and lied to me and did not remember me or take me into your mind or into your heart? And I, seeing you, overlook, and you did not fear me.

12 And I will announce my righteousness and your evils which will not benefit you.

13 When you cry out, let them deliver you in your affliction; for wind will take all these, and a tempest will carry them away. But those clinging to me will acquire land and inherit my holy mountain.

14 And they will say, Clear ways before him and take stumbling blocks away from the way of my people.

15 Thus says the Lord Most High who dwells in lofty places forever, Holy among holy ones is his name, the Lord Most High resting among holy ones and giving patience to fainthearted ones and giving life to those broken in heart:

16 I will not avenge myself upon you forever or be angry with you continually; for a spirit will come out from me, and I made every breath.

17 Because of sin I grieved him a little and struck him and turned my face away from him, and he was grieved and went gloomy in his ways.

18 I have seen his ways and healed him and comforted him and gave him true comfort,

19 peace upon peace to those far away and those who are near; and the Lord said, I will heal them.

20 But the unjust will be tossed thus and will not be able to rest.

21 There is no rejoicing for the impious, said the Lord God.

Chapter 58

1 Cry out in strength and do not spare; lift your voice like a trumpet and announce to my people their sins and to the house of Iakob their lawless deeds.

2 They seek me day by day and desire to know my ways; like a people having done righteousness and not abandoned the judgment of its God, they now ask me for a righteous judgment and desire to draw near God,

3 saying, Why did we fast and you did not see? We humbled our souls and you did not know? For in the days of your fasts you find your desires and goad all those under your hand.

4 If you fast for disputes and fights and strike a humble one with fists, why do you fast for me as today, for your voice to be heard in a cry?

5 I did not choose this fast or a day for a human to humble his soul; not even if you bend your neck like a ring and spread sackcloth and ash beneath you, not even thus will you call it an acceptable fast.

6 I did not choose such a fast, says the Lord, but loose every bond of injustice, dissolve the strangling cords of violent transactions, send the crushed ones away in release, and tear apart every unjust written contract;

7 break your bread for a hungry one and bring roofless poor ones into your house; if you see a naked one, clothe him, and you will not overlook those of the household of your seed.

8 Then your light will burst forth early, and your healings will spring up quickly, and your righteousness will go before you, and the glory of God will surround you;

9 then you will cry out, and God will hear you; while you are still speaking, he will say, Behold, I am present. If you take away from yourself a bond and a pointing of the hand and an utterance of grumbling,

10 and give bread to a hungry one from your soul and fill a humbled soul, then your light will rise in darkness, and your darkness will be like midday.

11 And your God will be with you continually; and you will be filled just as your soul desires, and your bones will be fattened, and you will be like a saturated garden and like a spring whose water did not fail, and your bones will spring up like vegetation and be fattened, and they will inherit for generations of generations.

12 And your eternal deserted places will be built, and your foundations will be eternal for generations of generations; and you will be called Builder of Fences, and you will cause the paths between to cease.

13 If you turn your foot away from the sabbaths so as not to do your desires on the holy day, and you will call the sabbaths delightful, holy to your God, you will not lift your foot for work or speak a word in wrath from your mouth,

14 and you will be trusting in the Lord, and he will bring you up upon the good things of the earth and feed you the inheritance of Iakob your father; for the mouth of the Lord spoke these things.

Chapter 59

1 Does the hand of the Lord lack strength to save? Or did he make his ear heavy so as not to hear?

2 But your sins separate between you and God, and because of your sins he turned his face away from you so as not to have mercy.

3 For your hands are stained with blood and your fingers with sins, and your lips spoke lawlessness, and your tongue meditates injustice.

4 No one speaks righteous things, nor is there a true judgment; they have trusted in vain things and speak empty things, because they conceive toil and give birth to lawlessness.

5 They broke eggs of asps and weave a spider's web; and the one going to eat of their eggs, breaking one, found a wind-egg, and in it a basilisk;

6 their web will not be for a garment, nor will they clothe themselves from their works, for their works are works of lawlessness.

7 And their feet run to wickedness, swift to pour out blood; and their reasonings are reasonings of senseless ones; destruction and misery are in their ways.

8 And they do not know a way of peace, and there is no judgment in their ways; for their paths which they travel are perverted, and they do not know peace.

9 Therefore judgment departed from them, and righteousness will certainly not overtake them; while they waited for light, darkness came to be for them; waiting for brightness, they walked at an untimely hour.

10 They will feel a wall like blind ones, and as though eyes do not exist, they will feel; and they will fall at midday as at midnight; like dying ones they will groan.

11 Like a bear and like a dove they will go together; we waited for judgment, and there is none; salvation has departed far from us.

12 For our lawlessness is abundant before you, and our sins stood against us; for our lawless deeds are within us, and we knew our injustices;

13 we acted impiously and lied and departed from following our God; we spoke unjust things and disobeyed; we conceived and meditated unjust words from our heart;

14 and we pushed judgment backward, and righteousness has departed far away, because truth was consumed in their ways, and they could not pass through by a straight way.

15 And truth has been taken away, and they removed the mind from understanding; and the Lord saw, and it did not please him, because there was no judgment.

16 And he saw, and there was no man, and he considered, and there was no one who would uphold, and he defended against them with his arm and was established by mercy.

17 And he put on righteousness like a breastplate and put a helmet of salvation upon the head and put on a garment of vengeance and the covering,

18 as one who will repay recompense, reproach to the adversaries.

19 And those from the west will fear the name of the Lord, and those from the rising of the sun the glorious name; for the wrath from the Lord will come like a violent river; it will come with fury.

20 And the one rescuing will come for the sake of Sion and turn impieties away from Iakob.

21 And this is the covenant from me for them, said the Lord; my spirit which is upon you, and the utterances which I gave into your mouth, will certainly not fail from your mouth and from the mouth of your seed, for the Lord said it, from now and forever.

Chapter 60

1 Be illumined, be illumined, Ierusalem, for your light has come, and the glory of the Lord has risen upon you.

2 Behold, darkness and gloom will cover earth over nations; but upon you the Lord will appear, and his glory will be seen upon you.

3 And kings will go by your light and nations by your brightness.

4 Lift your eyes around and see your children gathered; behold, all your sons have come from far away, and your daughters will be lifted upon shoulders.

5 Then you will see and fear and be astounded in heart, because wealth of sea and nations and peoples will turn to you. And there will come to you

6 herds of camels, and camels of Madiam and Gaipha will cover you; all will come from Saba, carrying gold, and bring frankincense and announce the good news of the Lord's salvation.

7 And all the sheep of Kedar will be gathered to you, and rams of Nabaioth will come to you, and they will be brought up acceptably upon my altar, and my house of prayer will be glorified.

8 Who are these who fly like clouds and like doves with chicks?

9 Islands waited for me, and ships of Tharsis among the first, to bring your children from far away, and silver and gold with them, because of the holy name of the Lord and because the Holy One of Israel is glorious.

10 And foreigners will build your walls, and their kings will stand beside you; for because of my wrath I struck you, and because of mercy I loved you.

11 And your gates will be opened continually; by day and night they will not be shut, to bring to you the power of nations and kings being led.

12 For the nations and kings who will not serve you will perish, and the nations will be desolated with desolation.

13 And the glory of Lebanon will come to you in cypress and pine and cedar together, to glorify my holy place.

14 And sons of those who humbled you and provoked you will go to you in fear, and you will be called City of the Lord, Sion of the Holy One of Israel.

15 Because you have become abandoned and hated, and there was no one helping, I will also make you an eternal exultation, a gladness for generations of generations.

16 And you will suck milk of nations and eat wealth of kings, and you will know that I am the Lord who saves you and delivers you, the God of Israel.

17 And instead of bronze I will bring you gold, and instead of iron I will bring you silver, and instead of wood I will bring you bronze, and instead of stones iron. And I will give your rulers in peace and your overseers in righteousness;

18 and injustice will no longer be heard in your land, nor destruction or misery within your boundaries, but your walls will be called Salvation, and your gates Carving.

19 And the sun will not be for you for light of day, nor will the rising of the moon illumine the night for you, but the Lord will be an eternal light for you, and God your glory.

20 For the sun will not set for you, and the moon will not fail for you; for the Lord will be an eternal light for you, and the days of your mourning will be fulfilled.

21 And your people are all righteous, and forever they will inherit the earth, he guarding the planting, works of his hands for glory.

22 The very small one will become thousands, and the least one a great nation; I, the Lord, will gather them at the time.

Chapter 61

1 The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because of which he anointed me; he has sent me to announce good news to poor ones, to heal those broken in heart, to proclaim release to captives and recovery of sight to blind ones,

2 to call an acceptable year of the Lord and a day of recompense, to comfort all those mourning,

3 for glory to be given to those mourning Sion instead of ash, an anointing of gladness to those mourning, an attire of glory instead of a spirit of despondency; and they will be called generations of righteousness, a planting of the Lord for glory.

4 And they will build eternal deserted places, raise up those desolated formerly, and renew deserted cities desolated for generations.

5 And foreigners will come shepherding your sheep, and those of another tribe as plowmen and vinedressers;

6 but you will be called priests of the Lord, ministers of God; you will devour the strength of nations and be marveled at in their wealth.

7 Thus a second time they will inherit the earth, and eternal gladness will be above their head.

8 For I am the Lord who loves righteousness and hates things seized through injustice; and I will give their toil to righteous ones and covenant an eternal covenant with them.

9 And their seed and their offspring will be known among the nations; everyone seeing them will recognize them, that these are seed blessed by God,

10 and with gladness they will be glad in the Lord. — Let my soul exult in the Lord, for he clothed me with a garment of salvation and a tunic of gladness; like a bridegroom he put a headdress upon me, and like a bride he adorned me with adornment.

11 And like earth growing its flower and like a garden its seeds, thus the Lord will bring forth righteousness and exultation before all the nations.

Chapter 62

1 Because of Sion I will not be silent, and because of Ierusalem I will not desist, until my righteousness comes forth like light, and my salvation will burn like a torch.

2 And nations will see your righteousness and kings your glory, and he will call you by your new name which the Lord will name.

3 And you will be a crown of beauty in the hand of the Lord and a diadem of kingship in the hand of your God.

4 And you will no longer be called Abandoned, and your land will not be called Desert; for you will be called My Desire, and your land Inhabited.

5 And like a young man living with a virgin, thus your sons will dwell with you; and it shall be in the manner that a bridegroom will be glad over a bride, thus the Lord will be glad over you.

6 And upon your walls, Ierusalem, I appointed guards the whole day and the whole night, who to the end will not be silent, remembering the Lord.

7 For there is none like you, if he establishes and makes Ierusalem a boast upon the earth.

8 The Lord swore by his right hand and by the strength of his arm, Surely I will not give your grain and your foods to your enemies any longer, and surely foreign sons will not drink your wine for which you toiled any longer;

9 but those gathering will eat them and praise the Lord, and those gathering will drink them in my holy dwellings.

10 Go through my gates and make a road for my people and scatter the stones out of the way; raise a signal to the nations.

11 For behold, the Lord made it audible as far as the furthest part of the earth, Say to the daughter of Sion, Behold, your Savior arrives, having his own wage and the work before his face.

12 And he will call him a holy people redeemed by the Lord, but you will be called a sought-after city and not abandoned.

Chapter 63

1 Who is this who arrives from Edom, a redness of garments from Bosor, thus beautiful in a robe, with violence, with strength? I discourse righteousness and a judgment of salvation.

2 Why are your garments red and your clothes as from a treader of a winepress?

3 Full of what has been trampled, and of the nations there is no man with me, and I trampled them in fury and crushed them like earth and brought their blood down to earth.

4 For a day of recompense came upon them, and a year of redemption is present.

5 And I looked, and there was no helper; and I considered, and no one upheld; and my arm rescued them, and my fury came upon them.

6 And I trampled them in my wrath and brought their blood down to earth.

7 I remembered the mercy of the Lord, the excellences of the Lord in everything which the Lord repays to us; the Lord is a good judge for the house of Israel; he brings upon us according to his mercy and according to the abundance of his righteousness.

8 And he said, Are not my people children who will certainly not reject? And he became salvation for them

9 from every affliction. Not an envoy or an angel, but the Lord himself saved them because he loved them and spared them; he himself redeemed them and took them up and raised them up all the days of eternity.

10 But they disobeyed and provoked his holy spirit, and he turned to enmity toward them, and he himself warred against them.

11 And the one who brought up the shepherd of the sheep from the earth remembered eternal days; where is the one who put the holy spirit among them?

12 The one who led Moyses by the right hand, the arm of his glory? He prevailed over water before him to make an eternal name for himself.

13 He led them through the abyss like a horse through a desert, and they did not grow weary.

14 And like livestock through a plain, a spirit came down from the Lord and guided them; thus you led your people to make yourself a name of glory.

15 Turn from heaven and see from the house of your holiness and glory; where are your zeal and your strength? Where is the abundance of your mercy and your compassions, that you held back from us?

16 For you are our father, because Abraam did not know us, and Israel did not recognize us, but you, Lord, are our father; rescue us; from the beginning your name is upon us.

17 Why did you lead us astray, Lord, from your way, harden our hearts so as not to fear you? Turn back because of your slaves, because of the tribes of your inheritance, 18 so that we may inherit a little of your holy mountain; our adversaries trampled your sanctuary.

19 We became as at the beginning, when you did not rule us, nor was your name called upon us. If you open heaven, trembling will seize mountains because of you, and they will melt,

Chapter 64

1 as wax melts from fire. And fire will burn up the adversaries, and the name of the Lord will be manifest among the adversaries; before you nations will be troubled.

2 When you do the glorious things, trembling will seize mountains because of you.

3 From eternity we did not hear, nor did our eyes see a god apart from you, and your works which you will do for those waiting for mercy.

4 For he will meet those doing justice, and they will remember your ways. Behold, you were angry, and we sinned; therefore we were led astray.

5 And we all became like unclean ones; all our righteousness is like the rag of a menstruating woman; and we flowed away like leaves because of our lawless deeds; thus wind will carry us.

6 And there is no one calling upon your name and remembering to take hold of you, because you turned your face away from us and delivered us over because of our sins. —

7 And now, Lord, you are our father, and we are clay, all a work of your hands;

8 do not be very angry with us and do not remember our sins at a time. And now look, because all of us are your people.

9 The city of your holy one became desolate; Sion became like a desert; Ierusalem became a curse.

10 The house, our holy place, and the glory which our fathers blessed became burned by fire, and all the glorious things fell together.

11 And at all these things you held back, Lord, and were silent and humbled us exceedingly.

Chapter 65

1 I became manifest to those not seeking me; I was found by those not inquiring of me; I said, Behold, I am, to the nation who did not call my name.

2 I spread out my hands the whole day toward a disobedient and contradicting people, who did not go by a true way, but after their sins.

3 This people who provokes me before me continually—they sacrifice in the gardens and burn incense upon the bricks to the demons which do not exist;

4 and in the tombs and in the caves they sleep for dreams, those eating pork and broth of sacrifices; all their vessels are stained;

5 those saying, Far away from me, do not draw near me, because I am clean; this is smoke of my fury; fire burns in it all the days.

6 Behold, it is written before me, I will not be silent until I repay into their bosom;

7 their sins and those of their fathers, says the Lord, who burned incense upon the mountains and reproached me upon the hills—I will repay their works into their bosom.

8 Thus says the Lord, In the manner that a grape berry will be found in the cluster, and they will say, Do not ruin it, because a blessing of the Lord is in it, thus I will do for the sake of the one serving me; for this one's sake I will certainly not destroy all.

9 And I will bring out the seed from Iakob and that from Iouda, and it will inherit my holy mountain, and my chosen ones and my slaves will inherit and dwell there.

10 And in the wood there will be dwellings of flocks, and a ravine of Achor for a resting place of herds for my people who sought me.

11 But you who abandoned me and forget my holy mountain and prepare a table for the demon and fill a mixed drink for Fortune,

12 I will deliver you to a sword; all will fall in slaughter, because I called you and you did not obey; I spoke and you disregarded and did evil before me and chose what I did not desire.

13 Therefore thus says the Lord, Behold, those serving me will eat, but you will hunger; behold, those serving me will drink, but you will thirst; behold, those serving me will be glad, but you will be ashamed;

14 behold, those serving me will exult in gladness, but you will cry out because of the toil of your heart and wail from a breaking of spirit.

15 For you will leave your name for fullness to my chosen ones, but the Lord will kill you. But for those serving him a new name will be called,

16 which will be blessed upon the earth; for they will bless the true God, and those swearing upon the earth will swear by the true God; for they will forget their former affliction, and it will not rise upon their heart. —

17 For heaven will be new and the earth new, and they will certainly not remember the former things, nor will they come upon their heart,

18 but they will find gladness and exultation in her, because behold, I make Ierusalem an exultation and my people a gladness.

19 And I will exult over Ierusalem and be glad over my people, and a voice of weeping or a voice of crying will certainly no longer be heard in her.

20 And there will certainly not be there one untimely or an elder who will not fulfill his time; for the young one will be a hundred years old, and the sinner dying a hundred years old will also be accursed.

21 And they will build houses and themselves dwell in them and plant vineyards and themselves eat their produce;

22 and they will certainly not build and others dwell in them, and they will certainly not plant and others eat; for according to the days of the tree of life will be the days of my people; they will make old the works of their toils.

23 But my chosen ones will not labor in emptiness or produce children for a curse, because they are seed blessed by God, and their offspring will be with them.

24 And it shall be that before they cry out, I will listen to them; while they are still speaking, I will say, What is it?

25 Then wolves and lambs will graze together, and a lion will eat straw like an ox, and a snake earth like bread; they will not do wrong or ruin upon my holy mountain, says the Lord.

Chapter 66

1 Thus says the Lord, Heaven is my throne, and the earth a footstool for my feet; what house will you build for me? Or what place of my rest?

2 For my hand made all these things, and all these things are mine, says the Lord; and upon whom will I look except upon the humble and quiet one trembling at my words?

3 But the lawless one sacrificing a calf to me is like the one killing a dog, and the one bringing up fine flour like swine's blood, the one giving frankincense for a memorial like a blasphemer; and these chose their ways and their abominations which their soul desired,

4 and I will choose their mockeries and repay their sins to them, because I called them and they did not obey me; I spoke and they did not hear, and they did evil before me and chose what I did not desire.

5 Hear the utterance of the Lord, those trembling at his word; say, our brothers, to those hating us and abhorring us, so that the name of the Lord may be glorified and seen in their gladness, and those will be ashamed.

6 A voice of crying from a city, a voice from a temple, a voice of the Lord repaying recompense to the opponents.

7 Before the woman in labor gave birth, before the pain of the pangs came, she escaped and bore a male.

8 Who heard such a thing, and who has seen thus? Did a land labor in one day, or was a nation also born at once? Because Sion labored and bore her children.

9 But I gave this expectation, and you did not remember me, said the Lord. Did I not, behold, make one giving birth and one barren? said God.

10 Be glad, Ierusalem, and celebrate in her, all those loving her; rejoice with joy, all who mourn over her,

11 so that you may suck and be filled from the breast of her comfort, so that, sucking out, you may delight from the entrance of her glory.

12 Because thus says the Lord, Behold, I turn toward them like a river of peace and like an overflowing torrent the glory of nations; their children will be lifted upon shoulders and comforted upon knees.

13 As if a mother comforts someone, thus I too will comfort you, and in Ierusalem you will be comforted.

14 And you will see, and your heart will rejoice, and your bones will spring up like vegetation; and the hand of the Lord will be known to those revering him, and he will threaten the disobedient.

15 For behold, the Lord will come like fire, and his chariots like a tempest, to repay vengeance in fury and expulsion in a flame of fire.

16 For by the fire of the Lord all the earth will be judged, and by his sword all flesh; many will be wounded by the Lord.

17 Those purifying and cleansing themselves for the gardens, and in the porches eating pork and the abominations and the now, will be consumed together, said the Lord,

18 and I know their works and their reasoning. I come to gather all the nations and tongues, and they will come and see my glory.

19 And I will leave signs upon them and send saved ones from them to the nations, to Tharsis and Phoud and Loud and Mosoch and Thobel and into Hellas and into the distant islands, who have not heard my name or seen my glory, and they will announce my glory among the nations.

20 And they will bring your brothers from all the nations as a gift to the Lord, with horses and chariots, in mule carriages with canopies, into the holy city Ierusalem, said the Lord, as the sons of Israel would bring me their sacrifices with psalms into the house of the Lord.

21 And from them I will take priests and Leuites for myself, said the Lord.

22 For in the manner that the new heaven and the new earth which I make remain before me, says the Lord, thus your seed and your name will stand.

23 And it shall be month after month and sabbath after sabbath that all flesh will come before me to worship in Ierusalem, said the Lord.

24 And they will come out and see the limbs of the humans who have transgressed against me; for their worm will not die, and their fire will not be extinguished, and they will be a sight for all flesh.

Jeremiah

Chapter 1

1 The utterance of God which came upon Ieremias, the son of Chelkias, from the priests, who dwelt in Anathoth in the land of Beniamin;

2 which became a word of God to him in the days of Iosias son of Amos, king of Iouda, in the thirteenth year of his reign;

3 and it came in the days of Ioakim son of Iosias, king of Iouda, until the eleventh year of Sedekias son of Iosias, king of Iouda, until the captivity of Ierusalem in the fifth month.

4 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying,

5 Before I formed you in the womb I know you, and before you came out of the womb I have sanctified you; I have appointed you a prophet to nations.

6 And I said, O Master Lord, behold, I do not know how to speak, because I am young.

7 And the Lord said to me, Do not say that, I am young, because to all to whom I send you away you will go, and according to everything that I command you, you will speak;

8 do not fear before them, because I am with you to deliver you, says the Lord.

9 And the Lord stretched his hand toward me and touched my mouth, and the Lord said to me, Behold, I have given my words into your mouth;

10 behold, I have appointed you today over nations and kingdoms, to uproot and dig down and destroy and rebuild and plant.

11 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying, What do you see, Ieremias? And I said, A rod of nut wood.

12 And the Lord said to me, You have seen well, because I have kept watch over my words to do them. —

13 And a word of the Lord came to me a second time, saying, What do you see? And I said, A cauldron heated from beneath, and its face from the face of the north.

14 And the Lord said to me, From the face of the north evils will blaze out upon all those dwelling on the earth.

15 Because behold, I call together all the kingdoms from the north of the earth, says the Lord, and they will come and each set his throne at the porches of the gates of Ierusalem and against all the walls around her and against all the cities of Iouda.

16 And I will speak to them with judgment concerning all their wickedness, how they abandoned me and sacrificed to foreign gods and worshiped the works of their hands.

17 And you gird your waist and rise and say to them everything that I command you; do not fear before them or be frightened before them, because I am with you to deliver you, says the Lord.

18 Behold, I have made you on this day like a strong city and like a strong bronze wall to all the kings of Iouda and its rulers and the people of the land,

19 and they will war against you and certainly not prevail against you, because I am with you to deliver you, said the Lord.

2 And he said, Thus says the Lord, I remembered the mercy of your youth and the love of your completion, that you followed the Holy One of Israel, says the Lord,

3 holy Israel. To the Lord he is the beginning of his produce; all those eating him will offend; evils will come upon them, declares the Lord.

4 Hear a word of the Lord, house of Iakob and every family of the house of Israel.

5 Thus says the Lord, What offense did your fathers find in me, that they departed far from me and went after vain things and were made vain?

6 And they did not say, Where is the Lord who brought us up from the land of Egypt, who guided us in the desert, in an unbounded and untrodden land, in a waterless and fruitless land, in a land in which nothing traveled and no son of a human dwelt there?

7 And I brought you into Karmel for you to eat its fruits and its good things; and you entered and defiled my land and made my inheritance an abomination.

8 The priests did not say, Where is the Lord? And those clinging to the law did not know me, and the shepherds acted impiously toward me, and the prophets prophesied by Baal and went after a useless thing.

9 Therefore I will yet contend with you, says the Lord, and with the sons of your sons I will contend.

10 Because cross into the islands of Chettiim and see, and send into Kedar and consider exceedingly, and see whether such things have happened.

11 Will nations exchange their gods? And these are not gods. But my people exchanged its glory, from which they will not be benefited.

12 Heaven was astounded at this and shuddered exceedingly, beyond measure, says the Lord.

13 Because my people did two evil things; they abandoned me, a spring of water of life, and dug for themselves broken cisterns which will not be able to hold water.

14 Is Israel a slave or house-born? Why did he become plunder?

15 Lions roared against him and gave their voice, who made his land a desert, and his cities were dug down so as not to be inhabited.

16 And sons of Memphis and Taphnas knew you and mocked you.

17 Did not your abandoning me do these things to you? says the Lord your God.

18 And now what have you to do with the way of Egypt, to drink water of Geon? And what have you to do with the way of the Assyrians, to drink water of rivers?

19 Your apostasy will discipline you, and your wickedness will reprove you; and know and see that your abandoning me is bitter for you, says the Lord your God; and I was not pleased with you, says the Lord your God.

20 Because from eternity you shattered your yoke, tore apart your bonds and said, I will not serve, but I will go upon every high hill and beneath every shady tree; there I will abandon myself to my prostitution.

21 But I planted you a fruitful vine, entirely true; how were you turned to bitterness, the foreign vine?

22 If you wash yourself with natron and multiply cleansing herb for yourself, you have been stained in your injustices before me, says the Lord.

23 How will you say, I was not defiled and did not go after Baal? See your ways in the burial ground and know what you did. Late her voice wailed; her ways

24 she broadened toward waters of a desert; in desires of her soul she was borne by a spirit, she was delivered over; who will turn her back? All those seeking her will not grow weary; in her humiliation they will find her.

25 Turn your foot away from a rough way and your throat from thirst. But she said, I will be courageous; because she had loved strangers and went after them.

26 As the shame of a thief when he is captured, thus the sons of Israel will be ashamed, they and their kings and their rulers and their priests and their prophets.

27 To the wood they said that, You are my father, and to the stone, You begot me, and they turned backs toward me and not their faces; and in the time of their evils they will say, Rise and save us.

28 And where are your gods which you made for yourself? Will they rise and save you in a time of your mistreatment? Because according to the number of your cities were your gods, Iouda, and according to the number of passages of Ierusalem they sacrificed to Baal.

29 Why do you speak to me? All of you acted impiously and all of you acted lawlessly toward me, says the Lord.

30 In vain I struck your children; you did not accept discipline; a sword devoured your prophets like a destroying lion, and you did not fear.

31 Hear a word of the Lord, Thus says the Lord, Did I become a desert for Israel or a land made barren? Why did my people say, We will not be ruled and will not come to you any longer?

32 Will a bride forget her adornment and a virgin her breastband? But my people forgot me for days of which there is no number.

33 What good thing will you yet pursue in your ways to seek love? Not thus, but you too acted wickedly to defile your ways.

34 And in your hands blood of innocent souls was found; I did not find them in break-ins, but upon every oak.

35 And you said, I am innocent, but let his fury turn away from me. Behold, I contend with you in your saying, I did not sin.

36 Why did you greatly disdain to repeat your ways? And because of Egypt you will be put to shame, just as you were put to shame because of Assour.

37 Because from here too you will go out, and your hands upon your head, because the Lord rejected your hope, and you will not prosper in it.

Chapter 3

1 If a man sends his wife away, and she departs from him and becomes another man's, will she, returning, still return to him? Will that woman not, being defiled, be defiled? And you prostituted yourself among many shepherds; and were you returning to me? says the Lord.

2 Lift your eyes straight ahead and see; where were you not stained? Upon the ways you sat for them like a deserted crow and defiled the land in your prostitutions and in your wickedness.

3 And you had many shepherds as a stumbling block for yourself; you acquired the appearance of a prostitute; you were utterly shameless toward all.

4 Did you not call me as a house and father and leader of your virginity?

5 Will it remain forever or be preserved for strife? Behold, you spoke and did these evil things and prevailed.

6 And the Lord said to me in the days of Iosias the king, You saw what the dwelling of Israel did to me; they went upon every high mountain and beneath every wooded tree and prostituted themselves there.

7 And I said after she prostituted herself in all these things, Return to me, and she did not return; and faithless Iouda saw her faithlessness.

8 And I saw that, concerning all the things in which the dwelling of Israel was caught committing adultery, I also sent her away and gave her a document of divorce into her hands; and faithless Iouda did not fear and went and prostituted herself too.

9 And her prostitution became nothing, and she committed adultery with the wood and the stone.

10 And in all these things faithless Iouda did not turn to me from her whole heart, but in falsehood.

11 And the Lord said to me, Israel justified his soul in comparison with faithless Iouda.

12 Go and read these words toward the north, and you will say, Turn to me, dwelling of Israel, says the Lord, and I will not set my face against you, because I am merciful, says the Lord, and I will not be wrathful toward you forever.

13 Only know your injustice, because you acted impiously toward the Lord your God and spread your ways to strangers beneath every wooded tree, but you did not obey my voice, says the Lord.

14 Turn back, departed sons, says the Lord, because I will rule over you and take you, one from a city and two from a family, and bring you into Sion,

15 and I will give you shepherds according to my heart, and they will shepherd you, shepherding with knowledge.

16 And it shall be, if you are multiplied and increased upon the earth in those days, says the Lord, they will no longer say, Ark of the covenant of the Holy One of Israel; it will not rise upon the heart, it will not be named or visited and will not be made any longer;

17 in those days and at that time they will call Ierusalem Throne of the Lord, and all the nations will be gathered into her and will no longer go after the thoughts of their evil heart.

18 In those days the house of Iouda will come together to the house of Israel, and they will come together from the land of the north and from all the countries to the land which I gave their fathers to inherit.

19 And I said, May it be, Lord, because I will set you among children and give you a chosen land, an inheritance of God Almighty of nations; and I said, You will call me Father and will not turn away from me.

20 Only, as a woman deals faithlessly with the one living with her, thus the house of Israel dealt faithlessly with me, says the Lord.

21 A voice was heard from lips, of weeping and supplication of sons of Israel, because they did wrong in their ways, forgot their holy God.

22 Turn back, returning sons, and I will heal your fractures. Behold, we will be slaves to you, because you are the Lord our God.

23 Truly the hills and the power of the mountains were for falsehood, but through the Lord our God is the salvation of Israel.

24 But shame consumed the toils of our fathers from our youth, their sheep and their calves and their sons and their daughters.

25 We slept in our shame, and our dishonor covered us, because before our God we sinned, we and our fathers, from our youth until this day, and we did not obey the voice of the Lord our God.

Chapter 4

1 If Israel turns back, says the Lord, he will turn to me; if he removes his abominations from his mouth and is wary before me,

2 and swears, The Lord lives, with truth and in judgment and in righteousness, nations will also bless in her and in him praise God in Ierusalem.

3 Because thus says the Lord to the men of Iouda and those dwelling in Ierusalem, Break up fallow ground for yourselves and do not sow upon thorns.

4 Be circumcised to your God and circumcise your hardness of heart, men of Iouda and those dwelling in Ierusalem, lest my fury come out like fire and blaze up, and there will be no one extinguishing, because of the wickedness of your practices.

5 Announce in Iouda, and let it be heard in Ierusalem; say, Signal upon the earth with a trumpet and cry out greatly; say, Be gathered, and let us enter the walled cities.

6 Taking up, flee to Sion; hasten, do not stand, because I bring evils from the north and great destruction.

7 A lion went up from his lair; one destroying nations set out and came out from his place to make the earth a desolation, and cities will be pulled down so as not to be inhabited.

8 At these things gird yourselves with sackcloth and beat yourselves and raise a cry, because the fury of the Lord did not turn away from you.

9 And it shall be on that day, says the Lord, that the heart of the king and the heart of the rulers will perish, and the priests will be astounded, and the prophets will marvel.

10 And I said, O Master Lord, surely, deceiving, you deceived this people and Ierusalem, saying, There will be peace for you, and behold, the sword reached as far as their soul.

11 At that time they will say to this people and to Ierusalem, A spirit of wandering in the desert; the way of the daughter of my people is not toward what is clean or toward what is holy.

12 A spirit of fullness will come to me; but now I speak judgments to them.

13 Behold, he will go up like a cloud, and his chariots like a tempest; his horses are swifter than eagles; woe to us, because we suffer misery.

14 Wash your heart from wickedness, Ierusalem, so that you may be saved; until when will reasonings of your toils exist in you?

15 Because a voice of one announcing will come from Dan, and toil will be heard from Mount Ephraim.

16 Remind nations, Behold, they have come; announce in Ierusalem, Gathered bands come from a land far away and gave their voice against the cities of Iouda.

17 Like those guarding a field they came against her all around, because you neglected me, says the Lord.

18 Your ways and your practices did these things to you; this is your wickedness, because it is bitter, because it reached as far as your heart.

19 My belly, my belly, I suffer pain, and the organs of my heart; my soul rages, my heart is torn; I will not be silent, because my soul heard a voice of a trumpet, a cry of war.

20 And it calls misery destruction, because all the earth has suffered misery; suddenly the tent has suffered misery; my tent coverings were torn apart.

21 Until when will I see those fleeing, hearing a voice of trumpets?

22 Because those leading my people did not know me; they are senseless sons and not intelligent; they are wise in doing evil, but they did not recognize doing good.

23 I looked upon the earth, and behold, nothing, and toward heaven, and its lights were not there;

24 I saw the mountains, and they were trembling, and all the hills troubled;

25 I looked, and behold, there was no human, and all the birds of heaven were frightened;

26 I saw, and behold, Karmel was desolate, and all the cities burned with fire before the Lord, and before the wrath of his fury they disappeared.

27 Thus says the Lord, All the earth will be desolate, but I will certainly not make an end.

28 At these things let the earth mourn, and let heaven above grow dark, because I spoke and will not repent; I set out and will not turn away from her.

29 From the sound of a horseman and a drawn bow every country withdrew; they slipped into the caves and hid in the groves and went up upon the rocks; every city was abandoned; no human dwells in them.

30 And what will you do, if you put on scarlet and adorn yourself with golden adornment and if you paint your eyes with antimony? Your beautification is in vain; your lovers rejected you; they seek your soul.

31 Because I heard a voice like a woman in labor, of your groaning like one giving birth for the first time, a voice of the daughter of Sion; she will grow weak and let her hands drop, Alas for me, because my soul fails over those killed.

Chapter 5

1 Run around in the ways of Ierusalem and see and know and seek in her squares, if you find a man, if there is one doing judgment and seeking faithfulness, and I will be propitious to them, says the Lord.

2 The Lord lives, they say; do they not therefore swear upon falsehoods?

3 Lord, your eyes are toward faithfulness; you scourged them, and they did not suffer; you made an end of them, and they did not desire to accept discipline; they made their faces harder than rock and did not desire to turn back.

4 And I said, Perhaps they are poor, because they had no strength, because they did not know a way of the Lord and a judgment of God;

5 I will go to the great ones and speak to them, because they recognized a way of the Lord and a judgment of God; and behold, with one accord they shattered a yoke, tore apart bonds.

6 Therefore a lion from the wood struck them, and a wolf as far as the houses destroyed them, and a leopard kept watch against their cities; all those going out from them will be hunted, because they multiplied their impieties, were strong in their turnings away.

7 For which of these shall I become propitious to you? Your sons abandoned me and swore by those who are not gods; and I fed them, and they committed adultery and lodged in houses of prostitutes.

8 They became horses mad for females; each neighed toward his neighbor's wife.

9 Will I not visit for these things? says the Lord; or will my soul not avenge itself upon such a nation?

10 Go up upon her battlements and dig down, but do not make an end; leave her supports, because they are the Lord's.

11 Because, rejecting, the house of Israel and the house of Iouda rejected me, says the Lord.

12 They lied to their own Lord and said, These things are not; evils will not come upon us, and we will not see sword and famine;

13 our prophets were for wind, and a word of the Lord did not exist in them; thus it will be for them.

14 Therefore thus says the Lord Almighty, Because you spoke this utterance, behold, I have made my words in your mouth fire and this people wood, and it will devour them.

15 Behold, I bring a nation upon you from far away, house of Israel, says the Lord, a nation of whose tongue you will not understand the voice;

16 all are strong

17 and will devour your harvest and your bread and devour your sons and your daughters and devour your sheep and your calves and devour your vineyards and your fig orchards and your olive groves; and they will thresh your strong cities in which you have trusted, with a sword.

18 And it shall be in those days, says the Lord your God, I will certainly not make an end of you.

19 And it shall be when you say, For what reason did the Lord our God do all these things to us? And you will say to them, As you served foreign gods in your land, thus you will serve foreigners in a land not yours.

20 Announce these things to the house of Iakob, and let it be heard in Iouda.

21 Hear indeed these things, foolish and heartless people; they have eyes and do not see; they have ears and do not hear.

22 Will you not fear me? says the Lord, or will you not be wary before me? The one who appointed sand as a boundary for the sea, an eternal ordinance, and she will not cross it, and she will be troubled and will not be able, and her waves will sound and she will not cross it.

23 But this people acquired an unhearing and disobedient heart, and they turned aside and departed;

24 and they did not say in their heart, Let us indeed fear the Lord our God who gives us early and late rain at a time of fulfillment of the ordinance of harvest, and he guarded it for us.

25 Your lawless deeds turned these things aside, and your sins removed the good things from you;

26 because impious ones were found among my people, and they set snares to destroy men and were capturing them.

27 Like a set snare full of birds, thus their houses are full of deceit; therefore they grew great and rich;

28 and they transgressed judgment, did not judge an orphan's judgment, and did not judge a widow's judgment.

29 Will I not visit for these things? says the Lord, or will my soul not avenge itself upon such a nation?

30 Astonishment and fearful things happened upon the earth.

31 The prophets prophesy unjust things, and the priests clapped with their hands, and my people loved it thus; and what will you do afterward?

Chapter 6

1 Grow strong, sons of Beniamin, from the midst of Ierusalem, and in Thekoue signal with a trumpet, and above Baithacharma raise a sign, because evils have peered out from the north, and great destruction comes to be,

2 and your height will be taken away, daughter of Sion.

3 Shepherds and their flocks will come into her and pitch tents against her all around, and each will shepherd with his hand.

4 Prepare yourselves against her for war; rise, and let us go up against her at midday; woe to us, because the day has inclined, because the shadows of evening fail.

5 Rise, and let us go up by night and destroy her foundations.

6 Because thus says the Lord, Cut out her trees; pour out a force against Ierusalem; O false city, she is entirely oppression.

7 As a cistern cools water, thus her wickedness cools; impiety and misery will be heard in her before her continually. With toil and scourge

8 you will be disciplined, Ierusalem, lest my soul depart from you, lest I make you an untrodden land which will not be inhabited.

9 Because thus says the Lord, Glean, glean like a vine the remnants of Israel; turn back like the one harvesting toward his basket.

10 To whom shall I speak and testify, and he will hear? Behold, their ears are uncircumcised, and they cannot hear; behold, the utterance of the Lord became a reproach for them; they will certainly not desire to hear it.

11 And I filled my fury and held back and did not make an end of them; I will pour it out upon infants outside and upon a gathering of young men together, because man and woman will be captured, an elder with one full of days;

12 and their houses will be turned over to others, fields and their wives together, because I will stretch my hand against those dwelling in this land, says the Lord.

13 Because from their small one even to the great one all accomplished lawless things; from priest even to false prophet all did false things.

14 And they healed the fracture of my people, treating it as nothing and saying, Peace, peace; and where is peace?

15 They were put to shame, because they failed; and not even thus, being ashamed, were they put to shame, and they did not know their dishonor. Therefore they will fall in their fall and perish at the time of their visitation, said the Lord.

16 Thus says the Lord, Stand upon the ways and see, and ask for the eternal paths of the Lord and see what is the good way, and walk in it, and you will find purification for your souls; and they said, We will not go.

17 I have appointed watchmen over you; hear the voice of the trumpet; and they said, We will not hear.

18 Therefore the nations heard, and those shepherding their flocks.

19 Hear, earth; behold, I bring evils upon this people, the fruit of their turning away, because they did not pay attention to my words and rejected my law.

20 Why do you bring frankincense from Saba to me and cinnamon from a land far away? Your whole burnt offerings are not acceptable, and your sacrifices did not please me.

21 Therefore thus says the Lord, Behold, I give weakness upon this people, and in it fathers and sons together will be weak; a neighbor and the one near him will perish.

22 Thus says the Lord, Behold, a people comes from the north, and nations will be raised from the furthest part of the earth;

23 they will hold bow and spear; it is bold and will not have mercy; its voice is like a surging sea; upon horses and chariots it will form up like fire for war against you, daughter of Sion.

24 We heard their report; our hands were paralyzed; affliction held us, pangs like a woman giving birth.

25 Do not go out into a field and do not walk in the ways, because a sword of the enemies sojourns all around.

26 Daughter of my people, gird yourself with sackcloth, sprinkle yourself with ash, make for yourself mourning for a beloved one, a pitiable beating, because suddenly misery will come upon you.

27 I have given you as an assayer among tested peoples, and you will know me when I test their way;

28 all are unhearing, going crookedly, bronze and iron; all are corrupted.

29 A bellows failed from fire, lead failed; in emptiness a silversmith works silver; their wickedness did not melt.

30 Call them rejected silver, because the Lord rejected them.

2 Hear a word of the Lord, all Ioudaia;

3 thus says the Lord, the God of Israel, Correct your ways and your practices, and I will settle you in this place.

4 Do not trust in yourselves, in false words, because they will not benefit you at all, saying, Temple of the Lord, temple of the Lord it is.

5 Because if, correcting, you correct your ways and your practices and, doing, you do judgment between a man and his neighbor,

6 and do not oppress a proselyte and an orphan and a widow and do not pour out innocent blood in this place and do not go after foreign gods to your harm,

7 I will also settle you in this place, in a land which I gave to your fathers from eternity and until eternity.

8 But if you have trusted in false words from which you will not be benefited,

9 and you murder and commit adultery and steal and swear unjustly and burned incense to Baal and went after foreign gods whom you do not know, so that it may be bad for you,

10 and you came and stood before me in the house upon which my name has been called, and said, We have refrained from not doing all these abominations,

11 is my house upon which my name has been called there a cave of robbers before you? And behold, I too have seen, says the Lord.

12 Because go into my place in Selom, where I made my name dwell formerly, and see what I did to it because of the wickedness of my people Israel.

13 And now, because you did all these works, and I spoke to you and you did not hear me, and I called you and you did not answer,

14 I will also do to this house upon which my name has been called, in which you have trusted, and to the place which I gave to you and to your fathers, just as I did to Selom.

15 And I will cast you away from before me, just as I cast away your brothers, all the seed of Ephraim.

16 And you do not pray concerning this people and do not request that they be shown mercy and do not make supplication and do not approach me concerning them, because I will not hear.

17 Do you not see what they do in the cities of Iouda and in the ways of Ierusalem?

18 Their sons gather wood, and their fathers kindle fire, and their wives knead dough to make chauon cakes for the host of heaven, and they poured libations to foreign gods, so that they may provoke me to anger.

19 Do they provoke me to anger? says the Lord; not themselves, so that their faces may be put to shame?

20 Therefore thus says the Lord, Behold, my wrath and fury pour upon this place and upon the humans and upon the livestock and upon every tree of their field and upon all the produce of the land, and it will burn and not be extinguished.

21 Thus says the Lord, Gather your whole burnt offerings with your sacrifices and eat meat.

22 Because I did not speak to your fathers and did not command them on the day when I brought them up from the land of Egypt concerning whole burnt offerings and sacrifice;

23 but only this utterance I commanded them, saying, Hear my voice, and I will be God for you, and you will be a people for me; and go in all my ways which I command you, so that it may be well for you.

24 And they did not hear me, and their ear did not pay attention, but they went in the thoughts of their evil heart and became backward and not forward.

25 From the day when their fathers came out of the land of Egypt and until this day I also sent away to you all my slaves the prophets by day and at dawn, and I sent,

26 and they did not hear me, and their ear did not pay attention, and they hardened their neck beyond their fathers.

27-28 And you will say this word to them, This is the nation which did not hear the voice of the Lord or accept discipline; faithfulness failed from their mouth.

29 Shear your head and cast it away and take up a lament upon lips, because the Lord rejected and repudiated the generation doing these things.

30 Because the sons of Iouda did evil before me, says the Lord; they placed their abominations in the house upon which my name has been called, to defile it;

31 and they built the altar of Tapheth, which is in the ravine of the son of Ennom, to burn up their sons and their daughters in fire, which I did not command them and did not conceive in my heart.

32 Therefore behold, days come, says the Lord, and they will no longer say, Altar of Tapheth and Ravine of the Son of Ennom, but only Ravine of the Killed, and they will bury in Tapheth because there is no place.

33 And the dead of this people will be food for the birds of heaven and the beasts of the earth, and there will be no one driving them away.

34 And I will abolish from the cities of Iouda and from the passages of Ierusalem a voice of those glad and a voice of those rejoicing, a voice of a bridegroom and a voice of a bride, because all the earth will be for desolation. —

Chapter 8

1 At that time, says the Lord, they will bring out the bones of the kings of Iouda and the bones of its rulers and the bones of the priests and the bones of the prophets and the bones of those dwelling in Ierusalem from their tombs

2 and will cool them toward the sun and the moon and toward all the stars and toward all the army of heaven, which they loved and which they served and after which they went and to which they held fast and which they worshipped; they will not be lamented and will not be buried and will be for an example upon the face of the earth,

3 because they chose death rather than life, and for all the remaining ones left from that generation in every place wherever I drive them out there.

4 For thus says the Lord: Does the one falling not rise? Or does the one turning away not return?

5 Why did this people of mine turn away with a shameless turning away, and were they held fast in their choice and did not wish to return?

6 Give ear now and hear; they will not speak thus; there is no person repenting of his wickedness, saying, What have I done? The runner ceased from his course like a sweating horse in its neighing.

7 And the asida in heaven knew its time; turtledove and swallow, sparrows of the field, kept the times of their entrances, but my people did not know the judgments of the Lord.

8 How will you say, We are wise, and the law of the Lord is with us? In vain a false reed came to be for scribes.

9 Wise ones were put to shame and were terrified and were captured, because they rejected the word of the Lord; what wisdom is in them?

10 Therefore I will give their wives to others and their fields to the heirs,

13 and they will gather their produce, says the Lord; there is no grape on the vines, and there are no figs on the fig trees, and the leaves have fallen.

14 Why are we sitting? Gather together, and let us enter the fortified cities and be cast away, because God cast us away and gave us water of gall to drink, because we sinned before him.

15 We gathered for peace, and there were no good things; for a time of healing, and behold, haste.

16 From Dan we will hear the sound of the sharpness of his horses; from the sound of the neighing of the riding of his horses all the earth was shaken; and he will come and devour the earth and its fullness, a city and those dwelling in it.

17 For behold, I am sending out among you snakes that kill, which cannot be charmed, and they will bite you.

18 Incurable things with pain of your heart being at a loss.

19 Behold, a sound of the cry of the daughter of my people from a land far away: Is the Lord not in Sion? Or is there no king there? Why did they provoke me with their carved images and with foreign vanities?

20 Summer passed through, harvest passed by, and we were not saved.

21 At the crushing of the daughter of my people I was darkened; in perplexity pangs overpowered me like those of a woman giving birth.

22 Is there no resin in Galaad, or is there no physician there? Why did healing of the daughter of my people not arise?

23 Who will give water to my head and a fountain of tears to my eyes, and I will weep for this people of mine day and night, the wounded of the daughter of my people? —

Chapter 9

1 Who might give me a remotest lodging in the wilderness, and I will leave my people and go away from them? Because all commit adultery, an assembly of those breaking faith.

2 And they stretched their tongue like a bow; falsehood and not faithfulness prevailed upon the earth, because they went out from evils to evils and did not know me.

3 Each of you guard yourselves against his neighbor, and do not trust in their brothers, because every brother will trip with the heel, and every friend will walk deceitfully.

4 Each will mock his friend; they will certainly not speak truth; their tongue has learned to speak false things; they acted unjustly and did not cease to turn back.

5 Interest upon interest, deceit upon deceit; they did not wish to know me.

6 Therefore thus says the Lord: Behold, I will refine them by fire and test them, because I will act on account of the wickedness of the daughter of my people.

7 Their tongue is a dart that wounds; the words of their mouth are deceitful; he speaks peaceful things to his neighbor and has hostility within himself.

8 Will I not visit for these things, says the Lord, or will my soul not exact vengeance on such a people?

9 Take up lamentation over the mountains and mourning over the paths of the wilderness, because they failed for lack of people; they did not hear a sound of possessions; from birds of heaven even to cattle they departed, they went away.

10 And I will give Ierusalem over to removal and to a dwelling place of dragons, and I will make the cities of Iouda a disappearance, so that they are not inhabited.

11 Who is the understanding person? And let him understand this, and the one to whom the word of the mouth of the Lord comes, let him announce to you: On account of what was the land destroyed, kindled like a wilderness, so that it is not traversed?

12 And the Lord said to me: Because they forsook my law, which I gave before their face, and did not hear my voice,

13 but went after the things pleasing to their evil heart and after the idols which their fathers taught them,

14 therefore thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Behold, I will feed them constraints and give them water of gall to drink

15 and scatter them among the nations which they and their fathers did not know, and I will send the sword after them until I consume them with it.

16 Thus says the Lord: Call the mourning women, and let them come, and send to the wise women, and let them utter a sound 17 and take up a mourning over you, and let your eyes bring down tears, and let your eyelids flow with water.

18 Because a sound of lament was heard in Sion: How we suffered misery, we were put greatly to shame, because we forsook the land and cast away our dwellings.

19 Hear now, women, a word of God, and let your ears receive words of his mouth, and teach your daughters lament, and each woman her neighbor mourning.

20 Because death went up through your windows, entered your land to wipe out infants outside and young men from the broad streets.

21 And the dead of the people will be for an example upon the face of the plain of your land and like grass behind a reaper, and there will be no one gathering.

22 Thus says the Lord: Let the wise one not boast in his wisdom, and let the strong one not boast in his strength, and let the rich one not boast in his wealth,

23 but let the one boasting boast in this: to understand and know that I am the Lord doing mercy and judgment and righteousness upon the earth, because in these is my will, says the Lord.

24 Behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and I will visit upon all those circumcised in their foreskins,

25 upon Egypt and upon Ioudaia and upon Edom and upon the sons of Ammon and upon the sons of Moab and upon everyone clipping the parts about his face, those dwelling in the wilderness; because all the nations are uncircumcised in flesh, and all the house of Israel are uncircumcised in their hearts.

Chapter 10

1 Hear the word of the Lord which he spoke concerning you, house of Israel;

2 thus says the Lord: Do not learn according to the ways of the nations, and do not fear the signs of heaven, because they fear them in their faces.

3 Because the customs of the nations are vain; it is wood cut out of the forest, a carpenter's work and a casting;

4 they are adorned with silver and gold; with hammers and nails they secured them, and they will not move;

9 it is worked silver; they will not walk; applied silver will come from Tharsis, gold of Mophaz and the hand of goldsmiths, all works of craftsmen; they will clothe them in blue and purple;

5 being lifted they will be carried, because they will not step. Do not fear them, because they will certainly not do harm, and there is no good in them.

11 Thus you will say to them: Gods who did not make heaven and earth, let them perish from the earth and from beneath this heaven.

12 The Lord who made the earth in his strength, who set upright the inhabited world in his wisdom, and in his understanding stretched out heaven

13 and an abundance of water in heaven, and brought up clouds from the end of the earth, made lightning for rain and brought out light from his treasuries.

14 Every person became foolish away from knowledge; every goldsmith was put to shame over his carved images, because they cast false things; there is no spirit in them;

15 they are vain, works made a mockery of; at the time of their visitation they will perish.

16 Such is not the portion for Iakob, because he who formed all things is himself his inheritance; the Lord is his name.

17 He gathered your substance from outside, you dwelling among chosen ones.

18 Because thus says the Lord: Behold, I am tripping those dwelling in this land in affliction, so that your wound may be found;

19 woe over your crushing; your wound is painful. And I said, Truly this is my injury, and it overtook me;

20 my tent suffered misery, perished, and all my skins were torn apart; my sons and my sheep are no more; there is no longer a place for my tent, a place for my skins.

21 Because the shepherds acted foolishly and did not seek out the Lord; therefore all the pasture did not understand, and they were scattered.

22 A sound of a report, behold, is coming, and a great shaking from the land of the north, to make the cities of Iouda a disappearance and a bed of sparrows.

23 I know, Lord, that a person's way is not his own, nor will a man walk and direct his course rightly.

24 Discipline us, Lord, only with judgment and not with wrath, so that you do not make us few.

25 Pour out your wrath upon nations that do not know you and upon generations that did not call upon your name, because they devoured Iakob and consumed him and desolated his pasture.

Chapter 11

1 The word that came from the Lord to Ieremias, saying,

2 Hear the words of this covenant. And you will speak to the men of Iouda and to those dwelling in Ierusalem;

3 and you will say to them: Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Cursed is the person who will not hear the words of this covenant,

4 which I commanded your fathers on the day on which I brought them up from the land of Egypt, from the iron furnace, saying, Hear my voice and do everything that I command you, and you will be a people for me, and I will be a God for you,

5 so that I may establish my oath which I swore to your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as this day. And I answered and said, May it be, Lord.

6 And the Lord said to me: Read these words in the cities of Iouda and outside Ierusalem, saying, Hear the words of this covenant and do them.

8 And they did not do them.

9 And the Lord said to me: A conspiracy was found among the men of Iouda and among those dwelling in Ierusalem;

10 they returned to the injustices of their former fathers, who did not wish to listen to my words, and behold, they walk after foreign gods to serve them, and the house of Israel and the house of Iouda broke apart my covenant which I made with their fathers.

11 Therefore thus says the Lord: Behold, I am bringing upon this people evils from which they will not be able to come out, and they will cry to me, and I will not listen to them.

12 And the cities of Iouda and those dwelling in Ierusalem will go and cry to the gods to whom they burn incense; will they save them at the time of their evils?

13 Because according to the number of your cities were your gods, Iouda, and according to the number of the exits of Ierusalem you arranged altars to burn incense to Baal.

14 And you, do not pray concerning this people and do not petition for them in supplication and prayer, because I will not listen at the time at which they call upon me, at the time of their mistreatment.

15 Why did the beloved woman in my house do an abomination? Will vows and holy meats remove your wickednesses from you, or will you escape by these?

16 The Lord called your name a beautiful olive tree, well shaded in appearance; at the sound of its cutting fire was kindled upon it; great is the affliction upon you; its branches were made useless.

17 And the Lord who planted you spoke evils against you in return for the wickedness of the house of Israel and the house of Iouda, because they acted for themselves to provoke me by their burning incense to Baal.

18 Lord, make known to me, and I will know; then I saw their practices.

19 But I, like an innocent lamb being led to be sacrificed, did not know; against me they devised an evil design, saying, Come, and let us put wood into his bread and wipe him out from the land of the living, and his name will certainly not be remembered any longer.

20 Lord, judging just things, testing kidneys and hearts, may I see the vengeance from you upon them, because to you I revealed my just claim.

21 Therefore thus says the Lord concerning the men of Anathoth seeking my life, saying, You shall certainly not prophesy in the name of the Lord; otherwise you will die in our hands.

22 Behold, I will visit upon them; their young men will die by the sword, and their sons and their daughters will end in famine,

23 and there will be no remnant of them, because I will bring evils upon those dwelling in Anathoth in the year of their visitation.

Chapter 12

1 You are righteous, Lord, when I make my defense to you; nevertheless I will speak judgments to you: Why does the way of the impious prosper? Why did all those breaking faith with breaches of faith flourish?

2 You planted them, and they took root, they produced children and made fruit; you are near their mouth and far from their kidneys.

3 And you, Lord, know me; you have tested my heart before you; consecrate them for the day of their slaughter.

4 Until when will the land mourn and all the grass of the field dry up because of the wickedness of those dwelling in it? Cattle and birds disappeared, because they said, God will not see our ways.

5 Your feet run and exhaust you; how will you prepare yourself against horses? And in a land of peace you have trusted; how will you act in the raging of the Iordan?

6 Because even your brothers and the house of your father, even these rejected you, and they cried out, from behind you they gathered together; do not trust in them, because they will speak good things to you.

7 I have forsaken my house, left my inheritance, given my beloved soul into the hands of her enemies.

8 My inheritance became to me like a lion in a forest; she raised her voice against me; therefore I hated her.

9 Is my inheritance to me a hyena's cave, or a cave around her? Go, gather all the wild beasts of the field, and let them come to eat her.

10 Many shepherds destroyed my vineyard, defiled my portion, made my desirable portion an impassable wilderness;

11 it was made a disappearance of destruction; because of me all the land disappeared with disappearance, because there is no man laying it in his heart.

12 Upon every passage in the wilderness came those causing misery, because the sword of the Lord will devour from the end of the earth to the end of the earth; there is no peace for any flesh.

13 Sow wheat and reap thorns; their allotments will not benefit them; be ashamed of your boasting, of reproach before the Lord.

14 For thus says the Lord concerning all the evil neighbors who touch my inheritance which I apportioned to my people Israel: Behold, I tear them away from their land, and I will cast Iouda out from their midst.

15 And it will be after I cast them out, I will return and have mercy on them and settle them, each in his inheritance and each in his land.

16 And it will be, if learning they learn the way of my people, to swear by my name, The Lord lives, as they taught my people to swear by Baal, they also will be built up in the midst of my people;

17 but if they do not return, I will also remove that nation with removal and destruction.

Chapter 13

1 Thus says the Lord: Go and acquire for yourself a linen loincloth and put it around your waist, and it will not pass through water.

2 And I acquired the loincloth according to the word of the Lord and put it around my waist.

3 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying,

4 Take the loincloth around your waist and rise and go to the Euphrates and hide it there in the hole of the rock.

5 And I went and hid it at the Euphrates, as the Lord commanded me.

6 And it happened after many days, and the Lord said to me: Rise, go to the Euphrates and take from there the loincloth which I commanded you to hide there.

7 And I went to the Euphrates river and dug and took the loincloth from the place where I buried it there, and behold, it was ruined, which will certainly not be used for anything.

8 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying,

9 Thus says the Lord: Thus I will ruin the arrogance of Iouda and the arrogance of Ierusalem,

10 this great arrogance, those not willing to obey my words and who went after foreign gods to serve them and to worship them, and they will be like this loincloth, which will not be used for anything.

11 Because just as the loincloth clings around a person's waist, thus I caused the house of Israel and all the house of Iouda to cling to myself, to become for me a renowned people and a boast and a glory, and they did not listen to me.

12 And you will say to this people: Every skin will be filled with wine. And it will be, if they say to you, Shall we not surely know that every skin will be filled with wine?

13 And you will say to them: Thus says the Lord: Behold, I am filling those dwelling in this land and their kings, the sons of David sitting upon his throne, and the priests and the prophets and Iouda and all those dwelling in Ierusalem with drunkenness

14 and will scatter them, a man and his brother and their fathers and their sons together; I will not yearn, says the Lord, and will not spare and will not pity them so as to refrain from their destruction.

15 Hear and give ear and do not exalt yourselves, because the Lord spoke.

16 Give glory to the Lord your God before it becomes dark and before your feet stumble upon dark mountains, and you will wait for light, and there is a shadow of death, and they will be put into darkness.

17 But if you do not hear, your soul will weep secretly because of arrogance, and your eyes will bring down tears, because the flock of the Lord was crushed.

18 Say to the king and those ruling: Be humbled and sit down, because the crown of your glory was taken down from your head.

19 The cities toward the south were shut up, and there was no one opening; Ioudas was deported; he completed a complete deportation.

20 Lift up your eyes, Ierusalem, and see those coming from the north; where is the flock which was given to you, the sheep of your glory?

21 What will you say when they visit you? And you taught them lessons against yourself for rule; will not pangs hold you fast as a woman giving birth?

22 And if you say in your heart, Why did these things meet me? Because of the abundance of your injustice your hind parts were uncovered, for your heels to be exposed as an example.

23 If an Ethiopian will change his skin and a leopard her markings, you also will be able to do well, having learned evil things.

24 And I scattered them like brushwood carried by wind into a wilderness.

25 This is your lot and a portion for your disobeying me, says the Lord, because you forgot me and hoped in falsehoods.

26 And I will uncover your hind parts upon your face, and your dishonor will be seen.

27 And your adultery and your neighing and the estrangement of your prostitution, upon the hills and in the fields I have seen your abominations; woe to you, Ierusalem, because you were not cleansed after me; until when still?

Chapter 14

1 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias concerning the lack of rain:

2 Ioudaia mourned, and her gates were emptied and darkened upon the earth, and the cry of Ierusalem went up.

3 And her great ones sent their younger ones for water; they came to the wells and did not find water and brought back their vessels empty.

4 And the works of the earth failed, because there was no rain; farmers were put to shame, covered their head.

5 And deer in the field gave birth and abandoned, because there was no vegetation.

6 Wild asses stood upon wooded valleys; they drew in wind; their eyes failed, because there was no grass on account of a people of injustice. —

7 If our sins stood against us, Lord, act for us for your sake, because our sins before you are many, because we sinned against you.

8 Endurance of Israel, Lord, and you save in a time of evils; why did you become like a sojourner upon the earth and like a native turning aside into a lodging?

9 Will you be like a person sleeping or like a man unable to save? And you are among us, Lord, and your name has been called upon us; do not forget us. —

10 Thus says the Lord to this people: They loved to move their feet and did not restrain them, and God was not pleased with them; now he will remember their injustices.

11 And the Lord said to me: Do not pray concerning this people for good things;

12 because if they fast, I will not listen to their supplication, and if they offer whole burnt offerings and sacrifices, I will not be pleased with them, because by sword and by famine and by death I will bring them to an end.

13 And I said: O Lord, behold, their prophets prophesy and say, You will not see a sword, nor will famine be among you, because I will give truth and peace upon the earth and in this place.

14 And the Lord said to me: The prophets prophesy false things in my name; I did not send them and did not command them and did not speak to them; because false visions and divinations and omens and choices of their heart they themselves prophesy to you.

15 Therefore thus says the Lord concerning the prophets prophesying false things in my name, and I did not send them, who say, Sword and famine will not be upon this land: By diseased death they will die, and by famine the prophets will be brought to an end;

16 and the people to whom they prophesy, they also will be cast in the passageways of Ierusalem because of sword and famine, and there will be no one burying them, and their wives and their sons and their daughters; and I will pour their evils upon them.

17 And you will say this word to them: Bring down tears upon your eyes day and night, and let them not cease, because with crushing the daughter of my people was crushed and with an exceedingly painful wound.

18 If I go out into the plain, then behold, wounded ones of the sword, and if I enter the city, then behold, suffering of famine; because priest and prophet went to a land which they did not know. —

19 Did you utterly reject Iouda, and did your soul withdraw from Sion? Why did you strike us, and there is no healing for us? We waited for peace, and there were no good things; for a time of healing, and behold, disturbance.

20 We knew, Lord, our sins, the injustices of our fathers, because we sinned before you.

21 Cease for your name's sake; do not destroy the throne of your glory; remember, do not break apart your covenant with us.

22 Is there among the idols of the nations one making rain? And will heaven give its fullness? Are you not he? And we will wait for you, because you made all these things.

Chapter 15

1 And the Lord said to me: If Moyses and Samouel stand before my face, my soul is not toward them; send out this people, and let them go out.

2 And it will be, if they say to you, Where will we go out? You will say to them: Thus says the Lord: Those for death, to death; and those for sword, to sword; and those for famine, to famine; and those for captivity, to captivity.

3 And I will exact vengeance upon them with four kinds, says the Lord: the sword for slaughter and the dogs for tearing apart and the wild beasts of the earth and the birds of heaven for eating and for destruction.

4 And I will hand them over to constraints for all the kingdoms of the earth because of Manasse, son of Ezekias, king of Iouda, concerning all that he did in Ierusalem.

5 Who will spare you, Ierusalem? And who will be fearful over you? Or who will turn back for peace for you?

6 You turned away from me, says the Lord; you will go backward, and I will stretch out my hand and destroy you, and I will no longer let them go.

7 And I will scatter them in a scattering; at the gates of my people they were bereaved of children; they destroyed my people because of their wickednesses.

8 Their widows were multiplied beyond the sand of the sea; I brought misery upon the mother of a young man at midday; I cast upon her suddenly trembling and haste.

9 She who gave birth to seven was emptied; her soul grew faint; her sun set while the day was still at its middle; she was put to shame and reproached; their remaining ones I will give to the sword before their enemies.

10 Alas for me, mother, as what did you bear me? A man judged and disputed with by all the earth; neither did I benefit, nor did anyone benefit me; my strength failed among those cursing me.

11 May it be, Master, as they direct their course, if I did not stand by you in the time of their evils and in the time of their affliction for good things toward the enemy. —

12 Will iron be known? And a bronze covering

13 is your strength. And your treasuries I will give as plunder, an exchange for all your sins and in all your borders.

14 And I will enslave you to your enemies around you in the land which you did not know; because fire has been kindled from my wrath; upon you it will burn.

15 Lord, remember me and visit me and acquit me from those pursuing me, not unto longsuffering; know how I received reproach concerning you

16 from those rejecting your words; bring them to an end, and your word will be for me gladness and joy of my heart, because your name has been called upon me, Lord Almighty.

17 I did not sit in their assembly as they played, but was reverent before your hand; I sat alone, because I was filled with bitterness.

18 Why do those grieving me overpower me? My wound is firm; from where will I be healed? Coming to be, it became to me like false water having no faithfulness. —

19 Therefore thus says the Lord: If you return, I will also restore you, and you will stand before my face; and if you bring out what is precious from what is unworthy, you will be as my mouth; and they will turn back to you, and you will not turn back to them.

20 And I will make you for this people like a fortified bronze wall, and they will fight against you and will certainly not prevail against you, because I am with you to save you

21 and to deliver you from the hand of evil ones, and I will redeem you from the hand of pestilent ones.

Chapter 16

1 And you shall not take a wife, says the Lord, the God of Israel,

2 and no son or daughter will be born to you in this place.

3 Because thus says the Lord concerning the sons and concerning the daughters born in this place and concerning their mothers who bore them and concerning their fathers who begot them in this land:

4 By diseased death they will die; they will not be lamented and will not be buried; they will be for an example upon the face of the earth and for the wild beasts of the earth and for the birds of heaven; by sword they will fall and by famine they will be brought to an end.

5 Thus says the Lord: Do not enter their gathering and do not go to lament and do not mourn them, because I have withdrawn my peace from this people.

6 They will certainly not lament them, nor will they make incisions, and they will not shave,

7 and bread will certainly not be broken in their mourning for consolation over one who has died; they will not give him a cup to drink for consolation over his father and mother.

8 You will not enter a house of drinking to sit together with them to eat and drink.

9 For thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Behold, I am abolishing from this place before your eyes and in your days a voice of joy and a voice of gladness, a voice of bridegroom and a voice of bride.

10 And it will be, when you announce to this people all these words, and they say to you, Why did the Lord speak all these evils against us? What is our injustice? And what is our sin which we sinned before the Lord our God?

11 And you will say to them: Because your fathers forsook me, says the Lord, and went away after foreign gods and served them and worshipped them and forsook me and did not keep my law,

12 and you acted more wickedly than your fathers, and behold, you go, each after the things pleasing to your evil heart, so as not to obey me,

13 and I will cast you away from this land into the land which you and your fathers did not know, and there you will serve other gods who will not give you mercy.

14 Therefore behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and they will no longer say, The Lord lives, who brought up the sons of Israel from the land of Egypt,

15 but, The Lord lives, who brought up the house of Israel from the land of the north and from all the regions where they were driven out there; and I will restore them to their land which I gave to their fathers. —

16 Behold, I am sending the many fishers, says the Lord, and they will fish for them; and after these things I will send the many hunters, and they will hunt them upon every mountain and upon every hill and out of the holes of the rocks.

17 Because my eyes are upon all their ways, and their unjust deeds were not hidden from before my eyes.

18 And I will repay their injustices and their sins double, for which they profaned my land with the carcasses of their abominations and with their lawless deeds, by which they offended against my inheritance. —

19 Lord, my strength and my help and my refuge in a day of evils, nations will come to you from the end of the earth and say, How our fathers acquired false idols, and there is no benefit in them.

20 Will a person make gods for himself? And these are not gods.

21 Therefore behold, I will show them my hand at this time and make known my power to them, and they will know that my name is the Lord.

5 Cursed is the person who has his hope in a person and will support the flesh of his arm upon him, and his heart departs from the Lord;

6 and he will be like the wild tamarisk in the wilderness; he will not see when good things come, and will dwell among salt plants and in a wilderness, in a salty land which is not inhabited.

7 And blessed is the person who has trusted in the Lord, and the Lord will be his hope;

8 and he will be like a tree flourishing beside waters and will cast its roots into moisture and will not fear when heat comes, and upon it will be leafy trunks; in a year without rain it will not fear and will not cease making fruit. —

9 The heart is deep beyond all things, and he is a person; and who will know him?

10 I am the Lord examining hearts and testing kidneys, to give each according to his ways and according to the fruits of his practices. —

11 A partridge called, gathered what she did not bear; making his wealth not with judgment, in the middle of his days they will leave him, and at his end he will be foolish.

12 A throne of glory exalted is our sanctuary,

13 endurance of Israel, Lord; let all those who left you be put to shame; let those who have departed be written upon the earth, because they forsook the fountain of life, the Lord. —

14 Heal me, Lord, and I will be healed; save me, and I will be saved; because you are my boast.

15 Behold, they say to me, Where is the word of the Lord? Let it come.

16 But I did not weary in following after you, and I did not desire a person's day; you know; the things coming out through my lips are before your face.

17 Do not become an estrangement for me, sparing me in an evil day.

18 Let those pursuing me be put to shame, and may I not be put to shame; may they be terrified, and may I not be terrified; bring an evil day upon them; crush them with a double crushing.

19 Thus says the Lord: Go and stand in the gates of the sons of your people, through which the kings of Iouda enter and through which they go out, and in all the gates of Ierusalem,

20 and you will say to them: Hear a word of the Lord, kings of Iouda and all Ioudaia and all Ierusalem, those entering through these gates;

21 thus says the Lord: Guard your souls and do not lift burdens on the day of the sabbaths and do not go out through the gates of Ierusalem

22 and do not bring out burdens from your houses on the day of the sabbaths, and you shall not do any work; sanctify the day of the sabbaths, as I commanded your fathers. And they did not hear and did not incline their ear

23 and hardened their neck beyond their fathers, so as not to hear me and not to receive discipline.

24 And it will be, if you surely hear me, says the Lord, so as not to bring burdens through the gates of this city on the day of the sabbaths and to sanctify the day of the sabbaths so as not to do any work,

25 then kings and rulers sitting upon the throne of David and riding upon their chariots and horses will enter through the gates of this city, they and their rulers, men of Iouda and those dwelling in Ierusalem, and this city will be inhabited forever.

26 And they will come from the cities of Iouda and from around Ierusalem and from the land of Beniamin and from the plain and from the mountain and from the region toward the south, bringing whole burnt offerings and sacrifice and incense and manaa and frankincense, bringing praise into the house of the Lord.

27 And it will be, if you do not listen to me to sanctify the day of the sabbaths, so as not to lift burdens and not to enter through the gates of Ierusalem on the day of the sabbaths, I will also kindle a fire in her gates, and it will devour the quarters of Ierusalem and will not be extinguished.

Chapter 18

1 The word that came from the Lord to Ieremias, saying,

2 Rise and go down to the potter's house, and there you will hear my words.

3 And I went down to the potter's house, and behold, he was doing work upon the stones;

4 and the vessel which he was making fell apart in his hands, and again he made it another vessel, as it pleased him to make.

5 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying,

6 Will I not be able to make you as this potter does, house of Israel? Behold, like the potter's clay you are in my hands.

7 At a moment I will speak concerning a nation or concerning a kingdom to remove them and to destroy,

8 and that nation turns from all their evils, then I will change my mind concerning the evils which I planned to do to them;

9 and at a moment I will speak concerning a nation and concerning a kingdom to be built up and to be planted,

10 and they do evil things before me, so as not to hear my voice, then I will change my mind concerning the good things which I spoke of doing to them.

11 And now say to the men of Iouda and to those dwelling in Ierusalem: Behold, I am forming evils against you and devising a design against you; let each now turn from his evil way, and you will make your practices better.

12 And they said, We will act boldly, because we will go after our turnings away and each of us will do the things pleasing to his evil heart.

13 Therefore thus says the Lord: Ask now among nations: Who heard such dreadful things as the virgin Israel did exceedingly?

14 Will breasts cease from a rock, or snow from Libanos? Will water turn aside, carried violently by wind?

15 Because my people forgot me, burned incense in vain; and they will weaken in their ways, ancient measured courses, to step onto paths having no road for travel,

16 to make their land a disappearance and an everlasting hissing; all those passing through it will be astonished and will shake their head.

17 Like a scorching wind I will scatter them before their enemies; I will show them the day of their destruction.

18 And they said, Come, let us devise a design against Ieremias, because law will not perish from a priest and counsel from an understanding one and word from a prophet; come, and let us strike him with a tongue, and we will hear all his words. —

19 Listen to me, Lord, and listen to the voice of my just claim.

20 Are evils repaid in return for good things? Because they spoke words together against my soul and hid their punishment for me; remember my standing before your face to speak good things on their behalf, to turn your wrath away from them.

21 Therefore give their sons to famine and gather them into the hands of the sword; let their wives become childless and widows, and let their men become slain by death and their young men fallen by sword in war.

22 Let a cry arise in their houses; you will bring robbers upon them suddenly, because they undertook a plan for my capture and hid traps against me.

23 And you, Lord, knew all their counsel against me for death; do not acquit their injustices, and do not wipe out their sins from before your face; let their weakness be before you; at the time of your wrath act among them.

Chapter 19

1 Then the Lord said to me: Go and acquire a molded earthenware jar, and you will bring some of the elders of the people and some of the elders of the priests

2 and go out to the burial ground of the sons of their children, which is at the entrance of the charsith gate, and read there all the words which I speak to you,

3 and you will say to them: Hear the word of the Lord, kings of Iouda and men of Iouda and those dwelling in Ierusalem and those entering through these gates: Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Behold, I am bringing evils upon this place, so that both ears of everyone hearing them will ring,

4 because they forsook me and estranged this place and burned incense in it to foreign gods which they and their fathers did not know, and the kings of Iouda filled this place with innocent blood

5 and built high places for Baal to burn up their sons in fire, things which I did not command or speak or think in my heart.

6 Therefore behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and this place will no longer be called Falling and Burial Ground of the Son of Ennom, but rather Burial Ground of Slaughter.

7 And I will slaughter the counsel of Iouda and the counsel of Ierusalem in this place and cast them down by sword before their enemies and into the hands of those seeking their lives, and I will give their dead as food to the birds of heaven and to the wild beasts of the earth.

8 And I will make this city a disappearance and a hissing; everyone passing by it will become gloomy and hiss over all its wound.

9 And they will eat the flesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters, and each will eat the flesh of his neighbor in the enclosure and in the siege with which their enemies will besiege them.

10 And you will crush the jar before the eyes of the men going out with you

11 and say: Thus says the Lord: Thus I will crush this people and this city, as an earthenware vessel is crushed, which will no longer be able to be healed.

12 Thus I will do, says the Lord, to this place and to those dwelling in it, to make this city like the falling one.

13 And the houses of Ierusalem and the houses of the kings of Iouda will be like the place falling with the uncleannesses in all the houses in which they burned incense upon their roofs to all the army of heaven and poured libations to foreign gods. —

14 And Ieremias came from the falling place where the Lord sent him there to prophesy, and stood in the courtyard of the house of the Lord and said to all the people:

15 Thus says the Lord: Behold, I am bringing upon this city and upon all its cities and upon its villages all the evils which I spoke against it, because they hardened their neck so as not to listen to my words.

Chapter 20

1 And Paschor, son of Emmer, the priest, heard Ieremias prophesying these words, and this man was appointed leader of the house of the Lord.

2 And he struck him and put him into the confinement which was at the gate of the assigned house of the upper room, which was in the house of the Lord.

3 And Paschor brought Ieremias out of the confinement, and Ieremias said to him: The Lord did not call your name Paschor, but rather Migrant;

4 for thus says the Lord: Behold, I am giving you over to migration with all your friends, and they will fall by the sword of their enemies, and your eyes will see, and I will give you and all Iouda into the hands of the king of Babylon, and they will deport them and cut them down with swords;

5 and I will give all the strength of this city and all its labors and all the treasuries of the king of Iouda into the hands of his enemies, and they will bring them to Babylon.

6 And you and all those dwelling in your house will go into captivity, and in Babylon you will die and there you will be buried, you and all your friends to whom you prophesied false things.

7 You deceived me, Lord, and I was deceived; you prevailed and were strong; I became an object of laughter, all day I continued being mocked;

8 because with my bitter word I will be laughed at, I will call out breach of faith and misery, because the word of the Lord became a reproach to me and a mockery all my day.

9 And I said, I will certainly not name the name of the Lord and will certainly not speak any longer in his name; and it became like burning fire blazing in my bones, and I am exhausted on every side and cannot bear it.

10 Because I heard the reproach of many gathering together all around: Rise against him, and let us rise against him, all men his friends; watch his intention, whether he will be deceived and we will prevail against him and take our vengeance upon him.

11 And the Lord is with me like a strong warrior; therefore they pursued and could not understand; they were put greatly to shame, because they did not understand their dishonors, which will not be forgotten forever.

12 Lord, testing just things, understanding kidneys and hearts, may I see the vengeance from you among them, because to you I revealed my defenses. —

13 Sing to the Lord, praise him, because he delivered the soul of a poor person from the hand of those acting wickedly. —

14 Cursed is the day on which I was born; the day on which my mother bore me, let it not be wished for.

15 Cursed is the person who announced good news to my father, saying, A male was born to you, making him glad.

16 Let that person be like the cities which the Lord overturned in wrath and did not regret; let him hear a cry in the morning and a shout at midday,

17 because he did not kill me in my mother's womb, and my mother became my grave for me, and the womb one of everlasting conception.

18 Why was it that I came out of the womb to see toils and sufferings, and my days continued in shame?

Chapter 21

1 The word that came from the Lord to Ieremias when King Sedekias sent to him Paschor, son of Melchias, and Sophonias, son of Maasaias, the priest, saying,

2 Inquire of the Lord concerning us, because the king of Babylon has come against us, whether the Lord will act according to all his wonders, and he will go away from us.

3 And Ieremias said to them: Thus you will say to Sedekias, king of Iouda:

4 Thus says the Lord: Behold, I am turning the weapons of war with which you fight against the Chaldeans who have enclosed you outside the wall into the middle of this city,

5 and I myself will fight you with an outstretched hand and with a mighty arm, with wrath and anger and great provocation,

6 and I will strike all those dwelling in this city, the people and the cattle, with a great death, and they will die.

7 And after these things — thus says the Lord — I will give Sedekias, king of Iouda, and his servants and the people left in this city from death and from famine and from sword into the hands of their enemies seeking their lives, and they will cut them down with the edge of the sword; I will not spare them and will certainly not pity them.

8 And to this people you will say: Thus says the Lord: Behold, I have given before your face the way of life and the way of death;

9 the one remaining in this city will die by sword and by famine, and the one going out to go over to the Chaldeans who have enclosed you will live, and his soul will be as spoils, and he will live.

10 Because I have set my face upon this city for evils and not for good things; it will be handed over into the hands of the king of Babylon, and he will burn it up with fire. —

11 House of the king of Iouda, hear a word of the Lord;

12 house of David, thus says the Lord: Judge a judgment in the morning and direct rightly and deliver one plundered from the hand of the one wronging him, so that my anger is not kindled like fire and burns, and there will be no one extinguishing it.

13 Behold, I am against you dwelling in the valley of Sor, the plain, those saying, Who will terrify us? Or who will enter into our dwelling place?

14 And I will kindle a fire in her forest, and it will eat everything around her.

Chapter 22

1 Thus says the Lord: Go and descend to the house of the king of Iouda, and you will speak this word there

2 and say: Hear a word of the Lord, king of Iouda sitting upon the throne of David, you and your house and your people and those entering through these gates:

3 Thus says the Lord: Do judgment and righteousness and deliver one plundered from the hand of the one wronging him, and do not oppress a newcomer and an orphan and a widow, and do not act impiously, and do not pour out innocent blood in this place.

4 For if you surely do this word, kings sitting upon the throne of David and riding upon chariots and horses will also enter through the gates of this house, they and their servants and their people;

5 but if you do not do these words, by myself I swore, says the Lord, that this house will be for desolation.

6 Because thus says the Lord against the house of the king of Iouda: You are Galaad to me, the summit of Libanos; surely I will make you a wilderness, cities that will not be inhabited;

7 and I will bring upon you a man destroying and his axe, and they will cut down your chosen cedars and throw them into the fire.

8 And nations will pass through this city and say, each to his neighbor, Why did the Lord do thus to this great city?

9 And they will say, Because they forsook the covenant of the Lord their God and worshipped foreign gods and served them.

10 Do not weep for the dead one or mourn him; weep with weeping for the one going out, because he will not return any longer and will certainly not see the land of his homeland.

11 For thus says the Lord concerning Sellem, son of Iosias, reigning instead of Iosias his father, who went out from this place: He will not return there any longer,

12 but in the place where I deported him, there he will die and will not see this land any longer.

13 O the one building his house not with righteousness and his upper rooms not with judgment, he employs his neighbor without payment and will certainly not pay him his wage.

14 You built for yourself a well-proportioned house, airy upper rooms divided by windows and paneled in cedar and painted with vermilion.

15 Will you reign, because you are provoked with Achaz your father? They will not eat and will not drink; it was better for you to do judgment and good righteousness.

16 They did not know, did not judge a judgment for a lowly one or a judgment of a poor one; is this not your not knowing me? says the Lord.

17 Behold, your eyes are not good, nor is your heart, but toward your greed and toward innocent blood to pour it out and toward injustice and toward murder to do them.

18 Therefore thus says the Lord concerning Ioakim, son of Iosias, king of Iouda: Woe upon this man; they will certainly not lament him, O brother, nor will they weep for him, Alas, lord.

19 With an ass's burial he will be buried; dragged together, he will be thrown beyond the gate of Ierusalem.

20 Go up to Libanos and cry out, and in Basan raise your voice, and shout to the other side of the sea, because all your lovers were crushed.

21 I spoke to you in your transgression, and you said, I will not hear; this is your way from your youth; you did not hear my voice.

22 Wind will shepherd all your shepherds, and your lovers will go out into captivity; because then you will be ashamed and dishonored by all those loving you.

23 You dwelling in Libanos, nesting in the cedars, will groan when pangs come to you as to a woman giving birth.

24 I live, says the Lord; even if Iechonias, son of Ioakim, king of Iouda, should become a seal upon my right hand, from there I will tear you away

25 and hand you over into the hands of those seeking your life, before whose face you are fearful, into the hands of the Chaldeans;

26 and I will cast you and your mother who bore you into a land where you were not born, and there you will die;

27 but to the land which they long for in their souls they will certainly not return.

28 Iechonias was dishonored like a vessel for which there is no use, because he was thrown out and cast into a land which he did not know.

29 Earth, earth, hear a word of the Lord:

30 Write this man down as an outlawed person, because there will certainly not grow from his seed a man sitting upon the throne of David, ruling any longer in Iouda.

Chapter 23

1 O the shepherds scattering and destroying the sheep of my pasture.

2 Therefore thus says the Lord concerning those shepherding my people: You scattered my sheep and drove them out and did not visit them; behold, I am exacting vengeance upon you according to your evil practices;

3 and I will receive the remaining ones of my people from all the land where I drove them out there, and I will restore them to their pasture, and they will increase and multiply;

4 and I will raise up shepherds for them who will shepherd them, and they will no longer fear or be terrified, says the Lord.

5 Behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and I will raise up for David a righteous shoot, and a king will reign and understand and do judgment and righteousness upon the earth.

6 In his days Ioudas will be saved, and Israel will dwell confidently, and this is his name which the Lord will call him: Iosedek.

9 Among the prophets my heart was crushed; within me all my bones were shaken; I became like a crushed man and like a person held fast by wine, because of the face of the Lord and because of the face of the splendor of his glory.

10 Because on account of these the land mourned, the pastures of the wilderness dried up, and their course became evil and their strength not thus.

11 Because priest and prophet were defiled, and in my house I saw their wickednesses.

12 Therefore let their way become for them a slipping place in gloom, and they will be tripped and fall in it; for I will bring evils upon them in the year of their visitation, says the Lord.

13 And among the prophets of Samareia I saw lawless deeds; they prophesied through Baal and led my people Israel astray.

14 And among the prophets of Ierusalem I have seen dreadful things, committing adultery and walking in falsehoods and supporting the hands of evil ones, so that each does not turn from his evil way; they all became to me like Sodoma, and those dwelling in her like Gomorra.

15 Therefore thus says the Lord: Behold, I will feed them pain and give them bitter water to drink, because from the prophets of Ierusalem defilement went out to all the earth.

16 Thus says the Lord Almighty: Do not hear the words of the prophets, because they make a vision vain for themselves; they speak from their heart and not from the mouth of the Lord.

17 They say to those thrusting away the word of the Lord, Peace will be for you; and to all those walking by their own wishes, to everyone walking in the error of his heart they said, Evils will not come upon you.

18 Because who stood in the council of the Lord and saw his word? Who gave ear and heard?

19 Behold, a shaking from the Lord, and anger goes out into a convulsion; whirling, it will come upon the impious.

20 And the wrath of the Lord will no longer turn back until he does it and until he raises it up from the undertaking of his heart; at the end of the days they will understand these things.

21 I was not sending the prophets, and they were running; I did not speak to them, and they were prophesying.

22 And if they had stood in my council and listened to my words, they would also have turned my people away from their evil practices.

23 I am a God drawing near, says the Lord, and not a God from far away.

24 Will a person hide in hidden places, and I will not see him? Do I not fill heaven and earth? says the Lord.

25 I heard what the prophets speak, what false things they prophesy in my name, saying, I dreamed a dream.

26 Until when will it be in the heart of the prophets prophesying false things, and in their prophesying the wishes of their heart?

27 Of those planning to forget my law in their dreams which they related, each to his neighbor, just as their fathers forgot my name through Baal.

28 The prophet in whom the dream is, let him relate his dream, and the one to whom my word comes, let him relate my word in truth. What is chaff to grain? Thus are my words, says the Lord;

29 are not my words like blazing fire, says the Lord, and like an axe cutting a rock?

30 Therefore behold, I am against the prophets, says the Lord God, those stealing my words, each from his neighbor.

31 Behold, I am against the prophets bringing forth prophecies of a tongue and dozing with their own dozing.

32 Behold, I am against the prophets prophesying false dreams, and they related them and led my people astray with their falsehoods and with their errors, and I did not send them and did not command them, and they will not benefit this people with any benefit.

33 And if this people or priest or prophet asks you, saying, What is the burden of the Lord? You will say to them, You are the burden, and I will dash you down, says the Lord.

34 And the prophet and the priest and the people who say, Burden of the Lord, I will also exact vengeance on that person and his house.

35 Because thus you will say, each to his neighbor and each to his brother: What did the Lord answer, and what did the Lord speak?

36 And do not name Burden of the Lord any longer, because his word will be the burden for the person;

37 and why did the Lord our God speak?

38 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you said this word, Burden of the Lord, and I sent to you, saying, You shall not say Burden of the Lord,

39 therefore behold, I am taking and dashing down you and the city which I gave to you and to your fathers,

40 and I will put upon you everlasting reproach and everlasting dishonor, which will not be forgotten.

7 Therefore behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and they will no longer say, The Lord lives, who brought up the house of Israel from the land of Egypt,

8 but, The Lord lives, who gathered all the seed of Israel from the land of the north and from all the regions where he drove them out there, and restored them to their land.

Chapter 24

1 The Lord showed me two baskets of figs lying before the temple of the Lord, after Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, deported Iechonias, son of Ioakim, king of Iouda, and the rulers and the craftsmen and the prisoners and the rich from Ierusalem and brought them to Babylon;

2 one basket of very good figs, like the early figs, and the other basket of very bad figs, which will not be eaten because of their badness.

3 And the Lord said to me: What do you see, Ieremias? And I said, Figs; the good ones very good, and the bad ones very bad, which will not be eaten because of their badness.

4 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying,

5 Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Like these good figs, thus I will recognize the deported ones of Iouda whom I have sent out from this place into the land of the Chaldeans for good things.

6 And I will set my eyes upon them for good things and restore them to this land for good things and build them up and will certainly not pull them down and plant them and will certainly not pluck them out;

7 and I will give them a heart for them to know me, that I am the Lord, and they will be a people for me, and I will be a God for them, because they will return to me with all their heart.

8 And like the bad figs which will not be eaten because of their badness, thus says the Lord, thus I will hand over Sedekias, king of Iouda, and his great ones and the remnant of Ierusalem, those left in this land and those dwelling in Egypt;

9 and I will give them over to scattering into all the kingdoms of the earth, and they will be for reproach and for a parable and for hatred and for a curse in every place where I drove them out there;

10 and I will send famine and death and sword among them until they cease from the land which I gave them.

Chapter 25

1 The word that came to Ieremias concerning all the people of Iouda in the fourth year of Ioakim, son of Iosias, king of Iouda,

2 which he spoke to all the people of Iouda and to those dwelling in Ierusalem, saying,

3 In the thirteenth year of Iosias, son of Amos, king of Iouda, and until this day, twenty-three years, and I spoke to you, rising early and saying,

4 and I was sending to you my servants the prophets, sending at dawn, and you did not listen and did not attend with your ears,

5 saying, Turn, each from his evil way and from your evil practices, and you will dwell upon the land which I gave to you and to your fathers from eternity and unto eternity;

6 do not go after foreign gods to serve them and to worship them, so that you do not provoke me with the works of your hands, for me to harm you.

7 And you did not hear me.

8 Therefore thus says the Lord: Since you did not believe my words,

9 behold, I am sending and will take the family from the north and bring them upon this land and upon those dwelling in it and upon all the nations around it, and I will utterly desolate them and give them over to disappearance and to hissing and to everlasting reproach;

10 and I will destroy from them a voice of joy and a voice of gladness, a voice of bridegroom and a voice of bride, a smell of myrrh and a light of a lamp.

11 And all the land will be for disappearance, and they will serve among the nations seventy years.

12 And when the seventy years are fulfilled, I will exact vengeance on that nation, says the Lord, and make them an everlasting disappearance;

13 and I will bring upon that land all my words which I spoke against it, all the things written in this book.

14 What Ieremias prophesied concerning the nations, Ailam.

15 Thus says the Lord: Let the bow of Ailam be crushed, the beginning of their dominion.

16 And I will bring upon Ailam four winds from the four ends of heaven and scatter them among all these winds, and there will be no nation where the outcasts of Ailam will not come.

17 And I will terrify them before their enemies seeking their life and bring evils upon them according to the anger of my wrath and send my sword after them until I consume them.

18 And I will set my throne in Ailam and send out from there king and great ones.

19 And it will be at the end of the days, I will turn back the captivity of Ailam, says the Lord.

20 At the beginning of King Sedekias reigning, this word came concerning Ailam.

2 For Egypt, concerning the force of Pharao Nechao, king of Egypt, who was at the Euphrates river in Charchamis, whom Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, struck in the fourth year of Ioakim, king of Iouda.

3 Take up weapons and shields and bring them forward into war;

4 saddle the horses; mount, horsemen, and take your stand in your helmets; put forward the spears and put on your breastplates.

5 Why are they terrified and retreating backward? Because their strong ones will be cut down. They fled with flight and did not turn back, surrounded all around, says the Lord.

6 Let the swift one not flee, and let the strong one not escape; toward the north, the things beside the Euphrates grew weak, have fallen.

7 Who is this that will rise like a river, and like rivers water surges?

8 The waters of Egypt will rise like a river, and he said, I will rise and cover land and destroy those dwelling in it.

9 Mount the horses, prepare the chariots; go out, the warriors of Ethiopians and Libyans fully armed with weapons; and Lydians, go up, stretch a bow.

10 And that day is for the Lord our God a day of vengeance to exact vengeance on his enemies, and the sword of the Lord will devour and be filled and be drunk from their blood, because there is a sacrifice for the Lord Sabaoth from the land of the north upon the Euphrates river.

11 Go up, Galaad, and take resin for the virgin daughter of Egypt; in vain you multiplied your remedies; there is no benefit for you.

12 Nations heard your voice, and the earth was filled with your cry, because warrior against warrior grew weak; together both fell.

13 What the Lord spoke by the hand of Ieremias concerning Nabouchodonosor, the king of Babylon, coming to strike the land of Egypt.

14 Announce in Magdolon and proclaim in Memphis; say, Stand ready and prepare, because a sword devoured your smilax.

15 Why did Apis flee? Your chosen calf did not remain, because the Lord disabled him.

16 And your multitude grew weak and fell, and each spoke to his neighbor: Let us rise and return to our people into our homeland from before a Greek sword.

17 Call the name of Pharao Nechao, king of Egypt, Saon — esbi — emoed.

18 I live, says the Lord God, because like Itabyrion among the mountains and like Karmel in the sea he will come.

19 Make equipment for deportation for yourself, dwelling daughter of Egypt, because Memphis will be for disappearance and will be called Woe, because there are no inhabitants in her.

20 Egypt is an adorned heifer; a detachment from the north came upon her.

21 And her hired men in her are like fattened calves fed in her, because they too turned back and fled with one accord, did not stand, because a day of destruction came upon them and a time of their vengeance.

22 A voice like a snake hissing, because they will travel in sand; with axes they will come upon her like those cutting wood.

23 They will cut down her forest, says the Lord God, because it will certainly not be estimated, because it multiplies beyond a locust, and they have no number.

24 The daughter of Egypt was put to shame, handed over into the hands of a people from the north.

25 Behold, I am exacting vengeance on Amon her son, upon Pharao and upon those trusting in him.

27 But you, do not fear, my servant Iakob, nor be terrified, Israel, because behold, I am saving you from far away and your seed from their captivity, and Iakob will return and be quiet and sleep, and there will be no one troubling him.

28 Do not fear, my servant Iakob, says the Lord, because I am with you; because I will make an end among every nation into which I drove you out there, but I will certainly not make you cease; and I will discipline you with judgment and will not acquit you as innocent.

Chapter 27

1 A word of the Lord which he spoke concerning Babylon.

2 Announce among the nations and make heard and do not hide; say, Babylon has been captured; Belos was put to shame, the fearless one; the delicate one, Marodach, was handed over.

3 Because a nation went up against her from the north; this one will make her land a disappearance, and there will be no inhabitant in her, from person even to cattle.

4 In those days and at that time the sons of Israel will come, they and the sons of Iouda together; walking and weeping they will go, seeking the Lord their God.

5 As far as Sion they will ask the way, for toward here they will turn their face; and they will come and take refuge with the Lord God, for an everlasting covenant will not be forgotten.

6 My people became lost sheep; their shepherds drove them out, led them astray onto the mountains; from mountain to hill they went, forgot their bed.

7 All those finding them consumed them; their enemies said, Let us not let them go, because they sinned against the Lord, the pasture of righteousness, who gathered their fathers.

8 Be estranged from the midst of Babylon and from the land of the Chaldeans, and go out and become like dragons before sheep.

9 Because behold, I am raising assemblies of nations against Babylon from the land of the north, and they will array themselves against her; from there she will be captured, like a dart of an understanding warrior it will not return empty.

10 And Chaldaia will be for plunder; all those plundering her will be filled.

11 Because you were glad and boasted, plundering my inheritance, because you were leaping like young cattle in vegetation and butting like bulls.

12 Your mother was put greatly to shame, a mother for good things, last of nations, a wilderness.

13 Because of the anger of the Lord she will not be inhabited and will be entirely for disappearance, and everyone traversing Babylon will become gloomy, and they will hiss over all her wound.

14 Array yourselves against Babylon all around, all those stretching a bow; shoot at her, do not spare your arrows.

15 Clap against her; her hands were disabled, her battlements fell, and her wall was razed; because it is vengeance from God, exact vengeance upon her; as she did, do to her.

16 Destroy seed from Babylon, the one holding a sickle at harvest time; from before a Greek sword each will return to his people and each will flee to his land.

17 Israel is a wandering sheep; lions drove him out; the first ate him, the king of Assour, and this one afterward his bones, the king of Babylon.

18 Therefore thus says the Lord: Behold, I am exacting vengeance upon the king of Babylon and upon his land, as I exacted vengeance upon the king of Assour.

19 And I will restore Israel to his pasture, and he will graze in Karmel and on the mountain of Ephraim and in Galaad, and his soul will be filled.

20 In those days and at that time they will seek the injustice of Israel, and it will not exist, and the sins of Iouda, and they will certainly not be found, because I will be merciful to those left upon the earth, says the Lord.

21 Bitterly advance upon her and upon those dwelling upon her; exact vengeance, sword, and make disappear, says the Lord, and do according to everything that I command you.

22 A sound of war and great crushing in the land of the Chaldeans.

23 How was the hammer of all the earth broken together and crushed? How did Babylon become a disappearance among nations?

24 They will attack you, and you will be captured, O Babylon, and you will not know; you were found and taken, because you opposed the Lord.

25 The Lord opened his treasury and brought out the instruments of his anger, because there is work for the Lord God in the land of the Chaldeans,

26 because her times have come. Open her storehouses, search her like a cave and destroy her; let there be no remnant of her;

27 dry up all her fruits, and let them go down to slaughter; woe to them, because their day has come and the time of their vengeance.

28 A voice of those fleeing and escaping from the land of Babylon, to announce in Sion the vengeance from the Lord our God.

29 Give orders against Babylon to many, to everyone stretching a bow; encamp against her all around; let there be no one escaping from her; repay her according to her works; according to all that she did, do to her, because she opposed the Lord, the holy God of Israel.

30 Therefore her young men will fall in her broad streets, and all her men of war will be cast down, said the Lord.

31 Behold, I am against you, the arrogant woman, says the Lord, because your day has come and the time of your vengeance;

32 and your arrogance will grow weak and fall, and there will be no one raising her; and I will kindle fire in her forest, and it will devour everything around her.

33 Thus says the Lord: The sons of Israel and the sons of Iouda have been oppressed together; all those taking them captive oppressed them, because they did not wish to send them away.

34 And the one redeeming them is strong; the Lord Almighty is his name; he will judge a judgment against his adversaries, so that he may remove the earth, and he will provoke those dwelling in Babylon.

35 A sword upon the Chaldeans and upon those dwelling in Babylon and upon her great ones and upon her understanding ones;

36 a sword upon her warriors, and they will be disabled;

37 a sword upon their horses and upon their chariots; a sword upon their warriors and upon the mixed multitude in her midst, and they will be like women; a sword upon her treasuries, and they will be scattered.

38 She had trusted in her water, and they will be put to shame, because it is a land of carved images, and in the islands where they boasted.

39 Therefore phantoms will dwell in the islands, and daughters of sirens will dwell in her; she will certainly not be inhabited any longer forever.

40 As God overturned Sodoma and Gomorra and those bordering them, said the Lord, a person will certainly not dwell there, and a son of man will certainly not sojourn there.

41 Behold, a people is coming from the north, and a great nation and many kings will be raised from the end of the earth,

42 having bow and dagger; it is rash and will certainly not show mercy; their voice will resound like a sea; they will ride upon horses, prepared like fire for war against you, daughter of Babylon.

43 The king of Babylon heard the report of them, and his hands were disabled; affliction held him fast, pangs like those of a woman giving birth.

44 Behold, like a lion he will go up from the Iordan to a place of Aitham, because swiftly I will drive them away from her and set every young man over her. Because who is like me? And who will oppose me? And who is this shepherd who will stand before my face?

45 Therefore hear the counsel of the Lord which he has counseled against Babylon and his designs which he devised against the Chaldean inhabitants; surely the lambs of their sheep will be destroyed, surely pasture will disappear from them.

46 Because from the sound of the capture of Babylon the earth will be shaken, and a cry will be heard among nations.

Chapter 28

1 Thus says the Lord: Behold, I am raising against Babylon and against the Chaldean inhabitants a scorching wind destroying.

2 And I will send insolent ones into Babylon, and they will outrage her and ravage her land; woe upon Babylon all around in the day of her mistreatment.

3 Against her let the one stretching stretch his bow, and let the one who has weapons put them on, and do not spare her young men, and make all her force disappear,

4 and wounded ones will fall in the land of the Chaldeans and pierced ones outside her.

5 Because Israel and Ioudas were not widowed from their God, from the Lord Almighty; because their land was filled with injustice from the holy things of Israel.

6 Flee from the midst of Babylon, and save, each, his soul, and do not be cast away in her injustice, because it is the time of her vengeance from the Lord; he repays her a repayment.

7 Babylon is a golden cup in the hand of the Lord, making all the earth drunk; nations drank from her wine; therefore they were shaken.

8 And suddenly Babylon fell and was crushed; mourn her, take resin for her destruction, if somehow she will be healed.

9 We treated Babylon, and she was not healed; let us leave her and go away, each to his land, because her judgment reached heaven, rose up to the stars.

10 The Lord brought forth his judgment; come, and let us announce in Sion the works of the Lord our God.

11 Prepare the arrows, fill the quivers; the Lord raised the spirit of the king of the Medes, because his anger is toward Babylon to destroy her, because it is the Lord's vengeance, it is vengeance for his people.

12 Upon the walls of Babylon raise a sign, set up quivers, raise guards, prepare weapons, because the Lord undertook and will do what he spoke against those dwelling in Babylon,

13 dwelling upon many waters and upon the abundance of her treasuries; your end has come truly into your inward parts.

14 Because the Lord swore by his arm: For I will fill you with people like locusts, and those descending will raise their voice against you. —

15 Making earth in his strength, preparing the inhabited world in his wisdom, in his understanding he stretched out heaven,

16 at a voice he established a sound of water in heaven and brought up clouds from the end of the earth, made lightning for rain and brought out light from his treasuries.

17 Every person became foolish away from knowledge; every goldsmith was put to shame by his carved images, because they cast false things; there is no spirit in them;

18 they are vain, works made a mockery of; at the time of their visitation they will perish.

19 Such is not the portion for Iakob, because he who formed all things is himself his inheritance; the Lord is his name. —

20 You scatter instruments of war for me, and I will scatter nations in you and remove kings from you

21 and scatter in you horse and its rider and scatter in you chariots and their riders

22 and scatter in you young man and virgin and scatter in you man and woman

23 and scatter in you shepherd and his flock and scatter in you farmer and his cultivation and scatter in you your leaders and commanders.

24 And I will repay Babylon and all the Chaldean inhabitants all their wickednesses which they did to Sion before your eyes, says the Lord.

25 Behold, I am against you, the destroyed mountain destroying all the earth, and I will stretch out my hand upon you and roll you down from the rocks and make you like a burned mountain,

26 and they will certainly not take from you a stone for a corner and a stone for a foundation, because you will be for disappearance forever, says the Lord.

27 Raise a sign upon the earth, trumpet among nations with a trumpet, consecrate nations against her, give orders against her to the kingdoms of Ararat from me and to the Aschanazaians, set up arrow engines against her, bring up against her horses like a multitude of locusts.

28 Consecrate nations against her, the king of the Medes and of all the earth, his leaders and all his commanders.

29 The earth was shaken and suffered, because the design of the Lord rose against Babylon to make the land of Babylon a disappearance and for her not to be inhabited.

30 The warrior of Babylon ceased fighting; they will sit there in an enclosure; their dominion was shattered; they became like women; her dwellings were burned, her bars were crushed;

31 one pursuing will pursue to meet one pursuing, and one announcing to meet one announcing, to announce to the king of Babylon that his city has been captured,

32 from the end of his crossings they were taken, and their assembled structures they burned with fire, and his men of war are going out.

33 For thus says the Lord: The houses of the king of Babylon will be threshed like a ripe threshing floor; yet a little while, and her harvest will come.

34 Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, devoured me, divided me, seized me, a delicate vessel; he swallowed me like a dragon, filled his belly, drove me out from my luxury;

35 my toils and my miseries upon Babylon, she dwelling in Sion will say, and my blood upon the Chaldean inhabitants, Ierusalem will say.

36 Therefore thus says the Lord: Behold, I will judge your adversary and exact your vengeance and desolate her sea and dry up her fountain,

37 and Babylon will be for disappearance and will not be inhabited.

38 Together they were roused like lions and like young lions.

39 In their heat I will give them a drink and make them drunk, so that they are stupefied and sleep an everlasting sleep and certainly do not rise, says the Lord;

40 I will bring them down like lambs to slaughter and like rams with kids.

41 How was the boast of all the earth captured and hunted? How did Babylon become a disappearance among the nations?

42 The sea went up over Babylon with the sound of its waves, and she was covered.

43 Her cities became a waterless and impassable land; not even one will dwell in her, nor will a son of man lodge in her.

44 And I will exact vengeance upon Babylon and bring out what she swallowed from her mouth, and the nations will certainly not gather to her any longer.

49 And in Babylon wounded ones of all the earth will fall.

50 You escaping from the land, go and do not stand; those far away, remember the Lord, and let Ierusalem come up upon your heart.

51 We were put to shame, because we heard our reproach; dishonor covered our face; foreigners entered our holy places, into the house of the Lord.

52 Therefore behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and I will exact vengeance upon her carved images, and in all her land wounded ones will fall.

53 Because if Babylon goes up like heaven and if she fortifies the height of her strength, from me those destroying her will come, says the Lord.

54 A sound of a cry in Babylon, and great crushing in the land of the Chaldeans,

55 because the Lord destroyed Babylon and destroyed from her a great voice resounding like many waters; he gave her voice over to ruin.

56 Because misery came upon Babylon, her warriors were captured, their bow is terrified, because God repays them; the Lord repays her the repayment;

57 and he will make her leaders and her wise ones and her commanders drunk with drunkenness, says the king; the Lord Almighty is his name.

58 Thus says the Lord: The wall of Babylon was widened; being razed it will be razed, and her high gates will be burned, and peoples will not toil in vain, and nations will fail at the beginning.

59 The word which the Lord commanded Ieremias the prophet to say to Saraias, son of Nerias, son of Maasaias, when he went from Sedekias, king of Iouda, to Babylon in the fourth year of his reign, and Saraias was ruler of gifts;

60 and Ieremias wrote all the evils which will come upon Babylon in one book, all these words written concerning Babylon.

61 And Ieremias said to Saraias: When you come to Babylon, you will also see and read all these words

62 and say: Lord, Lord, you spoke against this place to destroy it and for there to be no inhabitants in it, from person to cattle, because it will be a disappearance forever.

63 And it will be, when you cease reading this book, you will also bind a stone upon it and throw it into the midst of the Euphrates

64 and say: Thus Babylon will sink and will certainly not rise because of the evils which I am bringing upon her.

Chapter 29

1 Concerning the foreigners.

2 Thus says the Lord: Behold, waters rise from the north and will become an overflowing torrent and flood land and its fullness, a city and those dwelling in it; and the people will cry, and all those dwelling in the land will shout.

3 From the sound of his rush, from the hooves of his feet and from the shaking of his chariots, the sound of his wheels, fathers did not turn back to their sons because of the failing of their hands

4 on the coming day to destroy all the foreigners; and I will make Tyre and Sidon and all the remaining ones of their help disappear, because the Lord will destroy the remaining ones of the islands.

5 Baldness has come upon Gaza; Askalon was cast away, and the remaining ones of Enakim. Until when will you cut,

6 sword of the Lord? Until when will you not be quiet? Return to your sheath, rest and be lifted up.

7 How will it be quiet? And the Lord commanded it against Askalon and against the seaside places, against the remaining ones, to rise up.

Chapter 30

1 For Idoumaia. Thus says the Lord: There is no longer wisdom in Thaiman; counsel perished from understanding ones; their wisdom went away,

2 their place was deceived. Go deep for dwelling, those dwelling in Daidan, because he did difficult things; I brought them upon him at the time at which I visited upon him.

3 Because grape gatherers came to you, they will not leave remnants for you; like thieves in the night they will lay on their hand.

4 Because I stripped Esau, uncovered their hidden things; they will certainly not be able to hide; they perished through the hand of his brother and his neighbor, and it is not possible

5 for your orphan to remain so that he may live; and I will live, and widows have trusted in me.

6 Because thus said the Lord: Those for whom it was not a law to drink the cup drank; and you, being acquitted, will certainly not be acquitted, because you will surely drink;

7 because by myself I swore, says the Lord, that you will be for an impassable place and for reproach and for a curse in her midst, and all her cities will be desolate forever.

8 I heard a report from the Lord, and he sent messengers to nations: Gather and come to her, rise for war.

9 I made you small among nations, easily despised among people.

10 Your mockery undertook against you; the rashness of your heart lodged in holes of rocks, seized the strength of a high hill; because he raised his nest like an eagle, from there I will bring you down.

11 And Idoumaia will be an impassable place; everyone passing by her will hiss.

12 Just as Sodoma and Gomorra and her neighboring places were overturned, said the Lord Almighty, a person will certainly not sit there, and a son of man will certainly not dwell there.

13 Behold, like a lion he will go up from the midst of the Iordan to a place of Aitham, because swiftly I will drive them away from her; and set the young men over her. Because who is like me? And who will oppose me? And who is this shepherd who will stand before my face?

14 Therefore hear the counsel of the Lord which he counseled against Idoumaia, and his design which he devised against those dwelling in Thaiman: Surely the least of the sheep will be dragged together, surely their lodging upon her will be made impassable;

15 because from the sound of their fall the earth was shaken, and your cry was heard in the sea.

16 Behold, like an eagle he will look and stretch his wings over her fortifications; and the heart of the strong ones of Idoumaia on that day will be like the heart of a woman in labor.

17 For the sons of Ammon. Thus said the Lord: Are there no sons in Israel, or have they no one to inherit? Why did Melchom inherit Gad, and their people will dwell in their cities?

18 Therefore behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and I will cause a clamor of wars to be heard against Rabbath, and they will be for an impassable place and for destruction, and her altars will be burned up with fire, and Israel will inherit his rule.

19 Shout, Esebon, because Gai perished; cry out, daughters of Rabbath, gird yourselves with sackcloths and lament and mourn over Melchom, because he will go into deportation, his priests and his rulers together.

20 Why will you exult in the plains of Enakim, daughter of rashness, trusting in her treasuries, saying, Who will come against me?

21 Behold, I am bringing fear upon you, said the Lord, from all your surrounding region, and you will be scattered, each straight before him, and there will be no one gathering.

23 For Kedar, queen of the courtyard, whom Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, struck. Thus said the Lord: Rise and go up against Kedar and fill the sons of Kedem;

24 they will take their tents and their sheep; their garments and all their equipment and their camels they will take for themselves; and call destruction upon them all around.

25 Flee exceedingly, go deep for dwelling, those sitting in the courtyard, because the king of Babylon counseled counsel against you and devised a design against you.

26 Rise and go up against a stable nation sitting at rest, who have no doors, no bolts, no bars; they lodge alone.

27 And their camels will be for plunder and the multitude of their cattle for destruction; and I will winnow them with every wind, those shorn before their face; from every side of them I will bring their rout, said the Lord.

28 And the courtyard will be a dwelling of sparrows and impassable forever; a person will certainly not sit there, and a son of man will certainly not dwell there.

29 For Damascus. Emath and Arphad were put to shame, because they heard an evil report; they were astonished, became angry, will certainly not be able to rest.

30 Damascus grew faint, turned to flight; trembling seized her.

31 How did he not leave my city? They loved a village.

32 Therefore young men will fall in your broad streets, and all your men of war will fall, says the Lord;

33 and I will burn a fire in the wall of Damascus, and it will devour the quarters of the son of Ader.

Chapter 31

1 For Moab. Thus said the Lord: Woe upon Nabau, because it perished; Kariathaim was taken; Amath was put to shame and defeated.

2 There is no longer healing for Moab, a proud boast in Esebon; they devised evils against her; we cut her off from a nation, and she will surely cease; a sword will go behind you.

3 Because a voice of those crying out from Oronaim, ruin and great crushing:

4 Moab was crushed; announce in Zogora.

5 Because Alaoth was filled with weeping, he will go up weeping on the way of Oronaim; you heard a cry of crushing:

6 Flee and save your souls, and you will be like a wild ass in a wilderness.

7 Since you had trusted in your fortifications, you too will be captured; and Chamos will go out into deportation, his priests and his rulers together.

8 And ruin will come upon every city, and a city will certainly not be saved, and the valley will perish, and the plain will be destroyed, as the Lord said.

9 Give signs to Moab, because with a kindling she will be kindled, and all her cities will be for an impassable place; from where is an inhabitant for her?

10 Cursed is the one doing the works of the Lord carelessly, withdrawing his sword from blood.

11 Moab rested from childhood and was trusting in his glory; he did not pour from vessel into vessel and did not go into deportation; therefore his taste remained in him, and his smell did not cease.

12 Therefore behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and I will send to him those tipping, and they will tip him and thin his vessels and cut together his horns.

13 And Moab will be put to shame by Chamos, just as the house of Israel was put to shame by Baithel, their hope, trusting in them.

14 How will you say, We are strong, and a person strong for warfare?

15 Moab perished, his city, and his chosen young men went down to slaughter;

16 near is the day of Moab to come, and his wickedness exceedingly swift.

17 Stir for him, all those around him, all those knowing his name; say, How was a renowned staff crushed, a rod of grandeur?

18 Come down from glory and sit in dampness, you sitting in Daibon; be wiped out, because Moab perished; one ravaging your fortification went up against you.

19 Stand upon a road and look, you sitting in Aroer, and ask one fleeing and one being saved, and say, What happened?

20 Moab was put to shame, because he was crushed; wail and cry out; announce in Arnon that Moab perished.

21 And judgment is coming into the land of Misor, upon Chailon and upon Iassa and upon Mophath

22 and upon Daibon and upon Nabau and upon the house of Deblathaim

23 and upon Kariathaim and upon the house of Gamol and upon the house of Maon

24 and upon Karioth and upon Bosor and upon all the cities of Moab, those far and those near.

25 The horn of Moab was broken, and his undertaking was crushed.

26 Make him drunk, because he magnified himself against the Lord; and Moab will strike with his hand and will himself also be an object of laughter.

27 And was Israel not a mockery to you? Was he found among your thefts, because you were fighting him?

28 Those dwelling in Moab left the cities and dwelt among rocks, became like doves nesting among rocks at the mouth of a pit.

29 I heard the arrogance of Moab; he was exceedingly arrogant; his arrogance and his haughtiness, and his heart was exalted.

30 But I knew his works; not his sufficiency, not thus did he do.

31 Therefore wail over Moab on every side, shout over the men of Kiradas of drought.

32 Like the weeping of Iazer I will weep for you, vine of Sebema; your branches crossed a sea, reached Iazer; upon your late fruit, upon your grape gatherers ruin fell.

33 Joyfulness and gladness were swept together from Moabitis, and wine was upon your winepresses; in the morning they did not tread, nor in the evening; they did not make aidad.

34 From the cry of Esebon to Eleale their cities raised their voice, from Zogor to Oronaim and Aglath — salisia, because the water of Nebrim also will be for burning.

35 And I will destroy Moab, says the Lord, going up upon an altar and burning incense to his gods.

36 Therefore my heart, Moab, will hum like pipes; my heart over the people of Kiradas will hum like a pipe; therefore what he acquired perished from a person.

37 Every head in every place they will shave, and every beard will be shaved, and all hands will be cut, and upon every waist sackcloth.

38 And upon all the roofs of Moab and upon her broad streets, because I crushed Moab, says the Lord, like a vessel for which there is no use.

39 How did he change? How did Moab turn his back? He was put to shame, and Moab became an object of laughter and resentment to all those around her.

40 Because thus said the Lord:

41 Akkarioth was taken, and the fortifications were captured;

42 and Moab will perish from a multitude, because he magnified himself against the Lord.

43 Trap and fear and pit upon you, you sitting in Moab;

44 the one fleeing from before fear will fall into the pit, and the one coming up out of the pit will be captured in the trap, because I will bring these things upon Moab in the year of her visitation.

13 All that Ieremias prophesied concerning all the nations.

15 Thus said the Lord, the God of Israel: Take the cup of this unmixed wine from my hand, and you will give all the nations to drink to whom I am sending you,

16 and they will drink and vomit and go mad because of the sword which I am sending among them.

17 And I took the cup from the hand of the Lord and gave the nations to drink to whom the Lord sent me,

18 Ierusalem and the cities of Iouda and the kings of Iouda and his rulers, to make them a desolation and an impassable place and a hissing,

19 and Pharao, king of Egypt, and his servants and his great ones and all his people,

20 and all his mixed peoples and all the kings of foreigners, Askalon and Gaza and Akkaron and the remainder of Azotos,

21 and Idoumaia and Moabitis and the sons of Ammon,

22 and all the kings of Tyre and kings of Sidon and kings on the other side of the sea,

23 and Daidan and Thaiman and Ros and everything clipped about its face,

24 and all the mixed peoples lodging in the wilderness,

25 and all the kings of Ailam and all the kings of Persians,

26 and all the kings from the east, those far and those near, each with his brother, and all the kingdoms upon the face of the earth.

27 And you will say to them: Thus said the Lord Almighty: Drink and become drunk and vomit, and you will fall and certainly not rise because of the sword which I am sending among you.

28 And it will be, when they do not wish to receive the cup from your hand to drink, you will also say: Thus said the Lord: You will surely drink;

29 because in the city upon which my name was named I am beginning to do harm, and you will certainly not be cleansed with cleansing, because I am calling a sword upon those sitting upon the earth.

30 And you will prophesy these words against them and say: The Lord will pronounce from on high, from his holy place he will raise his voice; he will pronounce a word upon his place, and they will answer aidad like grape gatherers; and upon those sitting upon the earth

31 ruin has come upon a part of the earth, because the Lord has a judgment among the nations; he himself contends with all flesh, but the impious were given to a sword, says the Lord.

32 Thus said the Lord: Behold, evils come from nation to nation, and a great storm goes out from the end of the earth.

33 And there will be wounded ones by the Lord on the day of the Lord from a part of the earth even to a part of the earth; they will certainly not be buried; they will be as dung upon the face of the earth.

34 Shout, shepherds, and cry out; and lament, rams of the sheep; because your days were fulfilled for slaughter, and you will fall like the chosen rams;

35 and flight will perish from the shepherds and salvation from the rams of the sheep.

36 A sound of a cry of the shepherds and a shout of the sheep and of the rams, because the Lord destroyed their pastures,

37 and the remaining things of peace will cease because of the anger of my wrath.

38 Like a lion he left his lodging, because their land became impassable because of the great sword.

Chapter 33

1 At the beginning of King Ioakim, son of Iosias, this word came from the Lord:

2 Thus said the Lord: Stand in the courtyard of the house of the Lord and pronounce to all the Ioudaians and to all those coming to worship in the house of the Lord all the words which I ordered you to pronounce to them; do not remove a word;

3 perhaps they will hear and turn, each from his evil way, and I will cease from the evils which I am planning to do to them because of their evil practices.

4 And you will say: Thus said the Lord: If you do not hear me, to walk in my ordinances which I gave before your face,

5 to listen to the words of my servants the prophets whom I am sending to you at dawn, and I sent and you did not listen to me,

6 then I will make this house like Selom and make the city a curse for all the nations of all the earth.

7 And the priests and the false prophets and all the people heard Ieremias speaking these words in the house of the Lord.

8 And it happened, when Ieremias ceased speaking everything which the Lord ordered him to speak to all the people, the priests and the false prophets and all the people seized him, saying, By death you will die,

9 because you prophesied in the name of the Lord, saying, Like Selom this house will be, and this city will be desolated of inhabitants; and all the people assembled against Ieremias in the house of the Lord.

10 And the rulers of Iouda heard this word and went up from the king's house to the house of the Lord and sat at the entrance of the new gate of the Lord.

11 And the priests and the false prophets said to the rulers and to all the people: A judgment of death for this person, because he prophesied against this city, as you heard with your ears.

12 And Ieremias said to the rulers and to all the people, saying, The Lord sent me to prophesy concerning this house and concerning this city all these words which you heard.

13 And now make your ways and your works better and hear the voice of the Lord, and the Lord will cease from the evils which he spoke against you.

14 And behold, I am in your hands; do to me as is advantageous and as is better for you.

15 Only you will surely know that if you kill me, you put innocent blood upon yourselves and upon this city and upon those dwelling in it; because in truth the Lord has sent me to you to speak all these words into your ears.

16 And the rulers and all the people said to the priests and to the false prophets: There is no judgment of death for this person, because in the name of the Lord our God he spoke to us.

17 And men from the elders of the land rose and said to all the assembly of the people:

18 Michaias the Morathite was in the days of Ezekias, king of Iouda, and said to all the people of Iouda: Thus said the Lord: Sion will be plowed like a field, and Ierusalem will be for an impassable place and the mountain of the house for a grove of a forest.

19 Did Ezekias and all Iouda utterly kill him? Was it not that they feared the Lord and entreated the face of the Lord, and the Lord ceased from the evils which he spoke against them? And we did great evils against our souls. —

20 And there was a person prophesying in the name of the Lord, Ourias, son of Samaias, from Kariathiarim, and he prophesied concerning this land according to all the words of Ieremias.

21 And King Ioakim and all the rulers heard all his words and were seeking to kill him, and Ourias heard and entered Egypt.

22 And the king sent out men to Egypt,

23 and they brought him out from there and brought him in to the king, and he struck him with a sword and threw him into the tomb of the sons of his people.

24 Nevertheless the hand of Achikam, son of Saphan, was with Ieremias, so as not to hand him over into the hands of the people, so as not to kill him.

2 Thus said the Lord: Make bonds and collars and put them around your neck;

3 and you will send them to the king of Idoumaia and to the king of Moab and to the king of the sons of Ammon and to the king of Tyre and to the king of Sidon by the hands of their messengers coming to meet them in Ierusalem, to Sedekias, king of Iouda.

4 And you will order them to say to their lords: Thus said the Lord, the God of Israel: Thus you will say to your lords,

5 that I made the earth with my great strength and with my high undertaking, and I will give it to whomever it seems good in my eyes.

6 I gave the earth to Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, to serve him, and the wild beasts of the field to work for him.

8 And the nation and the kingdom, all who do not put their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, by sword and by famine I will visit them, said the Lord, until they cease in his hand.

9 And you, do not hear your false prophets and those divining for you and those dreaming for you and your omens and your sorcerers saying, You will certainly not work for the king of Babylon;

10 because they prophesy false things to you to remove you far from your land.

11 And the nation which brings its neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon and works for him, I will also leave him upon his land, and he works for him and will dwell in it. —

12 And to Sedekias, king of Iouda, I spoke according to all these words, saying, Bring in your neck

14 and work for the king of Babylon, because they prophesy unjust things to you;

15 because I did not send them, says the Lord, and they prophesy in my name unjustly to destroy you, and you will perish, you and your prophets prophesying false things to you unjustly.

16 To you and to all this people and to the priests I spoke, saying, Thus said the Lord: Do not hear the words of the prophets prophesying to you, saying, Behold, vessels of the house of the Lord will return from Babylon; because they prophesy unjust things to you; I did not send them.

18 If they are prophets and if a word of the Lord is in them, let them meet me;

19 because thus said the Lord: Even of the remaining vessels,

20 which the king of Babylon did not take when he deported Iechonias from Ierusalem,

22 it will enter Babylon, says the Lord.

Chapter 35

1 And it happened in the fourth year of Sedekias, king of Iouda, in the fifth month, Ananias, son of Azor, the false prophet from Gabaon, said to me in the house of the Lord before the eyes of the priests and all the people, saying,

2 Thus said the Lord: I crushed the yoke of the king of Babylon;

3 yet two years of days, I will return to this place the vessels of the house of the Lord

4 and Iechonias and the deported people of Iouda, because I will crush the yoke of the king of Babylon.

5 And Ieremias said to Ananias before the eyes of all the people and before the eyes of the priests standing in the house of the Lord,

6 and Ieremias said, Truly; may the Lord do thus; may he establish your word which you prophesy, to return the vessels of the house of the Lord and all the deported people from Babylon to this place.

7 Nevertheless hear the word of the Lord which I speak into your ears and into the ears of all the people:

8 The prophets who came before me and before you from of old also prophesied concerning much land and concerning great kingdoms for war;

9 the prophet who prophesied for peace, when the word comes, they will know the prophet whom the Lord sent to them in faithfulness.

10 And Ananias took the collars from the neck of Ieremias before the eyes of all the people and crushed them.

11 And Ananias said before the eyes of all the people, saying, Thus said the Lord: Thus I will crush the yoke of the king of Babylon from the necks of all the nations. And Ieremias went on his way. —

12 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias after Ananias crushed the collars from his neck, saying,

13 Go and say to Ananias, saying, Thus said the Lord: You crushed wooden collars, and I will make iron collars instead of them;

14 because thus said the Lord: I put an iron yoke upon the neck of all the nations to work for the king of Babylon.

15 And Ieremias said to Ananias: The Lord has not sent you, and you made this people trust in injustice;

16 therefore thus said the Lord: Behold, I am sending you away from the face of the earth; in this year you will die.

17 And he died in the seventh month.

Chapter 36

1 And these are the words of the book which Ieremias sent from Ierusalem to the elders of the deported people and to the priests and to the false prophets, a letter to Babylon to the deported people and to all the people,

2 after King Iechonias and the queen and the eunuchs and every free person and prisoner and craftsman went out from Ierusalem,

3 by the hand of Eleasa, son of Saphan, and Gamarias, son of Chelkias, whom Sedekias, king of Iouda, sent to the king of Babylon in Babylon, saying,

4 Thus said the Lord, the God of Israel, concerning the deported people whom I deported from Ierusalem:

5 Build houses and dwell, and plant gardens and eat their fruits,

6 and take wives and produce sons and daughters and take wives for your sons and give your daughters to men, and multiply and do not be diminished,

7 and seek for the peace of the land into which I deported you there, and pray concerning them to the Lord, because in her peace there will be peace for you.

8 Because thus said the Lord: Let the false prophets among you not persuade you, and let your diviners not persuade you, and do not listen to your dreams which you dream,

9 because they prophesy unjust things to you in my name, and I did not send them.

10 Because thus said the Lord: When seventy years are about to be fulfilled for Babylon, I will visit you and establish my words upon you, to return your people to this place;

11 and I will devise a design of peace concerning you and not evils, to give you these things.

12 And pray to me, and I will listen to you;

13 and seek me out, and you will find me, because you will seek me with all your heart,

14 and I will appear to you. —

15 Because you said, The Lord appointed prophets for us in Babylon,

21 thus said the Lord concerning Achiab and concerning Sedekias: Behold, I am giving them into the hands of the king of Babylon, and he will strike them before your eyes.

22 And from them they will take a curse among all the deported people of Iouda in Babylon, saying, May the Lord make you as he made Sedekias and as Achiab, whom the king of Babylon roasted in fire

23 because of the lawlessness which they did in Israel, and they committed adultery with the wives of their fellow citizens and pronounced a word in my name which I did not order them, and I am witness, says the Lord. —

24 And to Samaias the Nelamite you will say,

25 I did not send you in my name. And to Sophonias, son of Maasaias, the priest, say,

26 The Lord made you a priest instead of Iodae the priest, to become an overseer in the house of the Lord over every person prophesying and every person raving, and you will put him into the enclosure and into the confinement.

27 And now why did you revile together Ieremias from Anathoth who prophesied to you?

28 Was it not for this reason that he sent to you in Babylon, saying, It is long; build houses and dwell, and plant gardens and you will eat their fruit? —

29 And Sophonias read the book into the ears of Ieremias.

30 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias, saying,

31 Send to the deported people, saying, Thus said the Lord concerning Samaias the Nelamite: Since Samaias prophesied to you, and I did not send him, and he made you trust in unjust things,

32 therefore thus said the Lord: Behold, I will visit upon Samaias and upon his family, and there will be no person of theirs in your midst to see the good things which I will do for you; they will not see.

Chapter 37

1 The word that came to Ieremias from the Lord, to say,

2 Thus said the Lord, the God of Israel, saying, Write all the words which I pronounced to you in a book;

3 because behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and I will turn back the deportation of my people Israel and Iouda, said the Lord, and return them to the land which I gave to their fathers, and they will rule it.

4 And these are the words which the Lord spoke concerning Israel and Iouda:

5 Thus said the Lord: You will hear a voice of fear; fear, and there is no peace.

6 Ask and see whether a male gave birth, and concerning fear, in which they will hold fast waist and salvation; because I have seen every person and his hands upon his waist; faces turned, into jaundice

7 it became. Because that day is great, and there is none like it, and it is a narrow time for Iakob, and from this he will be saved.

8 On that day, said the Lord, I will crush the yoke from their neck and tear their bonds apart, and they do not work any longer for foreigners;

9 and they work for the Lord their God, and I will raise up David their king for them.

12 Thus said the Lord: I raised a crushing; your wound is painful;

13 there is no one judging your judgment; you were treated unto a painful thing; there is no benefit for you.

14 All your friends forgot you; they will certainly not inquire; because I struck you with an enemy's wound, a firm discipline; over all your injustice your sins multiplied.

16 Therefore all those eating you will be eaten, and all your enemies, all their flesh they will eat; over the multitude of your injustices your sins were multiplied; they did these things to you; and those plundering you will be for plunder, and all those despoiling you I will give over to spoils.

17 Because I will bring up your remedy, I will treat you for a painful wound, says the Lord, because you were called Scattered; she is your prey, because there is no one seeking her.

18 Thus said the Lord: Behold, I will turn back the deportation of Iakob and have mercy on his captivity; and a city will be built upon its height, and the temple will sit according to its judgment.

19 And from them will come out those singing and a voice of those playing; and I will multiply them, and they will certainly not be diminished.

20 And their sons will enter as formerly, and their testimonies will be set upright before my face; and I will visit those afflicting them.

21 And his stronger ones will be over them, and his ruler will come out from him; and I will gather them, and they will return to me; because who is this who gave his heart to return to me? says the Lord.

23 Because the anger of the Lord went out wrathful; whirling anger went out; it will come upon impious ones.

24 The anger of the wrath of the Lord will certainly not turn away until he does and until he establishes the undertaking of his heart; at the end of the days you will know these things.

Chapter 38

1 At that time, said the Lord, I will be a God for the family of Israel, and they will be a people for me.

2 Thus said the Lord: I found warmth in a wilderness with those perished by sword; go and do not destroy Israel.

3 The Lord appeared to him from far away: With an everlasting love I loved you; therefore I drew you into compassion.

4 Again I will build you, and you will be built, virgin Israel; again you will take your drum and go out with an assembly of those playing.

5 Again plant vineyards on the mountains of Samareia; plant and praise.

6 Because there is a day of calling of those answering on the mountains of Ephraim: Rise and go up to Sion to the Lord our God. —

7 Because thus said the Lord to Iakob: Be glad and neigh over the head of nations, make heard and praise; say, The Lord saved his people, the remnant of Israel.

8 Behold, I am bringing them from the north and will gather them from the end of the earth at the feast of phasek; and you will produce a great multitude, and they will return here.

9 With weeping they went out, and with consolation I will bring them up, lodging them beside channels of waters on a straight way, and they will certainly not stray in it; because I became a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn.

10 Hear a word of the Lord, nations, and announce to the farther islands; say, The one who winnowed Israel will gather him and guard him as one feeding his flock.

11 Because the Lord redeemed Iakob, delivered him from the hand of those firmer than he.

12 And they will come and be glad on the mountain of Sion; and they will come to the good things of the Lord, to a land of grain and wine and fruits and cattle and sheep, and their soul will be like a fruitful tree, and they will hunger no longer.

13 Then virgins will rejoice in an assembly of young men, and old men will rejoice, and I will turn their mourning into joy and make them glad.

14 I will magnify and make drunk the soul of the priests, sons of Leui, and my people will be filled with my good things.

15 Thus said the Lord: A voice was heard in Rama of mourning and weeping and lament; Rachel weeping did not wish to cease over her sons, because they are no more.

16 Thus said the Lord: Let your voice cease from weeping and your eyes from your tears, because there is a wage for your works, and they will return from a land of enemies, 17 a lasting thing for your children.

18 I surely heard Ephraim lamenting: You disciplined me, and I was disciplined; like a calf I was not taught; turn me, and I will return, because you are the Lord my God.

19 Because after my captivity I repented, and after I came to know I groaned over days of shame and showed you that I received reproach from my youth.

20 Ephraim is a beloved son to me, a child delighting, because since my words are in him, I will surely remember him; therefore I hastened over him; I will surely have mercy on him, says the Lord.

21 Set yourself up, Sion, make retribution, set your heart upon the shoulders; turn back along the way which you traveled, virgin Israel; turn back to your cities, mourning.

22 Until when will you turn away, dishonored daughter? Because the Lord created salvation for a new planting; in salvation people will go about.

23 Thus said the Lord: Again they will say this word in the land of Iouda and in his cities when I turn back his captivity: Blessed is the Lord upon a righteous mountain, his holy one,

24 and those dwelling in the cities of Iouda and in all his land together with a farmer, and he will be lifted up among a flock.

25 Because I made every thirsty soul drunk and filled every hungry soul.

26 Therefore I awoke and saw, and my sleep became sweet to me.

27 Therefore behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and I will sow Israel and Iouda with seed of person and seed of cattle.

28 And it will be, as I was watching over them to pull down and to harm, thus I will watch over them to build and plant, says the Lord.

29 In those days they will certainly not say, The fathers ate an unripe grape, and the teeth of the children were set on edge;

30 but each will die in his own sin, and the teeth of the one eating the unripe grape will be set on edge.

31 Behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Iouda,

32 not according to the covenant which I made with their fathers on the day when I took hold of their hand to bring them out from the land of Egypt, because they did not remain in my covenant, and I disregarded them, says the Lord;

33 because this is the covenant which I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the Lord: I will surely give my laws into their understanding and write them upon their hearts; and I will be a God for them, and they will be a people for me;

34 and they will certainly not teach, each his fellow citizen and each his brother, saying, Know the Lord; because all will know me, from their small one even to their great one, because I will be merciful to their injustices and will certainly not remember their sins any longer. —

35 If heaven is raised into the heights, says the Lord, and if the foundation of the earth is lowered below, I also will not reject the family of Israel, says the Lord, concerning all that they did.

36 Thus said the Lord, who gave the sun for light of the day, moon and stars for light of the night, and a cry in the sea, and its waves roared; the Lord Almighty is his name:

37 If these laws cease from before my face, says the Lord, the family of Israel will also cease to be a nation before my face all the days. —

38 Behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and a city will be built for the Lord from the tower of Anameel to the corner gate;

39 and its measurement will go out opposite them as far as the hills of Gareb, and it will be surrounded all around with chosen stones;

40 and all asaremoth as far as nachal Kedron, as far as the corner of the horse gate of the east, a sanctuary for the Lord, and it will certainly not cease any longer and will certainly not be pulled down forever.

Chapter 39

1 The word that came from the Lord to Ieremias in the tenth year for King Sedekias; this is the eighteenth year for King Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon,

2 and the force of the king of Babylon made a siegework against Ierusalem, and Ieremias was guarded in the courtyard of the prison which is in the king's house,

3 in which King Sedekias shut him up, saying, Why do you prophesy, saying, Thus said the Lord: Behold, I am giving this city into the hands of the king of Babylon, and he will take it,

4 and Sedekias will certainly not be saved from the hand of the Chaldeans, because he will surely be handed over into the hands of the king of Babylon, and his mouth will speak to his mouth, and his eyes will see his eyes,

5 and Sedekias will enter Babylon and sit there.

6 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias, saying,

7 Behold, Anameel, son of Salom, your father's brother, is coming to you, saying, Acquire for yourself my field in Anathoth, because yours is the right to receive it as a possession.

8 And Anameel, son of Salom, my father's brother, came to me in the courtyard of the prison and said to me, Acquire my field in the land of Beniamin, in Anathoth, because yours is the right to acquire, and you are the elder. And I knew that it is a word of the Lord,

9 and I acquired the field of Anameel, son of my father's brother, and weighed out for him seven shekels and ten of silver;

10 and I wrote in a book and sealed it and called witnesses to testify and weighed the silver in a balance.

11 And I took the book of the acquisition, the sealed one and the read one,

12 and gave it to Barouch, son of Nerias, son of Maasaias, before the eyes of Anameel, son of my father's brother, and before the eyes of those standing and writing in the book of the acquisition and before the eyes of the Ioudaians in the courtyard of the prison.

13 And I ordered Barouch before their eyes, saying,

14 Thus said the Lord Almighty: Take this book of the acquisition and the read book, and you will put it into an earthenware vessel, so that it remains many days.

15 Because thus said the Lord: Again fields and houses and vineyards will be acquired in this land.

16 And I prayed to the Lord after I gave the book of the acquisition to Barouch, son of Nerias, saying,

17 O Lord, you made heaven and earth by your great strength and by your high and lofty arm; nothing will certainly be hidden from you,

18 doing mercy unto thousands and repaying sins of fathers into the bosoms of their children after them, the great and strong God,

19 Lord of great counsel and powerful in works, the great God, the Almighty and the Lord of a great name; your eyes are upon the ways of the sons of people, to give each according to his way;

20 you who made signs and wonders in the land of Egypt until this day and in Israel and among those born of earth, and made yourself a name as this day,

21 and brought out your people Israel from the land of Egypt with signs and with wonders and with a mighty hand and with a high arm and with great visions,

22 and gave them this land which you swore to their fathers, a land flowing with milk and honey;

23 and they entered and took it and did not hear your voice and did not walk in your ordinances; all that you commanded them they did not do; and you made all these evils happen to them.

24 Behold, a multitude has come into this city to capture it, and the city was given into the hands of the Chaldeans fighting it because of sword and famine; as you spoke, thus it happened.

25 And you say to me, Acquire for yourself a field for silver; and I wrote a book and sealed it and called witnesses to testify; and the city was given into the hands of the Chaldeans.

26 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying,

27 I am the Lord, the God of all flesh; will anything be hidden from me?

28 Therefore thus said the Lord, the God of Israel: Being given, this city will be handed over into the hands of the king of Babylon, and he will take it,

29 and the Chaldeans fighting will come against this city and burn this city with fire and burn up the houses in which they were burning incense upon their roofs to Baal and pouring libations to other gods to embitter me.

30 Because the sons of Israel and the sons of Iouda alone were doing evil before my eyes from their youth;

31 because this city was for my anger and for my wrath from the day on which they built it and until this day, to remove it from before my face

32 because of all the wickednesses of the sons of Israel and Iouda which they did to embitter me, they and their kings and their rulers and their priests and their prophets, men of Iouda and those dwelling in Ierusalem,

33 and they turned a back to me and not a face, and I taught them at dawn and taught, and they did not hear to receive discipline;

34 and they placed their defilements in the house upon which my name was called, in their uncleannesses,

35 and built the altars to Baal in the ravine of the son of Ennom to offer up their sons and their daughters to Moloch the king, things which I did not order them and which did not come up upon my heart, to do this abomination so that Iouda should sin. —

36 And now thus said the Lord, the God of Israel, concerning the city of which you say, It will be handed over into the hands of the king of Babylon by sword and by famine and by sending away:

37 Behold, I am gathering them from all the land where I scattered them there in my anger and my wrath and great provocation, and I will return them to this place and settle them confidently,

38 and they will be a people for me, and I will be a God for them.

39 And I will give them another way and another heart to fear me all the days, for good for them and for their children after them.

40 And I will make an everlasting covenant with them which I will certainly not turn back behind them; and I will put my fear into their heart so that they do not depart from me.

41 And I will visit to do good to them and plant them in this land in faithfulness and with all heart and with all soul.

42 Because thus said the Lord: As I brought all these great evils upon this people, thus I will bring upon them all the good things which I spoke concerning them.

43 And again fields will be acquired in the land of which you say, It is impassable, without people and cattle, and they were handed over into the hands of the Chaldeans.

44 And they will acquire fields with silver, and you will write a book and seal it and call witnesses to testify in the land of Beniamin and around Ierusalem and in the cities of Iouda and in the cities of the mountain and in the cities of Sephela and in the cities of Nageb, because I will turn back their deportations.

Chapter 40

1 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias a second time, and he was still bound in the courtyard of the prison, saying,

2 Thus said the Lord, making earth and forming it to set it upright; the Lord is his name:

3 Cry to me, and I will answer you and report to you great and strong things which you did not know.

4 Because thus said the Lord, the God of Israel, concerning the houses of this city and concerning the houses of the king of Iouda pulled down for siegeworks and ramparts,

5 to fight against the Chaldeans and fill it with the dead of the people whom I struck in my anger and in my wrath, and I turned my face away from them concerning all their wickednesses:

6 Behold, I am bringing up for her closing of wounds and a remedy and will reveal to them to listen, and I will treat her and make peace and faithfulness for them;

7 and I will return the deported people of Iouda and the deported people of Israel and build them as formerly;

8 and I will cleanse them from all their injustices which they sinned against me, and I will certainly not remember their sins which they sinned against me and departed from me.

9 And it will be for gladness and for praise and for greatness for all the people of the earth, who will hear all the good things which I will do, and they will fear and be embittered concerning all the good things and concerning all the peace which I will make for them. —

10 Thus said the Lord: Again there will be heard in this place of which you say, It is desolate, without people and cattle, in the cities of Iouda and outside Ierusalem, the desolated places for lack of person and cattle,

11 a voice of gladness and a voice of joyfulness, a voice of bridegroom and a voice of bride, a voice of those saying, Give thanks to the Lord Almighty, because the Lord is good, because his mercy is forever; and they will bring gifts into the house of the Lord; because I will turn back all the deportation of that land as formerly, said the Lord.

12 Thus said the Lord of the forces: Again there will be in this place desolate for lack of person and cattle and in all its cities lodgings of shepherds laying sheep down;

13 in the cities of the hill country and in the cities of Sephela and in the cities of Nageb and in the land of Beniamin and in those around Ierusalem and in the cities of Iouda again sheep will pass under the hand of one counting, said the Lord.

Chapter 41

1 The word that came to Ieremias from the Lord, and Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, and all his army and all the land of his rule were fighting against Ierusalem and against all the cities of Iouda, saying,

2 Thus said the Lord: Go to Sedekias, king of Iouda, and you will say to him: Thus said the Lord: This city will surely be handed over into the hands of the king of Babylon, and he will capture it and burn it with fire;

3 and you will certainly not be saved from his hand, and you will surely be captured and be given into his hands, and your eyes will see his eyes, and his mouth will speak with your mouth, and you will enter Babylon.

4 But hear the word of the Lord, Sedekias, king of Iouda: Thus says the Lord:

5 In peace you will die, and as they wept for your fathers who reigned before you, they will weep for you also, and, O adon, they will lament you; because I spoke a word, said the Lord.

6 And Ieremias spoke all these words to King Sedekias in Ierusalem;

7 and the force of the king of Babylon was fighting against Ierusalem and against the cities of Iouda, against Lachis and against Azeka, because these were left among the cities of Iouda as fortified cities.

8 The word that came to Ieremias from the Lord after King Sedekias completed a covenant with the people to proclaim release,

9 for each to send out his male servant and each his female servant, the Hebrew man and the Hebrew woman, free, so that a man from Iouda should not be enslaved,

10 and all the great ones and all the people who entered into the covenant to send away, each, his male servant and, each, his female servant turned back

11 and put them as male servants and female servants.

12 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias, saying,

13 Thus said the Lord, the God of Israel: I made a covenant with your fathers on the day on which I delivered them from the land of Egypt, from a house of slavery, saying,

14 When six years are fulfilled, you will send away your Hebrew brother who will be sold to you; and he works for you six years, and you will send him out free. And they did not hear me and did not incline their ear.

15 And today they returned to do what is straight before my eyes, to proclaim release, each of his neighbor, and completed a covenant before my face in the house upon which my name was called.

16 And you turned back and profaned my name by bringing back, each, his male servant and, each, his female servant whom you sent out free according to their soul, as male servants and female servants for you.

17 Therefore thus said the Lord: You did not hear me to proclaim release, each to his neighbor; behold, I proclaim release for you to sword and to death and to famine, and I will give you over to scattering for all the kingdoms of the earth.

18 And I will give the men who transgressed my covenant, who did not establish my covenant which they made before my face, the calf which they made to work for him,

19 the rulers of Iouda and the powerful ones and the priests and the people,

20 and I will give them to their enemies, and their carcasses will be food for the birds of heaven and for the wild beasts of the earth.

21 And Sedekias, king of Ioudaia, and their rulers I will give into the hands of their enemies, and the force of the king of Babylon, to those running away from them.

22 Behold, I am ordering, says the Lord, and I will return them to this land, and they will fight against it and take it and burn it up with fire, and the cities of Iouda, and I will make them desolate of inhabitants.

Chapter 42

1 The word that came to Ieremias from the Lord in the days of Ioakim, king of Iouda, saying,

2 Go to the house of Archabin and bring them into the house of the Lord into one of the courtyards, and you will give them wine to drink.

3 And I brought out Iezonias, son of Ieremin, son of Chabasin, and his brothers and his sons and all the household of Archabin

4 and brought them into the house of the Lord into the chamber of the sons of Ananias, son of Godolias, a man of God, which is near the house of the rulers above the house of Maasaias, son of Selom, guarding the courtyard,

5 and set before their face a jar of wine and cups and said, Drink wine.

6 And they said, We will certainly not drink wine, because Ionadab, son of Rechab, our father, commanded us, saying, You shall certainly not drink wine, you and your sons forever,

7 and you shall certainly not build a house and certainly not sow seed, and you will have no vineyard, because in tents you will dwell all your days, so that you may live many days upon the land upon which you stay.

8 And we heard the voice of Ionadab our father so as not to drink wine all our days, we and our wives and our sons and our daughters,

9 and so as not to build houses to dwell there, and vineyard and field and seed did not come to be for us,

10 and we dwelt in tents and heard and did according to everything which Ionadab our father commanded us.

11 And it happened, when Nabouchodonosor went up against the land, we also said, Enter, and let us enter Ierusalem from before the force of the Chaldeans and from before the force of the Assyrians, and we dwelt there. —

12 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying,

13 Thus says the Lord: Go and say to a person of Iouda and to those dwelling in Ierusalem: Will you not receive discipline to hear my words?

14 The sons of Ionadab, son of Rechab, established the word which he commanded his children so as not to drink wine, and they did not drink; and I spoke to you at dawn and spoke, and you did not hear.

15 And I sent to you my servants the prophets, saying, Turn, each from his evil way, and make your practices better, and you will not go after other gods to serve them, and you will dwell upon the land which I gave to you and to your fathers; and you did not incline your ears and did not hear.

16 And the sons of Ionadab, son of Rechab, established the commandment of their father, but this people did not hear me.

17 Therefore thus said the Lord: Behold, I am bringing upon Iouda and upon those dwelling in Ierusalem all the evils which I spoke against them.

18 Therefore thus said the Lord: Since the sons of Ionadab, son of Rechab, heard the commandment of their father to do as their father commanded them,

19 a man of the sons of Ionadab, son of Rechab, standing before my face will certainly not cease all the days of the earth.

Chapter 43

1 And in the fourth year of Ioakim, son of Iosias, king of Iouda, a word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 Take for yourself a book roll and write upon it all the words which I pronounced to you concerning Ierusalem and concerning Iouda and concerning all the nations from the day of my speaking to you, from the days of Iosias, king of Iouda, and until this day;

3 perhaps the house of Iouda will hear all the evils which I am planning to do to them, so that they turn from their evil way, and I will be merciful to their injustices and their sins. —

4 And Ieremias called Barouch, son of Nerias, and he wrote from the mouth of Ieremias all the words of the Lord which he pronounced to him in a book roll.

5 And Ieremias commanded Barouch, saying, I am guarded; I certainly cannot enter the house of the Lord;

6 and you will read in this roll into the ears of the people in the house of the Lord on a day of fasting, and in the ears of all Iouda coming from their city you will read to them;

7 perhaps their plea for mercy will fall before the face of the Lord, and they will turn from their evil way, because great is the wrath and anger of the Lord which he spoke against this people.

8 And Barouch did according to everything which Ieremias commanded him, to read in the book words of the Lord in the house of the Lord. —

9 And it happened in the eighth year for King Ioakim, in the ninth month, all the people in Ierusalem and the house of Iouda assembled for a fast before the face of the Lord.

10 And Barouch was reading in the book the words of Ieremias in the house of the Lord, in the house of Gamarias, son of Saphan, the scribe, in the upper courtyard, at the entrance of the new gate of the house of the Lord, in the ears of all the people. —

11 And Michaias, son of Gamarias, son of Saphan, heard all the words of the Lord from the book;

12 and he went down to the king's house, to the house of the scribe, and behold, there all the rulers were sitting, Elisama the scribe and Dalaias, son of Selemias, and Elnathan, son of Akchobor, and Gamarias, son of Saphan, and Sedekias, son of Ananias, and all the rulers,

13 and Michaias announced to them all the words which he heard Barouch reading into the ears of the people.

14 And all the rulers sent to Barouch, son of Nerias, Ioudin, son of Nathanias, son of Selemias, son of Chousi, saying, The roll in which you read in the ears of the people, take it into your hand and come; and Barouch took the roll and went down to them.

15 And they said to him, Again read into our ears; and Barouch read.

16 And it happened, when they heard all the words, they counseled together, each with his neighbor, and said, Let us surely announce to the king all these words.

17 And they asked Barouch, saying, From where did you write all these words?

18 And Barouch said, From his mouth Ieremias announced all these words to me, and I was writing in a book.

19 And they said to Barouch, Go, hide, you and Ieremias; let no person know where you are.

20 And they entered to the king in the courtyard, and gave the roll to be guarded in the house of Elisama, and announced to the king all the words. —

21 And the king sent Ioudin to take the roll, and he took it from the house of Elisama; and Ioudin read into the ears of the king and into the ears of all the rulers standing around the king.

22 And the king was sitting in a winter house, and a hearth of fire was before his face.

23 And it happened, as Ioudin read three pages and four, he cut them off with the scribe's razor and threw them into the fire upon the hearth, until all the roll was consumed in the fire upon the hearth.

24 And they did not seek and did not tear their garments, the king and his servants hearing all these words;

25 and Elnathan and Godolias and Gamarias urged the king not to burn up the roll.

26 And the king commanded Ieremeel, son of the king, and Saraias, son of Esriel, to seize Barouch and Ieremias; and they were hidden.

27 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias after the king burned up the roll, all the words which Barouch wrote from the mouth of Ieremias, saying,

28 Again take another roll and write all the words that were upon the roll which King Ioakim burned up.

29 And you will say: Thus said the Lord: You burned up this roll, saying, Why did you write upon it, saying, The king of Babylon will surely enter and destroy this land, and person and cattle will cease from it?

30 Therefore thus said the Lord concerning Ioakim, king of Iouda: He will have no one sitting upon the throne of David, and his carcass will be cast in the heat of the day and in the frost of the night;

31 and I will visit upon him and upon his family and upon his servants and bring upon them and upon those dwelling in Ierusalem and upon the land of Iouda all the evils which I spoke to them, and they did not hear.

32 And Barouch took another roll and wrote upon it from the mouth of Ieremias all the words of the book which Ioakim burned up; and still more words like these were added to it.

Chapter 44

1 And Sedekias, son of Iosias, reigned instead of Ioakim, whom Nabouchodonosor made king to reign over Iouda;

2 and he and his servants and the people of the land did not hear the words of the Lord which he spoke by the hand of Ieremias. —

3 And King Sedekias sent Ioachal, son of Selemias, and Sophonias, son of Maasaias, the priest, to Ieremias, saying, Pray now concerning us to the Lord.

4 And Ieremias came and passed through the midst of the city, and they did not put him into a house of the prison.

5 And Pharao's force went out from Egypt, and the Chaldeans heard the report of them and withdrew from Ierusalem.

6 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias, saying,

7 Thus said the Lord: Thus you will say to the king of Iouda who sent to you to seek me out: Behold, Pharao's force that came out to help you will return to the land of Egypt,

8 and the Chaldeans themselves will return and fight against this city and capture it and burn it with fire.

9 Because thus said the Lord: Do not suppose in your souls, saying, The Chaldeans will surely run away from us, because they will certainly not go away;

10 and if you strike all the force of the Chaldeans fighting you, and some pierced ones are left, each in his place, these will rise and burn this city with fire.

11 And it happened, when the force of the Chaldeans withdrew from Ierusalem before Pharao's force,

12 Ieremias went out from Ierusalem to go to the land of Beniamin to buy from there in the midst of the people.

13 And he came to be at the gate of Beniamin, and there was a person with whom he lodged, Sarouias, son of Selemias, son of Ananias, and he seized Ieremias, saying, You are fleeing to the Chaldeans.

14 And he said, Falsehood; I am not fleeing to the Chaldeans. And he did not hear him, and Sarouias seized Ieremias and brought him to the rulers.

15 And the rulers were embittered against Ieremias and struck him and sent him to the house of Ionathan the scribe, because they made this a prison house.

16 And Ieremias came into the house of the pit and into the chereth and sat there many days.

17 And Sedekias sent and called him, and the king asked him secretly to say whether there is a word from the Lord, and he said, There is; you will be handed over into the hands of the king of Babylon.

18 And Ieremias said to the king: What wrong did I do to you and your servants and this people, that you put me into a prison house?

19 And where are your prophets who prophesied to you, saying that the king of Babylon will certainly not come upon this land?

20 And now, lord king, let my plea for mercy fall before your face, and why do you return me to the house of Ionathan the scribe, and shall I certainly not die there?

21 And the king ordered, and they put him into a house of the prison and gave him one loaf a day from outside where they bake, until the loaves ceased from the city; and Ieremias sat in the courtyard of the prison.

Chapter 45

1 And Saphatias, son of Mathan, and Godolias, son of Paschor, and Ioachal, son of Selemias, heard the words which Ieremias was speaking to the people, saying,

2 Thus said the Lord: The one dwelling in this city will die by sword and by famine, and the one going out to the Chaldeans will live, and his soul will be as a find, and he will live;

3 because thus said the Lord: Being handed over, this city will be handed over into the hands of the force of the king of Babylon, and he will capture it.

4 And they said to the king: Let that person now be killed, because he weakens the hands of the people fighting who remain in the city and the hands of all the people, speaking to them according to these words, because this person does not pronounce peace for this people but rather evil things.

5 And the king said, Behold, he is in your hands; because the king could not prevail against them.

6 And they threw him into the pit of Melchias, son of the king, which was in the courtyard of the prison, and lowered him into the pit, and in the pit there was no water but rather mud, and he was in the mud.

7 And Abdemelech the Ethiopian heard, and he was in the king's house, that they put Ieremias into the pit; and the king was at the gate of Beniamin;

8 and he went out to him and spoke to the king and said,

9 You acted wickedly in what you did, to kill this person because of famine, because there are no longer loaves in the city.

10 And the king commanded Abdemelech, saying, Take into your hands from here thirty people and bring him up out of the pit, so that he does not die.

11 And Abdemelech took the people and entered the underground house of the king and took from there old rags and old ropes and threw them to Ieremias into the pit

12 and said, Put these beneath the ropes; and Ieremias did thus.

13 And they drew him with the ropes and brought him up out of the pit; and Ieremias sat in the courtyard of the prison.

14 And the king sent and called him to himself into the aselisi house in the house of the Lord; and the king said to him, I will ask you a word, and do not now hide a word from me.

15 And Ieremias said to the king: If I announce to you, will you not surely put me to death? And if I counsel you, you will certainly not hear me.

16 And the king swore to him, saying, The Lord lives, who made this soul for us; surely I will not kill you and will not give you into the hands of these people.

17 And Ieremias said to him: Thus said the Lord: If you surely go out to the leaders of the king of Babylon, your soul will also live, and this city will certainly not be burned up with fire, and you will live, you and your household;

18 and if you do not go out, this city will be given into the hands of the Chaldeans, and they will burn it with fire, and you will certainly not be saved.

19 And the king said to Ieremias: I have concern about the Ioudaians who have fled to the Chaldeans, lest they give me into their hands, and they will mock me.

20 And Ieremias said: They will certainly not hand you over; hear the word of the Lord which I speak to you, and it will be better for you, and your soul will live.

21 And if you do not wish to go out, this is the word which the Lord showed me:

22 And behold, all the women left in the house of the king of Iouda were being brought out to the rulers of the king of Babylon, and these were saying, Your men of peace deceived you and will prevail against you and lodge your feet in slipping places; they turned away from you.

23 And they will bring out your wives and your children to the Chaldeans, and you will certainly not be saved, because you will be captured in the hand of the king of Babylon, and this city will be burned up.

24 And the king said to him: Let no person know of these words, and you will certainly not die.

25 And if the rulers hear that I spoke to you and come to you and say to you, Announce to us what the king spoke to you; do not hide from us, and we will certainly not kill you; and what did the king speak to you?

26 You will also say to them, I cast my plea for mercy before the eyes of the king, so as not to return me to the house of Ionathan to die there.

27 And all the rulers came to Ieremias and asked him, and he announced to them according to all these words which the king commanded him; and they kept silent, because a word of the Lord was not heard.

28 And Ieremias sat in the courtyard of the prison until the time when Ierusalem was captured.

Chapter 46

1 And it happened in the ninth year of Sedekias, king of Iouda, in the tenth month, Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, and all his force came against Ierusalem and were besieging her.

2 And in the eleventh year of Sedekias, in the fourth month, on the ninth of the month, the city was breached.

3 And all the leaders of the king of Babylon entered and sat in the middle gate, Nargalasar and Samagoth and Nabousachar and Nabousaris and Nagargasnaser Rabamag and the remaining leaders of the king of Babylon;

14 and they sent and took Ieremias from the courtyard of the prison and gave him to Godolias, son of Achikam, son of Saphan; and they brought him out, and he sat in the midst of the people.

15 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias in the courtyard of the prison, saying,

16 Go and say to Abdemelech the Ethiopian: Thus said the Lord, the God of Israel: Behold, I am bringing my words upon this city for evils and not for good things;

17 and I will save you on that day and will certainly not give you into the hands of the people before whose face you fear.

18 Because I will surely save you, and you will certainly not fall by sword; and your soul will be as a find, because you had trusted in me, says the Lord.

Chapter 47

1 The word that came from the Lord to Ieremias afterward, after Nabouzardan the chief cook sent him away from Daman, when he took him in handcuffs in the midst of the deported people of Iouda being brought to Babylon.

2 And the chief cook took him and said to him: The Lord your God spoke these evils against this place,

3 and the Lord did them, because you sinned against him and did not hear his voice.

4 Behold, I released you from the handcuffs upon your hands; if it is good before you to come with me to Babylon, come, and I will set my eyes upon you;

5 but if not, go away and return to Godolias, son of Achikam, son of Saphan, whom the king of Babylon appointed in the land of Iouda, and dwell with him in the midst of the people in the land of Iouda; to all that is good in your eyes to go to, go. And the chief cook gave him gifts and sent him away.

6 And he came to Godolias in Massepha and sat in the midst of the people left in the land.

7 And all the leaders of the force in the field heard, they and their men, that the king of Babylon appointed Godolias in the land and entrusted to him men and their wives whom he did not deport to Babylon.

8 And Ismael, son of Nathanias, and Ioanan, son of Karee, and Saraias, son of Thanaemeth, and the sons of Ophe the Netophati and Iezonias, son of the Mochati, came to Godolias in Massepha, they and their men.

9 And Godolias swore to them and to their men, saying, Do not fear before the servants of the Chaldeans; dwell in the land and work for the king of Babylon, and it will be better for you;

10 and behold, I sit before you in Massepha to stand before the face of the Chaldeans who come upon you, and you, gather wine and late fruit and gather oil and put them into your vessels and dwell in the cities which you held fast.

11 And all the Ioudaians in the land of Moab and among the sons of Ammon and those in Idoumaia and those in all the land heard that the king of Babylon gave a remnant to Iouda and that he appointed over them Godolias, son of Achikam,

12 and they came to Godolias in the land of Iouda in Massepha and gathered wine and exceedingly much late fruit and oil.

13 And Ioanan, son of Karee, and all the leaders of the force in the fields came to Godolias in Massepha

14 and said to him: Do you surely know that Belisa, king of the sons of Ammon, sent Ismael to you to strike your soul? And Godolias did not believe them.

15 And Ioanan said to Godolias secretly in Massepha: Let me now go and strike Ismael, and let no one know, lest he strike your soul and all Iouda gathered to you be scattered, and the remaining ones of Iouda will perish.

16 And Godolias said to Ioanan: Do not do this thing, because you speak false things concerning Ismael.

Chapter 48

1 And it happened in the seventh month, Ismael, son of Nathanias, son of Elasa, from the king's family, and ten men with him came to Godolias in Massepha, and they ate bread together there.

2 And Ismael and the ten men who were with him rose and struck Godolias, whom the king of Babylon appointed over the land,

3 and all the Ioudaians with him in Massepha and all the Chaldeans found there. —

4 And it happened on the second day after he struck Godolias, and no person knew,

5 men came from Sychem and from Salem and from Samareia, eighty men, with beards shaved and garments torn and lamenting, and manaa and frankincense in their hands to bring into the house of the Lord.

6 And Ismael went out to meet them; they were going and weeping, and he said to them, Enter to Godolias.

7 And it happened, when they entered into the middle of the city, he slaughtered them into the well.

8 And ten men were found there and said to Ismael: Do not kill us, because we have treasuries in a field, wheat and barley, honey and oil; and he passed by and did not kill them in the midst of their brothers.

9 And the well into which Ismael threw there all whom he struck, this is a great well which King Asa made because of Baasa, king of Israel; this Ismael filled with wounded ones.

10 And Ismael turned back all the people left in Massepha and the daughters of the king whom the chief cook entrusted to Godolias, son of Achikam, and went away to the region of the sons of Ammon. —

11 And Ioanan, son of Karee, and all the leaders of the force with him heard all the evils which Ismael did,

12 and they brought all their army and went to fight him and found him beside much water in Gabaon.

13 And it happened, when all the people with Ismael saw Ioanan and the leaders of the force with him,

14 they also returned to Ioanan.

15 And Ismael escaped with eight men and went away to the sons of Ammon. —

16 And Ioanan and all the leaders of the force with him took all the remaining ones of the people whom he brought back from Ismael, men mighty in war and the women and the other things and the eunuchs whom he brought back from Gabaon,

17 and they went and sat in Gaberoth — chamaam, toward Bethleem, to go to enter Egypt,

18 from before the Chaldeans, because they feared before them, because Ismael struck Godolias, whom the king of Babylon appointed in the land.

Chapter 49

1 And all the leaders of the force and Ioanan and Azarias, son of Maasaias, and all the people from small to great approached

2 Ieremias the prophet and said to him: Let our plea for mercy now fall before your face, and pray to the Lord your God concerning these remaining ones, because we were left few from many, as your eyes see;

3 and let the Lord your God announce to us the way on which we will go and a word which we will do.

4 And Ieremias said to them: I heard; behold, I will pray to the Lord our God according to your words; and it will be, the word which the Lord answers I will announce to you; I will certainly not hide a word from you.

5 And they said to Ieremias: Let the Lord be among us as a righteous and faithful witness, if we do not do thus according to every word with which the Lord sends you to us;

6 and whether good or evil, we will hear the voice of the Lord our God to whom we send you, so that it becomes better for us, because we will hear the voice of the Lord our God. —

7 And it happened after ten days, a word of the Lord came to Ieremias.

8 And he called Ioanan and the leaders of the force and all the people from small to great

9 and said to them: Thus said the Lord:

10 If you surely dwell in this land, I will build you and certainly not pull down, and plant you and certainly not pluck out; because I have rested from the evils which I did to you.

11 Do not fear before the king of Babylon before whom you fear; do not fear, says the Lord, because I am with you to deliver you and save you from his hand;

12 and I will give you mercy and have mercy on you and return you to your land.

13 And if you say, We will certainly not dwell in this land, so as not to hear the voice of the Lord,

14 because we will enter the land of Egypt and certainly not see war and certainly not hear a sound of a trumpet and certainly not hunger for bread, and there we will dwell,

15 therefore hear a word of the Lord: Thus said the Lord: If you set your face toward Egypt and enter there to dwell,

16 it will also be, the sword before which you fear will find you in the land of Egypt, and the famine about which you have concern will overtake you behind you in Egypt, and there you will die.

17 And all the people and all the foreigners who set their face toward the land of Egypt to dwell there will cease by sword and by famine, and there will be none of them saved from the evils which I am bringing upon them.

18 Because thus said the Lord: As my wrath dripped upon those dwelling in Ierusalem, thus my wrath will drip upon you when you enter Egypt, and you will be for an impassable place and subject to others and for a curse and for reproach, and you will certainly not see this place any longer,

19 things which the Lord spoke concerning you, the remaining ones of Iouda: Do not enter Egypt. And now you will surely know

20 that you acted wickedly in your souls, sending me, saying, Pray concerning us to the Lord, and according to everything which the Lord speaks to you we will do.

21 And you did not hear the voice of the Lord with which he sent me to you.

22 And now by sword and by famine you will cease in the place where you wish to enter to dwell there.

Chapter 50

1 And it happened, when Ieremias ceased saying to the people all the words of the Lord with which the Lord sent him to them, all these words,

2 Azarias, son of Maasaias, and Ioanan, son of Karee, and all the men said, those saying to Ieremias, saying, Falsehoods; the Lord did not send you to us, saying, Do not enter Egypt to dwell there,

3 but rather Barouch, son of Nerias, sets you against us, so that you give us into the hands of the Chaldeans to put us to death and deport us to Babylon.

4 And Ioanan and all the leaders of the force and all the people did not hear the voice of the Lord to dwell in the land of Iouda.

5 And Ioanan and all the leaders of the force took all the remaining ones of Iouda who returned to dwell in the land,

6 the mighty men and the women and the infants and the daughters of the king and the souls whom Nabouzardan left with Godolias, son of Achikam, and Ieremias the prophet and Barouch, son of Nerias,

7 and entered Egypt, because they did not hear the voice of the Lord; and they entered Taphnas.

8 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias in Taphnas, saying,

9 Take for yourself great stones and hide them at the entrance, in the gate of Pharao's house in Taphnas, before the eyes of the men of Iouda,

10 and you will say: Thus said the Lord: Behold, I am sending and will bring Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, and he will set his throne above these stones which you hid and raise his weapons over them

11 and enter and strike the land of Egypt: those for death, to death, and those for deportation, to deportation, and those for sword, to sword.

12 And he will burn a fire in the houses of their gods and burn them and deport them and delouse the land of Egypt, just as a shepherd delouses his garment, and he will go out in peace.

13 And he will crush the pillars of the City of the Sun in On and burn up their houses with fire.

Chapter 51

1 The word that came to Ieremias for all the Ioudaians dwelling in the land of Egypt and those sitting in Magdolon and in Taphnas and in the land of Pathoures, saying,

2 Thus said the Lord, the God of Israel: You have seen all the evils which I brought upon Ierusalem and upon the cities of Iouda, and behold, they are desolate of inhabitants

3 because of their wickedness which they did to embitter me, going to burn incense to other gods which you did not know.

4 And I sent to you my servants the prophets at dawn and sent, saying, Do not do the thing of this defilement which I hated.

5 And they did not hear me and did not incline their ear to turn from their evils so as not to burn incense to other gods.

6 And my anger and my wrath dripped and blazed in the cities of Iouda and outside Ierusalem, and they became a desolation and an impassable place as this day.

7 And now thus said the Lord Almighty: Why do you do great evils against your souls, to cut off from you man and woman, infant and nursing one, from the midst of Iouda, so that none of you is left,

8 to embitter me with the works of your hands, burning incense to other gods in the land of Egypt into which you entered to dwell there, so that you are cut off and become a curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth?

9 Have you forgotten the evils of your fathers and the evils of the kings of Iouda and the evils of your rulers and the evils of your wives which they did in the land of Iouda and outside Ierusalem?

10 And they did not cease until this day and did not hold fast to my ordinances which I gave before the face of their fathers.

11 Therefore thus said the Lord: Behold, I am setting my face

12 to destroy all the remaining ones in Egypt, and they will fall; by sword and by famine they will cease from small to great and will be for reproach and for destruction and for a curse.

13 And I will visit upon those sitting in the land of Egypt as I visited upon Ierusalem, by sword and by famine and by death,

14 and none of the remaining ones of Iouda sojourning in the land of Egypt will be saved to return to the land of Iouda, to which they hope in their souls to return there; they will certainly not return except those escaped. —

15 And all the men knowing that their wives burn incense to other gods and all the women, a great assembly, and all the people sitting in the land of Egypt in Pathoure answered Ieremias, saying,

16 The word which you spoke to us in the name of the Lord, we will not hear you,

17 because we will surely do every word which comes out of our mouth, to burn incense to the queen of heaven and pour libations to her, as we and our fathers and our kings and our rulers did in the cities of Iouda and outside Ierusalem, and we were filled with bread and became well and did not see evils;

18 and when we ceased burning incense to the queen of heaven, we were all diminished and ceased by sword and by famine.

19 And because we burn incense to the queen of heaven and poured libations to her, did we make chauonas for her and pour libations to her without our husbands? —

20 And Ieremias said to all the people, to the mighty ones and to the women and to all the people who answered him words, saying,

21 Did the Lord not remember the incense which you burned in the cities of Iouda and outside Ierusalem, you and your fathers and your kings and your rulers and the people of the land, and did it not come up upon his heart?

22 And the Lord could no longer bear because of the wickedness of your deeds, because of the abominations which you did; and your land became a desolation and an impassable place and a curse, as on this day,

23 because you were burning incense and sinned against the Lord and did not hear the voice of the Lord and did not walk in his ordinances and in his law and in his testimonies, and these evils overtook you.

24 And Ieremias said to the people and to the women: Hear the word of the Lord;

25 thus said the Lord, the God of Israel: You women spoke with your mouth and fulfilled with your hands, saying, We will surely do our vows which we vowed, to burn incense to the queen of heaven and pour libations to her; you surely remained in your vows and surely did them.

26 Therefore hear a word of the Lord, all Iouda sitting in the land of Egypt: Behold, I swore by my great name, said the Lord, that my name will no longer be in the mouth of all Iouda, to say, The Lord, the Lord lives, in all the land of Egypt.

27 Because behold, I have watched over them to harm them and not to do good, and all Iouda dwelling in the land of Egypt will cease by sword and by famine until they cease.

28 And those saved from sword will return to the land of Iouda few in number, and the remaining ones of Iouda who settled in the land of Egypt to dwell there will know whose word will remain.

29 And this is the sign for you, that I will visit upon you for evil things;

30 thus said the Lord: Behold, I am giving Ouaphre, king of Egypt, into the hands of his enemy and into the hands of those seeking his soul, as I gave Sedekias, king of Iouda, into the hands of Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, his enemy and the one seeking his soul.

31 The word which Ieremias the prophet spoke to Barouch, son of Nerias, when he was writing these words in the book from the mouth of Ieremias in the fourth year for Ioakim, son of Iosias, king of Iouda:

32 Thus said the Lord concerning you, Barouch:

33 Because you said, Alas, alas, because the Lord added toil to suffering for me; I slept in groanings, I did not find rest,

34 say to him: Thus said the Lord: Behold, those whom I built, I am pulling down, and those whom I planted, I am plucking out;

35 and do you seek great things for yourself? Do not seek, because behold, I am bringing evils upon all flesh, says the Lord, and I will give your soul as a find in every place wherever you go there.

Chapter 52

1 Sedekias being twenty-one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Ierusalem, and the name of his mother was Amitaal, daughter of Ieremias, from Lobena,

4 and it happened in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, on the tenth of the month, Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, and all his force came against Ierusalem and made siegeworks around her and built around her with four-foot stones all around.

5 And the city came into confinement until the eleventh year for King Sedekias;

6 on the ninth of the month famine became firm in the city, and there were no loaves for the people of the land.

7 And the city was broken through, and all the men of war went out by night along the way of the gate between the wall and the outer wall, which was by the king's garden, and the Chaldeans were upon the city all around. And they went along the way to Araba,

8 and the force of the Chaldeans pursued after the king and overtook him in the region of Iericho, and all his servants were scattered from him.

9 And they seized the king and brought him to the king of Babylon in Deblatha, and he spoke to him with judgment;

10 and the king of Babylon slaughtered the sons of Sedekias before his eyes, and all the rulers of Iouda he slaughtered in Deblatha;

11 and he blinded the eyes of Sedekias and bound him in fetters, and the king of Babylon brought him to Babylon and put him into a mill house until the day on which he died.

12 And in the fifth month, on the tenth of the month, Nabouzardan the chief cook, standing before the face of the king of Babylon, came to Ierusalem.

13 And he burned the house of the Lord and the house of the king and all the houses of the city, and every great house he burned with fire.

14 And all the wall of Ierusalem all around the force of the Chaldeans with the chief cook pulled down.

16 And the remaining ones of the people the chief cook left as vine workers and farmers.

17 And the bronze pillars in the house of the Lord and the bases and the bronze sea in the house of the Lord the Chaldeans crushed and took their bronze and carried it away to Babylon.

18 And the crown and the bowls and the meat hooks and all the bronze vessels with which they ministered,

19 and the sapphoth and the masmaroth and the pouring vessels and the lampstands and the incense dishes and the ladles, those which were gold, gold, and those which were silver, silver, the chief cook took.

20 And the two pillars and the one sea and the twelve bronze calves beneath the sea, which King Salomon made for the house of the Lord; there was no weight for their bronze.

21 And the pillars, thirty-five cubits the height of the one pillar, and a cord of twelve cubits encircled it, and its thickness four fingers all around,

22 and a bronze cornice upon them, and five cubits the length, the projection of the one cornice, and a net and pomegranates upon the cornice all around, all bronze; and according to these for the second pillar, eight pomegranates to the cubit for the twelve cubits.

23 And the pomegranates were ninety-six on the one part, and all the pomegranates upon the net all around were a hundred.

24 And the chief cook took the first priest and the second priest and the three guarding the way

25 and one eunuch who was overseer of the men of war, and seven renowned men before the face of the king found in the city and the scribe of the forces serving as scribe for the people of the land, and sixty people from the people of the land found in the midst of the city;

26 and Nabouzardan the chief cook took them and brought them to the king of Babylon in Deblatha,

27 and the king of Babylon struck them in Deblatha in the land of Aimath.

31 And it happened in the thirty-seventh year after Ioakim, king of Iouda, was deported, in the twelfth month, on the twenty-fourth of the month, Oulaimaradach, king of Babylon, in the year in which he reigned, lifted the head of Ioakim, king of Iouda, and brought him out of the house in which he was guarded;

32 and he spoke good things to him and placed his throne above the thrones of the kings with him in Babylon;

33 and he changed his prison robe, and he ate bread continually before his face all the days which he lived;

34 and his allowance was given continually by the king of Babylon, day by day, until the day on which he died.

Baruch

Chapter 1

1 And these are the words of the book which Barouch son of Nerias son of Maasaias son of Sedekias son of Asadias son of Chelkias wrote in Babylon

2 in the fifth year, on the seventh of the month, at the time when the Chaldeans took Ierusalem and burned it with fire.

3 And Barouch read the words of this book in the ears of Iechonias son of Ioakim king of Iouda and in the ears of all the people who came to the book,

4 and in the ears of the mighty and sons of the kings and in the ears of the elders and in the ears of all the people, from small to great, all who dwelt in Babylon by the river Soud.

5 And they wept and fasted and prayed before the Lord,

6 and gathered silver according as each one's hand was able,

7 and sent to Ierusalem to Ioakim son of Chelkias son of Salom, the priest, and to the priests and to all the people who were found with him in Ierusalem,

8 when he took the vessels of the Lord's house which had been brought out of the temple, to return them to the land of Iouda on the tenth of Siouan, silver vessels which Sedekias son of Iosias king of Iouda made,

9 after Nabouchodonosor king of Babylon deported Iechonias and the rulers and the prisoners and the mighty and the people of the land from Ierusalem and brought him to Babylon.

10 And they said, Behold, we have sent silver to you; and buy with the silver whole burnt offerings and offerings concerning sin and frankincense, and make manna and offer upon the altar of the Lord our God,

11 and pray concerning the life of Nabouchodonosor king of Babylon and for the life of Baltasar his son, that their days may be as the days of heaven upon the earth.

12 And the Lord will give us strength and illuminate our eyes, and we shall live under the shadow of Nabouchodonosor king of Babylon and under the shadow of Baltasar his son, and serve them many days and find favor before them.

13 And pray concerning us to the Lord our God, because we sinned against the Lord our God, and the Lord's wrath and his anger have not turned away from us until this day.

14 And you shall read this book which we sent to you, to declare in the Lord's house on a feast day and on days of an appointed time,

15 and you shall say, To the Lord our God belongs righteousness, but to us shame of faces, as this day, to the person of Iouda and those dwelling in Ierusalem,

16 and to our kings and to our rulers and to our priests and to our prophets and to our fathers,

17 inasmuch as we sinned before the Lord

18 and disobeyed him and did not hear the voice of the Lord our God, to walk in the Lord's ordinances which he gave before our face.

19 From the day when the Lord brought our fathers out of the land of Egypt until this day, we were disobedient toward the Lord our God and acted heedlessly so as not to hear his voice.

20 And the evils clung to us, and the curse which the Lord prescribed to Moyses his servant on the day when he brought our fathers out of the land of Egypt to give us a land flowing with milk and honey, as this day.

21 And we did not hear the voice of the Lord our God according to all the words of the prophets whom he sent to us,

22 and we went, each in the thought of his evil heart, to serve other gods, to do evil things before the eyes of the Lord our God.

Chapter 2

1 And the Lord established his word which he spoke against us and against our judges who judged Israel and against our kings and against our rulers and against the person of Israel and Iouda.

2 It was not done beneath all heaven as he did in Ierusalem, according to the things written in the law of Moyses,

3 that we should eat, a person the flesh of his son and a person the flesh of his daughter.

4 And he gave them into the hands of all the kingdoms around us, for reproach and for an untrodden place among all the peoples round about, where the Lord scattered them there.

5 And they became beneath and not above, because we sinned against the Lord our God by not hearing his voice. —

6 To the Lord our God belongs righteousness, but to us and to our fathers shame of faces, as this day.

7 What the Lord spoke against us, all these evils came upon us.

8 And we did not entreat the face of the Lord, that each should turn from the thoughts of their evil heart.

9 And the Lord watched over the evils, and the Lord brought them upon us, because the Lord is righteous in all his works which he commanded us.

10 And we did not hear his voice, to walk in the Lord's ordinances which he gave before our face. —

11 And now, Lord, God of Israel, who brought your people out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand and with signs and with wonders and with great power and with a high arm, and made yourself a name, as this day,

12 we sinned, we acted impiously, we acted unjustly, Lord our God, against all your just requirements.

13 Let your wrath turn away from us, because we were left few among the nations where you scattered us there.

14 Hear, Lord, our prayer and our supplication, and deliver us for your sake and give us favor before the face of those who deported us,

15 that all the earth may know that you are the Lord our God, because your name was called upon Israel and upon his race.

16 Lord, look down from your holy house and consider us; incline, Lord, your ear and hear;

17 open, Lord, your eyes and see; because the dead in Hades, whose spirit was taken from their inward parts, will not give glory and a just acknowledgment to the Lord,

18 but the soul grieving greatly, that which walks stooping and weak, and the failing eyes and the hungry soul will give you glory and righteousness, Lord.

19 Because it is not upon the just deeds of our fathers and our kings that we lay down our plea for mercy before your face, Lord our God,

20 because you let your wrath and your anger into us, just as you spoke by the hand of your servants the prophets, saying,

21 Thus said the Lord, Incline your shoulder and serve the king of Babylon and dwell upon the land which I gave to your fathers;

22 and if you do not hear the voice of the Lord, to serve the king of Babylon,

23 I will cause to cease from the cities of Iouda and outside Ierusalem the voice of gladness and the voice of joy, the voice of bridegroom and the voice of bride, and all the land will be untrodden, without inhabitants.

24 And we did not hear your voice, to serve the king of Babylon, and you established your words which you spoke by the hands of your servants the prophets, that the bones of our kings and the bones of our fathers should be brought out of their place,

25 and behold, they are cast out to the heat of the day and to the frost of the night, and they died in evil afflictions, in famine and by the sword and by a sending away.

26 And you made the house upon which your name was called as this day, because of the wickedness of the house of Israel and the house of Iouda. —

27 And you dealt with us, Lord our God, according to all your forbearance and according to all your great compassion,

28 as you spoke by the hand of your servant Moyses on the day when you commanded him to write your law before the sons of Israel, saying,

29 If you do not hear my voice, surely this great, abundant clamor will turn to a small one among the nations where I shall scatter them there;

30 because I knew that they would certainly not hear me, because they are a stiff-necked people. And they will return to their heart in the land of their deportation

31 and know that I am the Lord their God. And I will give them a heart and ears that hear,

32 and they will praise me in the land of their deportation and remember my name

33 and turn away from their stiff back and from their evil deeds, because they will remember the way of their fathers who sinned before the Lord.

34 And I will return them to the land which I swore to their fathers, to Abraam and to Isaak and to Iakob, and they shall rule over it; and I will multiply them, and they shall certainly not be diminished;

35 and I will establish an everlasting covenant for them, that I should be God to them and they shall be a people to me; and I will no longer move my people Israel from the land which I gave them. —

Chapter 3

1 Lord Almighty, God of Israel, a soul in straits and a spirit of despondency has cried to you.

2 Hear, Lord, and have mercy, because we sinned before you;

3 because you sit forever, and we perish forever.

4 Lord Almighty, God of Israel, hear indeed the prayer of the dead of Israel and of the sons of those who sin before you, who did not hear the voice of the Lord their God, and the evils clung to us.

5 Do not remember our fathers' injustices, but remember your hand and your name at this time;

6 because you are the Lord our God, and we shall praise you, Lord.

7 Because for this reason you gave your fear upon our heart, to call upon your name, and we shall praise you in our exile, because we turned away from our heart all the injustice of our fathers who sinned before you.

8 Behold, we today are in our exile, where you scattered us there, for reproach and for a curse and for a liability, according to all the injustices of our fathers who departed from the Lord our God.

9 Hear, Israel, commandments of life; give ear to know understanding.

10 What is it, Israel? Why is it that you are in the land of enemies, you grew old in a foreign land,

11 you were defiled with the dead, you were counted with those in Hades?

12 You abandoned the fountain of wisdom.

13 If you had walked in the way of God, you would have dwelt in peace forever.

14 Learn where understanding is, where strength is, where comprehension is, to know at once where length of days and life are, where light of eyes and peace are. —

15 Who found her place, and who entered her treasuries?

16 Where are the rulers of the nations and those who rule over the beasts upon the earth,

17 those who sport with the birds of heaven and treasure up silver and gold in which people had trusted, and there is no end of their acquisition,

18 those who fashion silver and take pains, and there is no finding out of their works?

19 They vanished and went down to Hades, and others rose in their place.

20 Younger ones saw light and dwelt upon the earth, but they did not know the way of knowledge,

21 nor comprehend her paths nor lay hold of her; their sons became far from their way.

22 Nor was she heard in Chanaan nor seen in Thaiman,

23 nor did the sons of Agar who seek out comprehension upon the earth, the merchants of Merran and Thaiman, the tellers of tales and the seekers of comprehension, know the way of wisdom, nor did they remember her paths. —

24 O Israel, how great is the house of God and how extensive the place of his possession!

25 Great and it has no end, high and immeasurable.

26 There were born the renowned giants of the beginning, who became of great size, skilled in war.

27 God did not choose these, nor give them the way of knowledge;

28 and they perished through not having understanding, they perished because of their lack of counsel. —

29 Who ascended into heaven and took her and brought her down from the clouds?

30 Who crossed beyond the sea and found her and will bring her for choice gold?

31 There is none who knows her way nor who considers her path;

32 but he who knows all things knows her; he found her by his comprehension; he who prepared the earth for everlasting time filled it with four-footed animals;

33 he who sends out the light, and it goes, called it, and it obeyed him with trembling;

34 and the stars shone in their watches and were glad;

35 he called them and they said, We are here; they shone with gladness for him who made them.

36 This is our God; no other shall be reckoned beside him.

37 He found every way of knowledge and gave it to Iakob his servant and Israel who was loved by him;

38 after this he appeared upon the earth and lived among people.

Chapter 4

1 This is the book of the ordinances of God and the law which exists forever; all who hold fast to her are for life, but those who abandon her will die. —

2 Return, Iakob, and take hold of her; go through toward the radiance, facing her light.

3 Do not give your glory to another and the things beneficial to you to a foreign nation.

4 Blessed are we, Israel, because the things pleasing to God are known to us.

5 Take courage, my people, memorial of Israel.

6 You were sold to the nations, not for destruction, but because you provoked God to anger you were handed over to adversaries;

7 for you provoked him who made you, sacrificing to demons and not to God.

8 And you forgot the everlasting God who nourished you, and you also grieved Ierusalem who reared you;

9 for she saw the anger which came upon you from God and said, Hear, neighboring women of Sion, God brought great mourning upon me;

10 for I saw the captivity of my sons and daughters which the Everlasting brought upon them;

11 for I nourished them with gladness, but sent them away with weeping and mourning.

12 Let no one rejoice over me, the widow abandoned by many; I was made desolate because of the sins of my children, because they turned aside from God's law,

13 and did not know his just requirements nor walk in the ways of God's commandments nor tread paths of discipline in his righteousness.

14 Let the neighboring women of Sion come, and remember the captivity of my sons and daughters which the Everlasting brought upon them;

15 for he brought upon them a nation from afar, a shameless nation of another tongue, who did not respect an elder nor have mercy on a child,

16 and led away the widow's beloved ones and left the solitary woman bereft of her daughters.

17 But how am I able to help you?

18 For he who brought the evils upon you will deliver you from the hand of your enemies.

19 Go, children, go; for I was left desolate;

20 I took off the robe of peace, and put on the sackcloth of my supplication; I shall cry to the Everlasting in my days. —

21 Take courage, children; cry to God, and he will deliver you from domination, from the hand of enemies.

22 For I hoped in the Everlasting for your salvation, and joy came to me from the Holy One at the mercy which will come to you quickly from your everlasting Savior.

23 For I sent you out with mourning and weeping, but God will give you back to me with joy and gladness forever.

24 For just as the neighboring women of Sion have now seen your captivity, so they will quickly see the salvation from your God which will come upon you with great glory and splendor of the Everlasting.

25 Children, endure patiently the anger from God which came upon you; your enemy pursued you, and you will see his destruction quickly and tread upon their necks.

26 My delicate ones went rough ways; they were taken away as a flock seized by enemies. —

27 Take courage, children, and cry to God; for there will be remembrance of you by him who brought it upon you.

28 For just as your thought was to stray from God, multiply tenfold, having returned, your seeking of him.

29 For he who brought the evils upon you will bring everlasting gladness upon you with your salvation.

30 Take courage, Ierusalem; he who named you will comfort you.

31 Wretched are those who afflicted you and rejoiced over your fall,

32 wretched the cities which your children served, wretched she who received your sons.

33 For just as she rejoiced at your fall and was glad at your downfall, so she will grieve at her own desolation.

34 And I will remove from her the exultation of her great throng, and her pride will become mourning.

35 For fire will come upon her from the Everlasting for long days, and she will be inhabited by demons for a longer time. —

36 Look around toward the east, Ierusalem, and see the gladness coming to you from God.

37 Behold, your sons whom you sent away are coming; they come gathered from east to west at the word of the Holy One, rejoicing in the glory of God. —

Chapter 5

1 Take off, Ierusalem, the robe of mourning and of your affliction, and put on the comeliness of the glory from God forever.

2 Wrap yourself in the double cloak of the righteousness from God; set upon your head the headdress of the glory of the Everlasting.

3 For God will show your splendor to all that is under heaven.

4 For your name will be called by God forever, Peace of righteousness and glory of reverence for God. —

5 Rise, Ierusalem, and stand upon the height and look around toward the east and see your children gathered from the setting of the sun to its rising at the word of the Holy One, rejoicing in the remembrance of God.

6 For they went out from you on foot, led by enemies, but God brings them in to you, borne with glory as a throne of kingship.

7 For God commanded every high mountain and everlasting dunes to be lowered and ravines to be filled for the leveling of the earth, that Israel might walk safely in the glory of God;

8 and the woods and every fragrant tree shaded Israel at the command of God;

9 for God will lead Israel with gladness by the light of his glory, with mercy and righteousness from him.

Lamentations

Chapter 1

1 t And it happened after Israel was taken captive and Ierusalem made desolate, Ieremias sat weeping and lamented this lament over Ierusalem and said,

1 How did the city filled with peoples sit alone? She became like a widow, filled among nations; ruling among countries, she became subject to tribute.

2 Weeping, she wept in the night, and her tears were upon her cheeks, and there is none comforting her among all who love her; all her friends dealt faithlessly with her, became enemies to her.

3 Ioudaia was removed from her humiliation and from the abundance of her servitude; she sat among nations, found no rest; all who pursued her overtook her amid those who afflict her.

4 The ways of Sion mourn because there are none coming at a feast; all her gates are destroyed, her priests groan, her virgins are led away, and she is embittered within herself.

5 Those who afflict her became the head, and her enemies prospered, because the Lord humbled her for the multitude of her impieties; her infants went into captivity before the face of an afflicter.

6 And all her comeliness went out from daughter Sion; her rulers became like rams finding no pasture, and went without strength before the face of a pursuer.

7 Ierusalem remembered the days of her humiliation and her rejection, all her desirable things which were from ancient days, when her people fell into the hands of an afflicter and there was none helping her; her enemies saw and laughed at her removal.

8 Ierusalem sinned a sin; therefore she became a shaking; all who honored her humbled her, for they saw her indecency, and indeed she herself groaned and turned backward.

9 Her uncleanness is at her feet; she did not remember her last things; and she brought down things exceedingly great; there is none comforting her. See, Lord, my humiliation, because an enemy was magnified.

10 An afflicter spread his hand over all her desirable things; for she saw nations enter her sanctuary, whom you commanded not to enter your assembly.

11 All her people groan, seeking bread; they gave her desirable things for food, to restore a soul. See, Lord, and look, because I became dishonored.

12 Not to you, all who pass along the way; turn and see whether there is pain like my pain which came about; speaking against me, the Lord humbled me on the day of the anger of his wrath.

13 From his height he sent fire, into my bones he brought it down; he spread a net for my feet, turned me backward, made me destroyed, suffering all the day.

14 Watch was kept over my impieties; in my hands they were intertwined, they rose upon my neck; my strength grew weak, because the Lord gave pains into my hands; I shall not be able to stand.

15 The Lord removed all my strong ones from my midst, called an appointed time against me to crush my chosen ones; the Lord trod a winepress for the virgin daughter of Iouda; for these things I weep.

16 My eye brought down water, because he who comforts me, who restores my soul, was far from me; my sons became destroyed, because the enemy grew strong.

17 Sion spread her hands; there is none comforting her; the Lord commanded concerning Iakob, those who afflict him round about him; Ierusalem became as a woman sitting apart among them.

18 The Lord is righteous, because I provoked his mouth to bitterness. Hear indeed, all peoples, and see my pain; my virgins and my young men went into captivity.

19 I called my lovers, but they deceived me; my priests and my elders failed in the city, because they sought food for themselves to restore their souls, and found none.

20 See, Lord, because I am afflicted; my belly was troubled, and my heart turned within me, because provoking to bitterness, I provoked to bitterness; outside a sword bereaved me, as death in the house.

21 Hear indeed that I groan; there is none comforting me; all my enemies heard my evils and rejoiced, because you did it; you brought a day, called an appointed time, and they became like me.

22 May all their wickedness come before your face, and glean them as they made a gleaning concerning all my sins, because my groans are many, and my heart grieves.

Chapter 2

1 How did the Lord darken daughter Sion in his anger? He cast down Israel's glory from heaven to earth and did not remember the footstool of his feet on the day of his anger.

2 The Lord engulfed without sparing all the beautiful things of Iakob, pulled down in his wrath the strongholds of daughter Iouda, fastened them to the earth, profaned her king and her rulers.

3 He broke every horn of Israel in the anger of his wrath, turned his right hand backward from the face of an enemy and kindled in Iakob as fire a flame, and it devoured all things round about.

4 He stretched his bow like an enemy, made his right hand firm like an adversary and killed all the desirable things of my eyes in the tent of daughter Sion; he poured out his wrath like fire.

5 The Lord became like an enemy, engulfed Israel, engulfed all her citadels, destroyed his strongholds and multiplied for daughter Iouda humiliation upon humiliation.

6 And he spread his dwelling like a vine, destroyed his feast; the Lord forgot what he made in Sion, feast and sabbath, and provoked king and priest and ruler with the vehemence of his anger.

7 The Lord rejected his altar, shook off his sanctuary, crushed the wall of her citadels in the hand of an enemy; they gave a voice in the Lord's house as on a feast day.

8 And the Lord turned to destroy the wall of daughter Sion; he stretched a measure, did not turn his hand away from trampling, and the outer wall mourned, and the wall together grew weak.

9 Her gates were fixed into the earth; he destroyed and crushed her bars; her king and her rulers among the nations; there is no law, and indeed her prophets saw no vision from the Lord.

10 The elders of daughter Sion sat upon the earth, kept silent, put dust upon their head, girded themselves with sackcloth; they brought down to earth the leading virgins in Ierusalem.

11 My eyes failed in tears, my heart was troubled, my glory was poured out upon the earth over the crushing of the daughter of my people, when infant and suckling failed in the city's squares.

12 They said to their mothers, Where are grain and wine? When they fainted like wounded ones in the city's squares, when their souls were poured out into their mothers' bosom.

13 What shall I testify to you, or what shall I liken to you, daughter Ierusalem? Who will save you and comfort you, virgin daughter Sion? Because the cup of your crushing was made great; who will heal you?

14 Your prophets saw vain things and folly for you and did not uncover your injustice to turn back your captivity, and saw vain pronouncements and expulsions for you.

15 All who pass along the way clapped hands over you, hissed and shook their head over daughter Ierusalem: Is this the city which they will call Crown of glory, gladness of all the earth?

16 All your enemies opened their mouth wide against you, hissed and gnashed teeth, said, We swallowed her; surely this is the day which we expected; we found it, we saw.

17 The Lord did what he considered, fulfilled his words which he commanded from ancient days, pulled down and did not spare, and made an enemy glad over you, raised the horn of him who afflicts you.

18 Their heart cried to the Lord, Walls of Sion, bring down tears like torrents by day and night; give yourself no respite; let your eye not be silent, daughter.

19 Rise, exult in the night at the beginnings of your watch; pour out your heart like water before the face of the Lord; lift your hands toward him concerning the soul of your infants who faint with famine at the beginning of all the exits.

20 See, Lord, and look upon whom you gleaned thus; shall women eat the fruit of their womb? A cook made a gleaning; shall infants sucking breasts be murdered? Will you kill priest and prophet in the Lord's sanctuary?

21 Child and elder lay down at the exit; my virgins and my young men went into captivity; by sword and by famine you killed, on the day of your anger you slaughtered, you did not spare.

22 He called a feast day of my sojourning from round about, and on the day of the Lord's anger there were none escaping and remaining, as I prevailed and multiplied all my enemies.

Chapter 3

1 I am the man who sees poverty under the rod of his wrath upon me;

2 he took me and led me away into darkness and not light,

3 surely against me he turned his hand all the day.

4 He made my flesh and my skin old, crushed my bones;

5 he built against me and encircled my head and labored,

6 in dark places he seated me like the dead of old.

7 He built against me, and I shall not go out; he made my bronze heavy;

8 and indeed I shall cry and shout; he blocked my prayer;

9 he built up my ways, blocked my paths, troubled them.

10 He is a bear lying in wait for me, a lion in hidden places;

11 he pursued me when I stood apart and brought me to a halt, made me destroyed;

12 he stretched his bow and set me up as a target for an arrow.

13 He brought the arrows of his quiver into my kidneys;

14 I became a laughingstock to all my people, their song all the day;

15 he filled me with bitterness, made me drunk with gall.

16 And he knocked out my teeth with a pebble, fed me ash;

17 and he thrust my soul away from peace; I forgot good things

18 and said, My strife perished, and my hope from the Lord.

19 I remembered from my poverty and from my persecution my bitterness and gall;

20 my soul will remember and ponder over me;

21 this I shall set in my heart; therefore I shall wait.

25 The Lord is good to those who wait for him, to the soul which will seek him, good,

26 and will wait and be quiet for the salvation of the Lord.

27 It is good for a man when he takes up a yoke in his youth.

28 He will sit alone and keep silent, because he took it upon himself;

30 he will give a cheek to him who strikes him, will be filled with reproaches.

31 Because the Lord will not reject forever;

32 because he who humbled will have compassion according to the abundance of his mercy;

33 because he did not answer from his heart and humbled sons of man.

34 To humble beneath his feet all prisoners of earth,

35 to turn aside the judgment of a man before the face of the Most High,
36 to condemn a person when he is judged, the Lord did not say.
37 Who spoke thus, and it happened? The Lord did not command,
38 will not the evils and the good come out of the mouth of the Most High?
39 Why will a living person grumble, a man concerning his sin?
40 Our way was searched out and examined, and let us return to the Lord;
41 let us lift our hearts upon hands toward the High One in heaven.
42 We sinned, acted impiously, and you were not propitiated.
43 You covered in wrath and pursued us; you killed, did not spare.
44 You covered yourself with a cloud on account of prayer,
45 to shut my eyes and to be thrust away, you placed us amid the peoples.
46 All our enemies opened their mouth wide against us;
47 fear and wrath came to us, lifting up and crushing;
48 my eye will bring down outflows of water over the crushing of the daughter of my people.
49 My eye was swallowed up, and I shall not keep silent, because there is no respite,
50 until the Lord bends down and sees from heaven;
51 my eye will glean upon my soul beyond all the daughters of a city.
52 Hunting, my enemies hunted me like a sparrow without cause,
53 they put my life to death in a pit and laid a stone upon me,
54 water poured over my head; I said, I am rejected.
55 I called upon your name, Lord, from the lowest pit;
56 you heard my voice: Do not hide your ears from my supplication.
57 You drew near to my help on the day when I called upon you; you said to me, Do not fear.
58 You judged, Lord, the cases of my soul, redeemed my life;
59 you saw, Lord, my troubles, judged my judgment;
60 you saw all their vengeance, in all their designs against me.
61 You heard their reproach, all their designs against me,
62 the lips of those rising against me and their meditations against me all the day,
63 their sitting and their rising; look upon their eyes.
64 You will give them recompense, Lord, according to the works of their hands,
65 you will give them a shield of heart, your toil to them,
66 you will pursue in anger and consume them beneath heaven, Lord.

Chapter 4

1 How will gold be dimmed, the good silver altered? Holy stones were poured out at the beginning of all the exits.

2 The precious sons of Sion, exalted in gold, how were they reckoned as earthen vessels, works of a potter's hands?

3 And indeed dragons uncovered breasts, their cubs suckled; daughters of my people became incurable, like a sparrow in a wilderness.

4 The suckling's tongue clung to his throat in thirst; infants asked for bread, there is none breaking it for them.

5 Those eating delicacies vanished in the exits; those nursed upon scarlet wrapped themselves in dung heaps.

6 And the lawlessness of the daughter of my people was made greater than the lawlessness of Sodoma, overthrown as in haste, and they did not labor with hands in her.

7 Her Nazirites were made purer than snow, shone beyond milk; they were made red beyond sapphire stones in their cut form.

8 Their appearance darkened beyond soot, they were not recognized in the exits; their skin was fixed upon their bones, they dried up, became like wood.

9 Those wounded by sword were better than those wounded by famine; they went pierced through, deprived of the produce of fields.

10 Hands of compassionate women boiled their children; they became food for them in the crushing of the daughter of my people.

11 The Lord completed his wrath, poured out the wrath of his anger and kindled fire in Sion, and it devoured her foundations.

12 Kings of earth did not believe, all who inhabit the inhabited world, that an enemy and an afflicter would enter through the gates of Ierusalem.

13 From the sins of her prophets, the injustices of her priests who pour out righteous blood in her midst.

14 Her watchers were shaken in the exits, defiled with blood; when they could not, they touched their garments.

15 Depart from unclean ones — call them — depart, depart, do not touch, because they were kindled and indeed shaken; say among the nations, They shall certainly not continue to sojourn.

16 The face of the Lord is their portion; he will not continue to look upon them; they did not regard the face of priests, did not have mercy on elders.

17 While we still existed, our eyes failed toward our help in vain; watching from afar, we watched for a nation that does not save.

18 We hunted our little ones, so that they should not walk in our squares; our time has drawn near, our days were fulfilled, our time is present.

19 Those pursuing us became swifter than eagles of heaven; upon the mountains they were kindled, in a wilderness they lay in wait for us.

20 The breath of our face, the Lord's anointed, was captured in their destructions, of whom we said, In his shadow we shall live among the nations.

21 Rejoice and be glad, daughter of Idoumaia who dwells upon earth; indeed the cup of the Lord will pass to you, and you will be made drunk and pour out.

22 Your lawlessness ceased, daughter Sion; he will no longer deport you. He visited your lawlessnesses, daughter Edom; he uncovered your impieties.

Chapter 5

1 Remember, Lord, what happened to us; look and see our reproach.

2 Our inheritance was turned over to foreigners, our houses to strangers.

3 We became orphans, there is no father; our mothers are like widows.

4 From our days our wood came in exchange.

5 Upon our neck we were pursued; we labored, did not rest.

6 Egypt gave a hand, Assour for their fullness.

7 Our fathers sinned, they do not exist; we bore their lawless deeds.

8 Slaves ruled over us; there is none redeeming from their hand.

9 At the cost of our souls we shall bring in our bread from the face of the sword of the wilderness.

10 Our skin became livid like an oven; they shriveled from the face of storms of famine.

11 They humbled women in Sion, virgins in the cities of Iouda.

12 Rulers were hung by their hands, elders were not honored.

13 Chosen ones took up weeping, and young men grew weak with wood.

14 And elders ceased from the gate, chosen ones ceased from their songs.

15 The joy of our heart ceased, our dance turned to mourning.

16 The crown of our head fell; woe indeed to us, because we sinned.

17 Concerning this our heart became painful, concerning this our eyes darkened;

18 over mount Sion, because it was destroyed; foxes passed through her.

19 But you, Lord, will dwell forever, your throne to generation and generation.

20 Why will you forget us for strife, abandon us for length of days?

21 Return us, Lord, to you, and we shall return; and renew our days as before.

22 Because rejecting, you rejected us, you were exceedingly angry against us.

Letter of Jeremiah

Chapter 1

1 Copy of a letter which Ieremias sent to those who would be led captive to Babylon by the king of the Babylonians, to announce to them according as he was commanded by God.

1 Because of the sins which you sinned before God, you will be led captive to Babylon by Nabouchodonosor king of the Babylonians.

2 Therefore, having entered Babylon, you will be there many years and a long time, until seven generations; but after this I will bring you out from there with peace.

3 And now you will see in Babylon silver and golden and wooden gods borne upon shoulders, displaying fear to the nations.

4 Therefore beware lest you too, being made like the foreigners, should be made like them, and fear should seize you concerning them,

5 when you see a crowd before and behind them worshiping them; but say in your thought, You must be worshiped, Master.

6 For my angel is with you, and he seeks out your souls.

7 For their tongue is scraped by a craftsman, and they are overlaid with gold and silver, but are false and cannot speak.

8 And taking gold, as for a maiden fond of adornment, they fashion crowns upon the heads of their gods;

9 and sometimes the priests secretly take gold and silver from their gods and spend it on themselves, and they will give some of it also to the prostitutes upon the roof.

10 And they adorn them with garments like people, silver and golden and wooden gods; but these are not preserved from corrosion and things that eat them.

11 Though they are clothed in purple apparel, they wipe their face because of the dust from the house, which is abundant upon them.

12 And it has a scepter like a person judging a country, who will not kill him who sins against it.

13 And it has a dagger in its right hand and an axe, but it will not deliver itself from war and robbers.

14 From this they are known to be no gods; therefore do not fear them.

15 For just as a person's vessel, when broken, becomes useless, such are their gods, when they are installed in the houses.

16 Their eyes are full of dust from the feet of those entering.

17 And just as the courts are fenced around for someone who has wronged a king, as for one led away to death, the priests fortify their houses with doors and locks and bars, so that they may not be plundered by robbers.

18 They burn lamps, even more than for themselves, not one of which they can see.

19 It is indeed like a beam from the house, and they say that their hearts are licked away; when creeping things from the earth devour them and their apparel, they do not perceive it.

20 Their face is blackened from the smoke from the house.

21 Upon their body and upon their head bats, swallows and birds alight, and likewise also cats.

22 From this you will know that they are not gods; therefore do not fear them.

23 For the gold which they wear for beauty, unless someone wipes off the corrosion, they shall certainly not shine; for neither, when they were being cast, did they perceive it.

24 They are bought at every price, and there is no spirit in them.

25 Without feet they are carried upon shoulders, displaying their own dishonor to people, and those who attend them are also ashamed because, if it should fall to the earth, it must rise through them;

26 neither if someone stands it upright will it move of itself, nor if it is tilted will it certainly be set upright, but gifts are set before them as before dead ones.

27 And their priests sell their sacrifices and use them for themselves; likewise also their wives preserve some of them and share neither with a poor person nor with a powerless one; a woman sitting apart and a woman in childbirth touch their sacrifices.

28 Therefore, knowing from these things that they are not gods, do not fear them.

29 For how could they be called gods? Because women set offerings before silver and golden and wooden gods;

30 and in their houses the priests sit upon seats with their tunics torn and their heads and beards shaved, whose heads are uncovered,

31 and they howl, shouting before their gods like some at a funeral banquet for a dead person.

32 The priests take from their apparel and clothe their wives and children.

33 Neither if they suffer evil from someone nor if good will they be able to repay; neither can they appoint a king nor remove one.

34 Likewise they shall certainly not be able to give wealth or bronze; if someone, having vowed a vow to them, does not pay it, they shall certainly not demand it.

35 They shall certainly not rescue a person from death nor deliver a weaker one from a strong one.

36 They shall certainly not bring a blind person to sight, nor deliver a person who is in distress.

37 They shall certainly not have mercy on a widow nor do good to an orphan.

38 The wooden and gold-overlaid and silver-overlaid ones are likened to stones from the mountain, and those who attend them will be put to shame.

39 How then must they be considered or called to be gods?

40 And further, even the Chaldeans themselves dishonor them, who, whenever they see a mute unable to speak, bring him to Bel and ask him to utter a sound, as though he were able to perceive,

41 and they themselves cannot, having understood, abandon them, for they have no perception.

42 And the women, having put cords around themselves, sit in the roads burning bran as incense;

43 and whenever one of them, drawn away by one of those passing by, lies with him, she reproaches her neighbor because she was not deemed worthy as she herself was, nor was her cord torn.

44 All the things done for them are false; how then must it be considered or said that they are gods?

45 They are fashioned by craftsmen and goldsmiths; they shall become nothing else than what the artisans wish them to become.

46 And those who fashion them themselves shall certainly not become long-lived; how indeed are the things fashioned by them going to be gods?

47 For they left falsehoods and reproach to those coming after.

48 For whenever war and evils come upon them, the priests deliberate among themselves where they may hide together with them.

49 How then is it not possible to perceive that they are not gods, who save themselves neither from war nor from evils?

50 For being wooden and overlaid with gold and silver, it will be known after these things that they are false; to all the nations and to the kings it will be manifest that they are not gods but works of human hands, and there is no work of God in them.

51 By what then must it be known that they are not gods?

52 For they shall certainly not raise up a king of a country nor give rain to people,

53 and they shall certainly not decide their judgment nor rescue one who is wronged, being powerless; for they are like crows between heaven and earth.

54 For also whenever fire falls into a house of wooden or gold-overlaid or silver-overlaid gods, their priests will flee and be saved, but they themselves will be burned up like beams in the midst.

55 And they shall certainly not withstand a king and enemies.

56 How then must it be accepted or considered that they are gods?

57 Neither from thieves nor from robbers shall wooden and silver-overlaid and gold-overlaid gods be saved, whose gold and silver and apparel which surrounds them the strong will strip off and go away possessing, nor shall they certainly help themselves;

58 so that a king displaying his own courage, or a useful vessel in a house which its possessor will use, is better than the false gods; or also a door in a house preserving the things in it is better than the false gods, and a wooden pillar in royal dwellings than the false gods.

59 For sun and moon and stars, being bright and sent forth for needs, are obedient;

60 likewise also lightning, whenever it appears, is plainly seen; and the same wind blows in every country;

61 and whenever the clouds are commanded by God to go over all the inhabited world, they fulfill what was ordered; and the fire sent forth from above to consume mountains and woods does what was commanded.

62 But these are likened to them neither in appearances nor in powers.

63 From this they must neither be considered nor called gods, since they are able neither to judge a judgment nor to do good to people.

64 Therefore, knowing that they are not gods, do not fear them.

65 For neither shall they curse kings nor bless them.

66 And they shall certainly not show signs among nations in heaven, nor shine like the sun nor illuminate like the moon.

67 The beasts are better than they, which can benefit themselves by fleeing into shelter.

68 Therefore in no manner is it manifest to us that they are gods; therefore do not fear them.

69 For just as a scarecrow in a cucumber bed guards nothing, so are their wooden and gold-overlaid and silver-overlaid gods.

70 In the same manner also their wooden and gold-overlaid and silver-overlaid gods are likened to a thorn bush in a garden upon which every bird sits, and likewise also to a dead person cast in darkness.

71 And from the purple and the marble upon them which decays you will know that they are not gods; and they themselves afterward will be eaten away, and there will be reproach in the country.

72 Therefore a righteous person who has no idols is better, for he will be far from reproach.

Ezekiel

Chapter 1

1 And it happened in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, on the fifth of the month, and I was amid the captivity by the river Chobar, and the heavens were opened, and I saw visions of God;

2 on the fifth of the month [this was the fifth year of the captivity of king Ioakim]

3 and the word of the Lord came to Iezekiel son of Bouzi, the priest, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chobar; and the hand of the Lord came upon me,

4 and I saw, and behold, a lifting wind was coming from the north, and a great cloud in it, and radiance around it and flashing fire, and in its midst like the appearance of electrum amid the fire, and radiance in it.

5 And in the midst was as the likeness of four living creatures; and this was their appearance: a human likeness upon them,

6 and four faces to each, and four wings to each.

7 And their legs were straight, and their feet winged, and sparks like flashing bronze, and their wings light.

8 And a human hand beneath their wings upon their four sides; and the faces of the four of them

9 did not turn when they walked; each went facing their face.

10 And the likeness of their faces: a human face and a lion's face on the right for the four, and a calf's face on the left for the four, and an eagle's face for the four.

11 And their wings were stretched upward for the four, for each two joined to one another, and two covered over their body.

12 And each went facing its face; wherever the spirit went, they went and did not turn.

13 And amid the living creatures an appearance like burning coals of fire, like the sight of torches whirling among the living creatures, and radiance of fire, and lightning went out from the fire.

15 And I saw, and behold, one wheel upon the earth adjoining the living creatures, for the four;

16 and the form of the wheels like the form of tharsis, and one likeness for the four, and their workmanship was as though a wheel were within a wheel.

17 They went upon their four sides; they did not turn as they went,

18 nor did their backs, and they had height; and I saw them, and their backs were full of eyes round about, for the four.

19 And when the living creatures went, the wheels went adjoining them, and when the living creatures rose from the earth, the wheels rose.

20 Wherever the cloud was, there was the spirit of going; the living creatures and the wheels went and rose with them, because a spirit of life was in the wheels.

21 When they went, they went, and when they stood, they stood, and when they rose from the earth, they rose with them, because a spirit of life was in the wheels.

22 And a likeness above the head of the living creatures, as a firmament like the appearance of crystal, stretched over their wings above;

23 and beneath the firmament their wings were stretched, fluttering one against another, two joined for each, covering their bodies.

24 And I heard the sound of their wings as they went, like the sound of much water; and when they stood, their wings ceased.

25 And behold, a voice above the firmament which was above their head.

26 Like the appearance of a sapphire stone, a likeness of a throne upon it, and upon the likeness of the throne a likeness as the form of a person above.

27 And I saw as the sight of electrum from the appearance of the waist and upward, and from the appearance of the waist downward I saw as the appearance of fire and its radiance round about.

28 Like the appearance of a bow when it is in the cloud on a day of rain, so was the standing of the radiance round about. This was the appearance of the likeness of the Lord's glory; and I saw and fall upon my face and heard the voice of one speaking.

Chapter 2

1 And he said to me, Son of man, stand upon your feet, and I will speak to you.

2 And a spirit came upon me and took me up and raised me and stood me upon my feet, and I heard him speaking to me,

3 and he said to me, Son of man, I send you out to the house of Israel, those provoking me to bitterness, who provoked me to bitterness, they and their fathers, until this day,

4 and you shall say to them, Thus says the Lord,

5 Whether indeed they hear or are terrified — because it is a house provoking to bitterness — and they will know that you are a prophet in their midst.

6 And you, son of man, do not fear them nor be dismayed before their face, because they will rage and gather against you round about, and you dwell amid scorpions; do not fear their words and do not be dismayed before their face, because it is a house provoking to bitterness.

7 And you shall speak my words to them, whether indeed they hear or are terrified, because it is a house provoking to bitterness.

8 And you, son of man, hear him who speaks to you; do not become one provoking to bitterness like the house provoking to bitterness; open your mouth wide and eat what I give you.

9 And I saw, and behold, a hand stretched toward me, and in it a scroll of a book;

10 and he unrolled it before me, and in it were things written on the back and on the front, and upon it were written lament and song and woe.

Chapter 3

1 And he said to me, Son of man, devour this scroll and go and speak to the sons of Israel.

2 And I opened my mouth wide, and he fed me the scroll.

3 And he said to me, Son of man, your mouth shall eat, and your belly shall be filled with this scroll given to you. And I ate it, and it became in my mouth like sweet honey.

4 And he said to me, Son of man, go, enter the house of Israel and speak my words to them;

5 because you are not sent out to a people deep of lip and heavy of tongue, to the house of Israel,

6 nor to many peoples of another voice or another tongue, nor to those weighty in tongue, whose words you will not understand; and if I had sent you out to such ones, these would have heard you.

7 But the house of Israel will certainly not wish to hear you, because they do not wish to hear me; because all the house of Israel are contentious and hardhearted.

8 And behold, I have made your face strong before their faces, and I will strengthen your contention against their contention,

9 and it will be continually stronger than rock; do not fear them nor be terrified before their face, because it is a house provoking to bitterness.

10 And he said to me, Son of man, all the words which I have spoken with you, receive into your heart and hear with your ears,

11 and go, enter the captivity, to the sons of your people, and you shall speak to them and say to them, Thus says the Lord, whether indeed they hear, whether indeed they yield.

12 And a spirit took me up, and I heard behind me a sound of a great shaking: Blessed is the glory of the Lord from his place.

13 And I saw the sound of the wings of the living creatures fluttering one against another, and the sound of the wheels adjoining them and the sound of the shaking.

14 And the spirit raised me and took me up, and I went in the impulse of my spirit, and the hand of the Lord became mighty upon me.

15 And I entered the captivity aloft and went round those dwelling by the river Chobar, those who were there, and sat there seven days moving about in their midst.

16 And it happened after the seven days, the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

17 Son of man, I have made you a watchman for the house of Israel, and you shall hear a word from my mouth and warn them from me.

18 When I say to the lawless one, By death you shall be put to death, and you did not warn him nor speak to warn the lawless one to turn from his ways that he might live, that lawless one will die in his injustice, and I will require his blood from your hand.

19 And if you warn the lawless one, and he does not turn from his lawlessness and his way, that lawless one will die in his injustice, and you will rescue your soul.

20 And when a righteous one turns from his righteous deeds and commits a transgression, and I give torment before his face, he will die, because you did not warn him, and he will die in his sins, because his righteous deeds which he did shall certainly not be remembered, and I will require his blood from your hand.

21 But if you warn the righteous one not to sin, and he does not sin, the righteous one will live with life, because you warned him, and you will rescue your own soul.

22 And the hand of the Lord came upon me, and he said to me, Rise and go out to the plain, and there speech will be made to you.

23 And I rose and went out to the plain, and behold, there the glory of the Lord stood, like the vision and like the glory which I saw by the river Chobar, and I fall upon my face.

24 And a spirit came upon me and stood me upon my feet, and spoke to me and said to me, Enter and be shut up amid your house.

25 And you, son of man, behold, bonds have been given upon you, and they will bind you in them, and you shall certainly not go out from their midst.

26 And I will bind your tongue, and you will be made mute and will not be to them a man reproving, because it is a house provoking to bitterness.

27 And when I speak to you, I will open your mouth, and you shall say to them, Thus says the Lord, Let him who hears hear, and let him who disobeys disobey, because it is a house provoking to bitterness.

Chapter 4

1 And you, son of man, take a brick for yourself and place it before your face and draw upon it the city Ierusalem,

2 and set a siege against it and build outworks against it and cast a rampart against it and set camps against it and arrange the missile stations round about;

3 and take an iron pan for yourself and place it as an iron wall between you and the city and prepare your face against it, and it shall be under confinement, and you shall confine it; this is a sign for the sons of Israel. —

4 And you shall lie upon your left side and place the injustices of the house of Israel upon it, according to the number of the days, a hundred and fifty, which you shall lie upon it, and bear their injustices.

5 And I have given you their two injustices for a number of days, a hundred and ninety days. And you shall bear the injustices of the house of Israel

6 and complete all these things; and you shall lie upon your right side and bear the injustices of the house of Iouda forty days. I have appointed you a day for a year.

7 And for the confinement of Ierusalem you shall prepare your face and make your arm firm and prophesy against it.

8 And behold, I have given bonds upon you, and do not turn from your side onto your side until the days of your confinement are completed. —

9 And take for yourself wheat and barley and beans and lentils and millet and spelt and put them into one earthen vessel and make them into bread for yourself, and according to the number of the days which you sleep upon your side, a hundred and ninety days, you shall eat them.

10 And your food which you shall eat shall be by weight, twenty shekels a day; from time to time you shall eat them.

11 And you shall drink water by measure, the sixth of a hin; from time to time you shall drink.

12 And you shall eat them as a barley cake baked in ashes; in lumps of human dung you shall bake them before their eyes

13 and say, Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel, Thus shall the sons of Israel eat unclean things among the nations.

14 And I said, By no means, Lord God of Israel; behold, my soul has not been defiled in uncleanness, and I have not eaten anything dead of itself or taken by beasts from my birth until now, nor has any stale meat entered my mouth.

15 And he said to me, Behold, I have given you cow dung instead of human dung, and you shall make your bread upon it.

16 And he said to me, Son of man, behold, I break the support of bread in Ierusalem, and they shall eat bread by weight and in want and drink water by measure and in destruction,

17 so that they become wanting bread and water; and a person and his brother will be destroyed and waste away in their injustices. —

Chapter 5

1 And you, son of man, take for yourself a sword sharper than a barber's razor; acquire it for yourself and bring it upon your head and upon your beard. And take a balance of weights and divide them;

2 a fourth you shall burn with fire amid the city at the completion of the days of confinement; and take a fourth and burn it up in its midst; and a fourth you shall cut with a sword round about it; and a fourth you shall scatter to the wind, and I will draw a sword behind them.

3 And take from there a few in number and gather them in your mantle.

4 And from these take yet more and throw them into the midst of the fire and burn them up with fire; from it fire will go out. And you shall say to all the house of Israel,

5 Thus says the Lord, This is Ierusalem; I have placed her amid the nations and the countries round about her.

6 And you shall speak my just requirements to the lawless woman from the nations and my statutes from the countries round about her, because they rejected my just requirements and did not walk in my statutes, in them.

7 Therefore thus says the Lord, Because your impulse is from the nations round about you and you did not walk in my statutes and did not do my just requirements, but neither have you acted according to the just requirements of the nations round about you,

8 therefore thus says the Lord, Behold, I am against you and will execute judgment in your midst before the nations

9 and do in you what I have not done and what I will not do the like of again, according to all your abominations.

10 Therefore fathers shall eat children in your midst, and children shall eat fathers; and I will execute judgments in you and scatter all your remnants to every wind.

11 Therefore, I live, says the Lord, surely because you defiled my holy things with all your abominations, I too will reject you; my eye will not spare, and I too will not have mercy.

12 A fourth of you will be consumed in death; and a fourth of you will be brought to an end in famine in your midst; and a fourth of you I will scatter them to every wind; and a fourth of you will fall by sword round about you, and I will draw a sword behind them.

13 And my wrath and my anger against them will be completed, and you will recognize that I the Lord have spoken in my zeal when I complete my anger against them.

14 And I will make you a wilderness and your daughters round about you before everyone passing through,

15 and you will be lamented and wretched among the nations round about you when I execute judgments in you in the vengeance of my wrath; I the Lord have spoken.

16 When I send out my missiles of famine upon them, and they will be for failure, and I will break your support of bread.

17 And I will send out famine and evil beasts against you and punish you, and death and blood will pass over you, and I will bring a sword against you round about; I the Lord have spoken.

Chapter 6

1 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 Son of man, set your face against the mountains of Israel and prophesy against them

3 and say, Mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord: Thus says the Lord to the mountains and the hills and the ravines and the valleys, Behold, I bring a sword upon you, and your high places will be destroyed,

4 and your altars and your precincts will be crushed, and I will cast down your wounded before your idols

5 and scatter your bones round about your altars.

6 In all your habitation the cities will be made desolate and the high places destroyed, so that your altars may be destroyed, and your idols will be crushed and your precincts removed,

7 and wounded ones will fall in your midst, and you will recognize that I am the Lord.

8 When there are among you those escaping from sword among the nations and in your scattering in the countries,

9 and those escaping among you will remember me among the nations where they were taken captive there; I have sworn against their heart which prostitutes itself away from me and against their eyes which prostitute themselves after their practices, and they will beat their faces for all their abominations;

10 and they will recognize that I the Lord have spoken.

11 Thus says the Lord, Clap with the hand and stamp with the foot and say, Well done, well done, over all the abominations of the house of Israel; by sword and by death and by famine they will fall.

12 The one near will fall by sword, and the one far away will end in death, and the one enclosed will be brought to an end in famine, and I will complete my anger against them.

13 And you will know that I am the Lord when your wounded are amid your idols round about your altars, upon every high hill and beneath a shady tree, where they gave there a fragrant smell to all their idols.

14 And I will stretch my hand against them and make the land destruction and ruin, from the wilderness Deblatha, from all the habitation; and you will recognize that I am the Lord.

Chapter 7

1 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 And you, son of man, say, Thus says the Lord to the land of Israel, An end has come, the end has come upon the four wings of the earth;

3 the end has come

4 upon you who inhabit the land; the time has come, the day has drawn near, not with tumults nor with birth pangs.

5 Now from nearby I will pour out my anger upon you and complete my wrath in you and judge you in your ways and bring all your abominations upon you;

6 my eye will not spare, nor shall I have mercy, because I will bring your ways upon you, and your abominations will be in your midst, and you will recognize that I am the Lord who strikes.

7 Now the end is against you, and I will send against you and punish you in your ways and bring all your abominations upon you;

8 my eye will not spare you, nor shall I have mercy, because I will bring your way upon you, and your abominations will be in your midst; and you will recognize that I am the Lord.

9 Because thus says the Lord,

10 Behold, the end has come, behold, the day of the Lord; even if the rod has blossomed, insolence has risen up.

11 And he will break the support of a lawless one, and not with tumult nor with haste.

12 The time has come, behold, the day; let the buyer not rejoice, and let the seller not lament;

13 because the buyer shall no longer return to the seller, and a person will not prevail in the eye of his life.

14 Blow with a trumpet and judge all things together.

15 War with sword outside, and famine and death within; the one in the plain will end by sword, but those in the city famine and death will bring to an end.

16 And those escaping among them will escape and be upon the mountains; I will kill all, each in his injustices.

17 All hands will grow faint, and all thighs will be defiled with moisture,

18 and they will gird themselves with sackcloth, and amazement will cover them, and upon every face shame will be upon them, and upon every head baldness.

19 Their silver will be thrown in the squares, and their gold will be disregarded; their souls shall certainly not be filled, and their bellies shall certainly not be filled; because it became a torment of their injustices.

20 Choice ornaments they made into pride, and images of their abominations they made from them; for this reason I have given them to them for uncleanness.

21 And I will hand them into the hands of foreigners to plunder them and to the pests of the earth as spoils, and they will profane them.

22 And I will turn my face away from them, and they will defile my oversight and enter them without guard and profane them;

23 and they will make a confusion, because the land is full of peoples and the city full of lawlessness.

24 And I will turn away the arrogance of their strength, and their holy things will be defiled.

25 Expiation will come and seek peace, and there will be none.

26 Woe upon woe will be, and report upon report will be, and a vision will be sought from a prophet, and law will perish from a priest and counsel from elders.

27 A ruler will clothe himself in destruction, and the hands of the people of the land will be paralyzed; according to their ways I will deal with them and in their judgments punish them; and they will know that I am the Lord.

Chapter 8

1 And it happened in the sixth year, in the fifth month, on the fifth of the month, I sat in the house, and the elders of Iouda sat before me, and the hand of the Lord came upon me,

2 and I saw, and behold, a likeness of a man, from his waist downward fire, and from his waist upward like the appearance of electrum.

3 And he stretched a likeness of a hand and took me by my crown, and a spirit took me up between earth and heaven and brought me to Ierusalem in a vision of God, to the entrance of the inner gate facing north, where was the pillar of the possessor.

4 And behold, there was the glory of the Lord God of Israel, according to the vision which I saw in the plain.

5 And he said to me, Son of man, look up with your eyes toward the north; and I looked up with my eyes toward the north, and behold, from the north to the gate toward the east.

6 And he said to me, Son of man, have you seen what these do? They do great lawless deeds here, to keep away from my holy things; and you will yet see greater lawless deeds.

7 And he brought me to the entrance of the court

8 and said to me, Son of man, dig; and I dug, and behold, one door.

9 And he said to me, Enter and see the lawless deeds which these do here;

10 and I entered and saw, and behold, vain abominations and all the idols of the house of Israel drawn upon it round about,

11 and seventy men from the elders of the house of Israel, and Iezonias son of Saphan stood amid them before their face, and each held his incense burner in the hand, and the vapor of the incense rose.

12 And he said to me, Son of man, have you seen what the elders of the house of Israel do, each of them in their hidden chamber? Because they said, The Lord does not see, the Lord has abandoned the land.

13 And he said to me, You will yet see greater lawless deeds which these do.

14 And he brought me to the entrance of the gate of the Lord's house facing north, and behold, there women sat lamenting Thammouz,

15 and he said to me, Son of man, have you seen? And you will yet see practices greater than these.

16 And he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's house, and behold, at the entrance of the Lord's temple, between the ailam and the altar, about twenty men, their backs toward the Lord's temple and their faces opposite, and these worship the sun;

17 and he said to me, Have you seen, son of man? Is it a small thing for the house of Iouda to do the lawless deeds which they have done here? Because they filled the land with lawlessness, and behold, they are as ones sneering.

18 And I will deal with them in wrath; my eye will not spare, nor shall I have mercy.

Chapter 9

1 And he cried into my ears with a great voice, saying, The vengeance of the city has drawn near; and each held the instruments of destruction in his hand.

2 And behold, six men were coming from the way of the high gate facing north, and each had an axe in his hand; and one man amid them clothed in a robe reaching the feet, and a sapphire girdle upon his waist; and they entered and stood adjoining the bronze altar.

3 And the glory of the God of Israel, which was upon them, rose from the cheroubin to the open court of the house. And he called the man clothed in the robe reaching the feet, who had the girdle upon his waist,

4 and said to him, Pass through the midst of Ierusalem and put the sign upon the foreheads of the men who groan and suffer over all the lawless deeds being done in her midst.

5 And to these he said in my hearing, Go after him into the city and strike, and do not spare with your eyes and do not have mercy;

6 kill elder and young man and maiden and infants and women unto obliteration, but do not draw near to any upon whom is the sign; and begin from my holy things. And they began from the elderly men who were within the house.

7 And he said to them, Defile the house and fill the roads with dead ones, going out, and strike.

8 And it happened as they struck, and I fall upon my face and cried out and said, Alas for me, Lord, are you obliterating the remnants of Israel when you pour out your wrath upon Ierusalem?

9 And he said to me, The injustice of the house of Israel and Iouda has grown exceedingly, exceedingly great, because the land was filled with many peoples, and the city was filled with injustice and uncleanness; because they said, The Lord has abandoned the land, the Lord does not look upon it.

10 And my eye will not spare, nor shall I have mercy; I have brought their ways upon their heads.

11 And behold, the man clothed in the robe reaching the feet and girded with the girdle about his waist, and he answered, saying, I have done as you commanded me.

Chapter 10

1 And I saw, and behold, above the firmament over the head of the cheroubin, like a sapphire stone, a likeness of a throne upon them.

2 And he said to the man clothed in the robe, Enter amid the wheels beneath the cheroubin and fill your handfuls with coals of fire from amid the cheroubin and scatter them upon the city; and he entered before me.

3 And the cheroubin stood on the right of the house as the man entered, and the cloud filled the inner court.

4 And the glory of the Lord rose from the cheroubin to the open court of the house, and the cloud filled the house, and the court was filled with the radiance of the Lord's glory;

5 and the sound of the wings of the cheroubin was heard as far as the outer court, like the voice of God Saddai speaking.

6 And it happened when he commanded the man clothed in the holy robe, saying, Take fire from amid the wheels, from amid the cheroubin, and he entered and stood adjoining the wheels,

7 and he stretched his hand into the midst of the fire which was amid the cheroubin and took and gave into the hands of him clothed in the holy robe, and he took and went out.

8 And I saw the cheroubin, a likeness of human hands beneath their wings.

9 And I saw, and behold, four wheels stood adjoining the cheroubin, one wheel adjoining one cheroub, and the appearance of the wheels like the appearance of a carbuncle stone.

10 And their appearance was one likeness for the four, as when a wheel is amid a wheel.

11 As they went, they went toward their four sides; they did not turn as they went, because toward whatever place the one leading part looked, they went and did not turn as they went.

12 And their backs and their hands and their wings and the wheels were full of eyes round about, for their four wheels;

13 and these wheels were called Gelgel in my hearing;

15 and the cheroubin rose. This is the living creature which I saw by the river Chobar.

16 And when the cheroubin went, the wheels went, and these adjoined them; and when the cheroubin raised their wings to rise aloft from the earth, their wheels did not turn;

17 when they stood, they stood, and when they rose aloft, they rose aloft with them, because a spirit of life was in them.

18 And the glory of the Lord went out from the house and mounted upon the cheroubin,

19 and the cheroubin took up their wings and rose aloft from the earth before me as they went out, and the wheels adjoined them, and they stood at the entrance of the opposite gate of the Lord's house, and the glory of the God of Israel was above upon them.

20 This is the living creature which I saw beneath the God of Israel by the river Chobar, and I knew that they are cheroubin.

21 Four faces to each, and eight wings to each, and a likeness of human hands beneath their wings.

22 And the likeness of their faces, these are the faces which I saw beneath the glory of the God of Israel by the river Chobar, and each of them went facing their face.

Chapter 11

1 And a spirit took me up and brought me to the opposite gate of the Lord's house, facing east; and behold, at the entrance of the gate about twenty-five men, and I saw amid them Iezonias son of Ezer and Phaltias son of Banaias, the leaders of the people.

2 And the Lord said to me, Son of man, these are the men who devise vain things and plan an evil plan in this city,

3 who say, Have not the houses been built recently? This is the pot, and we the meat.

4 Therefore prophesy against them, prophesy, son of man.

5 And the spirit of the Lord fell upon me and said to me, Say, Thus says the Lord, Thus you said, house of Israel, and I know the designs of your spirit.

6 You multiplied your dead in this city and filled her roads with wounded ones.

7 Therefore thus says the Lord, Your dead whom you struck in her midst, these are the meat, and she is the pot, and I will bring you out from her midst.

8 You fear a sword, and I will bring a sword upon you, says the Lord.

9 And I will bring you out from her midst and hand you into the hands of foreigners and execute judgments among you.

10 You will fall by sword; upon the borders of Israel I will judge you; and you will recognize that I am the Lord.

11 She will not be a pot for you, and you shall certainly not become meat in her midst; upon the borders of Israel I will judge you,

12 and you will recognize that I am the Lord. —

13 And it happened as I prophesied, and Phaltias son of Banaias died, and I fall upon my face and cried with a great voice and said, Alas, alas, Lord, you are bringing the remnants of Israel to an end.

14 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

15 Son of man, your brothers and the men of your captivity and all the house of Israel have been brought to an end, to whom those dwelling in Ierusalem said, Keep far away from the Lord; to us the land has been given for an inheritance.

16 Therefore say, Thus says the Lord, I will thrust them away into the nations and scatter them into all the earth, and I will be a small sanctuary for them in the countries where they enter there.

17 Therefore say, Thus says the Lord, And I will receive them from the nations and gather them from the countries where I scattered them in them, and give them the land of Israel.

18 And they will enter there and remove all her abominations and all her lawless deeds from her.

19 And I will give them another heart and put a new spirit in them and tear the stone heart out of their flesh and give them a heart of flesh,

20 so that they walk in my ordinances and keep my just requirements and do them; and they shall be a people to me, and I shall be God to them.

21 And toward the heart of their abominations and their lawless deeds, as their heart went, I have brought their ways upon their heads, says the Lord.

22 And the cheroubin raised their wings, and the wheels adjoined them, and the glory of the God of Israel was upon them above them;

23 and the glory of the Lord rose from amid the city and stood upon the mountain which was opposite the city.

24 And a spirit took me up and brought me to the land of the Chaldeans, to the captivity, in a vision, in the spirit of God; and I rose from the vision which I saw,

25 and spoke to the captivity all the words of the Lord which he showed me.

Chapter 12

1 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 Son of man, you dwell amid their injustices, who have eyes to see and do not see and have ears to hear and do not hear, because it is a house provoking to bitterness.

3 And you, son of man, prepare for yourself the baggage of captivity by day before them and go into captivity from your place to another place before them, so that they may see, because it is a house provoking to bitterness.

4 And you shall bring out your baggage as baggage of captivity by day before their eyes, and you shall go out in the evening as a captive goes out;

5 before them dig through the wall for yourself and pass out through it;

6 before them you shall be taken up upon shoulders and go out hidden; you shall cover your face and certainly not see the land; because I have made you a portent for the house of Israel.

7 And I did thus according to all that he commanded me, and brought out baggage as baggage of captivity by day and in the evening dug through the wall for myself and went out hidden; I was taken up upon shoulders before them. —

8 And the word of the Lord came to me in the morning, saying,

9 Son of man, did not the house of Israel, the house provoking to bitterness, say to you, What are you doing?

10 Say to them, Thus says the Lord Lord, The ruler and the leader in Ierusalem and all the house of Israel who are in their midst,

11 say that I perform portents in her midst; as I have done, so it will be for them; they will go in removal and in captivity,

12 and the ruler in their midst will be lifted upon shoulders and go out hidden through the wall, and he will dig through to go out through it; he will cover his face so that he may not be seen by an eye, and he himself will not see the land.

13 And I will spread my net over him, and he will be captured in my enclosure, and I will bring him to Babylon, to the land of the Chaldeans, and he will not see it and will end there.

14 And all those round about him, his helpers and all who support him, I will scatter to every wind and draw a sword behind them;

15 and they will know that I am the Lord when I scatter them among the nations, and I will scatter them in the countries.

16 And I will leave among them men few in number from sword and famine and death, so that they recount all their lawless deeds among the nations where they entered there; and they will know that I am the Lord. —

17 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

18 Son of man, you shall eat your bread with pain and drink your water with torment and affliction

19 and say to the people of the land, Thus says the Lord to those dwelling in Ierusalem upon the land of Israel, They will eat their bread with want and drink their water with destruction, so that the land with its fullness may be destroyed, for all who dwell in it are in impiety;

20 and their inhabited cities will be made desolate, and the land will be for destruction; and you will recognize that I am the Lord.

21 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

22 Son of man, what is this proverb of yours upon the land of Israel, saying, The days are far away, a vision has perished?

23 Therefore say to them, Thus says the Lord, I will turn away this proverb, and the house of Israel shall no longer say this proverb, because you shall speak to them, The days and the word of every vision have drawn near;

24 because there will no longer be any false vision and one divining pleasing things amid the sons of Israel,

25 because I the Lord will speak my words, I will speak and do and certainly not delay any longer, because in your days, house provoking to bitterness, I will speak a word and do it, says the Lord. —

26 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

27 Son of man, behold, the house of Israel provoking to bitterness, saying, they say, The vision which this one sees is for many days, and this one prophesies for distant times.

28 Therefore say to them, Thus says the Lord, All my words which I speak shall certainly no longer be delayed; I will speak and do, says the Lord.

Chapter 13

1 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel, and you shall prophesy and say to them, Hear the word of the Lord,

3 Thus says the Lord, Woe to those prophesying from their heart and seeing nothing at all.

4 Your prophets, Israel, are like foxes in the wildernesses;

5 they did not stand in a firm position and gathered flocks against the house of Israel; those saying, On the day of the Lord, did not rise;

6 seeing false things, divining vain things, those saying, The Lord says, and the Lord has not sent them, and they began to establish a word.

7 Have you not seen a false vision and spoken vain divinations?

8 Therefore say, Thus says the Lord, Because your words are false and your divinations vain, therefore behold, I am against you, says the Lord,

9 and I will stretch my hand against the prophets who see false things and utter vain things; they will not be in the discipline of my people nor be inscribed in the register of the house of Israel, and they will not enter the land of Israel; and they will know that I am the Lord.

10 Because they misled my people, saying, Peace, peace, and there was no peace, and this one builds a wall, and they plaster it, whether it will fall,

11 say to those plastering, It will fall, and there will be flooding rain, and I will put stones for hurling against their joints, and they will fall, and a lifting wind, and it will be torn apart.

12 And behold, the wall has fallen, and will they not say to you, Where is your plaster which you plastered?

13 Therefore thus says the Lord, And I will break forth a lifting blast with wrath, and flooding rain will be in my anger, and I will bring the stones for hurling in wrath unto an end

14 and tear down the wall which you plastered, and it will fall; and I will lay it upon the earth, and its foundations will be uncovered, and it will fall, and you will be brought to an end with reproofs; and you will recognize that I am the Lord.

15 And I will complete my wrath against the wall and against those plastering it, and it will fall. And I said to you, There is no wall nor those plastering it,

16 prophets of Israel who prophesy concerning Ierusalem and who see peace for her, and there is no peace, says the Lord. —

17 And you, son of man, set your face against the daughters of your people who prophesy from their heart and prophesy against them

18 and say, Thus says the Lord, Woe to those sewing cushions upon every elbow of an arm and making coverings upon every head of every age, to pervert souls; the souls of my people were perverted, and they preserved souls.

19 And they profaned me toward my people for a handful of barley and for fragments of bread, to kill souls which ought not to die and to preserve souls which ought not to live, when you utter things to a people who hear vain utterances.

20 Therefore thus says the Lord Lord, Behold, I am against your cushions upon which you entangle souls there, and I will tear them from your arms and send out the souls whose souls you pervert, into scattering;

21 and I will tear your coverings and rescue my people from your hand, and they will no longer be in your hands for entanglement; and you will recognize that I am the Lord.

22 Because you perverted the heart of a righteous one unjustly, and I did not pervert him, and strengthened the hands of a lawless one so that he should not at all turn from his evil way and live,

23 therefore you shall certainly not see false things nor divine divinations any longer, and I will rescue my people from your hand; and you will know that I am the Lord.

Chapter 14

1 And men from the elders of Israel came to me and sat before my face.

2 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

3 Son of man, these men placed their thoughts upon their hearts and set the punishment of their injustices before their face; shall I, answering, answer them?

4 Therefore speak to them and say to them, Thus says the Lord, Any person from the house of Israel who places his thoughts upon his heart and sets the punishment of his injustice before his face and comes to the prophet, I the Lord will answer him in the things in which his thought is entangled,

5 so that he turn the house of Israel aside according to their hearts alienated from me in their thoughts.

6 Therefore say to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord Lord, Return and turn away from your practices and from all your impieties and turn your faces.

7 Because any person from the house of Israel and from the sojourners sojourning in Israel who is alienated from me and places his thoughts upon his heart and sets the punishment of his injustice before his face and comes to the prophet to inquire of him concerning me, I the Lord will answer him in that in which he is entangled in it;

8 and I will set my face against that person and make him a wilderness and destruction and remove him from amid my people; and you will recognize that I am the Lord.

9 And if the prophet is misled and speaks, I the Lord have misled that prophet and will stretch my hand against him and destroy him from amid my people Israel.

10 And they will bear their injustice; according to the wrong of the inquirer and according to the wrong, likewise it will be for the prophet,

11 so that the house of Israel may no longer stray from me, and that they may no longer be defiled in all their transgressions; and they shall be a people to me, and I shall be God to them, says the Lord.

12 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

13 Son of man, if a land sins against me by committing a transgression, and I stretch my hand against it and break its support of bread and send out famine upon it and remove human and beasts from it,

14 and if these three men are in its midst, Noe and Daniel and Iob, they will be saved in their righteousness, says the Lord.

15 And if I bring evil beasts upon the land and punish it and it becomes destruction and there is none passing through from the face of the beasts,

16 and these three men are in its midst, I live, says the Lord, no sons or daughters will be saved, but they alone will be saved, and the land will become ruin.

17 Or also if I bring a sword upon that land and say, Let a sword pass through the land, and I remove human and beast from it,

18 and these three men are in its midst, I live, says the Lord, they shall certainly not rescue sons nor daughters; they alone will be saved.

19 Or also if I send death upon that land and pour out my wrath upon it in blood, to destroy human and beast from it,

20 and Noe and Daniel and Iob are in its midst, I live, says the Lord, no sons or daughters shall be left; they in their righteousness will rescue their souls.

21 Thus says the Lord, But if I also send out my four evil acts of vengeance, sword and famine and evil beasts and death, upon Ierusalem, to destroy human and beast from her,

22 and behold, left in her are her survivors who bring sons and daughters out of her, behold, they go out to you, and you will see their ways and their thoughts and change your mind concerning the evils which I brought upon Ierusalem, all the evils which I brought upon her,

23 and they will comfort you, because you will see their ways and their thoughts and recognize that I have not done in vain all that I did in her, says the Lord.

Chapter 15

1 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 And you, son of man, what could the wood of the vine become, among all the wood of the branches which are among the trees of the forest?

3 Will they take wood from it to make it into workmanship? Will they take a peg from it to hang any vessel upon it?

4 Except that it has been given to fire for consumption; the yearly pruning from it the fire consumes, and it fails utterly; will it be useful for workmanship?

5 Not even while it is still whole will it be for workmanship. Much less, if fire also consumes it utterly, will it still be for workmanship?

6 Therefore say, Thus says the Lord, As the wood of the vine among the trees of the forest, which I have given to fire for consumption, so I have given those dwelling in Ierusalem.

7 And I will set my face against them; they will go out from fire, and fire will devour them, and they will recognize that I am the Lord when I set my face against them.

8 And I will give the land to destruction because they committed a transgression, says the Lord.

Chapter 16

1 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 Son of man, testify to Ierusalem concerning her lawless deeds

3 and say, Thus says the Lord to Ierusalem, Your root and your birth are from the land of Chanaan; your father an Amorrite, and your mother a Chettaia.

4 And your birth: on the day when you were born, they did not bind your breasts, and you were not washed in water nor salted with salt nor wrapped in swaddling clothes,

5 nor did my eye spare you, to do one of all these things for you, to feel anything for you, and you were cast upon the face of the plain in the crookedness of your soul on the day when you were born.

6 And I passed by you and saw you smeared in your blood and said to you, From your blood, life;

7 multiply; like the sprouting of the field I have made you. And you multiplied and grew great and entered cities of cities; your breasts were raised, and your hair grew, but you were naked and indecent.

8 And I passed through you and saw you, and behold, your time was a time of those lodging, and I spread my wings over you and covered your indecency; and I swore to you and entered into a covenant with you, says the Lord, and you became mine.

9 And I washed you in water and washed your blood off you and anointed you with oil

10 and clothed you in embroidered things and shod you in blue and girded you with fine linen and wrapped you in woven hair,

11 and adorned you with adornment and placed bracelets around your hands and a necklace around your neck,

12 and put a ring around your nostril and little rings upon your ears and a crown of boasting upon your head;

13 and you were adorned with gold and silver, and your coverings were fine linen and woven hair and embroidery; you ate fine flour and oil and honey and became exceedingly beautiful.

14 And your name went out among the nations in your beauty, because it was perfected in comeliness, in the beauty which I set upon you, says the Lord. —

15 And you trusted in your beauty and prostituted yourself on account of your name and poured out your prostitution upon every passerby, which shall not be.

16 And you took from your garments and made sewn idols for yourself and prostituted yourself upon them; and you shall certainly not enter, nor shall it happen.

17 And you took the vessels of your boasting from my gold and from my silver, from what I gave you, and made male images for yourself and prostituted yourself with them;

18 and you took your embroidered apparel and clothed them, and my oil and my incense you placed before their face;

19 and my bread which I gave you — fine flour and oil and honey I fed you — and you placed them before their face for a fragrant smell; and it happened, says the Lord.

20 And you took your sons and your daughters whom you bore and sacrificed them to them for consumption, as though your prostitution were a small thing,

21 and slaughtered your children and gave them when you performed rites of aversion with them.

22 This beyond all your prostitution, and you did not remember the days of your infancy, when you were naked and indecent and lived smeared in your blood.

23 And it happened after all your wickedness, says the Lord,

24 and you built yourself a house of prostitution and made yourself an exposed place in every square,

25 and at the beginning of every road you built your brothels and ruined your beauty and spread your legs for every passerby and multiplied your prostitution;

26 and you prostituted yourself with the sons of Egypt, your neighbors, great of flesh, and prostituted yourself in many ways to provoke me to anger.

27 But if I stretch my hand against you, and I will remove your statutes and hand you over to the desires of those who hate you, daughters of foreigners who turn you aside from your way in which you acted impiously.

28 And you prostituted yourself with the daughters of Assour and were not filled even thus; and you prostituted yourself and were not filled.

29 And you multiplied your covenants toward the land of the Chaldeans and were not filled even with these.

30 How shall I deal with your daughter, says the Lord, when you do all these things, works of a prostitute woman? And you prostituted yourself threefold

31 in your daughters; you built your brothel at every beginning of a road and made your platform in every square and became like a prostitute gathering wages.

32 The adulterous woman is like you, receiving wages from her husband;

33 she gave wages to all who prostituted her, and you have given wages to all your lovers and loaded them with gifts to come to you from round about in your prostitution.

34 And in you it became reversed in comparison with women in your prostitution, and they have prostituted themselves with you when you gave wages, and wages were not given to you, and in you things became reversed. —

35 Therefore, prostitute, hear the word of the Lord,

36 Thus says the Lord, Because you poured out your bronze, and your shame will be uncovered in your prostitution toward your lovers and in all the thoughts of your lawless deeds and in the blood of your children whom you gave them.

37 Therefore behold, I gather all your lovers against you, with whom you mingled among them, and all whom you loved, with all whom you hated; and I will gather them against you round about and uncover your wickedness to them, and they will see all your shame;

38 and I will punish you with the punishment of an adulteress and one pouring out blood and place you in blood of wrath and jealousy.

39 And I will hand you into their hands, and they will tear down your brothel and pull down your platform and strip you of your apparel and take the vessels of your boasting and leave you naked and indecent.

40 And they will bring crowds against you and stone you with stones and slaughter you with their swords.

41 And they will burn your houses with fire and execute acts of vengeance in you before many women; and I will turn you away from your prostitution, and you shall certainly no longer give wages.

42 And I will let my wrath loose upon you, and my jealousy will be removed from you, and I will rest and certainly no longer be concerned.

43 Because you did not remember the day of your infancy and grieved me in all these things, and behold, I have brought your ways upon your head, says the Lord; and thus you committed impiety on top of all your lawless deeds.

44 These are all the things which they said against you in a proverb, saying, As the mother, so the daughter.

45 You are a daughter of your mother who rejected her husband and her children, and a sister of your sisters who rejected their husbands and their children; your mother a Chettaia, and your father an Amorrite.

46 Your elder sister is Samareia, she and her daughters, who dwells on your left; and your sister younger than you, who dwells on your right, is Sodoma and her daughters.

47 And not even thus did you walk in their ways nor act according to their lawless deeds; in a little while you surpassed them in all your ways.

48 I live, says the Lord, your sister Sodoma, she and her daughters, has not done as you and your daughters did.

49 But this was the lawless deed of Sodoma your sister: pride; in fullness of bread and abundance of wine she and her daughters lived luxuriously; this belonged to her and her daughters, and they did not support the hand of a poor and needy one.

50 And they boasted greatly and committed lawless deeds before me, and I removed them as I saw.

51 And Samareia did not sin according to half your sins; and you multiplied your lawless deeds beyond them and justified your sisters in all your lawless deeds which you did.

52 And you, bear your torment, in which you corrupted your sisters by your sins in which you acted lawlessly beyond them and justified them beyond yourself; and you, be ashamed and receive your dishonor when you justify your sisters.

53 And I will turn back their reversals, the reversal of Sodoma and her daughters, and turn back the reversal of Samareia and her daughters, and turn back your reversal in their midst, 54 so that you bear your torment and be dishonored for all that you did when you provoked me to anger.

55 And your sister Sodoma and her daughters will be restored as they were from the beginning, and Samareia and her daughters will be restored as they were from the beginning, and you and your daughters will be restored as you were from the beginning.

56 And was not Sodoma your sister a report in your mouth in the days of your pride,

57 before your wickedness was uncovered, as now you are a reproach of daughters of Syria and all those round about her, daughters of foreigners surrounding you round about?

58 Your impieties and your lawless deeds, you have borne them, says the Lord.

59 Thus says the Lord, And I will deal with you as you did, as you dishonored these things by transgressing my covenant.

60 And I will remember my covenant with you in the days of your infancy and establish an everlasting covenant for you.

61 And you will remember your way and be utterly dishonored when you receive your sisters older than you together with those younger than you, and I will give them to you for building up and not from your covenant.

62 And I will establish my covenant with you, and you will recognize that I am the Lord,

63 so that you remember and be ashamed, and it may no longer be yours to open your mouth because of your dishonor, when I make expiation for you for all that you did, says the Lord.

Chapter 17

1 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 Son of man, recount a narrative and speak a parable to the house of Israel

3 and say, Thus says the Lord, The great eagle, great of wing, long in span, full of claws, who has the leading role to enter Lebanon, and he took the choice parts of the cedar,

4 he nipped off the tips of the tender growth and brought them to the land of Chanaan, placed them in a walled city.

5 And he took from the seed of the land and placed it in the plain, a plant by much water; he appointed it to be watched over.

6 And it sprouted and became a weak vine and small in size to appear; its branches were upon it, and its roots were beneath it. And it became a vine and made shoots and stretched its climbing growth.

7 And there was another great eagle, great of wing, abundant in claws, and behold, this vine was entwined toward him, and its roots toward him, and it sent out its branches to him to water it with the clod of its planting.

8 In a good plain by much water this one is nourished, to make shoots and bear fruit, to become a great vine.

9 Therefore say, Thus says the Lord, Will it prosper? Will not the roots of its tender growth and the fruit rot, and all its early growth dry up? And not with a great arm nor with many people to tear it out from its roots.

10 And behold, it is nourished; will it prosper? Will it not, as soon as the scorching wind touches it, dry up with drying? With the clod of its sprouting it will dry up.

11 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

12 Son of man, say indeed to the house provoking to bitterness, Do you not know what these things were? Say, When the king of Babylon comes against Ierusalem, and he will take her king and her rulers and bring them to himself to Babylon.

13 And he will take from the seed of the kingship and make a covenant with him and bring him under a curse; and he will take the leaders of the land,

14 that it become a weak kingdom, not to be raised at all, to keep his covenant and establish it.

15 And he will revolt from him, to send out his own messengers to Egypt to give him horses and many people. Will he prosper? Will he who does contrary things be saved? And transgressing a covenant, will he be saved?

16 I live, says the Lord, surely in the place of the king who made him king, he who dishonored my curse and transgressed my covenant, with him amid Babylon he will end.

17 And not with great power nor with a great crowd will Pharao make war for him, in casting up a rampart and in building missile stations to take away souls.

18 And he dishonored an oath by transgressing a covenant, and behold, he has given his hand and did all these things to him; will he be saved?

19 Therefore say, Thus says the Lord, I live, surely my covenant which he transgressed and my oath which he dishonored, I will bring them upon his head.

20 And I will spread my net over him, and he will be caught in his enclosure.

21 In all his battle array they will fall by sword, and the remnants I will scatter to every wind; and you will recognize that I the Lord have spoken. —

22 Because thus says the Lord, And I will take from the choice parts of the cedar, from the top of their heart I will nip off and I will plant upon a high mountain; and I will hang him

23 on a lofty mountain of Israel and plant, and it will bring out a shoot and make fruit and become a great cedar, and every beast will rest beneath it, and every bird will rest under its shadow; its branches will be restored.

24 And all the trees of the plain will know that I am the Lord who humbles a high tree and raises a low tree and dries a green tree and makes a dry tree flourish; I the Lord have spoken and will do.

Chapter 18

1 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 Son of man, what is this proverb of yours among the sons of Israel, saying, The fathers ate unripe grapes, and the children's teeth were set on edge?

3 I live, says the Lord, this proverb shall no longer be spoken in Israel;

4 because all souls are mine; as the father's soul, so also the son's soul, they are mine; the soul that sins, it will die. —

5 But the person who is righteous, doing judgment and righteousness,

6 will not eat upon the mountains and certainly not lift his eyes toward the thoughts of the house of Israel and certainly not defile his neighbor's wife and not approach a woman in menstruation,

7 and certainly not oppress a person, will return a debtor's pledge and does not seize plunder, will give his bread to the hungry and clothe a naked one,

8 and will not give his silver at interest and not take an excess and turn his hand away from injustice, will execute righteous judgment between a man and his neighbor,

9 and has walked in my ordinances and kept my just requirements to do them, this one is righteous, he will live with life, says the Lord. —

10 And if he begets a pestilent son who pours out blood and commits sins,

11 he did not walk in the way of his righteous father, but also ate upon the mountains and defiled his neighbor's wife,

12 and oppressed a poor and needy one and seized plunder and did not return a pledge and set his eyes upon the idols, has committed lawlessness,

13 gave at interest and took an excess, this one will not live with life; he did all these lawless deeds; by death he will be put to death, his blood will be upon him. —

14 But if he begets a son, and he sees all his father's sins which he did, and fears and does not act according to these,

15 has not eaten upon the mountains and did not set his eyes upon the thoughts of the house of Israel and did not defile his neighbor's wife,

16 and did not oppress a person and did not take a pledge and did not seize plunder, gave his bread to the hungry and clothed a naked one,

17 and turned his hand away from injustice, did not take interest nor excess, did righteousness and walked in my ordinances, he will not end in his father's injustices; he will live with life.

18 But his father, if afflicting he afflicts and seizes plunder, did contrary things amid my people and will die in his injustice. —

19 And you will say, Why did the son not bear his father's injustice? Because the son did righteousness and mercy, kept all my statutes and did them; he will live with life.

20 But the soul that sins will die; the son will not bear his father's injustice, nor will the father bear his son's injustice; the righteousness of a righteous one will be upon him, and the lawlessness of a lawless one will be upon him.

21 And if the lawless one turns from all his lawless deeds which he did and keeps all my commandments and does righteousness and mercy, he will live with life, shall certainly not die.

22 All his transgressions which he did will not be remembered; in his righteousness which he did he will live.

23 Would I desire with desire the death of the lawless one, says the Lord, rather than his turning from his evil way and living?

24 But when a righteous one turns from his righteousness and does injustice according to all the lawless deeds which the lawless one did, all his righteous deeds which he did shall certainly not be remembered; in his transgression which he committed and in his sins which he sinned, in them he will die. —

25 And you said, The Lord's way is not straight. Hear indeed, all the house of Israel; is my way not straight? Is it not your way that is not straight?

26 When the righteous one turns from his righteousness and commits a transgression and dies, in the transgression which he did, in it he will die.

27 And when a lawless one turns from his lawlessness which he did and executes judgment and righteousness, this one preserved his soul

28 and turned from all his impieties which he did; he will live with life, shall certainly not die.

29 And the house of Israel says, The Lord's way does not go rightly. Does my way not go rightly, house of Israel? Is it not your way that does not go rightly?

30 Each according to his way I will judge you, house of Israel, says the Lord; return and turn away from all your impieties, and they will not be a punishment of injustice for you.

31 Cast away from yourselves all your impieties which you committed against me and make yourselves a new heart and a new spirit; and why do you die, house of Israel?

32 Because I do not desire the death of him who dies, says the Lord.

Chapter 19

1 And you, take up a lament over the ruler of Israel

2 and say, What is your mother? A cub; she became amid lions, amid lions she multiplied her cubs.

3 And one of her cubs leaped away, became a lion and learned to seize plunder, ate people.

4 And nations heard against him, he was captured in their destruction, and they brought him in a muzzle to the land of Egypt.

5 And she saw that he was rejected from her and her confidence perished, and she took another of her cubs, appointed him a lion.

6 And he moved about amid lions, became a lion and learned to seize plunder, ate people;

7 and he ranged in his boldness and made their cities desolate and destroyed a land and its fullness from the sound of his roaring.

8 And nations from countries round about set against him and spread their nets over him; he was captured in their destruction;

9 and they placed him in a muzzle and in a cage, he came to the king of Babylon, and he brought him into prison, so that his voice should not be heard upon the mountains of Israel. —

10 Your mother is like a vine, like a flower in a pomegranate tree planted in water; her fruit and her shoot came from much water.

11 And she had a rod of strength over a tribe of leaders, and she was raised in her size amid trunks and saw her size in the multitude of her branches.

12 And she was broken in wrath, thrown upon earth, and the scorching wind dried her choice parts; her rod of strength was punished and dried up, fire consumed it.

13 And now they have planted her in the wilderness, in a waterless land;

14 and fire went out from a rod of her choice parts and devoured her, and there was no rod of strength in her. A tribe is for a parable of lament and will be for lament.

Chapter 20

1 And it happened in the seventh year, in the fifth month, on the tenth of the month, men from the elders of the house of Israel came to inquire of the Lord and sat before my face.

2 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

3 Son of man, speak to the elders of Israel and say to them, Thus says the Lord, Do you come to inquire of me? I live, I will not answer you, says the Lord.

4 Shall I punish them with punishment? Son of man, testify to them concerning their fathers' lawless deeds

5 and say to them, Thus says the Lord, From the day when I chose the house of Israel and made myself known to the seed of the house of Iakob and became known to them in the land of Egypt and took hold of them with my hand, saying, I am the Lord your God,

6 on that day I took hold of them with my hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt into the land which I prepared for them, a land flowing with milk and honey; it is a honeycomb beyond all the earth.

7 And I said to them, Let each cast away the abominations of his eyes, and do not be defiled in the practices of Egypt; I am the Lord your God.

8 And they revolted from me and did not wish to hear me, did not cast away the abominations of their eyes and did not abandon the practices of Egypt. And I said that I would pour out my wrath upon them, to complete my anger among them amid the land of Egypt.

9 And I acted so that my name should not be profaned at all before the nations among whom they are, among whom I became known to them before them by bringing them out of the land of Egypt.

10 And I brought them out of the land of Egypt and brought them into the wilderness

11 and gave them my ordinances and made my just requirements known to them, which a person shall do and live in them.

12 And I gave them my sabbaths to be a sign between me and them, that they know that I am the Lord who sanctifies them.

13 And I said to the house of Israel in the wilderness, Walk in my ordinances. And they did not walk and rejected my just requirements which a person shall do and live in them, and greatly profaned my sabbaths. And I said that I would pour out my wrath upon them in the wilderness to consume them.

14 And I acted so that my name should not be profaned at all before the nations before whose eyes I brought them out.

15 And I raised my hand against them in the wilderness, not at all to bring them into the land which I gave them, a land flowing with milk and honey; it is a honeycomb beyond all the earth,

16 because they rejected my just requirements and did not walk in my ordinances, in them, and profaned my sabbaths and went after the thoughts of their hearts.

17 And my eye spared them from obliterating them, and I did not bring them to an end in the wilderness.

18 And I said to their children in the wilderness, Do not walk in the statutes of your fathers and do not keep their just requirements and do not mingle in their practices and do not be defiled;

19 I am the Lord your God; walk in my ordinances and keep my just requirements and do them,

20 and sanctify my sabbaths, and let them be a sign between me and you, to know that I am the Lord your God.

21 And their children also provoked me to bitterness; they did not walk in my ordinances and did not keep my just requirements to do them, which a person shall do and live in them, and profaned my sabbaths. And I said that I would pour out my wrath upon them in the wilderness, to complete my anger against them;

22 and I acted so that my name should not be profaned at all before the nations before whose eyes I brought them out.

23 And I raised my hand against them in the wilderness, to scatter them among the nations and disperse them in the countries,

24 because they did not do my just requirements and rejected my ordinances and profaned my sabbaths, and their eyes were after their fathers' thoughts.

25 And I gave them ordinances not good and just requirements in which they will not live in them.

26 And I will defile them in their gifts when I pass through every thing opening a womb, so that I destroy them.

27 Therefore speak to the house of Israel, son of man, and say to them, Thus says the Lord, Until this your fathers provoked me to anger in their transgressions in which they transgressed against me.

28 And I brought them into the land for which I raised my hand to give it to them, and they saw every high hill and every shady tree and sacrificed there to their gods and appointed there a fragrant smell and poured out their libations there.

29 And I said to them, What is Abama, that you enter there? And they called its name Abama until this day.

30 Therefore say to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord, Are you defiled in your fathers' lawless deeds and do you prostitute yourselves after their abominations?

31 And in the firstfruits of your gifts, in the things set apart, you are defiled in all your thoughts until this day. And shall I answer you, house of Israel? I live, says the Lord, I will not answer you, nor shall this rise upon your spirit.

32 And it will not be as you say, We shall be like the nations and like the tribes of the earth, to serve wood and stones.

33 Therefore I live, says the Lord, with a mighty hand and a high arm and wrath poured out I will reign over you;

34 and I will bring you out from the peoples and receive you from the countries where you were scattered in them, with a mighty hand and a high arm and wrath poured out;

35 and I will bring you into the wilderness of the peoples and contend with you there face to face.

36 As I contended with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so I will judge you, says the Lord;

37 and I will lead you under my rod and bring you in by number

38 and select from among you the impious and the rebels, because I will bring them out from their sojourning, and they will not enter the land of Israel; and you will recognize that I am the Lord.

39 And you, house of Israel, thus says the Lord Lord, Remove, each, his practices; and after these things, surely you will hear me and no longer profane my holy name with your gifts and your practices;

40 because upon my holy mountain, upon a high mountain, says the Lord Lord, there all the house of Israel will serve me completely, and there I will receive and there I will inspect your firstfruits and the firstfruits of your things set apart in all your holy things;

41 in a fragrant smell I will receive you when I bring you out from the peoples and receive you from the countries in which you were scattered in them, and I will be sanctified among you before the eyes of the peoples.

42 And you will recognize that I am the Lord when I bring you into the land of Israel, into the land for which I raised my hand to give it to your fathers.

43 And there you will remember your ways and your practices in which you were defiled in them, and beat your faces for all your wickedness.

44 And you will recognize that I am the Lord when I deal thus with you so that my name may not be profaned according to your evil ways and according to your corrupted practices, says the Lord.

Chapter 21

1 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 Son of man, set your face against Thaiman and look upon Darom and prophesy against the leading forest Nageb

3 and say to the forest Nageb, Hear the word of the Lord: Thus says the Lord Lord, Behold, I kindle fire in you, and it will devour in you every green tree and every dry tree; the kindled flame will not be quenched, and in it every face will be burned from east to north;

4 and all flesh will recognize that I the Lord burned it, and it will not be quenched.

5 And I said, By no means, Lord Lord; they say to me, Is not this spoken as a parable?

6 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

7 Therefore prophesy, son of man, and set your face against Ierusalem and look upon their holy things and prophesy against the land of Israel

8 and say to the land of Israel, Behold, I am against you and will draw my dagger from its sheath and destroy unjust and lawless from you;

9 because I will destroy unjust and lawless from you, so my dagger will go out from its sheath against all flesh from east to north;

10 and all flesh will recognize that I the Lord drew my dagger from its sheath, and it will no longer return.

11 And you, son of man, groan with the crushing of your waist and groan in pains before their eyes.

12 And it will be, if they say to you, For what do you groan? And you shall say, Over the report, because it comes, and every heart will be shattered, and all hands will be paralyzed, and all flesh and every spirit will faint, and all thighs will be defiled with moisture; behold, it comes and will be, says the Lord Lord. —

13 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

14 Son of man, prophesy and say, Thus says the Lord, Say, Sword, sword, be sharpened and be enraged,

15 so that you slaughter victims; be sharpened so that you become glittering; ready for paralysis, slaughter, despise, thrust away every tree.

16 And he made it ready for his hand to hold; a sword was whetted, it is ready to be given into the hand of one piercing through.

17 Cry out and howl, son of man, because it came among my people, it among all the leaders of Israel; they will sojourn upon sword, it came among my people; therefore clap upon your hand.

18 Because it has been justified; and what if even a tribe was rejected? It will not be, says the Lord Lord.

19 And you, son of man, prophesy and clap hand upon hand and double a sword; the third sword of wounded ones is the great sword of wounded ones and will dismay them,

20 so that the heart may be shattered and the weak multiplied at every gate of theirs; they have been handed over as victims of sword; it has been made well for slaughter, made well for glittering.

21 Pass through, be sharpened on the right and on the left, wherever your face is stirred up.

22 And I too will clap my hand against my hand and let my wrath loose; I the Lord have spoken. —

23 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

24 And you, son of man, arrange for yourself two ways for the sword of the king of Babylon to enter; from one country the two will go out, and a hand at the beginning of a city's road; at the beginning

25 of a road you shall arrange for a sword to enter against Rabbath of the sons of Ammon and against Ioudaia and against Ierusalem in her midst.

26 Because the king of Babylon will stand upon the ancient road at the beginning of the two roads to divine a divination, to shake a rod and inquire among the carved images and inspect a liver on his right.

27 The oracle came against Ierusalem, to cast a rampart, to open a mouth in shouting, to raise a voice with a cry, to cast a rampart against her gates and cast a mound and build missile stations.

28 And he is to them as one divining a divination before them, and he reminding of his injustices, to be remembered.

29 Therefore thus says the Lord, Because you brought your injustices to remembrance when your impieties were uncovered, so that your sins might be seen in all your impieties and in your practices, because you brought them to remembrance, in these you will be caught.

30 And you, profane lawless leader of Israel, whose day has come, an end in a time of injustice,

31 thus says the Lord, You removed the turban and put on the crown; this will not be such; you humbled the high and raised the low.

32 Injustice, injustice I will make it, nor will this be such, until he comes to whom it belongs, and I will hand it to him. —

33 And you, son of man, prophesy and say, Thus says the Lord to the sons of Ammon and to their reproach, and you shall say, Sword, sword, drawn for victims and drawn for an end, arise so that you glitter

34 in your vain vision and in your divining false things, to hand you over upon the necks of lawless wounded ones whose day has come, an end in a time of injustice.

35 Turn back, do not lodge in this place where you were born; in your own land I will judge you

36 and pour out my anger upon you, with the fire of my anger blow upon you and hand you into the hands of barbarous men fashioning destruction.

37 In fire you will be food; your blood will be amid your land; there shall certainly be no remembrance of you, because I the Lord have spoken.

Chapter 22

1 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 And you, son of man, will you judge the city of bloodshed? And show her all her lawless deeds

3 and say, Thus says the Lord Lord, O city pouring out blood in her midst that her time may come, and making thoughts against herself to defile her,

4 in their blood which you poured out you have transgressed, and in your thoughts which you made you were defiled, and you brought your days near and brought the time of your years. Therefore I have made you a reproach to the nations and a mockery to all the countries

5 which draw near to you and which are far away from you, and they will mock you: The renowned one is unclean and abundant in lawless deeds.

6 Behold, the leaders of the house of Israel, each toward his relatives, mingled together in you so that they pour out blood;

7 they spoke evil of father and mother in you and dealt with the sojourner in injustices in you, oppressed orphan and widow in you;

8 and they despised my holy things and profaned my sabbaths in you.

9 Robber men are in you to pour out blood in you, and they ate upon the mountains in you, did unholy things in your midst.

10 They uncovered a father's shame in you and humbled a woman sitting apart in uncleannesses in you;

11 each acted lawlessly with his neighbor's wife, and each defiled his daughter-in-law in impiety, and each humbled his sister, his father's daughter, in you.

12 They took gifts in you to pour out blood, took interest and excess in you; and you completed the completion of your wickedness in oppression, but forgot me, says the Lord.

13 But if I strike my hand against my hand over the things you have completed, which you did, and over your bloodshed which occurred in your midst,

14 will your heart endure? Will your hands prevail in the days when I act in you? I the Lord have spoken and will do.

15 And I will scatter you among the nations and disperse you in the countries, and your uncleanness will cease from you,

16 and I will take possession in you before the eyes of the nations; and you will know that I am the Lord. —

17 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

18 Son of man, behold, the house of Israel has become to me all mixed with bronze and iron and tin and lead, mixed amid silver.

19 Therefore say, Thus says the Lord, Because you all became one mixture, therefore I receive you into the midst of Ierusalem.

20 As silver and bronze and iron and tin and lead are received into the midst of a furnace, to blow fire into it to be melted, so I will receive you in my anger and gather and melt you

21 and blow upon you with the fire of my anger, and you will be melted in her midst.

22 As silver is melted amid a furnace, so you will be melted in her midst; and you will recognize that I the Lord poured out my wrath upon you. —

23 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

24 Son of man, say to her, You are a land not wetted, nor did rain come upon you on a day of anger;

25 whose leaders in her midst are like roaring lions seizing plunder, devouring souls with power, taking valuables in injustice, and your widows were multiplied in your midst.

26 And her priests rejected my law and profaned my holy things; they did not distinguish between holy and profane and did not distinguish between unclean and clean and covered their eyes from my sabbaths, and I was profaned in their midst.

27 Her rulers in her midst are like wolves seizing plunder, to pour out blood, so that they gain with greed.

28 And her prophets plastering them will fall, seeing vain things, divining false things, saying, Thus says the Lord, and the Lord has not spoken;

29 oppressing the people of the land with injustice and plundering plunder, oppressing poor and needy and not dealing with the sojourner with judgment.

30 And I sought among them a man walking rightly and standing before my face wholly in the land's time, so as not to obliterate her utterly, and found none.

31 And I poured out my wrath upon her with the fire of my anger to bring to an end; I have brought their ways upon their heads, says the Lord Lord.

Chapter 23

1 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 Son of man, two women were daughters of one mother

3 and prostituted themselves in Egypt in their youth; there their breasts fell, there they were deflowered.

4 And their names were Oola the elder and Ooliba her sister. And they became mine and bore sons and daughters. And their names: Samareia is Oola, and Ierusalem is Ooliba.

5 And Oola prostituted herself away from me and set her desire upon her lovers, upon the Assyrians who drew near her,

6 clothed in blue, leaders and generals; all choice young men, horsemen riding upon horses.

7 And she gave her prostitution to them; all choice sons of Assyrians, and toward all whom she desired, she was defiled in all her thoughts.

8 And she did not abandon her prostitution from Egypt, because they lay with her in her youth, and they deflowered her and poured out their prostitution upon her.

9 Therefore I handed her into the hands of her lovers, into the hands of sons of Assyrians whom she desired.

10 They uncovered her shame, took her sons and daughters and killed her by sword; and she became a talk among women, and they executed acts of vengeance upon her for the daughters. —

11 And her sister Ooliba saw and corrupted her desire beyond her and her prostitution beyond her sister's prostitution.

12 She desired the sons of the Assyrians, leaders and generals near her, clothed in well-bordered garments, horsemen riding upon horses; all choice young men.

13 And I saw that she has been defiled; one way for the two.

14 And she added to her prostitution and saw men painted upon the wall, images of Chaldeans painted with a stylus,

15 girded with embroidered things upon their waists, and dyed tiaras upon their heads, a threefold appearance of all, a likeness of sons of Chaldeans of their native land,

16 and she desired them at the sight of her eyes and sent out messengers to them to the land of the Chaldeans.

17 And sons of Babylon came to her into a bed of those lodging and defiled her in her prostitution, and she was defiled with them; and her soul departed from them.

18 And she uncovered her prostitution and uncovered her shame, and my soul departed from her, as my soul departed from her sister.

19 And you multiplied your prostitution to recall the days of your youth in which you prostituted yourself in Egypt,

20 and you desired the Chaldeans, whose flesh was like that of donkeys, and their genitals the genitals of horses.

21 And you revisited the lawlessness of your youth, what you did in Egypt in your lodging, where were the breasts of your youth. —

22 Therefore, Ooliba, thus says the Lord, Behold, I stir up your lovers against you, from whom your soul departed, and I will bring them against you round about,

23 sons of Babylon and all the Chaldeans, Phakoud and Soue and Koue and all sons of Assyrians with them, choice young men, all governors and generals, men of the third rank and renowned ones riding upon horses;

24 and all will come against you from the north, chariots and wheels with a crowd of peoples, large shields and small shields, and they will set a guard against you round about; and I will set judgment before their face, and they will punish you with their judgments.

25 And I will put my jealousy in you, and they will deal with you in the anger of wrath; they will remove your nose and your ears and cast down your remnants by sword. They will take your sons and your daughters, and fire will devour your remnants.

26 And they will strip you of your apparel and take the vessels of your boasting.

27 And I will turn your impieties away from you and your prostitution from the land of Egypt, and you shall certainly not lift your eyes toward them and certainly no longer remember Egypt.

28 Because thus says the Lord Lord, Behold, I hand you into the hands of those whom you hate, from whom your soul departed;

29 and they will deal with you in hatred and take all your labors and your toils, and you will be naked and indecent, and the shame of your prostitution and your impiety will be uncovered. And your prostitution

30 did these things to you when you prostituted yourself after nations and were defiled in their thoughts.

31 You walked in your sister's way, and I will give her cup into your hands.

32 Thus says the Lord, You shall drink your sister's cup, the deep and wide one, abundant to bring to an end;

33 you will be filled with drunkenness and faintness; and the cup of destruction, the cup of your sister Samareia,

34 and you shall drink it; and I will turn away her feasts and her new moons; because I have spoken, says the Lord.

35 Therefore thus says the Lord, Because you forgot me and cast me behind your body, you too bear your impiety and your prostitution. —

36 And the Lord said to me, Son of man, will you not judge Oola and Ooliba? And you shall announce their lawless deeds to them, 37 because they committed adultery, and blood is in their hands; they committed adultery with their thoughts and led their children whom they bore to me through fire offerings for them.

38 They even did these things to me: they defiled my holy things and profaned my sabbaths.

39 And when they slaughtered their children to their idols, they also entered my holy things to profane them; and because they did thus amid my house.

40 And because for the men coming from afar, to whom they sent out messengers, and as soon as they came, immediately you washed and painted your eyes with antimony and adorned yourself with adornment

41 and sat upon a spread couch, and an adorned table before her face. And my incense and my oil, they delighted in them.

42 And they struck up a sound of harmony; and toward men from a multitude of people coming from the wilderness, and they gave bracelets upon their hands and a crown of boasting upon their heads.

43 And I said, Do they not commit adultery with these? And deeds of a prostitute, and she herself prostituted herself.

44 And they entered to her as they enter to a prostitute woman, so they entered to Oola and to Ooliba to commit lawlessness.

45 And righteous men, they will punish them with the punishment of an adulteress and the punishment of blood, because they are adulteresses, and blood is in their hands.

46 Thus says the Lord Lord, Bring a crowd against them and set turmoil and plundering among them

47 and stone them with stones of crowds and pierce them through with their swords; they will kill their sons and their daughters and burn their houses.

48 And I will turn impiety away from the land, and all women will be disciplined and certainly not act according to their impieties.

49 And your impiety will be brought upon you, and you will bear the sins of your thoughts; and you will know that I am the Lord.

Chapter 24

1 And the word of the Lord came to me in the ninth year, in the tenth month, on the tenth of the month, saying,

2 Son of man, write for yourself for a day, from this day on which the king of Babylon pressed against Ierusalem, from this very day,

3 and speak a parable against the house provoking to bitterness and say to them, Thus says the Lord, Set the pot and pour water into it

4 and put into it the cut pieces, every good cut piece, leg and shoulder with flesh removed from the bones,

5 taken from choice animals, and burn the bones underneath them; it boiled, it boiled, and her bones have been boiled in her midst.

6 Therefore thus says the Lord, O city of bloodshed, a pot in which there is corrosion, and the corrosion did not go out from her; limb by limb he brought out from her, no lot fell upon her.

7 Because her blood is in her midst, I have set it upon a smooth rock; I have not poured it upon the earth to cover earth over it.

8 That wrath may rise for vengeance to be executed, I have put her blood upon a smooth rock so as not to cover it.

9 Therefore thus says the Lord, I too will make the firebrand great

10 and multiply the wood and kindle the fire, so that the meat may melt and the broth be diminished,

11 and it stand upon the coals, so that her bronze may be burned and heated and melt amid her uncleanness, and her corrosion cease,

12 and her abundant corrosion shall certainly not go out from her; her corrosion will be put to shame,

13 because you were defiled. And what if you are not yet cleansed until I fill my wrath?

14 I the Lord have spoken, and it will come, and I will do; I will not hold back nor have mercy; according to your ways and according to your thoughts I will judge you, says the Lord. Therefore I will judge you according to your bloodshed and according to your thoughts judge you, the unclean renowned one, abundant in provoking to bitterness.

15 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

16 Son of man, behold, I take from you the desirable things of your eyes in battle array; you shall certainly not mourn nor weep.

17 There is a groan of blood, of waist, of mourning; your hair shall not be intertwined upon you, and your footwear on your feet; you shall certainly not be comforted by their lips nor eat the bread of men.

18 And I spoke to the people in the morning as he commanded me, and my wife died in the evening, and in the morning I did as I was commanded.

19 And the people said to me, Will you not announce to us what these things are which you do?

20 And I said to them, The word of the Lord came to me, saying,

21 Say to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord, Behold, I profane my holy things, the arrogance of your strength, the desirable things of your eyes, and the things for which your souls spare; and your sons and your daughters whom you abandoned will fall by sword.

22 And you shall do as I have done; you will not be comforted from their mouth and will not eat the bread of men,

23 and your hair upon your head, and your footwear on your feet; you shall neither mourn nor weep and will waste away in your injustices and comfort, each, his brother.

24 And Iezekiel will be a portent for you; according to all that he did you shall do when these things come; and you will recognize that I am the Lord. —

25 And you, son of man, will not, on the day when I take from them their strength, the elevation of their boasting, the desirable things of their eyes and the elevation of their soul, their sons and their daughters,

26 on that day the survivor come to you to announce into your ears?

27 On that day your mouth will be opened toward the survivor, and you will speak and certainly no longer be made mute; and you will be a portent for them, and they will recognize that I am the Lord.

Chapter 25

1 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 Son of man, set your face against the sons of Ammon and prophesy against them

3 and say to the sons of Ammon, Hear the word of the Lord: Thus says the Lord, Because you rejoiced over my holy things because they were profaned, and over the land of Israel because it was destroyed, and over the house of Iouda because they went into captivity,

4 therefore behold, I hand you over to the sons of Kedem for an inheritance, and they will encamp with their equipment in you and place their dwellings in you; they will eat your fruits, and they will drink your richness.

5 And I will make the city of Ammon pastures of camels and the sons of Ammon a pasture of sheep; and you will recognize that I am the Lord.

6 Because thus says the Lord, Because you clapped your hand and stamped with your foot and rejoiced from your soul over the land of Israel,

7 therefore I will stretch my hand against you and make you plunder among the nations and destroy you from the peoples and bring you to destruction from the countries; and you will recognize that I am the Lord.

8 Thus says the Lord, Because Moab said, Behold, the house of Israel and Iouda is like all the nations,

9 therefore behold, I paralyze Moab's shoulder from the cities of his extremities, a choice land, the house of Asimouth above a spring of a seaside city.

10 To the sons of Kedem against the sons of Ammon I have given them for an inheritance, so that no remembrance of the sons of Ammon may be;

11 and upon Moab I will execute vengeance, and they will recognize that I am the Lord.

12 Thus says the Lord, Because Idoumaia acted by executing vengeance upon the house of Iouda and bore a grudge and exacted punishment,

13 therefore thus says the Lord, And I will stretch my hand against Idoumaia and destroy human and beast from her and make her desolate, and those pursued from Thaiman will fall by sword;

14 and I will put my vengeance upon Idoumaia by the hand of my people Israel, and they will act in Idoumaia according to my anger and according to my wrath; and they will recognize my vengeance, says the Lord.

15 Therefore thus says the Lord, Because the foreigners acted in vengeance and raised up vengeance, rejoicing from the soul to obliterate forever,

16 therefore thus says the Lord, Behold, I will stretch my hand against the foreigners and destroy Cretans and destroy the remnants inhabiting the coast;

17 and I will execute great acts of vengeance among them, and they will recognize that I am the Lord when I put my vengeance upon them.

Chapter 26

1 And it happened in the eleventh year, on the first of the month, the word of the Lord came to me, saying,

2 Son of man, because Sor said over Ierusalem, Well done, she was crushed, the nations have perished, she turned to me, the full one has been made desolate,

3 therefore thus says the Lord, Behold, I am against you, Sor, and I will bring many nations against you, as the sea rises with its waves.

4 And they will cast down the walls of Sor and cast down your towers, and I will winnow her dust away from her and make her a smooth rock;

5 she will be a drying place for nets amid the sea, because I have spoken, says the Lord; and she will be plunder for the nations,

6 and her daughters in the plain will be killed by sword; and they will know that I am the Lord.

7 Because thus says the Lord, Behold, I bring against you, Sor, Nabouchodonosor king of Babylon from the north [he is king of kings], with horses and chariots and horsemen and a gathering of exceedingly many nations.

8 This one will kill your daughters in the plain by sword and set an advance guard against you and build round about and make a rampart against you round about and an encirclement of weapons and place his spears opposite you;

9 your walls and your towers he will cast down with his swords.

10 From the multitude of his horses their dust will cover you, and from the sound of his horsemen and the wheels of his chariots your walls will be shaken as he enters your gates, as one entering a city from a plain.

11 With the hoofs of his horses they will trample all your squares; he will kill your people by sword and bring the foundation of your strength down to the earth.

12 And he will plunder your wealth and spoil your possessions and cast down your walls and pull down your desirable houses and throw your stones and your wood and your dust into the midst of the sea.

13 And he will stop the multitude of your musicians, and the sound of your harps shall certainly no longer be heard.

14 And I will make you a smooth rock, you will be a drying place for nets; you shall certainly no longer be built, because I spoke, says the Lord.

15 Because thus says the Lord Lord to Sor, Will not the islands be shaken from the sound of your fall, when wounded ones groan, when a sword is drawn in your midst?
